Our system of providing continuous health care for children is appallingly inadequate. The consequence of that underfunding is not only do you spend more money later on but you are underfunding, as the Senator quite rightly says, that very group that is going to suffer most because we are deficit financing the current expenditures.

If you think about it, if we say we are going to give $10,000 a year, $9,000 a year, roughly, and these are hard numbers now, one does not have to guess anymore. One thing about our debate today is we no longer have to talk in generalities about what the deficit is doing to us. We can look out in the future and say if we get in balance in the year 2001—and I am going to show how we can do that—we will add another $9,000 of per capita GNP to every single American in the year 2020. Failing to do that, they will have $9,000 less per capita.

The Senator is quite right. The very people we are underfunding today with our health care proposals will be the ones that will have to pay for it 28 years from now.

Mr. DASCHLE. I know the Senator has a presentation and I do not want to interrupt him any further.

But I think the other hidden cost that the Senator has addressed and needs to be emphasized is that if 15 percent of all of the money that we are spending this year is borrowed, when one takes the cumulative costs year after year of the borrowed dollars, that ultimately adds up to a lot more than the 15 percent we are paying now. It could exceed the current cost per year in a very short number of years.

Certainly by the time these young people, who do not have access and who are now paying because we are borrowing, come to the point when they do have some access, the overall cost is going to be far greater simply because we borrow the money and they will then be paying the cumulative interest and that debt will be larger.

Mr. KERREY. That is quite right.

Mr. DASCHLE. I think the Senator is making a very important point and I hope that our colleagues will have the opportunity to listen carefully.

Mr. KERREY. It is one of the reasons I objected in January, not just because I was out on the Presidential campaign trail myself, but when the President introduced his health care proposal, it was essentially additional tax expenditures with no identification of where he was going to get the money. He just wanted to spend some additional money to try to solve the problem.

The proposal of the distinguished Senator from South Dakota takes cost containment head-on, and we have to do that. Unless cost containment is our top priority with health care, we are merely reinforcing all the very bad things that we are currently doing and making them worse. We may provide some additional access but at a considerable cost to taxpayers and particularly the young people who will in the end have to pay the bill.

Mr. President, I am just going to try to in brief form lay out three things that we could do if we as a body would like, as old men and women, to stand out there at sometime in the future and be able to say that indeed we did add to the per capita GNP of young Americans who today are looking in the future, expecting to be working out there in that year. Three things, and they are relatively simple to say and relatively difficult to do.

The first is just to declare that we will take all of our health care expenditures and put them into one account. And that does not mean we shut down the VA. It does not mean we consolidate the VA into some other organization, or the Department of Defense. We can leave all the agencies as they are. We will, simply for budgetary purposes, consider them as one account, including the tax expenditures that we make that I indicated earlier. So now we have one account.

I am arguing the first thing we should do is operate on a pay-as-you-go basis. If we want to provide a benefit, whether it is a benefit to people who are buying private health insurance or people getting their health care through the Veterans' Administration or Medicaid or Medicare, we should raise the money and pay for it, close this $69 billion gap that we have this year that will be larger next year.

The second thing that I propose we do, Mr. President, is agree that the cost increases and cost increases of all of our health care expenditures will not exceed 5 percent a year. Maybe we said it was going to be 4 or 3. I am pegging it at 5 percent. That is still in excess of the rate of inflation. It still exceeds the increase in our gross national product. It should be reasonable for us to fund our program.

The third thing we need to do is to find approximately by my guess—I will fill that blank in—find an additional $15 billion or so of spending reductions in defense and other areas.

We have, according to the distinguished Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR] in talking to him earlier, we have a huge increase in the amount of outside contracting we are doing. We ought to be able to find an additional $10 or $15 billion in reduction.

If we did those three things in fiscal year 1993, here is what would happen, Mr. President. The red line shows the reduction that occurs as a consequence of operating on a pay-as-you-go basis. It is a huge reduction in the deficit in the first year, continuing down in the outer years. The orange line merely accumulates what happens if we operate with a 5-percent increase.

By the year 1997, we have moved the deficit down to $23 billion. It does not take a magician to figure out that a relatively steep reduction in defense and other items in our early years would put us in the position where we would get into surplus.

One of the things that needs to be said at this point, Mr. President, and why I like this approach, is that under the current environment what we are doing is shortchanging the very kinds of investments we need to be making from the Federal level that will promote even more economic growth.

This really shows up at the States, where States cannot deficit finance. States cannot sell bonds, as the distinguished occupant of the chair knows, having been a Governor of the great State of Nevada. We cannot sell bonds, typically at the State level, if we run short.

The State of Nebraska is about $25 million short with Medicaid, and that is about the size of the increase with Medicaid. As I indicated earlier, the Federal Government has a $20 billion increase in Medicaid. I do not recall anyone coming to the floor, saying we have a terrible crisis with Medicaid. The reason it is not a terrible crisis is because we know if we are running a little short, we just sell bonds. For our $20 billion, we will sell approximately $6 billion of bonds to pay the difference.

At the State level, what we see is they have to cut back on higher education; they have to cut back on primary and secondary education; they have to cut back on current investments. All we see is those current investments as domestic discretionary expenditures; they have to cut back current investments that will produce long-term economic growth.

Health-care cost increases at the Federal level are doing the same thing. Even though we are selling bonds and we mask the impact of it, we are still doing the same thing. What we are rushing to do under the current arrangements, without addressing this cost increase of health care, is that we are cutting back on those very things we need to put our money into to promote additional economic growth and prosperity for our people.

This morning I had the distinction of following President Bush's domestic policy adviser, I believe he is—I do not know what his exact title is—former Secretary of Agriculture, Clayton Yeutter, who is also from the State of Nebraska. As I told the Agriculture people, I was pleased. We are proud that former Secretary Yeutter now is the head of this domestic policy council. As a Democrat, I said, I wish he were still Secretary of Agriculture. But he is over there, and proud of what he is doing.

He came before this group to defend the free trade agreement with Mexico. And as he defended that free trade agreement, which I voted for—fast track; I think it could be good—he said the key part—the key part of making that trade agreement work if it is going to work is to invest in job training for our people. Because, the President's adviser said, there is no question that lower-income Americans will have their jobs destroyed; there will be job displacement as a consequence of this action.

By the way, Mr. President, even if we do not get a free trade agreement, that is happening anyway. We are seeing jobs move offshore as a consequence of being in a global environment. We have at least 40 million of our people—by a recent Department of Labor study—in the work force today who are undertrained. We need to be investing in their training.

It is going to take money. Yes; they will have to make an effort. Yes; they will have to work harder. But, Mr. President, we will have to make an investment in our community colleges, an investment in our private-sector training efforts. We need to get started making the kind of investments in our people that Governor Clinton has been talking about, frankly.

We are not going to be able to do that unless we get this deficit under control, and unless we get the deficit under control in a manner that has us facing head on public enemy No. 1.

Again, for emphasis, we only need to do three things. One, pay-as-you-go health care expenditures. If the American people want health care benefits, we will collect the tax revenue to pay for it. If they do not want the $65 billion they are getting for nothing right now, let us cut the $69 billion and get current.

The second thing we should do is declare we are going to allow health-care growth not to exceed 5 percent a year. It can be 4 percent; it can be 3 percent. If we decide it is going to be 6 percent then, the third area of action will have to be even larger.

The third area of action is we have a package, a relatively small amount of reductions in defense and other items. Again, the distinguished Senator from Arkansas earlier was talking to me about some contracts that are possible. We can surely find $10 billion to $15 billion worth of expenditures in these areas.

Mr. President, if we do those three things, we will be in surplus by the year 1997.

If we get this surplus, we will add at least $9,000 per capita by the year 2020 for every single American, and we will be able to turn our attention to making investments in education, making investments in job training, making investments in the kinds of things that will increase American productivity and increase our standard of living and give Americans a sense that we can restore the economic health of this country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, let me again compliment the distinguished Senator from Nebraska for his leadership in this area, and for enlightening all of us, who can learn so much from his study and from his dedication to this issue.

He has served this Senate well. He certainly has been a major contributor to the debate about health care reform and the need to make significant change in the coming months.

I commend the Senator and I appreciate his interest and his leadership on the issue.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I should add my thanks, as well, to the distinguished Senator from South Dakota. He has made a very comprehensive commitment to people. He and Senator WOFFORD campaigned on health care. It was an exciting proposal, one indeed that incorporates the elements that are described here.

I should say for emphasis, to my colleagues who have not, in their own minds, resolved as to what we ought to do with health care—I have. There are some details I am willing to debate. These two things can be done without necessarily reforming in a comprehensive way our health care system. These are just fiscal conditions, fiscal conditions that I believe should be incorporated in comprehensive health care reform.

Indeed, in order to make the 5-percent growth limitation on health care expenditures truly work without having the cost shift that again I heard the distinguished Senator from South Dakota describe very eloquently, one must move to comprehensive health care reform to get the job done. Anyone who has really looked at the numbers of health care growth in America, government and private sector, knows that we cannot continue at this pace. We are going to have to change in a fundamental way the way we are financing health care.

It does not mean the way we deliver health care has to change. We can still have private health care in America. We can still have very high-quality health care in America.

I heard the distinguished Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DURENBERGER] the other day on the floor complimenting, as he should, the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, MN, for being identified as one of the lowest-cost hospitals in America. No one would argue the fact that Mayo is also one of the best hospitals in America, demonstrating that cost control and quality are not mutually exclusive. Indeed, cost control can force us to make sure we are doing accurate and up-front qualitative analyses.

Mr. President, I believe cost reduction, economic growth, and providing an environment where Americans no longer fear they are going to have their health care taken away from them. And I, for the record, want to compliment, as well, the Senator from South Dakota, who has not only been a leader on this issue, but has managed as only he can to pull people that are apparently of different minds together to move toward consensus, Republican and Democrat, as we need to do on behalf of the American people.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Nebraska. I appreciate so much the cooperation and all of the effort he has put forth.

He made the point I was going to make tonight, that no one ought to be wedded to a specific proposal. He said there are a set of principles here that should be incorporated into any reform proposal. I think that really is something we need to concentrate on more. There ought to be a set of principles on which we agree and with which we begin to base a comprehensive health care delivery system in this country.

Obviously, as we try to put those principles together, one of the key questions is, to what degree do those principles address the problems that are besetting this country today with regard to health care?

I have addressed that series of problems in previous remarks, and I will not elaborate, but I think for review, they are important to mention again, to appreciate the magnitude of the problem. It is not just a cost problem; it is not just a problem of access. In my view, it is also a problem with the way we allocate our resources.

The fact that we are misallocating resources is becoming much more clear. And I think, as it becomes clear, we begin to address this series of problems in a much more comprehensive way. We are misallocating resources to administrative costs; we are misallocating resources to expensive health care delivery methods that could be reallocated to save substantial resources committed now unnecessarily.

Another problem, that I certainly have addressed, and others have, as well, is that we spend far too much on unnecessary care. Some will tell us that that unnecessary care could be as much as 30 percent of all the care delivered today, for a lot of different reasons which we have outlined in the past.

Finally, of course, the hassle factor, the fact that doctors and administrators are spending far too much time filling out forms, dealing with bureaucracy, and not providing health care. Experts have told us that as much as the equivalent of 2 work weeks are spent each month by doctors who have to spend an incredible amount of work and time and effort filling out these bureaucratic, nightmarish forms to a point that they never dreamed possible when they were in medical school.

So we have all of these problems. There is no single bullet with which to solve them. Some would say all we have to do is revise our current health care delivery system, adopt what many people call managed care; managed care will take care of the problem.

There was an interesting article in the paper just in the last couple of days which indicated that, while managed care can contribute, managed care, in and of itself, will not solve the problem. Businesses and corporations of all kinds are coming before the Congress and are reiterating that managed care is not meeting their expectations. So managed care is no silver bullet.

There is no single bullet. There is no easy answer. There is no incremental approach that will softly and gently move us into a new arrangement whereby we could resolve all of the five problems.

But what ought we to consider as a basic core set of principles that can begin creating this comprehensive health care plan? I think there are a number of them. I very briefly want to touch on those principles today. They can be incorporated into any one of a number of different comprehensive health care reform proposals. But I think, for a comprehensive approach to health care reform to be successful, they ought to include in some form some of the principles that I am about to mention.

The first would be preventive care. Today we had a major decision from the Supreme Court about abortion and, whether one is pro-life or pro-choice, there is no argument about one thing. Regardless from which philosophical perspective you may come, the fact is that we can save the lives, the livelihoods, the health, the ultimate welfare and well-being of those children much more effectively if we provide universal access to health care delivery; for pregnant mothers, more opportunities to give that new child an opportunity to live in good health; for that fetus an opportunity to grow and be nurtured under the guidance of a health care provider.

For all of those who are so concerned about the issue either way, I challenge them to come forth and to join with us in the realization that we must provide extensive prenatal care and neonatal care to every single child in this country. You cannot have a health care delivery system unless you start with that. I do not care what it is, I do not care what kind of a plan you put forth, it has to start with that. Primary care, wellness promotion, preventive care starts with the child, starts with the pregnancy, starts with access for that pregnant mother, who for the first time, would have hope that she and her child could be healthy. What is more fundamental than that? What is more sensible than that? What could be more economically efficient than to provide access to health care with the cheapest and most inexpensive approach rather than to wait until complications develop? I am told that the cost-effectiveness ratio of prenatal care could be 100 to 1 to one. That is, you save $100 for every $1 you put into a prenatal care program. If it is that extraordinary, then why are we not doing it today?

The second principle, it seems to me, is pretty simple as well. You have to have a budget. If there is one thing I hear every time I return home, and I return home often, it is people who walk up and say, "Tom, the thing you ought to do is run Government like a business or a family. We all have a budget, why do you not? You have to run it like a business. You have to run it like a family. You have to live within some confines; you just cannot go out there and spend until you get blue in the face."

I think they are right. I am not sure families and businesses always do it as well as we would like, as well as they would like, but certainly you have to give them extraordinarily high marks for effort.

But what are the marks when it comes to health care in this country? Where is the budget? Where is this notion of running a government entity like a business or a family when it comes to health care? We spend as if there is no tomorrow. We do not have any limits, either in the private sector or in the Government sector, when it comes to health care. And the results are economically cataclysmic.

The distinguished Senator from Nebraska made it very clear: We are spending extraordinary amounts of money unnecessarily and with costs that we have not even begun to realize simply because we do not have a budget. We have to begin appreciating the need for a budget if we are going to deal with health care costs.

A couple of months ago we had a very vigorous debate about capping Medicare and Medicaid, and there were those on the other side who said we have to cap them because that is the only way we are going to control them. And, to a certain extent, I can subscribe to that argument. But if we are, indeed, going to cap Medicare and Medicaid, are we not then acknowledging the need for a budget? I would argue we are, and I would argue that it is time we not only cap Medicare and Medicaid but that we cap every other part of health care spending and realize that our resources are limited and, if they are limited, come to some better approach to how we allocate those resources.

The third principle: Let us also acknowledge that we have way too many payers in the system today. The General Accounting Office has indicated to the Congress that a big reason why we see fraud in the current system—and that fraud was $70 billion last year—is tied directly to the fact that with our multipayer system, there is no one minding the store. There is no way to ensure that all of this money does not fall down an ever increasing rat hole because of fraud. And they said of all of the reasons why fraud exists, the biggest is the hundreds and hundreds of payers in our current system, 1,200 to 1,400 payers today. And the duplication not directly related to fraud is equally as expensive.

The plethora of payers is driving administrative costs sky high. We are told administrative costs alone could be 20 to 25 percent of the overall health care budget. Twenty-five percent, Mr. President, is over $200 billion that we are spending on paperwork, that we are spending on administration and all of those other costs not directly related to health care, and that is wrong.

Small businesses are among the biggest victims of all. Their costs are substantially higher than those of large corporations; 40 percent of the premiums small businesses pay today go to insurers' administrative costs, 40 percent. So we have a gas-guzzler system, a system that takes too much to get from here to there in providing the health care we all want.

The fourth principle: some kind of decisionmaking entity. A Federal health board is essential. The one real encouragement I have received in recent months in talking about this issue on both sides of the aisle is the realization that there has to be some decisionmaking authority, some way for us to start making better allocation decisions, better cost-containment decisions, better decisions relating to where the dollars go in primary care. Those kinds of issues have to be decided by someone, and a health care delivery mechanism that includes a decisionmaking authority is absolutely essential.

The fifth principle is one about which I feel very strongly. I know that it is somewhat controversial, but I do believe that as we continue to evolve into a more realistic health care delivery mechanism, that new mechanism, that new reform movement is going to at long last delink health-care insurance from employment.

For the life of me, I do not understand how it was that it got to this point in the first place. Employers do not take care of our housing; they do not take care of our education; they do not take care of our clothing or our other necessities in life. Why and through what method was it that we came to the conclusion they are responsible for our health care? They are not responsible in any other country. So if they are not in any other country, why would they be in this country, which proclaims its competitiveness and its ability to compete anywhere in the world with the most competitive features of our capitalistic system?

What is competitive about requiring employers pay up to $500 to $700 a month in insurance costs? That cost, Mr. President, is driving our employers to a position which is not competitive and is having a devastating effect on their ability to compete internationally. An economist told us, candidly, a couple of months ago that one of two things is going to happen within 20 years: either we will have come to our senses and broken that link between employment and health care delivery or our large employers will have left the country to evade that responsibility.

I think he is right. It is the most inefficient and complex way of providing insurance there can be. General Motors estimates that its obligation for retirees' health benefits exceeds its total assets today.

So let there be no mistake; the cost of continuing to require employers to pay health care is wrong, uncompetitive, extremely inefficient, expensive, and an anachronism.

I do think employers ought to have the opportunity, should they so choose, for whatever reason—recruitment, retention, whatever reason it may be—to provide health care. That ought to be their choice. But to require under law that an employer does so, to me, ought to be changed.

Those are the principles, Mr. President: Breaking the link between employment and health care, having some kind of a decisionmaking authority, reducing the number of payers, having a budget, ensuring that we have preventive care, are principles that I hope Democrats and Republicans alike could support and could use as the basis upon which to build comprehensive health care reform.

Mr. President, there is one other point that I would like to make before I yield the floor. It has to do with some comments made by the Secretary of Health and Human Services a couple of weeks ago before the Senate Finance Committee. The Secretary indicated that a new study had just been released by Dr. Robert Blenden of the Harvard School of Public Health. It was presented at a recent meeting of the Association of Health Services Research. He stated that in that study physicians found the Canadian system virtually unacceptable.

I do not want to paraphrase inaccurately the Secretary's remarks. I ask unanimous consent that his remarks be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Canadian doctors, according to a recent report, are deeply concerned about their ability to get access for their patients to special care and medical technology.

In addition, let me report, a large majority of doctors in Canada and Germany also believe their systems require major overhaul.

And also, Senator CHAFEE, the source for that citation of the Canadian doctors is a study by Dr. Robert Blenden of the Harvard School of Public Health.

And there was an article citing the study in the Wall Street Journal on June 9, just a few days ago. And this was a study funded by the Robert Johnson Foundation.

Mr. DASCHLE. The reason I raise the issue, Mr. President, is because it goes to a larger point. The larger point is, regardless of whether or not we subscribe to a Canadian system or a German system or any one of the foreign systems, I happen to believe that the adoption of a foreign system is wrong; that we can adapt American principles and American health care reform standards and American health care practices to a comprehensive health care reform system that has little to do with what is done in Canada or what is done in Germany or what is done in Britain or Japan.

But just because I do not subscribe to a Canadian system or a German system does not mean I believe we cannot learn from a German system or a Canadian system. And if we are going to learn from one of these systems, it seems to me we ought to get our facts straight and not, for whatever reason, distort the facts to make a point, only to obfuscate the issue and not learn at all.

Oftentimes that seems to be the case as we debate health care reform. Outrageous claims or accusations are made about other systems that so undermine our ability to understand, undermine our ability to debate the issue in an objective and enlightened way I think the purposes are defeated. And so it is in that interest I would attempt to lay the record straight with just a few points made in the very study the Secretary cited in his testimony 2 weeks ago.

Point No. 1, "Canadian and West German physicians were found to be more satisfied with their system than were U.S. physicians"—more satisfied. That was not the impression left by the Secretary, but that is what the study says.

Second, "physicians in the U.S. were unique among the three countries in reporting a serious problem with obtaining care for patients who could not afford treatment."

The Secretary made quite a point of saying that there are long waiting lines in Canada, that certain kinds of care were not provided, and he cited this study as his basis for making that claim. Now we find that the study is very clear. It says physicians in the United States were unique in pointing out that our system presented serious problems for obtaining care for patients who could not afford treatment.

The third point, "U.S. physicians reported more patients who should have sought care earlier.

"U.S. physicians reported the most external interference from third-party payers in their medical practice decision making."

We are seeing that today with the managed care concept. External interference from third-party payers. How much more can we expect in the future by an employer or someone who says we are not going to pay that for you; you are not going to get it. As a result, it is up to you. External interference may or may not be a good thing. But if it is haphazard, if it is done without standards, then I would argue, Mr. President, we are making a mistake. And the United States has more external interference than that of other countries.

"Only 23 percent of United States doctors believe the system works pretty well as compared to 33 percent of doctors in Canada and 48 percent of German physicians."

And then finally, "More than two-thirds of American physicians said they thought fundamental changes are needed to make the system work better."

I think that is a phenomenal figure. Two-thirds of American physicians said they thought fundamental changes are needed to make the system work better. We are not talking about patients here. We are not talking about rank and file American workers. We are talking about people on the front lines, those in the surgical suites, those in the emergency rooms, those who ought to know the system best. Those people are saying by two-thirds that fundamental changes, not tinkering around the edges, are needed in the current system.

Dr. Ted Marmor of Yale University may have summed it up best at the end of the hearing, referring to the incredible array of misguided and absolutely inaccurate information broadcast about the Canadian system, when he said, "I think I've heard the intellectual equivalent of acid rain." We're sending unwanted verbal pollution across the Canadian border.

I think there is a lot of intellectual acid rain when it comes to health care delivery. We have to separate fiction from fact. We have to understand what the real facts are so that we can make objective decisions about what it is we need and what it is we want. I hope over the course of the next several months we will have that opportunity in committees and on the floor.

I appreciate very much the attention of my colleagues to this issue this evening.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

THE SUPREME COURT'S DECISION IN THE ABORTION CASE

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today's decision by the Supreme Court in the Pennsylvania abortion case severely undermines the right of a woman to choose to terminate her pregnancy. The Court has clearly abandoned large parts of the protection that Roe versus Wade provided. Today's decision is a signal to the States that a wide range of previously unconstitutional restrictions on a woman's right to choose will now be held valid by the Court.

The decision is little more than an invitation to the States to impose additional burdensome restrictions on abortion. The inevitable result is massive uncertainty in the law and endless litigation to try to clarify it.

In this situation, the only responsible course is for Congress to act as soon as possible to pass the Freedom of Choice Act, and restore to all the women of America what the Supreme Court today has taken from them.

I intend to ask the Senate Labor Committee to act on this legislation on Wednesday, so that the full Senate will be able to pass this essential measure as soon as possible.

It is a sad commentary on the State of constitutional law in America in 1992 that the Supreme Court of the United States is willing to cut back on the fundamental constitutional guarantee that the Court upheld in Roe versus Wade in 1973.

Restrictions on abortion of the sort approved by the Court today are all too likely to cause large numbers of women to sacrifice their dignity, their health, and often their lives, to terminate their pregnancies.

In recent hearings before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, we heard the eloquent and brutal testimony of a woman who underwent an illegal first trimester abortion in the mid-1950's. Another witness, too poor to afford an illegal abortion, described the desperation that led her to try to perform an abortion on herself. Finally, we heard the heartbreaking story of a son who, more than 60 years later, was brought to tears again as he described his mother's death from an attempted abortion on herself.

No woman in America and no family in America should be placed in these tragic circumstances. The decision whether to terminate a pregnancy is a private and deeply personal and anguishing decision that should be made by a woman and her doctor, not by the Federal Government, and not by State and local governments.

We should all work to reduce the need for abortions in America through more effective family planning, contraception research, and adoption services. But we must also safeguard a woman's right to make this deeply personal choice to terminate a pregnancy, and we must assure that she can safely implement her choice without governmental interference.

I hope that my colleagues will read the shocking testimony of these victims to whom I have referred. I ask unanimous consent that excerpts from their testimony may be printed in the RECORD. I also ask unanimous consent that the headnote from today's Supreme Court decision may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TESTIMONY BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON LABOR AND HUMAN RESOURCES ON S. 1912, MARCH 27, 1990

A DARK, DIRTY OLD BUILDING

* * * I entered this dark, dirty old building with my hands shaking and my heart in my throat, when I walked up those three flights of pitchy stairs and got to the door at the top of them, it cost me $1,000 to get through that door—$1,000 made up of pennies and nickels and dimes saved up over a very long period of time, money that I had attempted to scrape together to put away for a down payment on a home for my family—and every bit of it gone to pay for a dirty knife.

This was in 1954, gentlemen, a time when a dollar was worth probably three to four times what it is today, and I was about two and a half months into the pregnancy. Today an abortion at that stage, done safely, would cost about $250. But in 1954, I had to hand this drunken old butcher four times that amount, and it bought me the most painful and degrading experience of my life.

After I had been given two aspirin, which was the anesthetic, I was led down a hall to a filthy little room with cobwebs hanging from the ceiling and a slop bucket placed at the end of what resembled a dirty old kitchen table. The abortionist was pouring himself a drink of whiskey as I went into the room and the first thing he said to me was: "You can take your pants down now, but you should have—ha, ha—left them on before."

Then he told me to lie down on the table. And when I did, what I saw coming toward me was a man with a whiskey glass in one hand and a sharp instrument in the other and both hands shaking.

After he had downed his drink, he doubled his fist over my face, held it about two inches from my face and said: "This is going to hurt—and you'd better keep your mouth shut or I'll shut it for you."

I didn't doubt him at all, not for a minute, and I did keep my mouth shut—through about 15 minutes of the most eyeball-popping pain you could ever imagine.

I BECAME A LITTLE CRAZY

At the age of 20 years old, I was living in White Plains, New York. I was working as a domestic. And as I said, I found myself pregnant.

I really and truly at that time became a little crazy. I could not think of how I was going to terminate this pregnancy. I did all kinds of things to self-abort, from taking quinine and turpentine, to taking black draft, to taking epsom salts, to taking all kinds of laxatives, to taking hot baths where I literally cooked myself, to eventually coming to the conclusion that the only thing that I could do was to do what other friends had done, which was to resort to knitting needles.

I bought a pair of knitting needles in F.W. Woolworth's in White Plains, New York. I did not buy the little fat kind; I bought the long, thin kind. I then proceeded to buy a flashlight and a mirror. The flashlight was so that I could see exactly what I was doing and so that I would have a mirror so I would be able to look.

I had a pail, I had a flashlight, I had a mirror, and for two consecutive days, I tried to induce a period that was a month late.

It is a horrendous experience to try to self-abort. It is something that most women have done if they have found themselves pregnant and have no money, and that was what I did.

I was eventually successful, and I did self-abort.

I would like to say that after the procedure, I hemorrhaged; I did not go to the hospital because of fear.

I GREW UP BELIEVING OUR MOTHER DIED FROM PTOMAINE POISONING

During 1929, a gifted soprano, 28-year-old Denver mother, and adored wife of two toddlers two and four years old, desperately faced a new and life-threatening pregnancy, unknown to her husband and her parents. She telephoned her desperate circumstances to her sister-in-law, married to a country doctor in Idaho, and begged her to get "Doc" to perform an abortion.

"My aunt gently and sorrowfully told her that she could not ask "Doc" to forget his Hippocratic Oath and professional license to perform an illegal operation, even for one so dear as his young sister-in-law, and "Doc" never heard of her pleas before she died.

My cornered, frantic mother turned to back alley means and illegally obtained a quantity of a controlled drug, ergot apiol, which she secretly and ineptly overdosed at home.

At the dinner table that night, she went into convulsions and died on the floor, before the terrified eyes of her husband and tots.

My sister and I grew up believing our mother died from ptomaine poisoning caused by home-canned sweet corn—understandably, an equally painful and horrible death, but socially acceptable to the pro-lifers of 1929 and 1990.

We never had a chance to ask our Dad, his sister and our uncle "Doc" for the facts, which we learned only 2 years ago, when my sister, a retired nurse, researched and obtained a copy of my mother's death certificate, which is attached: "Cause of death, determined by an autopsy, overdose of ergot taken to produce an abortion."

[Supreme Court of the United States]

PLANNED PARENTHOOD OF SOUTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA v. CASEY

CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT

No. 91-744 together with No. 91-902, CASEY v. PLANNED PARENTHOOD OF SOUTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA); Argued April 22, 1992—Decided June 29, 1992

At issue are five provisions of the Pennsylvania Abortion Control Act of 1982: §3205, which requires that a woman seeking an abortion give her informed consent prior to the procedure, and specifies that she be provided with certain information at least 24 hours before the abortion is performed; §3206, which mandates the informed consent of one parent for a minor to obtain an abortion, but provides a judicial bypass procedure; §3209, which commands that, unless certain exceptions apply, a married woman seeking an abortion must sign a statement indicating that she has notified her husband; §3203, which defines a "medical emergency" that will excuse compliance with the foregoing requirements; and §§3207(b), 3214(a), and 3214(f), which impose certain reporting requirements on facilities providing abortion services. Before any of the provisions took effect, the petitioners, five abortion clinics and a physician representing himself and a class of doctors who provide abortion services, brought this suit seeking a declaratory judgment that each of the provisions was unconstitutional on its face, as well as injunctive relief. The District Court held all the provisions unconstitutional and permanently enjoined their enforcement. The Court of Appeals affirmed in part and reversed in part, striking down the husband notification provision but upholding the others.

Held; The judgment in No. 91-902 is affirmed; the judgment in No. 91-744 is affirmed in part and reversed in part, and the case is remanded.

947 F. 2d 682: No. 91-902, affirmed; No. 91-744, affirmed in part, reversed in part, and remanded.

JUSTICE O'CONNOR, JUSTICE KENNEDY, and JUSTICE SOUTER delivered the opinion of the Court with respect to Parts I, II, and III, concluding that:

1. Consideration of the fundamental constitutional question resolved by Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, principles of institutional integrity, and the rule of stare decisis require that Roe's essential holding be retained and reaffirmed as to each of its three parts: (1) a recognition of a woman's right to choose to have an abortion before fetal viability and to obtain it without undue interference from the State, whose previability interests are not strong enough to support an abortion prohibition or the imposition of substantial obstacles to the woman's effective right to elect right to elect the procedure; (2) a confirmation of the State's power to restrict abortions after viability, if the law contains exceptions for pregnancies endangering a woman's life or health; and (3) the principle that the State has legitimate interests from the outset of the pregnancy in protecting the health of the woman and the life of the fetus that may become a child. Pp. 1–27.

(a) A reexamination of the principles that define the woman's rights and the State's authority regarding abortions is required by the doubt this Court's subsequent decisions have cast upon the meaning and reach of Roe's central holding, but the fact that THE CHIEF JUSTICE would overrule Roe, and by the necessity that state and federal courts and legislatures have adequate guidance on the subject. Pp. 1–3.

(b) Roe determined that a woman's decision to terminate her pregnancy is a "liberty" protected against state interference by the substantive component of the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Neither the Bill of Rights nor the specific practices of States at the time of the Fourteenth Amendment's adoption marks the outer limits of the substantive sphere of such "liberty." Rather, the adjudication of substantive due process claims may require this Court to exercise its reasoned judgment in determining the boundaries between the individual's liberty and the demands of organized society. The Court's decisions have afforded constitutional protection to personal decisions relating to marriage, see, e.g., Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1, procreation, Skinner v. Oklahoma, 316 U.S. 535, family relationships, Prince v. Massachusetts, 321, U.S. 158, child rearing and education, Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, and contraception, see e.g., Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, and have recognized the right of the individual to be free from unwarranted governmental intrusion into matters so fundamentally affecting a person as the decision whether to bear or beget a child, Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438, 453. Roe's central holding properly invoked the reasoning and tradition of these precedents. Pp. 4–11.

(c) Application of the doctrine of stare decisis confirms that Roe's essential holding should be reaffirmed. In reexamining that holding, the Court's judgment is informed by a series of prudential and pragmatic considerations designed to test the consistency of overruling the holding with the ideal of the rule of law, and to gauge the respective costs of reaffirming and overruling. Pp. 11–13.

(d) Although Roe has engendered opposition, it has in no sense proven unworkable, representing as it does a simple limitation beyond which a state law is unenforceable. P. 13.

(e) The Roe rule's limitation on state power could not be repudiated without serious inequity to people who, for two decades of economic and social developments, have organized intimate relationships and made choices that define their views of themselves and their places in society, in reliance on the availability of abortion in the event that contraception should fail. The ability of women to participate equally in the economic and social life of the Nation has been facilitated by their ability to control their reproductive lives. The Constitution serves human values, and while the effect of reliance on Roe cannot be exactly measured, neither can the certain costs of overruling that case be dismissed. Pp. 13–14.

(f) No evaluation of legal principle has left Roe's central rule a doctrinal anachronism discounted by society. If Roe is placed among the cases exemplified by Griswold, supra, it is clearly in no jeopardy, since subsequent constitutional developments have neither disturbed, nor do they threaten to diminish, the liberty recognized in such cases. Similarly, if Roe is seen as stating a rule of personal autonomy and bodily integrity, akin to cases recognizing limits on governmental power to mandate medical treatment or to bar is rejection, the Court's post-Roe decisions accord with Roe's view that a State's interest in the protection of life falls short of justifying any plenary override of individual liberty claims. See, e.g. Cruzan v. Director, Missouri Dept. of Health, 497 U.S. ——, ——. Finally, if Roe is classified as sui generis, there clearly has been no erosion of its central determination. It was expressly reaffirmed in Akron v. Akron Center for Reproductive Health, 462 U.S. 416 (Akron I), and Thornburgh v. American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, 476 U.S. 747; and, in Webster v. Reproductive Health Services, 492 U.S. 490, a majority either voted to reaffirm or declined to address the constitutional validity of Roe's central holding. Pp. 14–17.

(g) No change in Roe's factual underpinning has left its central holding obsolete, and none supports an argument for its overruling. Although subsequent maternal health care advances allow for later abortions safe to the pregnant woman, and post-Roe neonatal care developments have advanced viability to a point somewhat earlier, these facts go only to the scheme of time limits on the realization of competing interests. Thus, any later divergences from the factual premises of Roe have no bearing on the validity of its central holding, that viability marks the earliest point at which the State's interest in fetal life is constitutionally adequate to justify a legislative ban on nontherapeutic abortions. The soundness or unsoundness of that constitutional judgment is no sense turns on when viability occurs. Whenever it may occur, its attainment will continue to serve as the critical fact. Pp. 17–18.

(h) A comparison between Roe and two decisional lines of comparable significance—the line identified with Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45, and the line that began with Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537—confirms the result reached here. Those lines were overruled—by, respectively, West Coast Hotel Co. v. Parrish, 330 U.S. 379, and Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U.S. 483—on the basis of facts, or an understanding of facts, changed from those which furnished the claimed justifications for the earlier constitutional resolutions. The overruling decisions were comprehensible to the Nation, and defensible, as the Court's responses to change circumstances. In contrast, because neither the factual underpinnings of Roe's central holding nor this Court's understanding of it has changed (and because no other indication of weakened precedent has been shown), the Court could not pretend to be reexamining Roe with any justification beyond a present doctrinal disposition to come out differently from the Roe Court. That is an inadequate basis for overruling a prior case. Pp. 19–22.

(i) Overruling Roe's central holding would not only reach an unjustifiable result under stare decisis principles, but would seriously weaken the Court's capacity to exercise the judicial power and to function as the Supreme Court of a Nation dedicated to the rule of law. Where the Court acts to resolve the sort of unique, intensely divisive controversy reflected in Roe, its decision has a dimension not present in normal cases and is entitled to rare precedential force to counter the inevitable efforts to overturn it and to thwart its implementation. Only the most convincing justification under accepted standards of precedent could suffice to demonstrate that a later decision overruling the first was anything but a surrender to political pressure and an unjustified repudiation of the principle on which the Court staked its authority in the first instance. Moreover, the country's loss of confidence in the Judiciary would be underscored by condemnation for the Court's failure to keep faith with those who support the decision at a cost to themselves. A decision to overrule Roe's essential holding under the existing circumstances would address error, if error there was, at the cost of both profound and unnecessary damage to the Court's legitimacy and to the Nation's commitment to the rule of law. Pp. 22–27.

JUSTICE O'CONNOR, JUSTICE KENNEDY, and JUSTICE SOUTER concluded in Part IV that an examination of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, and subsequent cases reveals a number of guiding principles that should control the assessment of the Pennsylvania statute:

(a) To protect the central right recognized by*Roe* while at the same time accommodating the State's profound interest in potential life, see, id., at 162, the undue burden standard should be employed. An undue burden exists, and therefore a provision of law is invalid, if its purpose or effect is to place substantial obstacles in the path of a woman seeking an abortion before the fetus attains viability.

(b) Roe's rigid trimester framework is rejected. To promote the State's interest in potential life throughout pregnancy, the State may take measures to ensure that the woman's choice is informed. Measures designed to advance this interest should not be invalidated if their purpose is to persuade the woman to choose childbirth over abortion. These measures must not be an undue burden on the right.

(c) As with any medical procedure, the State may enact regulations to further the health or safety of a woman seeking an abortion, but may not impose unnecessary health regulations that present a substantial obstacle to a woman seeking an abortion.

(d) Adoption of the undue burden standard does not disturb Roe's holding that regardless of whether exceptions are made for particular circumstances, a State may not prohibit any woman from making the ultimate decision to terminate her pregnancy before viability.

(e) Roe's holding that "subsequent to viability, the State in promoting its interest in the potentiality of human life may, if it chooses, regulate, and even proscribe, abortion except where it is necessary, in appropriate medical judgment, for the preservation of the life or health of the mother' is also reaffirmed. Id., at 164–165. Pp. 27–37.

JUSTICE O'CONNOR, JUSTICE KENNEDY, and JUSTICE SOUTER delivered the opinion of the Court with respect to Parts V–A and V–C, concluding that:

1. As construed by the Court of Appeals, §3203's medical emergency definition is intended to assure that compliance with the State's abortion regulations would not in any way pose a significant threat to a woman's life or health, and thus does not violate the essential holding at Roe, supra, at 164. Although the definition could be interpreted in an unconstitutional manner, this Court defers to lower federal court interpretations of state law unless they amount to "plain" error. Pp. 38–39.

2. Section 3209's husband notification provision constitutes an undue burden and is therefore invalid. A significant number of women will likely be prevented from obtaining an abortion just as surely as if Pennsylvania had outlawed the procedure entirely. The fact that §3209 may affect fewer than one percent of women seeking abortions does not save it from facial invalidity, since the proper focus of constitutional inquiry is the group for whom the law is a restriction, not the group for whom it is irrelevant. Furthermore, it cannot be claimed that the father's interest in the fetus' welfare is equal to the mother's protected liberty, since it is an inescapable biological fact that state regulation with respect to the fetus will have a far greater impact on the pregnant women's bodily integrity than it will on the husband. Section 3209 embodies a view of marriage consonant with the common-law status of married women but repugnant to this Court's present understanding of marriage and of the nature of the rights secured by the Constitution. See Planned Parenthood of Central Mo. v. Danforth, 428 U.S. 52, 69. Pp. 46–58.

JUSTICE O'CONNOR, JUSTICE KENNEDY, and JUSTICE SOUTER, joined by JUSTICE STEVENS, concluded in Part V–E that all of the statute's recordkeeping and reporting requirements, except that relating to spousal notice, are constitutional. The reporting provision relating to the reasons a married woman has not notified her husband that she intends to have an abortion must be invalid because it places an undue burden on a woman's choice. Pp. 59–60.

JUSTICE O'CONNOR, JUSTICE KENNEDY, and JUSTICE SOUTER, concluded in Parts V–B and V–D that:

1. Section 3205's informed consent provision is not an undue burden on a woman's constitutional right to decide to terminate a pregnancy. To the extent Akron I, 462 U.S., at 444, and THORNBURGH, 476 U.S., at 762, find a constitutional violation when the government requires, as it does here, the giving of truthful, nonmisleading information about the nature of the abortion procedure, the attendant health risks and those of childbirth, and the "probable gestational age" of the fetus, those cases are inconsistent with Roe's acknowledgement of an important interest in potential life, and are overruled. Requiring that the woman be informed of the availability of information relating to the consequences to the fetus does not interfere with a constitutional right of privacy between a pregnant woman and her physician, since the doctor-patient relation is derivative of the woman's position, and does not underlie or override the abortion right. Moreover, the physician's First Amendment rights not to speak are implicated only as part of the practice of medicine, which is licensed and regulated by the State. There is no evidence here that requiring a doctor to give the required information would amount to a substantial obstacle to a woman seeking abortion.

The premise behind Akron I's invalidation of a waiting period between the provision of the information deemed necessary to informed consent and the performance of an abortion, id., at 450, is also wrong. Although §3205's 24-hour waiting period may make some abortions more expensive and less convenient, it cannot be said that it is invalid on the present record and in the context of this facial challenge. Pp. 39–46.

2. Section 3206's one-parent consent requirement and judicial bypass procedure are constitutional. See, e.g., Ohio v. Akron Center for Reproductive Health, 497 U.S. ——, ——. Pp. 58–59.

JUSTICE BLACKMUN concluded that application of the strict scrutiny standard of review required by this Court's abortion precedents results in the invalidation of all the challenged provisions in the Pennsylvania statute, including the reporting requirements, and therefore concurred in the judgment that the requirement that a pregnant woman report her reasons for failing to provide spousal notice is unconstitutional. Pp. 10, 14–15.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE, joined by JUSTICE WHITE, JUSTICE SCALLA, and JUSTICE THOMAS, concluded that:

1. Although Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, is not directly implicated by the Pennsylvania statute, which simply regulates and does not prohibit abortion, a reexamination of the "fundamental right" Roe accorded to a woman's decision to abort a fetus, with the concomitant requirement that any state regulation of abortion survive "strict scrutiny," id., at 154–156, is warranted by the confusing and uncertain state of this Court's post-Roe decisional law. A review of post-Roe cases demonstrates both that they have expanded upon Roe in imposing increasingly greater restrictions on the States, see Thornburgh v. American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, 476 U.S. 747, 783 (Burger, C.J., dissenting), and that the Court has become increasingly more divided, none of the last three such decisions having commanded a majority opinion, see Ohio v. Akron Center for Reproductive Health, 497 U.S. 502, Hodgson v. Minnesota, 497 U.s. 417, Webster v. Reproductive Health Services, 492 U.S. 490. This confusion and uncertainty complicated the task of the Court of Appeals, which concluded that the "undue burden" standard adopted by JUSTICE O'CONNOR in Webster and Hodgson governs the present cases, Pp. 1–8.

2. The Roe Court reached too far when it analogized the right to abort a fetus to the rights involved in Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510; Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390; Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1; and Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, and thereby deemed the right to abortion to be "fundamental." None of these decisions endorsed an all-encompassing "right of privacy," as Roe, supra, at 152–153, claimed. Because abortion involves the purposeful termination of potential life, the abortion decision must be recognized as sui generis, different in kind from the rights protected in the earlier cases under the rubric of personal or family privacy and autonomy. And the historical traditions of the American people—as evidenced by the English common law and by the American abortion statutes in existence both at the time of the Fourteenth Amendment's adoption and Roe's issuance—do not support the view that the right to terminate one's pregnancy is "fundamental." Thus, enactments abridging that right need not be subjected to strict scrutiny. Pp 8–11.

3. The undue burden standard adopted by the joint opinion of Justices O'Connor, Kennedy, and Souter has no basis in constitutional law and will not result in the sort of simple limitation, easily applied, which the opinion anticipates. To evaluate abortion regulations under that standard, judges will have to make the subjective, unguided determination whether the regulations place "substantial obstacles" in the path of a woman seeking an abortion, undoubtedly engendering a variety of conflicting views. The standard presents nothing more workable than the trimester framework the joint opinion discards, and will allow the Court, under the guise of the Constitution, to continue to impart its own preferences on the States in the form of a complex abortion code. Pp. 22–23.

4. The correct analysis is that set forth by the plurality opinion in Webster, supra. A woman's interest in having an abortion is a form of liberty protected by the Due Process Clause, but States may regulate abortion procedures in ways rationally related to a legitimate state interest. P. 24.

5. Section 3205's requirements are rationally related to the State's legitimate interest in assuring that a woman's consent to an abortion be fully informed. The requirement that a physician disclose certain information about the abortion procedure and its risks and alternatives is not a large burden and is clearly related to maternal health and the State's interest in informed consent. In addition, a State may rationally decide that physicians are better qualified than counselors to impart this information and answer questions about the abortion alternatives' medical aspects. The requirement that information be provided about the availability of paternal child support and state-funded alternatives is also related to the State's informed consent interest and furthers the State's interest in preserving unborn life. That such information might create some uncertainty and persuade some women to forgo abortions only demonstrates that it might make a difference and is therefore relevant to a women's informed choice. In light of this plurality's rejection of Roe's "fundamental right." approach to this subject, the Court's contrary holding in Thornburgh is not controlling here. For the same reason, this Court's previous holding invalidating a State's 24-hour mandatory waiting period should not be followed. The waiting period helps ensure that a woman's decision to abort is a well-considered one, and rationally furthers the State's legitimate interest in maternal health and in unborn life. It may delay, but does not prohibit, abortions; and both it and the informed consent provisions do not apply in medical emergencies. Pp. 24–27.

6. The statute's parental consent provision is entirely consistent with this Court's previous decisions involving such requirements. See e.g., Planned Parenthood Association of Kansas City, Missouri, Inc. v. Ashcroft, 462 U.S. 476. It is reasonably designed to further the State's important and legitimate interest "in the welfare of its young citizens, whose immaturity, inexperience, and lack of judgment may sometimes impair their ability to exercise their rights wisely," Hodgson, supra, at 444. Pp. 27–29.

7. Section 3214(a)'s requirement that abortion facilities file a report on each abortion is constitutional because it rationally furthers the State's legitimate interests in advancing the state of medical knowledge concerning material health and prenatal life, in gathering statistical information with respect to patients, and in ensuring compliance with other provisions of the Act, while keeping the reports completely confidential. Public disclosure of other reports made by facilities receiving public funds—those identifying the facilities and any parent, subsidiary, or affiliated organizations, §3207(b), and those revealing the total number of abortions performed, broken down by trimester, §3214(f)—are rationally related to the State's legitimate interest informing taxpayers as to who is benefiting from public funds and what services the funds are supporting; and records relating to the expenditure of public funds are generally available to the public under Pennsylvania law. Pp. 34–35.

Justice Scalia, joined by "The Chief Justice, Justice White, and Justice Thomas, concluded that a woman's decision to abort her unborn child is not a constitutionally protected "liberty" because (1) the Constitution says absolutely nothing about it, and (2) the longstanding traditions of American society have permitted it to be legally proscribed. See, e.g., Ohio v. Akron Center for Reproductive Health, 497 U.S.——, —— (Scalia, J., concurring). The Pennsylvania statute should be upheld in its entirety under the rational basis test. Pp. 1–3.

O'Connor, Kennedy, and Souter, JJ., announced the judgment of the Court and delivered the opinion of the Court with respect to Parts I, II, III, V–A, V–C, and VI, in which Blackmun and Stevens, JJ., joined, an opinion with respect to Part V–E, in which Stevens, J., joined, and an opinion with respect to Parts IV, V–B, and V–D. Stevens, J., filed an opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part. Blackmun, J., filed an opinion concurring in part, concurring in the judgment in part, and dissenting in part. Rehnquist, C. J., filed an opinion concurring in the judgment in part and dissenting in part, in which White, Scalia, and Thomas, JJ., joined. Scalia, J., filed an opinion concurring in the judgment in part and dissenting in part, in which Rehnquist, C.J., and White and Thomas, JJ., joined.

A BALANCED BUDGET

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I will vote for the proposal by the distinguished President pro tem of the Senate, Senator Byrd, requiring the President of the United States to submit to the Congress by September a plan to reduce the Federal Government deficits and balance the Federal budget over the next 5 years. I have in the past voted for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget and I intend to vote again for such an amendment if in my view it is properly drafted.

It is clear, however, that the current effort to attach a constitutional amendment to another bill in the Senate as a rider, after it has been rejected by the House of Representatives is pure politics and will result in little more than delaying other legislation. The American people are tired of budget deficits, but I think they are even more tired of legislative gridlock that prevents the Congress from acting. Bringing up the constitutional amendment now, under these circumstances, just adds to legislative gridlock. For that reason and because Senator Byrd's proposal is entirely reasonable and constructive, I will vote for it.

TEMPORARY EXTENSION OF THE TRANSITION RULE FOR SEPARATE CAPITALIZATION OF SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS' SUBSIDIARIES

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 2905, a bill to provide a 4-month extension of the transition rule for separate capitalization of savings associations' subsidiaries, introduced earlier today by Senators Riegle and Garn, that the bill be deemed read three times; passed; the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and that any statements thereupon appear at the appropriate place in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 2905) was deemed read the third time and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

The bill with its preamble is as follows:

S. 2905

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 5(t)(5)(D)(ii) of the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. 1464(t)(5)(D)(ii)) is amended—

(1) by striking "June 30, 1992" and inserting "October 31, 1992"; and

(2) by striking "July 1, 1992" and inserting "November 1, 1992".

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, under present law, if a federally insured savings association engages through a subsidiary in activities not permissible for a national bank, the savings association cannot count its investments in and extensions of credit to the subsidiary as part of its own capital. Congress adopted this rule in 1989 because of the record of significant losses by the thrifts making direct investments through subsidiaries. Principally, these nonconforming subsidiaries were engaged in real estate development.

Present law includes a transition rule permitting a savings association to include in its capital until July 1, 1992, 75 percent of its investments in and extensions of credit to a nonconforming subsidiary. That percentage will decline to 60 percent on July 1, 1992, 40 percent on July 1, 1993, and zero percent on July 1, 1994. The deduction of capital for purposes of this transition rule is in addition to the obligation of the institution to establish all appropriate reserves pursuant to general accepted accounting principles to fully reflect any losses incurred at the subsidiary.

In the RTC funding bill passed in March of this year by the Senate, at the request of the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision who pointed to the nationwide drop in the commercial real estate values, there was a provision included to allow thrifts additional time to divest their real estate or otherwise comply with the provisions of section 5(t)(5) of the Home Owners' Loan Act. Among other things, the Senate RTC bill includes a provision that would postpone the effective date of the 60-percent rule from July 1, 1992, to October of 1992. At the time of the Senate's passage of this extension, it was anticipated that the House would have acted on RTC funding before the July 1, 1992, date which would be the date that the 60-percent rule otherwise becomes effective. The House, however, has not acted on a RTC bill and likely will not do so before July 1, 1992. Thus, this bill simply extends the time period under the transition rule in present law so that a savings association could include in its capital until October 31, 1992, 75 percent of its investments in and extensions to a nonconforming subsidiary. The 60-percent rule would become effective on November 1, 1992.

Mr. METZENBAUM. May I ask my friend, the Senator from Michigan, a question about his intentions on this extension of the effective date for the increased capital requirement for certain subsidiaries of savings associations? My understanding is that the rationale for this extension is that the poor state of the economy has made it more difficult for savings associations to sell their subsidiaries engaged in real estate development. However, I would hope and expect that the Senator from Michigan would not intend to support a further extension of the effective date in the future.

Mr. RIEGLE. I thank my friend for his interest in this issue, and commend him for all the efforts that he has made on the capital standards question since we worked together on FIRREA to put into place tough, real capital standards. It would not be my intention to seek a further extension of this transition rule, which requires thrifts to increase their capital deduction from 25 to 40 percent for investments in subsidiaries engaged in real estate development and other nonconforming activities.

However, as the Senator may recall, in the RTC funding bill that was passed this March by the Senate, one section of that bill gave the OTS Director the authority to grant certain well-run thrifts, on a case-by-case basis, the authority to continue to deduct only 25 percent of their investment in real estate subsidiaries through no later than July 1, 1994. I continue to support the adoption of that provision, and in a conference with the Members from the other body, will work to include it in a conference report.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I thank the Senator for his explanation.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT RECEIVED DURING RECESS

Under the authority of the order of the Senate of January 3, 1991, the Secretary of the Senate, on June 26, 1992, during the recess of the Senate, received a message from the President of the United States transmitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received on June 26, 1992 are printed in today's RECORD at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 5:36 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bills and joint resolutions, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 5099. An act to provide for the restoration of fish and wildlife and their habitat in the Central Valley of California, and for other purposes;

H.R. 5368. An act making appropriations for foreign operations, export financing, and related programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes;

H.J. Res. 433. Joint resolution designating October 1992 as "National Domestic Violence Awareness Month";

H.J. Res. 457. Joint resolution designating January 16, 1993, as "Religious Freedom Day"; and

H.J. Res. 499. Joint resolution designating July 2, 1992, as "National Literacy Day."

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bills and joint resolutions were read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. BURDICK:

S. 2902. An original bill to authorize research into the desalinization of water and water reuse and to authorize a program for states, cities, or any qualifying agency which desires to own and operate a desalinization or water reuse facility to develop such facilities; from the Committee on Environment and Public Works; placed on the calendar.

By Mr. DURENBERGER (by request):

S. 2903. A bill to extend and amend the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, to improve Rehabilitation Act of 1973, to improve rehabilitation services for individuals with disabilities to modify certain discretionary grant programs providing essential services and resources specifically designed for individuals with disabilities, to change certain technology, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

By Mr. MURKOWSKI:

S. 2904. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to permit rollovers into individual retirement accounts of separation pay from the Armed Forces; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. RIEGLE (for himself and Mr. GARN):

S. 2905. A bill to provide a 4-month extension of the transition rule for separate capitalization of savings associations' subsidiaries; considered and passed.

By Mr. PELL:

S. 2906. A bill to promote and encourage alternative nondefense uses of defense industrial facilities, to create a Defense Economic Adjustment Trust Fund, to provide assistance for the retraining of currently employed defense workers, and to assist in providing continuity of certain benefits for defense workers whose employment is terminated; to the Committee on Armed Services.

S. 2907. A bill to reform the National Flood Insurance Program; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. SIMON:

S. 2908. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide reasonable assurances that human tissue intended for transplantation is safe and effective, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DURENBERGER (by request):

S. 2903. A bill to extend and amend the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, to improve rehabilitation services for individuals with disabilities, to modify certain discretionary grant programs providing essential services and resources specifically designed for individuals with disabilities, to change certain terminology, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

REHABILITATION ACT AMENDMENTS

• Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I am introducing this bill to reauthorize and revise the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 at the request of the administration.

I want to commend President Bush, Secretary Alexander, Assistant Secretary of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services, Robert Davilla, and Commissioner of Rehabilitative Services, Nell Carney, for the hard work that they have put into this document.

Although this bill is not as far reaching in scope as the bill that Senator HARKIN and I plan to introduce later this month, there are many thoughtful provisions in it that we plan to adopt, and we appreciate the administration's prompt effort in coming forth with legislation.

In the reauthorization thus far we have been in close consultation with the Office of Rehabilitative Services, and we look forward to continuing our productive working relationship through the end of the reauthorization process.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a section-by-section analysis be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the analysis was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF THE REHABILITATION ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1991

TITLE I—TERMINOLOGY

Section 2. Section 2 of the bill would amend the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (the "Act") throughout to replace the term "handicap," in all its various forms, where it is used as a synonym for "disability" or to describe an individual or individuals. This change is in conformance with the nomenclature used in the Americans with Disabilities Act and in other Federal statutes. Similarly, section 2 would replace the terms "the blind" and "the deaf", with "individuals who are blind" or "individuals who are deaf", where they are used to describe an individual.

Section 3. Section 3 of the bill would amend the Act in various places to replace the term "rehabilitation engineering services," where appropriate, with "assistive technology devices and services" in order to reflect the changed nomenclature of the Technology-Related Assistance for Individuals with Disabilities Act of 1988. Section 3 would also add the definition "assistive technology devices and services" to section 7 of the Act, and would also alphabetize the listed terms in section 7.

Section 4. Section 4 of the bill would amend section 502 of the Act (Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board) to change the reference to the agency from the "Board" to the "Access Board." The designation "Access Board" more appropriately identifies the agency's statutory mandate and commitment to accessibility.

TITLE II—PROGRAM AMENDMENTS

Section 11. Section 11 of the bill would amend section 7(10) of the Act, as redesignated, to simplify and slightly decrease the Federal share of the costs of the basic State vocational rehabilitation grant. There would be no change for FY 1993 from current law (the approximate overall Federal share for FY 1993 would be 78.7 percent). The Federal share would be 78 percent for fiscal years 1994 and 1995, and 77 percent for fiscal years 1996 and 1997. (The State match for FY 1993 would be approximately 21.3 percent. It would be 22 percent for fiscal years 1994 and 1995, and 23 percent for fiscal years 1996 and 1997.)

Section 12. Section 12(a)(1) of the bill would amend section 101(a)(11) of the Act to update the current reference to the "Education of the Handicapped Act" to the "Individuals with Disabilities Education Act", and the reference to the "Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education Act" to the "Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act". Section 12(a)(2) of the bill would amend section 101(a)(24) of the Act to make it clear that each State's plan requirement for plans and policies to assist in the transition from education to employment services shall include specific plans for coordination with educational agencies.

Section 12(b) of the bill would amend section 103(a)(3) of the Act to clarify that services to assist students in the transition from school to employment are within the scope of the vocational and other training services authorized under the Act.

Section 12(c)(1) of the bill would amend section 311(e) of the Act to make demonstration grants for model statewide transitional planning services discretionary, rather than mandatory. Section 12(c)(2) would repeal sections 311(e) (3) and (4) of the Act, which require that a certain number of these demonstration grants be made to agencies in New England and to rural Western States. These one-time mandated grants have been awarded.

Section 13. Section 13 of the bill would amend section 102(b)(1) of the Act to emphasize the client's role in the rehabilitation process and to ensure full client participation in the individualized written rehabilitation program (IWRP) process, particularly in regard to the selection of the vocational objective to be attained and the services to be provided. Section 102(a) of the Act requires an IWRP to be developed jointly by the vocational rehabilitation counselor and the individual with disabilities (or, in appropriate cases, the individual's parents and guardians). Section 102(b) of the Act does not, however, contain any specific IWRP requirements that ensure the client's involvement as a full partner in the rehabilitation process. The program regulations (34 C.F.R. 361.41(a)(8)) implementing this provision require only that the IWRP contain the views of the individual with handicaps concerning the individual's goals, objectives, and the vocational rehabilitation services to be provided under the IWRP. The amendment would require documentation of the involvement of the individual with a vocational disability.

Section 14. Section 14 of the bill would amend Title I of the Act to add a new section 105, requiring the development and implementation of evaluation standards and performance indicators for the Title I vocational rehabilitation program. The standards and indicators would include outcome and other related measures of program performance. The standards and indicators would be developed with input from State vocational rehabilitation agencies, related professional and consumer organizations, and recipients of vocational rehabilitation services. The standards and indicators would be used to evaluate program performance and would provide information to assist State VR agencies to improve their Title I vocational rehabilitation program.

The amendment would provide for a process (based on the process currently in place for Chapter I of Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965) of monitoring and enforcing the standards and indicators. This process would require any non-complying State to enter into a program improvement plan, and would permit the Secretary to reduce or withhold funds only if the State fails to enter into a program improvement plan or fails to comply substantially with the terms and conditions of the program improvement plan. As long as the State is carrying out its improvement plan and making progress toward meeting the performance standards, there would be no need to assess penalties or withhold funds. This approach would ensure that a cooperative and collaborative relationship exists between the State and the Department with respect to program improvement.

The Department intends to publish the proposed indicators for public comment and to publish the results, including an analysis of program performance based on the standards and indicators, in its annual report to Congress under section 13 of the Act.

Section 15. Section 15 of the bill would amend section 110 of the Act to make uniform the references to the authorization of appropriations in section 100(b), and to delete provisions in paragraph (a)(4) and subsection (b) that are no longer necessary.

Section 16. Section 16 of the bill would amend section 111(a)(2)(B) of the Act to provide that expenditures from non-Federal sources under the State plan for fiscal year 1993 and succeeding fiscal years shall be no less than 100 percent of the non-Federal expenditures of the second prior fiscal year.

Section 17. Section 17(a) of the bill would add a new section 19 to the Act to require that any project, program, or facility that provides services to individuals with disabilities under the Act shall advise such individuals, or their guardians or legal representatives, of the availability and purposes of the Client Assistance Program under section 112 of the Act. Section 17(b) of the bill would change section 102(b)(1)(I) of the Act to correct a reference to the Client Assistance Program.

Section 17(c) of the bill would amend section 112(e)(1)(D) of the Act to correct a subsection reference and to eliminate the use of the percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index published monthly by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in determining whether the Commissioner may increase the minimum allotment to States and territories for this program for any fiscal year. Section 17(c)(2) of the bill would eliminate reference to a reporting requirement that has already been met by the Department.

Section 18. Sections 18(a), (b), and (c) of the bill would amend section 7(9), as redesignated, and section 101(a)(5)(B) of the Act to ensure the incorporation of supported employment services into the State vocational rehabilitation delivery system. Section 18(a) of the bill would amend section 7(9), as redesignated, to include within the meaning of the term "evaluation of rehabilitation potential" an assessment of an individual's potential for supported employment.

Section 18(b) of the bill would amend sections 101(a)(5)(B) (State plan assurances on services to individuals with the most severe disabilities) and section 101(a)(25) (assurance that the State has an acceptable plan for Title VI–C) of the Act, respectively, to make clear that Title VI–C funds are to be used to supplement Title I funds for the cost of services leading to supported employment.

Section 18(c) of the bill would amend section 103(a)(1) of the Act to clarify that an assessment of an individual's potential for supported employment is within the scope of vocational rehabilitation services in evaluating rehabilitation potential.

Section 18(d) of the bill would eliminate section 311(d)(1)(B) of the Act, which requires that at least one demonstration supported employment grant be nationwide in scope. Section 18(d) would also eliminate section 311(d)(2)(B) of the Act which requires that at least one technical assistance grant implementing the supported employment program be nationwide in scope. These one-time mandated grants have been awarded.

Section 18(e) of the bill would make a technical change to section 631 of the Act by striking out the phrase "training and traditionally time-limited post-employment," in order to eliminate confusion relating to the term "post-employment services" used in Title I.

Section 18(f) of the bill would make technical changes to section 633(a)(2)(B) of the Act and eliminate outdated section 633(c) of the Act, which authorizes planning grants in lieu of an allotment in the first fiscal year in which appropriations were made pursuant to section 638 of the Act.

Section 18(g) of the bill would make technical changes to sections 634(a)(1) and (b)(3) of the Act by striking out the phrase "training and traditionally time-limited post-employment", in order to eliminate confusion relating to the term "post-employment services" used in Title I. Section 18(g)(4)(E) would amend section 634(b)(3) of the Act to add a new subparagraph (G) to that section of the Act, which would require an assurance that funds received under the supported employment program would be used to supplement Title I funds. Section 18(g) would also amend sections 634(b)(2)(B), (b)(3)(D), and (b)(4) of the Act to make several technical and conforming changes.

Section 18(h) of the bill would amend section 635(b) of the Act to make a number of technical and conforming changes, including striking out the phrase "training and traditionally time-limited post employment".

Section 18(i) of the bill would amend section 637 to make several technical and conforming changes, including striking out the phrase "training and traditionally time-limited post-employment."

Section 19. Section 19 of the Act would repeal section 131 of the Act, which requires a study of the special problems and needs of Indians with disabilities. This one-time mandated study has been done.

Section 20. Section 20(a)(1)(A) of the bill would amend section 202(d) of the Act to emphasize NIDRR's authority to award research fellowships to individuals with disabilities. Section 20(a)(1)(B) would amend section 202(f) of the Act to allow up to ten percent of appropriated funds in any fiscal year to be expended directly for carrying out the Director's authorities under section 202. Section 20(a)(1)(C) would eliminate one-time mandated requirements in sections 202(j), (l), and (m) of the Act.

Section 20(a)(2)(A)(i) of the bill would amend sections 204(b)(1) and (2) of the Act to require that Rehabilitation Research and Training Centers (RRTCs) and Rehabilitation Engineering Research Centers, renamed Rehabilitation Technology Research Centers (Tech Centers), be affiliated with institutions of higher education. Section 20(a)(2)(B) would amend section 204(b)(2) of the Act to require the provision of training in rehabilitation research by Tech Centers. The revised language eliminates the outdated requirement that two specific Tech Centers be established in fiscal year 1987.

Section 20(a)(2)(D) of the bill would amend section 204(b)(3) of the Act by transferring the authority for spinal cord injury projects and demonstrations, currently under section 311 of the Act, to NIDRR, under its related spinal cord injury program authority in section 204(b)(3) of the Act. The section 311 authority would be deleted. Although NIDRR administers the spinal cord injury program, funds have historically been appropriated under section 311.

Section 20(b) of the bill would amend section 7 of the Act to add a definition of "affiliation". For the purposes of sections 204(b)(1) and (2) of the Act, affiliation would mean a written agreement between a Center and one or more institutions of higher education that describes procedures for provision of the research training required for such Center under such section. The agreement could also include other activities that the Center determined might be needed to improve the effectiveness and quality of its program.

Section 21. Section 21(1) of the bill would amend section 304(b)(3)(A) of the Act to require scholarship recipients to complete their employment obligation within the required number of years plus two years after completing their training, and to allow part-time employment to count toward satisfying their employment obligation. Section 21(2)(A) would amend section 304(d)(1) of the Act to eliminate the cap of not more than 12 programs established or assisted by grants to train interpreters. Section 21(2)(B) would eliminate section 304(d)(2)(D) of the Act, which requires applicants for grants to assure to the Secretary that, to the extent appropriate, they will provide for the training and retraining of teachers who are not certified as teachers of individuals who are deaf. This activity is more appropriately conducted under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

Section 22. Sections 22(1) and (2) of the bill would amend section 311 of the Act, Special Demonstration Programs, to remove the NIDRR authority for special projects and demonstrations for spinal cord injuries, so that it can be consolidated, in section 20(a)(2)(D) of the bill, with a related NIDRR spinal cord program authority under section 204(b)(3) of the Act.

Section 22(2) of the bill would also add a new subsection to section 311 of the Act, authorizing the Commissioner to make grants to States and public and nonprofit agencies and organizations, including vocational rehabilitation agencies, to demonstrate ways to increase client choice in the rehabilitation process. The funds awarded under this subsection would be used only for new projects to support activities directly related to planning, operating, and evaluating such demonstrations.

Section 23. Section 23(1)(A) of the bill would amend section 316(a)(1) of the Act to remove the authority of the Commissioner to pay all of the costs of special recreation programs, to expand the program purpose to include activities that further the employment of individuals with a vocational disability, and to specifically identify vocational skills development as an authorized program activity. Section 23(1)(B) would limit grants to three years, after which they would not be renewable. Section 23(1)(C) would amend section 316(a)(3) of the Act to eliminate the reference to children and school hours. Section 23(1)(D) would add new paragraph (4) to section 316(a) of the Act to require applications to contain a description of how the service program will continue after Federal assistance ends.

Section 23(3) would add new subsections (b) and (c) to section 316 of the Act to require that projects, at a minimum, maintain the same level of service over the entire project period and to provide for the Federal share of program costs to decrease over a three year period (80 percent the first year, 60 percent the second year, and 40 percent the third year).

Section 24. Section 24 of the bill would amend Title V of the Act to change the name of the title from "Miscellaneous" to the more appropriate "Access", repeal outdated section 500, and make technical changes.

Section 24(3) would amend section 501(a) of the Act to include the Director of the Office of Personnel Management (the "Director") on the Interagency Committee on Handicapped Employees (the "Committee") and to replace the Secretary of Education with the Director as a co-chairperson of the Committee.

Section 25. Section 25 of the bill would amend section 502 of the Act as follows:

Section 25(1) would amend section 502(a) to add an additional federal agency, the Department of Commerce, to this list, which would then provide for representation by twelve federal agencies. The addition of the Department of Commerce would allow for representation of a broad spectrum of business interests.

Section 25(1) would provide for an increase in the number of presidential appointees to the Board from among the general public. This would maintain the current ratio of members appointed by the President from the general public to those members designated as a result of federal agency representation.

Section 25(1) would provide that at least one half, rather than the current six, of the members of the Board appointed by the President will be individuals with disabilities. This would allow for Board expansion.

Section 25(1) would increase the length of the term for each Board member to a term of four years, rather than the currently mandated three, and to provide that the terms of at least three members will expire each year. Section 25(1) would also provide for four year terms for the members as opposed to three year terms which would strengthen the agency through continued participation, by experienced members of the Board, in the goals and objectives of the agency.

Section 25(2) would amend section 502(b) to reorganize this series of functions in section 502(b). Also, the agency's mandate to provide technical assistance in current subparagraph (d)(3) would be moved to current subparagraph (b)(2), and the provision regarding technical assistance would be further revised to include the agency's mandate to provide technical assistance under the Americans with Disabilities Act. The bill further clarifies that the agency will establish and maintain the guidelines (as opposed to standards) issued under both the Architectural Barriers Act and Titles II and III of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Section 25(2) would provide that, as a part of its mandate, the Board will promote accessibility throughout all segments of society. Currently, the mission of the Board includes providing technical assistance and proposing alternative solutions to barriers which disabled individuals face in housing, transportation, communication, education, recreation and attitudes. The Board is a major source for accessibility solutions, material and information. The agency is charged with the duty to promote the International Accessibility Symbol in all public facilities that are in compliance with the standards adopted by the four standard setting agencies. With the passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Access Board will develop and maintain guidelines for accessibility which will be the basis for standards which will directly impact the general business community and public. Heretofore, the guidelines issued by the agency were limited to those facilities covered by the Architectural Barriers Act. The addition of the function to promote accessibility proposed in the bill recognizes the role of the Access Board as a lead agency in providing technical assistance to a broad spectrum of public individuals and entities and promoting accessibility throughout all segments of society.

Section 25 (3) and (4) would amend sections 502 (d) and (f) to move the remainder of the current provisions contained in subparagraph (d)(3) relating to interagency agreements and technical assistance to subparagraph (f)(1) and make a number of technical and editorial changes.

Section 25(4)(C)(ii) would eliminate the reference to Secretary in (f)(2) and inserting in lieu thereof Chairperson. With the independent status of the Board, the Secretary is no longer the appropriate figure to determine compensation rates for technical experts.

Section 25(5) would amend section 502(g) to eliminate two provisions relating to reports which were to have been submitted in 1975 and 1988. These requirements are being deleted as they are outdated.

Section 25(6) would amend section 502(h) to eliminate provisions regarding and referencing a report previously required and which has been submitted. Also, section 25(6) would authorize gift acceptance authority for the Board in limited instances. The language of the bill limits the application of funds or gifts received pursuant to the authority in that the funds would not be available to or utilized for the compliance and enforcement function of the agency. This limitation is in strict compliance with the requirement of subparagraph (d)(3) of the section that the Board will establish a procedure to ensure separation of its compliance and technical assistance responsibilities. The authority to accept funds from outside the agency's fiscal authorization through private sector initiatives would provide an excellent vehicle to better achieve the mandate of the Board in promoting accessibility and providing technical assistance.

Section 25 would also make a number of technical and editorial changes.

Section 26. Section 26 of the bill would update section 508 of the Act. Current law refers to dates and deadlines that have already been met, and fails to take into account technological changes that have occurred and that are likely to occur in the future. It focuses on hardware, while the issues regarding electronic accessibility have shifted to software, interface systems, and operating systems. Updating section 508 would help ensure that persons with disabilities have comparable access to electronic information and data.

Section 27. Section 27 of the bill would amend section 621 of the Act, the Projects With Industry Program, to eliminate certain outdated provisions, including, in section 621(d)(1), the 1985 date for developing and publishing program evaluation standards; section 621(d)(2), which requires a comprehensive evaluation of the Projects With Industry Program by 1986; section 621(d)(3), which requires the Commissioner to obtain and consider certain recommendations in developing program evaluation standards; in section 621(f)(1), the provision requiring publication of minimum compliance indicators in the Federal Register; in section 621(f)(3), the provision requiring the Commissioner to have conducted certain on-site compliance reviews by the end of fiscal year 1991; section 621(h), which establishes certain funding requirements for fiscal year 1990, and requires the Secretary to continue to fund, for four more years, grantees that received program assistance in 1986, provided they comply with their approved grant applications and program evaluation standards.

Section 27(2) would amend section 621(e)(1), which allows grants awards to be made for a period of five years and to require the Commissioner to use compliance indicators that are consistent with program evaluation standards to assess minimum project performance for purposes of making continuation awards in the third, fourth, and fifth years.

Section 27(6) of the bill would amend section 621 of the Act, Projects With Industry, to authorize the Commissioner to make grants to a partnership or consortium that includes a private business concern or industry to develop three-year, model demonstration projects that give underemployed workers with disabilities, whether employed part-time or full-time, the opportunity to acquire the knowledge and skills needed to adapt to emerging new technologies, work methods, and markets. The Projects With Industry (PWI) program provides persons with vocational disabilities training and experience in realistic work settings to prepare them for employment in the competitive labor market. Although this program has been successful in placing disabled persons into employment, current statutory requirements limit the programs ability to serve disabled workers, already employed, who need new or upgraded skills to compete and advance in employment. Underemployment contributes to the low economic status of many workers with disabilities. This new subsection would help to meet the National Education Goal of life-long learning through the development of model demonstration projects targeted at upgrading the skills of underemployed workers with disabilities.

Section 28. Section 28 of the bill would amend Title VII (Comprehensive Services for Independent Living) of the Act in the following ways:

Section 28(1) would repeal sections 701 (the purpose provisions) and section 706 (State Independent Living Council) of the Act. New purpose provisions would be added by section 28(2) of the bill, and a new section requiring State Independent Living Councils would be added by section 28(8) of the bill.

Section 28(2) would add a new purpose provision before the Part A designation in order to clarify that such purposes apply to the whole Title and not just to the State grant program for comprehensive services for independent living. Section 28(2) would also revise the purposes provision to authorize grants for independent living services; promote the independence of individuals with severe disabilities; and promote consumer control, equal access, self-help, and self advocacy for such individuals.

Section 28(3)(A) would amend section 702(a) of the Act to revise the first sentence to clarify that independent living services under part A are to be provided to individuals with severe disabilities, as defined in section 7(14) of the Act, as redesignated.

Section 28(3)(B) would amend section 702(b) of the Act to provide that the term "comprehensive services for independent living" includes, at a minimum, independent living skills training, information and referral services, peer counseling, and individual advocacy training and may include any of the independent living services specified in current sections 702(b) and 711(c)(2).

Section 28(4)(A) would eliminate current section 705(a)(4) of the Act, which requires that State plans for independent living will assure that an individualized written rehabilitation program be developed for each individual eligible for services under this part. Section 28(8) of the bill would add a new section of the Act that would require an individualized written independent living rehabilitation plan for all individuals who receive services under parts A, B, and C of Title VII.

Sections 28(4) (A) and (B) of the Act would revise section 705(a)(5) of the Act to require a State, in its plan, to respond to, rather than to assure it will consider, the recommendations made by the State Independent Living Council (SILC) and to describe how services provided under Part A of the title will be coordinated with, or complement, services provided under Parts B and C; and would redesignate paragraph (5), as amended, as paragraph (4).

Section 28(4)(D) would add a new section 705(a)(9) of the Act, as redesignated by the bill, requiring an application for assistance under Part A to contain an assurance that the State will compile and maintain statistical data and information for each fiscal year for each program and project it operates or administers under the part, whether directly or through subgrants and contracts. The data would include information on the number and types of individuals with a severe disability receiving services; the types of services provided and the number of individuals with a severe disability receiving each type of service; the amounts and percentages of resources committed to each type of service provided; actions taken to employ, and advance in employment, qualified individuals with a severe disability; and a comparison, when appropriate, of prior year(s) activities with the most recent year's activities.

Section 28(4)(F) of the bill would redesignate section 705(a)(10) of the Act as section 705(a)(11). Section 28(4)(F) would add a new section 705(a)(10) of the Act, requiring an application for assistance under Part A to provide assurances that the State will provide services that contribute to the maintenance of or the increased independence of individuals with a severe disability; engage in capacity-building activities, activities to promote community awareness, involvement, and assistance, and outreach efforts; other information will be submitted in such form and in accordance with such procedures as the Commissioner may require; and seek to incorporate any new methods and approaches relating to services into its State plan. Section 28(4)(G) of the bill would amend section 705(a)(11) of the Act, as redesignated by the bill, to require such other assurances as the Commissioner may require.

Section 28(5)(A) would amend section 711(a) of the Act to specify that services may be provided under Part B to any individual with a severe disability, as defined in section 7(14)(B) of the Act, as redesignated.

Section 28(5)(B)(ii) would amend section 711(b)(3) of the Act to require applications for Part B assistance to contain assurances that each Center for Independent Living (CILs) will have a board that functions as its principal governing body and that is composed of a majority of individuals with severe disabilities.

Section 28(5)(B)(iii) would amend section 711(b) of the Act to add new paragraphs (4) and (5) requiring applications for Part B assistance, respectively, to contain a description of how each CIL's proposed activities are consistent with the most recent three-year State plan for providing comprehensive independent living services and contain assurances that each CIL will provide services for individuals with different types of severe disabilities and that eligibility for services at any CIL will not be based upon the presence of any one or more specific disability.

Section 28(5)(C) would revise section 711(c) of the Act, requiring certain application assurances, to require an application by a public or nonprofit agency or organization for a part B grant to contain assurances that each center will provide independent living skills training, information and referral services, peer counseling, and individual advocacy training for individuals with a severe disability to enhance their independence. Assurances would also be required that each center would provide a combination of any other independent living services specified in current sections 702(b) and 711(c)(2) of the Act, as appropriate; and assurances that the grantee will submit a report, at the end of each fiscal year, for each program and project it operates or administers under this part, whether directly or through subgrants and contracts, that contains, at a minimum, certain information and assurances similar to that required by section 28(4) (D) and (F) of the bill under section 705(a) of the Act.

Sections 28(5) (D) and (E) would redesignate section 711(e) through (h) of the Act and add a new subsection (e) to require that centers funded under Part B submit copies of their approved grant applications and annual reports required under paragraph (g)(1) to their respective State Independent Living Councils.

Section 28(5)(F) would amend section 711(f) of the Act, as redesignated (current section 711(e)) to eliminate paragraph (1), which requires the Commissioner to develop and publish program evaluation standards by 1985, and paragraph (2), which requires the Commissioner to conduct a comprehensive evaluation of the CIL program by 1986. Section 28(5)(F)(i) would add a new paragraph (1) requiring the Commissioner to develop and publish in the Federal Register such standards and indicators of what constitutes minimum compliance with such standards as may be necessary to evaluate each center's performance, consistent with the requirements of section 711(c)(2) of the Act. Section 28(5)(F) would also make a number of additional conforming amendments.

Section 28(5)(G) would also revise sections 711(g) and (h) of the Act, as redesignated (current sections 711(f) and (g)) in the following ways:

Current paragraph (f) requires publication in the Federal Register of indicators of minimum compliance by centers, requires grantees to report to the Commissioner on compliance with evaluation standards, requires certain on-site compliance reviews, and requires compliance analysis in the annual report to Congress. As amended in section 28(5)(F) of the bill, subsection (g), as redesignated, would require: (1) grantees to provide a report to the Commissioner at the end of each fiscal year that contains, for each center operated or administered by the grantee, the data described in section 711(c)(2) of the Act and the extent to which it is in compliance with the evaluation standards developed under subsection (f)(1), as redesignated; (2) the Commissioner to annually conduct, on a random basis, on-site compliance reviews of at least 15 percent of the centers that receive funds under this part; and (3) the Commissioner, in the annual report required under section 13 of this Act, to include an analysis of the data required in subsection (g)(1) and the extent to which centers receiving funds under this part have complied with the evaluation standards. The Commissioner may identify individual centers in the analysis. The Commissioner shall report the results of on-site reviews, identifying individual grantees and centers. The subsection would retain the provision that at least one member of an on-site compliance review team shall be a non-Federal employee with experience or expertise in the provision of independent living services.

Current paragraphs (g)(1), (2), and (4) contain outdated requirements which would be removed. As amended in section 28(5)(F) of the bill, paragraph (h), as redesignated by the bill, would, in essence, retain the current paragraph (g)(3) requirement that new grant awards be made on a competitive basis, to include, if appropriate, consideration of past performance.

Section 28(6)(A) would amend section 721(a) to require grants for independent living services for older individuals who are blind to include independent living skills training, information and referral services, peer counseling, and individual advocacy training and authorize any other independent living services listed in current sections 702(b) and 711(c)(2).

Section 28(6)(B) would amend section 721(b) to require that applications for grants under this section contain assurances that the grantee will submit a report, at the end of each fiscal year, for each project or program it operates or administers under this part, whether directly or through subgrants and contracts, that contains, at a minimum, certain information and assurances similar to that required by sections 28(4)(D) and (F) and (5)(B) of the bill for sections 705(a) and 711(c) of the Act, respectively; that the application is consistent with the three-year State plan for providing comprehensive services for independent living required by section 705 of this title; and such other information and assurances, submitted in such form and in accordance with such procedures, as the Commissioner may require. Section 28(B) would also require grantees to submit copies of their approved applications and annual reports to their State Independent Living Councils.

Section 28(7) would amend Part D of the title (General Provisions) to change its part heading to "Protection and Advocacy" and to repeal section 732 of the Act. Section 732 of the Act (Employment of Individuals with Handicaps) would be moved, under section 27(8) of the bill, to a new part E (General Provisions) of the Act.

Section 28(8) of the bill would make part E (Authorizations) part F and make conforming changes.

Section 27(9) of the bill would add a new part E to Title VII. New part E would contain the following:

New section 741 of the Act would incorporate current section 706, the State Independent Living Council, but expand its role in the planning process and broaden the scope of its activities to include Parts B and C. It would also change the time period for the plan from five years to three years and require the Councils to provide an opportunity for public comment.

New section 742 of the Act would require recipients of grant assistance under parts A, B, and C of this title to ensure that an individualized written independent living rehabilitation plan be developed for each individual they served. This requirement broadens the provisions currently in section 705(a)(4) of the Act. Such plan would be required to address the individual's need for independent living skills training, peer counseling, and individual advocacy training, and must be coordinated with any program or plan for the individual under section 102 of the Act, the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act, and Part B of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

New section 743 of the Act would make available to individuals served under Parts A, B, and C of Title VII due process protection consistent with the requirements and procedures established under section 102(d) of the Act, that would provide to applicants and recipients of independent living services under this title an opportunity for review of determinations made concerning the provision or denial of services.

New section 744 of the Act (Employment of Individuals with a Severe Disability) would retain the requirements of current section 732 of the Act.

New section 745 of the Act (Priority of Service) would require that priority of services under the title to be given to individuals not served by other provisions of the Act.

Section 29. Section 29 of the bill would amend various sections of the Act to provide authorizations of appropriations for programs under the Act.

Section 29(a)(1) would amend section 100(b) of the Act to authorize $1,839,852,000 to be appropriated for the Title I basic State grant program (other than grants under section 112 of the Act) for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years; and to require that the amount of the appropriation be at least the amount of the prior year appropriation, plus the amount of the Consumer Price Index addition determined under section 100(c) for the immediately preceding fiscal year. This amendment would also clarify the distinction between the mandated level and the authorized level of funding for this program. Section 29(a)(3) would also update the automatic year extension requirement in section 100(d) of the Act.

Section 29(b) of the bill would amend section 112(h), as redesignated, of the Act to authorize appropriations of $9,434,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for the Client Assistance Program.

Section 29(c) of the bill would amend section 201 of the Act to authorize appropriations of $68,440,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for the research and training programs of the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research.

Section 29(d) of the bill would eliminate an unused and outdated authorization of appropriations for construction in section 301(a) of the Act.

Section 29(e) of the bill would amend section 304(f) of the Act to authorize appropriations of $36,688,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for training programs under the section.

Section 29(f) of the bill would repeal section 310 of the Act, which contains the authorization of appropriations for the special demonstration programs and for the migrant workers setaside. Because of the structure of the authorizing language, special appropriation language has been necessary in the past to carry out congressional intent for these programs. Separate authorizations of appropriations for these programs would be added by sections 29 (g) and (h) of the bill.

Section 29(g)(1) of the bill would amend section 311(d)(4) of the Act to authorize appropriations of $10,980,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for supported employment projects and demonstrations. Section 29(g)(2) would add a new section 311(f) of the Act to authorize appropriations of $20,103,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for the remaining special demonstration programs.

Section 29(h) of the bill would amend section 312 of the Act to authorize appropriations of $1,300,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for the migrant workers programs.

Section 29(i) of the bill would amend section 316(d) of the Act to authorize appropriations of $2,617,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for special recreational programs.

Section 29(j) of the bill would amend section 502(i) of the Act to authorize appropriations of $3,500,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for the Access Board.

Section 29(k) of the bill would amend section 623 of the Act to authorize appropriations of $23,100,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for the projects with industry program.

Section 29(l) of the bill would amend section 638 of the Act to authorize appropriations of $32,059,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for the supported employment program.

Section 29(m) of the bill would amendment section 741 of the Act to authorize appropriations for the independent living programs under Title VII. Section 32(1) would amend section 741 of the Act to authorize $14,654,000 for the comprehensive services program for fiscal year 1993, $29,000,000 for the Centers for Independent Living program for fiscal year 1993, $6,505,000 for the independent living services for the older individuals who are blind program for fiscal year 1993, $1,074,000 for protection and advocacy for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years for all these programs.

TITLE III—AMENDMENTS TO THE HELEN KELLER NATIONAL CENTER ACT

Section 31. Section 31 of the bill would amend the Helen Keller National Center Act (29 U.S.C. 1901 et seq.) in the following manner:

Sections 31 (1) through (3) would amend the Act throughout to replace the terms "deaf-blind youths and adults," "deaf-blind individuals," and "deaf-blind individual" with terms denoting individual(s) or persons who are deaf-blind. These changes are made to update terminology and are in conformance with the redesignation of terms in sections 2, 3, and 4 of the bill.

Section 31(4) would amend section 202(5) of the Act to make a technical correction in the original congressional findings.

Section 31(5) would amend section 203(c) of the Act to add as a new purpose the training of family members of individuals who are deaf-blind. This change would assist family members in providing and obtaining appropriate services for the individual who is deaf-blind.

Section 31(6) would amend section 204 of the Act to require that the annual audit be submitted to the Secretary within 15 days following the completion of the audit and acceptance of the audit by the Center. This is a technical change.

Section 31(7) would amend section 205 of the Act to authorize appropriations of $6,057,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years to carry out the program.

Section 31(8) would amend section 206(2) of the Act to add a new subparagraph to permit the use of alternative criteria for persons who, despite the inability to be measured accurately for hearing and vision loss due to cognitive or behavioral constraints, can be determined through functional and performance assessment to have severe visual and hearing disabilities that cause extreme difficulty in attaining independence in daily life activities, achieving psychosocial adjustment, or obtaining vocational objectives. This would help eliminate the possibility that persons with very severe or multiple disabilities may be inadvertently excluded from services due to the existing requirements that are based exclusively on medical testing.

TITLE IV—AMENDMENTS TO THE INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES EDUCATION ACT

Section 41. Section 41 of the bill would amend section 631(a) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act to authorize grants for training regular education teachers who are involved in providing instruction to individuals who are deaf.

TITLE V—AMENDMENTS TO THE TECHNOLOGY-RELATED ASSISTANCE FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES ACT OF 1988

Section 51. Section 51 of the bill would amend sections 221(a)(1), 222(a), and 231(a) of the Technology-Related Assistance for Individuals With Disabilities Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-407) to make public agencies and organizations, including State and local governments and institutions of higher education, eligible for technology training and public awareness awards under Part C and innovation and demonstration awards under Part D of Title II of that Act. Current law, which prohibits funding for public agencies and organizations, has significantly limited the pool of eligible applicants and created inequities regarding eligibility that cannot be justified, since many public as well as private entities have the capacity to develop and implement projects of national significance in these areas. This group of amendments would improve the quality of applications and the resulting projects by broadening the scope of eligible applicants.

TITLE VI—OTHER AMENDMENTS

Section 61. Section 61(a) of the bill would amend section 503(a) of the Act to eliminate the phrase "in employing persons to carry out such contract." Under current law, section 503(a) requires government contractors and subcontractors with contracts in excess of $2,500 to take affirmative action to employ and advance in employment qualified individuals with a disability. The effect of the amendment would be to apply the requirements of section 503(a) to all of a covered contractor's work force.

A recent decision by a U.S. District Court in Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority v. DeArment, 55 EPD ¶40,507 (D.C. 1991), limited the protection of section 503(a) only to those employees and potential employees who would perform work to carry out the government contract. Consequently, the court ruled that a Department of Labor (DOL) regulation subjecting all the employer's work force to section 503 obligations was inconsistent with the provisions of the statute. The other equal opportunity programs administered by DOL do not include the "carry out" language and apply to all operations of the firm that has contracted with the Federal government. Enactment of this provision will ensure a fair and a consistent application of these programs to Federal contractors.

Section 61(b) of the bill would amend section 7(13) of the Act, as redesignated, to state that for purposes of section 503, homosexuality and bisexuality are not impairments, as that term is used in section 7(13)(B) of the Act, and therefore not disabilities, and that the term "disability" would not include a number of other conditions (e.g., pedophilia and compulsive gambling). This amendment would facilitate the consistent application of section 503 of the Act with the ADA, as is required by section 107(b) of the ADA.

TITLE VII—EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 71. Section 61 of the bill would provide that the provisions of this Act would become effective on the date of enactment of the bill, except that the amendments made in section 51(a) of the bill would not be applied retroactively to any matter pending in the Department of Labor prior to that date.•

By Mr. MURKOWSKI:

S. 2904. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to permit rollovers into individual retirement accounts of separation pay from the Armed Forces; to the Committee on Finance.

MILITARY SEPARATION RETIREMENT BENEFITS ACT

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce important legislation for the men and women of America's Armed Forces. This bill, the Military Separation Retirement Benefits Act of 1992, would allow those servicepeople who have responded to their country's request to leave the military before they had planned the ability to roll their departure incentives into eligible retirement plans.

THE SEPARATION INCENTIVES

Mr. President, the events of the last several years have led to a fundamental restructuring of the U.S. military. This restructuring, which will continue for some time, has included the downsizing of the Armed Forces. In order to facilitate the downsizing, the military has offered its personnel certain financial benefits for leaving the military prior to their expected dates of departure. These incentives include the voluntary separation incentives, the VSI, and the special separation benefit, the SSB. The amount of the incentive is based on the number of years served by and the rank at departure of the serviceperson.

The VSI operates as an annuity paid out to the departing serviceperson by the Government over a period of years while the SSB is paid out as a lump sum. Mr. President, as of June 5, 1992, 85 percent of those applying for the incentives are applying for the SSB. Moreover, as the Department of Defense points out, most of those taking the SSB are junior enlisted officers.

THE DEPARTING MEN AND WOMEN

Mr. President, the SSB is taxed in the year it is received as ordinary income. Many of those taking advantage of the SSB are men and women who had planned to make the military their career and were willing to make extraordinary sacrifices for the United States. Now that their country needs them to leave the service, they are voluntarily doing so, but it should not be forgotten that in so doing they are entering a time of some economic difficulty and are sacrificing the security they had in the military.

THE ROLLOVER

Mr. President, the SSB Program is a good idea, but something more needs to be done to protect departing service people. The bill which I am introducing today would allow those men and women taking the SSB to roll their SSB's into an eligible retirement account. It is simply not fair that the benefit paid to those in the Armed Forces who are helping this country out is presently taxed as ordinary income. It is not fair because that amount is totally disproportionate to what those men and women have been making or, in all likelihood, will be making in the immediate future. To tax these men and women on that amount as if it actually was, in fact, what they could expect to make is, on the face of it, absurd.

Further, by encouraging these men and women to put their money into eligible retirement accounts, we can help them plan for their futures. As I noted above, these men and women are voluntarily leaving careers, careers which would have provided them with excellent retirement benefits. Allowing them the right to invest in eligible retirement accounts simply returns to them something of what they are giving up, a secure future. The program I am proposing would encourage these young Americans to save for their futures and invest in their country. In that way, they can continue to make important contributions to us all.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, Mr. President, my bill would also retroactively apply to those who have already left the service under the SSB plan and, importantly, would apply if the military reached the point where it forced people to leave the service with a separation benefit. Mr. President, this is a bill to help those willing to serve and those who were serving; those whose plans have been changed by the greatest victory this Nation has ever won. Mr. President, let us give them a break, and help American investment at the same time.

By Mr. PELL:

S. 2906. A bill to promote and encourage alternative nondefense uses of defense industrial facilities, to create a Defense Economic Adjustment Trust Fund, to provide assistance for the retraining of currently employed defense workers, and to assist in providing continuity of certain benefits for defense workers whose employment is terminated; to the Committee on Armed Services.

DEFENSE INDUSTRIAL DIVERSIFICATION AND ADJUSTMENT ACT

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am introducing today the Defense Industrial Diversification Act of 1992, a bill to promote defense adjustment and to encourage the use of defense industrial facilities for the production of nondefense goods and services.

The basic premise of this bill is that defense contractors have a distinct public responsibility and obligation to plan for changes in defense spending and to provide for continuity of economic activity.

This special responsibility results, in my view, from the fact that defense contractors, by their nature, occupy a quasi-public position. Most of them have prospered substantially from public outlays over the past 40 years, and they have done so as a consequence of public policies over which the contractors themselves often have exerted an inherent influence.

Many defense contractors, especially small businesses, already are making strenuous and successful efforts to convert to nondefense activity, and in the process are preserving the jobs and welfare of their employees. But others, especially prime contractors grown accustomed to a steady diet of Government contracts, are content to take their winnings off the table, as it were, and let the public assume the full burden of adjustment.

One extreme example touches my own State, although I hasten to say that the legislation I am introducing is designed to address the generic problem rather than target any particular corporation or corporate policy.

The widely publicized case in point is that the General Dynamics Corp., which over the years has maintained a policy of disinterest in diversification to nondefense activity, a policy which, I am happy to note, may currently be undergoing modification.

But in recent months, the announced policy of the corporation has been to maximize its cash on hand from sale of nondefense and nonprofitable divisions, resulting in a cash surplus of $1.2 billion, some of which will be used to buy back stock from stockholders on favorable terms.

While this is good management from the perspective of stockholders and senior executives, it must seem otherwise from the perspective of more than 2,000 employees of General Dynamics' Electric Boat Division in Rhode Island and Connecticut who were recently laid off because of the curtailment of the Seawolf Submarine Program, with no corporate strategy in place for diversification to take up the slack.

The legislation I am introducing today would address such situations by requiring each defense contractor, as a condition to any future contract, to make a very modest set-aside of annual revenues each year to support corporate planning for diversification to nondefense production. Upon compliance with this requirement and with an additional requirement to contribute to a self-financing mechanism, the contractor becomes eligible for certain benefits and incentives:

Grants from the fund to support retraining of its current workforce to enable it to engage in nondefense production

Exemption from payment of statutory recoupment fees for defense R&D subsequently used for nondefense production

Preferred standing for nondefense Federal procurements.

As indicated, the bill would be self-financing by virture of a defense adjustment trust fund, financed by contributions from contractors of 1 percent of the gross amount of new contracts, as a condition of the award of those contracts.

In addition to funding in-house worker retraining for diversified production, the trust fund would also finance another provision of the bill which would provide for a 50-percent subsidy of health insurance premiums of laid-off workers for a period of 1 year, for continued coverage under their former employer's health plan, as provided by the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 [COBRA].

This provision is a variation of S. 2690, which I introduced on May 12 and which would authorize a larger COBRA subsidy paid from appropriated funds. My intention in this legislation is to solve the same problem—which is universally regarded as the most serious one facing laid-off workers—but to do so by shifting the burden to the employers who bear a special responsibility for this particular group of unemployed persons.

Finally, the legislation I am introducing today establishes a new Office of Defense Industrial Diversification and Adjustment in the Office of the President, vested with executive authority, including responsibility to monitor the trust fund and to authorize payments from that fund. I believe such an office is required to achieve interdepartmental coordination and to assure energetic action.

For these reasons, the existing interdepartmental Economic Adjustment Committee would be disestablished and the duties assigned to it by the Fiscal Year 1991 Defense Authorization Act would be transferred to the new Office. The bill would require the new Office to coordinate its activities fully with the existing Office of Economic Adjustment of the Department of Defense.

I would note that several aspects of this bill correspond with the recommendations of the Senate Democratic Task Force on Defense/Economic Conversion, chaired so ably by the distinguished Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR].

The task force supports the concept of diversification of defense industry and the preservation of existing jobs or creation of comparable alternative jobs, which are the main objectives of my bill.

The task force supports increased job retraining for dislocated defense workers through existing programs, which focus on workers who have already lost their jobs. My bill expands the population of potential trainees to include a new category, namely those who are still employed but who need retraining to enable the contractor to shift to nondefense activity.

The task force recognized the critical problem of assuring continuity of medical insurance for the unemployed, but its recommendations were constrained by the high cost of providing a public remedy. My bill provides a nonpublic funding mechanism for limited subsidy of premiums.

And the task force recommended revision of Department of Defense policy requiring recoupment of Government investment in R&D which is subsequently used for commercial production. While the President has wisely moved to terminate that part of recoupment policy mandated by regulation, there remain in force statutory recoupment requirements in the Arms Export Control Act. My bill would authorize a waiver of those statutory requirements when a contractor complies with the planning and funding requirements of the bill.

Finally, Mr. President, I would note that the planning and funding requirements of this bill were proposed in somewhat similar form in a bill I introduced in the 101st Congress, S. 2097, the Defense Diversification and Adjustment Act of 1990. The adjustment provisions of S. 2097, dealing with worker training and community adjustment, were in fact enacted in 1990 as part of the DOD authorization bill for fiscal year 1991, providing $200 million for these purposes.

The time has now come to focus on diversification, so I am submitting a new bill which restates the planning and funding requirements and incorporates certain benefits and incentives to encourage corporate compliance. The bottom line, as I see it, is that a new era and new circumstances require a new sense of corporate responsibility. In view of the human costs involved, we could hardly ask for less.

By Mr. KERRY (for himself and Mr. CRANSTON):

S. 2907. A bill to reform the National Flood Insurance Program; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE REFORM ACT

• Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation which would address the chronic problems that plague the National Flood Insurance Program; problems that threaten not only life and property along our Nation's floodplains and shores, but problems that also threaten the Nation's pocketbook.

I have been concerned about the Federal Flood Insurance Program for many years—on fiscal grounds, on environmental grounds, and in terms of increased risk to human life. And as our coastal populations have grown, my concerns have grown. Undeniably, our coasts attract millions of people to live, to work, to recreate, and to retire. However, depending on exactly where you settle and where you choose to live, you may also be exposing yourself to some of the less pleasant aspects of the coastal environment—hurricanes, floods, and property-destroying coastal erosion.

The National Flood Insurance Program was created to alleviate the taxpayer burden of paying for disaster relief in areas damaged, often repeatedly, by floods. In exchange for the insurance, communities were required to plan in order to reduce future flood losses. Unfortunately, this mandate to plan has never been adequately carried out. Communities have been allowed to develop in ill-advised areas, almost as if hurricanes, floods, and erosion won't occur. Consequently, the program has become an increasingly large financial liability.

The last thing that this country needs is another S&L style Federal bailout. But that is exactly where we are headed with this program.

Several factors contribute to this looming economic risk. Subsidized premium rates—far below actuarial rates—still remain today, disguising the true risk and market cost for insurance. Furthermore, coastal erosion, a powerful and predictable hazard, and a risk that can devastate property, amazingly has never been factored into the actuarial process for setting flood insurance premium rates. I know of no other insurance program that so casually dismisses a known risk of this magnitude.

Also undercutting the financial integrity of the flood insurance fund is the abysmal compliance shown by lenders and borrowers to abide by the mandatory purchase requirement to carry flood insurance for mortgages located in special flood hazard areas.

Noncompliance is rampant. Of the 11 million properties that are required to carry flood insurance for their own protection, only 1.9 million—or roughly 17 percent—actually carry insurance in force. It is clear that even if flood insurance is purchased at origination of a mortgage, the present process simply does not ensure that flood insurance is retained at renewal, or that insurance coverage is checked and maintained before future sales and transfers of mortgages.

Such noncompliance cripples the stability of the flood insurance fund, dramatically expands the exposed risk to the Federal Government, and ultimately results in Government spending more dollars on disaster relief than should otherwise occur. With over $215 billion of policies in force, but less than $290 million in reserve, the fund is overinsured and undercapitalized, leaving it completely vulnerable to a catastrophic storm where estimated losses could run anywhere between $2 and $4 billion.

And who will make up the difference if the flood insurance fund runs short? The answer, of course, is your constituents and mine—the taxpayers. The Federal Government no longer can afford to ignore the fact that we are at the edge of the cliff.

Last year I introduced the National Flood Insurance, Mitigation and Erosion Management Act of 1991, S. 1650, a companion bill to similar legislation that passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 388 to 18. My intention was to improve the flood insurance program through a balanced approach of hazard identification, risk reduction, increased compliance, and community incentives to encourage participation in the flood insurance program.

As other Senators are aware, debate over this legislation, particularly sections pertaining to the identification and management of coastal erosion hazard areas, has been spirited. We have invested an extraordinary effort in an attempt to address all concerns and to develop a new compromise approach which responsibly addresses the needs for flood insurance reform while accounting for potential social and economic impacts.

While I continue to prefer the bill I orginally introduced, and would prefer not to make some of the compromises, I recognize that is the nature of the process, and, in view of the critical importance of enacting changes to this program, I have concluded that this is a necessary step.

Today, with Senator ALAN CRANSTON, whose help and support I greatly appreciate and commend, I am introducing the National Flood Insurance Reform Act of 1992. This new bill retains several of the essential items needed for a substantive reform effort.

It would make sure that lenders and borrowers comply with the mandatory purchase requirement, not only at origination but also during sales, transfers, and policy renewals. It also would require lenders to escrow for flood insurance and establish fees for noncompliance. Importantly, FEMA would be required to update all floodplain maps to make flood determinations easier and more efficient.

This bill also would establish a community rating system to reward communities that implement progressive floodplain management programs by granting these communities lower premium rates. Also, the bill would provide mitigation assistance—activities such as elevation of buildings, relocation, demolition, floodproofing—as a method of risk reduction. Under this program, States and communities would be able to reduce future flood losses. In addition, such assistance should attract new communities to participate in the flood insurance program.

Importantly, this bill restructures the erosion management section, creating a voluntary community erosion management program. If communities choose to manage for erosion hazard areas identified by FEMA, they will be eligible for reduced premium rates and Jones-Upton relocation and demolition assistance. Controversial items including erosion setbacks, Federal construction standards, and cancellation of existing flood insurance are absent from this voluntary program.

More importantly, because of the controversy and misinformation that surrounded S. 1650, I am compelled to point out that this bill would not take private property; that it would not mandate Federal land-use requirements; that it would not prohibit building along eroding shorelines; that it would not preempt existing State erosion management; and, that it would not render erosion-prone lands worthless.

What this bill would do is restore common sense to the Flood Insurance

Program. It would restore the original quid pro quo relationship whereby the Federal Government makes available to communities affordable flood insurance in exchange for those same communities implementing hazard management plans in order to reduce future losses due to flooding and erosion. It would provide a sensibly balanced program that reestablishes two essential elements into our decisions on where to build, and what to insure: Personal responsibility and public accountability.

Now is the time to act, before hurricane season arrives. I urge my colleagues to acknowledge the gravity of the economic risk we are all facing. I ask you to recognize that the Flood Insurance Program not only can be, but must be improved—improved not only to reduce the taxpayer's liability of having to fund another Federal bailout, but improved to better insure, manage, and cope with the hazards found along our coasts. I ask you to support this new compromise bill.•

• Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I commend my colleague, Senator KERRY, for his new bill, the National Flood Insurance Reform Act of 1992. This legislation is a significantly revised version of the original S. 1650, the Flood Insurance, Mitigation and Erosion Management Act. The Senator deserves high praise for taking a complicated and controversial issue and developing the beginnings of a workable package. As an original cosponsor of both bills, I strongly support the purpose of this legislation to improve the health of the national flood insurance fund. This legislation makes several important changes to the National Flood Insurance Program.

First, it increases lender compliance to ensure that flood-prone homes are adequately insured against potential flood damage. Currently, only 2.5 million property owners maintain flood insurance policies, though there may be anywhere from 8 to 11 million insurable households exposed to flood risks.

Second, the bill recognizes the importance of flood mitigation activities. It would provide a dedicated source of funds for structural improvements, relocation, and other mitigation activities.

Third, the bill would authorize the community rating system to provide communities that reduce potential flood hazards lower insurance premiums.

The most controversial provision in the original bill was the erosion management program. I understand that substantial revisions have been made to this section and that these changes are included in the new bill. The erosion management section now would be extremely limited. It would require the Federal Emergency Management Agency to identify erosion-prone communities for insurance purposes. Within these erosion-prone communities, Federal flood insurance would be denied for new construction. Communities that choose to manage erosion risks would be eligible for lower insurance premiums. And, properties located in erosion-prone areas that do not manage the risk would be subject to premium surcharges for each subsequent claim.

Many of us have heard from coastal property owners, developers, and realtors regarding the erosion management provision. Much of their concerns and criticisms have been addressed in this new legislation. The Senator has done an outstanding job and has gone beyond the call of duty in making significant revisions to address these concerns.

I intend to continue to work closely with the Senator toward passage of this legislation. Again, I praise the Senator for his dedication and commitment to this important bill to reform the National Flood Insurance Program.•

By Mr. SIMON:

S. 2908. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide reasonable assurances that human tissue intended for transplantation is safe and effective, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

HUMAN TISSUE TRANSPLANTATION ACT

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, in the past several months two events have occurred that have demonstrated the need for the establishment of standards for tissue banks and for human tissue itself.

Recently, attention has been focused on the need for standards in the recovery and distribution of tissue as a result of the transmission of the HIV virus from a tissue donor in Virginia to three recipients of that donor's tissue. In addition, in June 1991, the Food and Drug Administration [FDA] announced its intention to classify replacement human heart valves as medical devices and require the filing of an investigational device exemption [IDE] and of a premarket approval application [PMA] for this human product. For reasons set forth in a letter I directed last Friday to FDA Commissioner David Kessler, which I will submit for the RECORD, this is regulatory overkill that threatens the ability of nonprofit tissue banks to continue to process human tissue.

Mr. President, these events demonstrate that the tissue banking and transplantation community should be guided by new legislation that provides an effective, workable and relatively quick standard-setting process for human tissue intended for transplantation. It is my strongly held view that the current authority of the Food and Drug Administration is both inadequate and inappropriate to protect the public health against concerns over safety and effectiveness of human tissue intended for transplantation. There is no uniform scheme designed to assure that donor tissue is properly tested; nor is there a mechanism to trace transplanted tissue. There is no oversight of tissue banks themselves. No national standards for processing of human tissue exist. Perhaps most important, recent regulatory efforts taken by the FDA regarding human tissue involve the imposition of premarket approval activities costing nonprofit tissue banks hundreds of thousands of dollars to demonstrate, through clinical reports, that a "product" that man did not design is safe and effective.

I have spent the last several months working with those who understand the existing regulatory mechanism for human tissue and who could guide us in developing legislation to ensure rational and effective regulation of tissue banks and human tissue itself. In so doing, my staff has analyzed the report of the Public Health Service Workgroup on organ and tissue transplantation; we have consulted informally with several organizations with expertise in tissue procurement, banking and transplantation; and we have relied on the expertise of the National Tissue Bank Council, an organization of 18 of the largest and oldest tissue banks in the country that process the majority of human tissue intended for transplantation. More recently, our efforts have been guided by the United Network for Organ Sharing [UNOS], the organization selected by the Department of Health and Human Services [HHS] to develop criteria for the allocation of human organs in the United States. Both the NTBC and UNOS support this legislation. An explanation of UNOS' functions and its position on standards for human tissue accompanies this statement.

Mr. President, existing regulation of human tissue by FDA reflects a crazy quilted scheme, predicated upon few, if any, guiding principles. The FDA currently regulates certain cell therapies under IND's and intends to require the approval of a product license application for these cell therapies as biological products under the Public Health Service Act. However, unprocessed bone marrow is excluded from the FDA requirements—although bone marrow registries and centers may shortly be subject to National Institutes of Health [NIH] regulation. Similarly, the FDA requires establishments that ship blood products interstate to be licensed as a producer of biologic products. Further, blood establishments must register and list all products they produce, and comply with regulations setting forth good manufacturing practice requirements for blood products.

In contrast, dura mater, corneal lenticules, umbilical veins, allograft cultured skin and, now, allograft human heart valves are, or are proposed to be, regulated by FDA as medical devices. The type of regulation varies considerably according to the type of tissue regulated. Some tissues, classified as medical devices, are subject only to general controls, such as good manufacturing practice requirements, including requirements related to infectious disease transmission and periodic establishment inspection. Others, such as corneal lenticules and human heart valves are required to undergo premarket approval. The PMA for corneal lenticules was submitted to FDA several years ago but has not yet been approved.

The National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute of NIH is currently preparing regulations setting forth criteria, standards, and procedures for bone marrow donor registries, bone marrow donor centers, marrow collection centers, and marrow transplant centers. In addition, the Public Health Service and the Centers for Disease Control have published periodic recommendations and guidelines relating to the transmission of communicable disease through transplantation.

Mr. President, proposed legislation I have developed is based upon three general principles.

First, both the tissue bank community and the Federal Government have the responsibility to the public to assure the safety of human tissue. Thus, my bill immediately sets in motion a collaborative relationship between the tissue bank community and HHS to establish and ensure compliance with standards for tissue banks and for human tissue itself.

Second, human tissue should not be regulated as if it is an artificial product designed by man. There is no medical or scientific evidence that demonstrates a need that implantable human tissue be shown to be safe and effective through the traditional way of regulating drugs and medical devices on a product-by-product basis. The FDA was, in effect, backed into this position in the process of regulating artificial heart valves—perhaps without sufficient thought as to the medical and social consequences of such a decision. As I indicate in my letter to Commissioner Kessler, treating human tissue as a "product" under the medical device law is not only unnecessary to ensure safety and effectiveness, it has significant negative results for the potential availability of tissue to patients. It has severely taxed the ability of the six existing nonprofit heart valve processors to continue to process human cardiovascular tissue, and makes it unlikely that additional nonprofit banks will be able to meet the expensive and time-consuming requirements involved in preparing IDE's and PMA's for human tissue that they process. In addition, placing human tissues under investigational status threatens reimbursement under public and private programs for the costs associated with the tissue itself, as well as for the surgical procedures involved in transplantation. I am pleased that at the urging of Commissioner Kessler, the Health Care Financing Administration [HCFA] has agreed to continue coverage of heart valve transplantation procedures under Medicare. However, if private insurance companies do not pay for human tissue under experimental status or for transplantation procedures to implant it, the availability of tissue transplantation may be severely restricted.

Third, regulation of human tissue should be by a single regulatory mechanism developed by Congress. There is no reason, in my view, why some human tissue should undergo clinical trials under a mechanism designed for drugs and sophisticated medical devices—and under which tissue banks receive a private license to process it—while other transplanted tissue is subject to standards applicable to all processors, and much of tissue is not subject to any standards at all. In my view the entire field of tissue procurement, processing, and distribution should fall under a standardized approach that does not involve regulation of one tissue product at a time, but rather establishes standards for types of human tissue for clinical use. Under the current approach, it would take decades for the FDA to give scrutiny to all of the many tissues that are processed by tissue banks. There is no real utility to this approach.

A principal theme that grew out of discussions with UNOS is the desirability of significant contribution by the tissue transplant community in the development of voluntary professional standards for tissue banks and for human tissue itself. This is partially because of the fact that, at present, the majority of experience with human tissue lies outside of government. With oversight by HHS, professionals in the tissue transplant community can identify problems, establish priorities, and develop standards quickly and efficiently. In addition, there is need to ensure that Federal funds not be diverted to the regulation of human tissue from other important public health efforts currently under way at the FDA.

Mr. President, let me briefly describe my proposal for new legislation. Before doing so, I want to emphasize that under the proposal, more tissue becomes subject to safety and effectiveness oversight more quickly than under the current FDA premarket approval approach. Unquestionably, therefore, the public health will be protected to a far greater extent under my proposed legislation than under the piecemeal approach with which the FDA is forced to live.

The thrust of my legislation may be summarized as follows:

First, the legislation proposes establishment of a National Council on Tissue Transplantation—the Council—with many responsibilities similar to that of the Organ Procurement Transplant Network [OPTN] established under the 1984 National Organ Transplant Act, now carried out by UNOS under government contract. The primary responsibility of the Council will be to develop voluntary professional standards applicable to human tissue banks and to human tissue itself. All tissue banks—nonprofit and for-profit—are eligible to join the Council; a condition of membership is to be in compliance with the Council's standards.

Second, tissue banks may become subject to requirements promulgated by the Department of Health and Human Services concerning requirements for good processing standards; requirements assuring the safe distribution of human tissue; procurement standards; maintenance of a serialized inventory system; requirements for a licensed medical director; and other requirements. Compliance with these requirements would be assured through licensure of tissue banks that process or distribute human tissue. Prior to development of mandatory regulation, however, the Secretary is to take into account whether the Council's standards provide the public with reasonable assurance of safety and effectiveness.

The third piece of the proposed legislation would address the current requirements by FDA to subject some human tissue to premarket approval requirements under the medical device law. In lieu of applying this regulatory scheme to human tissue—which, I might add, was never in my mind when, as a member of the other body, I voted for the Medical Device Amendments of 1976—the bill proposes a public standard system applicable to types or classes of human tissue. Thus, rather than reviewing individual products for safety and effectiveness, public standards for types or classes of tissue must be developed by the Council, and may be required by HHS. Standards would thus replace the current system of IDE's and PMA's. It is for this reason that I am confident that under my bill, more tissue will be subject to appropriate scrutiny in less time than under the current piecemeal approach.

In sum, Mr. President, I propose legislation that I believe better assures the public of the safety of human tissue and treats human tissue as, in effect, owned by the public—not by individual tissue banks—by subjecting it to voluntary and public standards applicable and available to all processors.

I ask unanimous consent that my letter to Commissioner Kessler, a statement prepared by UNOS describing its important role in organ transplantation, as well as a section-by-section analysis of the Human Tissue Transplantation Act of 1992, be inserted into the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, June 26, 1992.

DAVID A. KESSLER, M.D.,
Commissioner, Food and Drug Administration,
Rockville, MD.

DEAR COMMISSIONER KESSLER: I wanted to let you know that I today introduced the Human Tissue Transplantation Act of 1992, which will provide direction to the Food and Drug Administration in the regulation of human tissue.

I look forward to working with you on this important legislation and believe its enactment will provide your agency more appropriate and flexible tools with which to assure the American public of the safety and effectiveness of human tissue intended for transplantation. I have asked Senator Kennedy to schedule hearings on the proposed legislation in the next few weeks.

As you know, on several occasions I have expressed my concern over the implications of FDA's decision to regulate human heart valves as class III medical devices. While I take no position on the legality of this action, it is my view that requiring clinical trials for products made from human tissue was never contemplated by Congress, and this action poses immense problems related to costs. You efforts in securing continued Medicare coverage for heart valve replacement surgery are commendable, but these efforts do not guarantee coverage by private insurance plans, which typically exclude "investigational" products from coverage.

In addition, I am advised that the current expense of compliance with the requirement to hold investigational device exemptions (IDEs) by nonprofit tissue banks is well in excess of $10,000 per month, per tissue bank. These increased costs, I am told, have been passed on to recipients, with the result that the cost of a human heart valve today is at least 50 percent greater than the cost one year ago.

Moreover, one of the six tissue banks that processes human heart valves has, for financial reasons, dropped out of the consortium of tissue banks pursuing a common IDE. It is entirely possible that, if the requirement to conduct clinical trials is continued, several nonprofit tissue banks will abandon the field to existing for-profit processors. Clearly, the action requiring premarket approval is inconsistent with the spirit of the 1984 National Organ Transplant Act, which prohibits the commercialization of human organs and tissue.

My legislation would authorize the FDA, after consideration of voluntary professional standards developed by a National Council on Tissue Transplantation, to develop public standards for human tissue, as well as standards for licensure of tissue banks. In my view, this approach would result in the application of standards, either voluntary or prescribed by the FDA, in a relatively short period of time—certainly much shorter than an approach involving the application of clinical trials on a tissue-by-tissue basis. Because the legislation adopts an approach to the deregulation of human tissue most consistent with that required by human blood and other biological products, it precludes regulation of any human tissue as either a medical device or a new drug.

I have serious doubts that requiring clinical trials yields any greater protection of the public health than would well-designed standards. As stated by Richard Hopkins, M.D., Director of Pediatric Cardiac Surgery, Georgetown University Medical Center, "allograft valves were made and designed by God. From an engineering standpoint, they are the most perfect we have." Your own letter to Acting HCFA Administration Toby acknowledges that "FDA has no evidence of significant safety problems involving the current use of these devices. . . ." Statements such as these clearly call into question the need for expensive and time-consuming clinical trials.

Because of the pendency of the proposed legislation, any my commitment to its enactment, I believe it would be wholly appropriate for FDA to suspend its decision to regulate human heart valves as class III medical devices, and I urge you to take action to do so. It may be that this action could be accompanied by assurances by the tissue banks that they will continue to comply with processing protocols that are now required under the IDE.

I am eager to learn of your response to this suggestion, and await your reply.

My best wishes.

Cordially,

PAUL SIMON,
U.S. Senator.

STATEMENT OF THE UNITED NETWORK FOR ORGAN SHARING CONCERNING THE HUMAN TISSUE ACT OF 1992

Organ donation and tissue donation depend on public support and confidence. In many cases, organs and tissues are donated at the same time. Donated organs were designated as a public resource by the National Organ Transplant Act of 1984. Donated tissues must be treated as a public resource in order to protect the integrity of organ and tissue donation and transplantation in the United States.

Transplantable human organs are in short supply. Patients are dying at an accelerating rate while waiting for an organ transplant. National efforts to educate the public and medical professionals on the merits of organ donation are underway. Since organ and tissue donation are so closely linked, both functionally and in the eyes of the public, care must be taken to coordinate organ donation with tissue donation.

The National Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network (OPTN), with all United States organ transplant centers and organ procurement organizations (OPOs) as members, establishes voluntary policies for organ procurement, organ allocation and other essential aspects of organ transplantation. The OPTN has been in operation since September 30, 1986, and is operated by the United Network for Organ Sharing (UNOS), a not-for-profit corporation, under contract with the Department of Health and Human Services. UNOS operates a self-regulating professional organization that depends primarily on the volunteer efforts of members, with support from a full-time staff. UNOS is also the contractor for the organ transplantation scientific registry.

Organ procurement organizations designated by the Health Care Financing Administration, of which there were 68 as of June 1, 1992, handle all organ procurements and a substantial portion of all tissue procurements. All OPOs are members of the OPTN and adhere to its organ procurement and allocation policies. As efforts are made to increase the rate of organ donation and to expand the traditional donor pool to help solve the organ shortage, organ procurement becomes more complex and demanding. Unless tissue procurement is governed in a manner similar to, and compatible with, organ procurement, there will be inevitable damage to organ procurement.

Tissue transplantation has been allowed to develop without significant federal regulatory involvement. The discovery of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and its increasing incidence in the population has focused much greater attention on testing both organ donors and tissue donors for HIV. It is now time for Congress and the Department of Health and Human Services to bring tissue procurement under federal government oversight. Borrowing significantly from the experience of the OPTN, the Human Tissue Act of 1992 would bring tissue procurement, processing and distribution under the control of the Department of Health and Human Services through a contract relationship with a private not-for-profit entity for operation of the National Council on Tissue Transplantation (NCTT). The NCTT will be a membership organization that sets voluntary standards for tissue procurement, processing and distribution; collects and publishes scientific information; and collects data concerning tissue transplantation. If the experience of the NCTT parallels that of the OPTN, compliance with voluntary standards will become pervasive and effective. Voluntary standards will keep pace efficiently with scientific and technological advances and will assure safety and effectiveness without the necessity for promulgation of mandatory regulations, if the tissue transplantation community works together within the framework of the National Council on Tissue Transplantation. If volunteer standard-setting is not effective, the Act authorizes HHS to adopt regulations to require registration, licensing and inspection of tissue banks, tissue processors, and tissue distributors as needed.

The NCTT will also be able to address problems that relate to a scientific type of human tissue, such as human heart valves, by adoption of voluntary standards. If HHS finds that these voluntary standards are not effective to solve the problems, it may promulgate mandatory public standards relating to that type of tissue.

There have thus far been relatively few concerns with the safety and effectiveness of human tissue transplantation or of organ transplantation. It is hoped that the establishment of a voluntary standard-setting organization for human tissue, to work in cooperation with the existing organ network, will allow both organ and tissue transplantation to continue to operate safely and effectively under government oversight, but without the need for significant government effort or expense.

Section 1 of the bill contains the short title (Human Tissue Transplantation Act of 1992) and technical references.

Section 2 of the bill would add several new sections to the Public Health Service Act to provide a new regulatory mechanism for human tissue and tissue banks.

GENERAL RULES

New section 354 of the Public Health Service Act would state the general rules applicable to human tissue. Under the approach of the bill, as stated in this section, human tissue intended for transplantation may not be procured, processed or distributed unless:

If the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) promulgates regulations under new section 356, it is processed and distributed by one or more tissue banks that is licensed under such section 356; and

If it is human tissue subject to public standards promulgated under section 358 of the new bill, it meets such standards.

Human tissue that (1) is intended for transplantation in the same patient; or (2) is not frozen after procurement and is intended to be transplanted within 72 hours of procurement, is exempt from the new law.

NATIONAL COUNCIL ON TISSUE TRANSPLANTATION

New section 355 would require the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (the Secretary) to contract with a nonprofit entity, which is not engaged in any significant activity unrelated to tissue banking, to establish the National Tissue Bank Council. This section, patterned after the 1984 law that established a national Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network, would insure that government gain the expertise of the Council prior to undertaking regulatory activities. Specifically, the Council would be required to advise the Secretary on the state of human tissue procurement, transportation, processing, storage and distribution, and prepare a comprehensive report to the Secretary on such issues. In addition, the Council is to develop and disseminate voluntary professional standards meeting the requirements of the new law and submit to the Secretary recommended standards relating to the procurement of human tissue, the processing and distribution of human tissue by tissue banks, and standards for tissue itself (including, on an expedited basis, standards for human heart valves).

Under the proposed law, the National Council on Tissue Transplantation must consist of tissue banks and other nonprofit and for-profit entities and persons who procure, process, distribute or transplant human tissue. It must have a governing body of not less than 12 members, of which a majority must be representatives of tissue banks, and that includes representation from organ procurement organizations, voluntary health organizations, physicians and the general public.

REGISTRATION

New section 355A authorizes the Secretary to require, by regulation, that each tissue bank in the United States, as well as an entity other than a tissue bank that procures human tissue, register with the Secretary on an annual basis. Regulations must require that every tissue bank (or other entity) must register upon first engaging in the procurement, processing, or distribution of human tissue. Information required under the registration includes the name of the tissue bank and other identifying information. This provision is patterned after comparable requirements for manufacturers of drugs and medical devices under section 510 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

LICENSURE OF TISSUE BANKS

New section 356 authorizes the Secretary, after taking into consideration voluntary professional standards developed by the Council, to require all tissue banks to promulgate regulations prohibiting a tissue bank from processing or distributing human tissue intended for transplantation, unless the tissue bank holds a valid license once requirements to do so become applicable. The new legislation makes it clear that licenses for tissue banks are to be issued by the Secretary, upon application, either if the Secretary determines that a tissue bank meets standards promulgated for such tissue bank, or the tissue bank is accredited by a nonprofit accrediting body designated by the Secretary for this purpose. In addition, this section authorizes the Secretary, as well as the accrediting body, to require payment of fees by a tissue bank based upon the costs of federal inspection and licensure or the costs of accreditation. In this way, costs to the federal government are minimized.

Under new section 356, regulations promulgated by the Secretary concerning licensure of tissue banks must be designated to provide reasonable assurance that tissue procured by the tissue bank does not transmit disease. If a tissue bank receives human tissue procured by an entity other than a tissue bank, it must gain written assurance that the procuring entity meets such procurement standards. In addition, they must include, among other things, requirements that tissue be processed and distributed in accordance with good tissue banking procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance that human tissue processed or distributed by the tissue bank does not transmit disease. These procedures are intended to be comparable to good manufacturing practice procedures presently required of manufacturers of drugs and medical devices. In addition, the regulations must set forth qualifications for tissue bank personnel, including a requirement that each tissue bank have a medical director who is a physician licensed to practice medicine.

ACCREDITATION

New section 356A of the Public Health Service Act would authorize a tissue bank to be accredited for the purposes of obtaining a license if it meets the standards of an accreditation body designated by the Secretary. The new section also authorizes the Secretary to designate a nonprofit organization to be an accreditation body if it agrees to inspect tissue banks for purposes of federal licensure, and if its standards are equal to, or more stringent than, the standards issued by the Secretary for licensure of tissue banks. The accrediting body may, but need not, be the entity that contracts with the Secretary to establish the National Council on Tissue Transplantation.

This section is patterned after comparable provisions of the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Act of 1988.

INSPECTIONS

New section 357 authorizes the Secretary to inspect tissue banks subject to licensure requirements for the purpose of licensing such tissue banks, determining the performance of an accrediting body, or inspecting accredited facilities upon a determination that inspection is necessary for the protection of the public health. Certain limitations are placed upon the authority of the Secretary to inspect certain types of records. The limitations are imposed on the accrediting body as well.

PUBLIC STANDARDS FOR HUMAN TISSUE

New section 358 requires the Secretary, following receipt of a voluntary professional standard from the National Council on Tissue Transplantation, to publish the voluntary standards in the Federal Register and provide for comments on whether compliance with it is sufficient to provide patients with reasonable assurances of the safety and effectiveness of the type of tissue that is the subject of the voluntary standard. If the Secretary determines that compliance is insufficient to provide patients with such assurances, the Secretary is to promulgate a regulation establishing a public standard for such type of human tissue.

Public standards may be based on evidence from well controlled investigations, partially controlled studies, or other scientific evidence. Public standards must be designed to provide reasonable assurance of safe and effective performance of the type or types of human tissues specific by the standards. Such standards must specify processing standards; where appropriate, specify physical and biological properties of the tissue; and specify required labeling of the tissue.

In general, a public standard is not to take effect until one year after its enactment. The Secretary is to amend a public standard on an expedited basis to reflect new technology or for other reasons.

ENFORCEMENT

New section 359 would authorize the imposition of civil penalties as follows:

For failure of a tissue bank (or other entity) to register, $10,000;

For failure of a tissue bank to have a license; $25,000;

For procurement of human tissue in violation of procurement standards, and after appropriate notice, $25,000; and

For any person who introduces or delivers for introduction in interstate commerce human tissue in violation of a public standard, $50,000.

In all instances, the violator is to be provided written notification and opportunity to correct the violation before the civil penalty is imposed.

For the latter three violations, the Secretary may not impose a civil penalty without affording the opportunity for an informal hearing to the alleged violator. A civil penalty may be remitted or mitigated by the Secretary.

Section 359 also authorizes the suspension of a license for a tissue bank by the Secretary if, after an opportunity for an informal hearing, the Secretary determines that the owner or operator of the tissue bank has been guilty of misrepresentation or an omission of fact in obtaining the license, has failed to comply with licensure requirements, or has failed to comply with reasonable requests of the Secretary in determining whether or not a violation has occurred. The suspension of a license will continue in effect until the tissue bank, through written submission to the Secretary, demonstrates that it has corrected the conditions given rise to the suspension. In addition, the Secretary is authorized, in lieu of suspension actions, to require a tissue bank to engage in a directed plan of correction or pay for costs of onsite monitoring.

Finally, section 359 specifies that human tissue that violates an applicable public standard, or is procured in violation of procurement standards, may be seized in accordance with the provisions of section 304 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

JUDICIAL REVIEW

New section 360 authorizes judicial review of actions by the Secretary affecting substantive rights to be in accordance with the procedures established under section 517 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

EFFECT ON STATE LAWS

New section 360A authorizes state laws with respect to tissue banks to continue in effect unless they are inconsistent with the provisions of the new Federal legislation. In addition, the new legislation requires that any requirement of a state with respect to human tissue intended for transplantation which is different from, or in addition to, Federal requirements, may not be established or continued in effect.

The draft legislation makes it clear that no provision of state law treating the procurement, processing, storage, distribution or transplantation of human tissue as a service is to be affected by the legislation. Thus, state product liability laws applicable to human tissue are not to be affected by the new Federal requirements.

Section 3 of the bill adds a new section 399B to the Public Health Service Act which authorizes the Secretary, after consultation with the Council, to prescribe regulations requiring that providers of services under the Medicare or Medicaid programs to establish and maintain records of transplantation of tissue in a manner that facilitates the identification of transplant patients, donors, and the distributor of such tissue.

Section 4 of the bill includes definitions of "human tissue," "tissue bank," "distribute,"and specifies that the term "informal hearing" means a hearing described in section 201(y) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

Section 5 of the bill amends existing section 351(d)(2)(A) of the Public Health Service Act, which authorizes the Secretary to order the recall of a biological product that presents an imminent or substantial hazard to the public health. The amendment would extend this provision to human tissue that presents an imminent or substantial danger to the public health.

Section 6 of the bill makes it clear that the definitions of "drug" and "device" under the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act do not include human tissue, as defined under the new bill. Thus, once the proposed legislation is enacted human tissue may not be regulated as a drug or medical device, but as a biological product.

This section also makes it clear that a tissue bank licensed under the provisions of the new legislation is, with respect to activities regarding human tissue, not required to be licensed under section 353 of the Public Health Service Act (relating to a licensure of clinical laboratory).

Section 7 of the bill includes transitional provisions for the regulation of human heart valves. This section specifies that the Secretary is not authorized to enforce existing regulations that treat human heart valves as medical devices subject to premarket approval, and rescinds the determination by the Secretary that human heart valves must undergo premarket approval.

Section 8 of the bill requires an expedited proceedings applicable to human heart valves. It requires that within 60 days after the development of a voluntary public standard for human heart valves by the National Council on Tissue Transplantation, the Secretary is to initiate a proceeding to determine whether a public standard for human heart valves should be developed. In addition, this section specifies that the regulation is to be expedited.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Monday, June 29, at 4:30 p.m. to hold State Department nominations hearings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HATE CRIMES

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I want to bring the Senate's attention to the increase in our Nation of violent crimes motivated by bigotry and racial hatred. Today, I address the disturbing increase in bias related incidents affecting our Nation's school children.

Bias related incidents in public schools have been reported in 27 States across a wide range of U.S. communities. The National Center for Immigrant Students identified reports of more than 100 separate incidents in 76 schools in a recent 2-month survey of major newspapers. These incidents included interethnic fighting, racial attacks and harassment, racist graffiti, and the distribution of racist publications. A majority of the reported incidents occurred in rural or suburban school districts. Here are just a few examples of these reprehensible incidents:

At a Boise, ID, high school, a skinhead group's appearance coincided with the distribution of racist and anti-Semitic literature.

In a middle school in Maryland, two white seventh graders sprayed an African-American girl with Lysol.

The Los Angeles County Public School System reported in an October 1989 survey that one-third of crimes against Latino students during the 1988 school year were anti-immigrant in nature. One-half of the 309 incidents against Asians and Pacific Islanders were also motivated by bigotry against immigrant students.

One troubling aspect of this terrible rise in hate incidents in our Nation's school system is the apparent lack of action taken by some school administrators and parents to address them. One study reports that over 15 percent of schools failed to respond to racial and ethnic incidents of violence. In one case, a school principal refused to respond to racist graffiti until students circulated a petition in protest. Also, in one case where disciplinary action was taken, no attention was given to the victim or the impact of the incident on the school community as a whole.

In many schools, administrators have taken swift and comprehensive action to address this type of hatred. In a high school in Eugene, OR, teachers and administrators responded to racial conflict by training staff on racial sensitivity, holding a school wide assembly to reinforce a strong stand against racial harassment, instituting support groups for minority students and counseling and disciplining the offending students.

Our Nation's schools must be dedicated to teaching tolerance, love and respect for people of all backgrounds and fair treatment of all. In Chicago, the Anti-Defamation League has sponsored a World of Difference Program for the last 2 years. This program seeks to reduce prejudice through workshops for teachers and students at all grade levels, K–12. The programs are interactive and address issues of prejudice, stereotyping, and personal biases. Teachers participate in discussion programs and in participatory workshops to learn how to react to racial incidents. Through model programs like this one, schools learn how to address incidents of bias related hatred swiftly and to prevent such incidents from occurring at all so that we can assure a future of racial harmony.●

TRIBUTE TO WILLIAM McANULTY, JR., CHAIRMAN OF LOUISVILLE METRO UNITED WAY

● Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a wonderful man and outstanding community leader, Mr. William McAnulty, Jr. Bill McAnulty is a living example of the kind of values and work ethic that make America the strongest Nation in the world.

Mr. McAnulty is a former Jefferson County circuit court judge and current partner in the Louisville law firm of Greenebaum, Doll & McDonald. He now heads one of the largest Metro United Way chapters in the Nation. In a time when the United Way is undergoing tremendous change and public scrutiny, Mr. McAnulty has the chapter contributing 88 cents of every dollar raised to support human services agencies in Jefferson and seven other Kentucky and Indiana counties. This Mr. President, makes his chapter one of the most effective in the Nation. In addition, the Louisville chapter has raised approximately $20 million annually in recent years.

It takes a special breed of person to lead this type of organization Mr. President, and Bill McAnulty is just that type of person. Born and raised in Indianapolis, he received his masters in arts and education from the University of Louisville. While studying in Louisville he found that he, like every one who visits the city, had fallen in love with the town. He stayed at U of L and obtained his law degree in 1972. Since that time he has served his community admirably.

As a circuit court judge in Kentucky's largest county, he served with distinction for many years. He had the unenviable task of presiding over one of the most publicized cases in Louisville's history, the double murder of two high school boys. In a case fused with racial tension and public horror, Mr. McAnulty saw it through to the end and earned praise for his management of the potentially explosive matter. In the age of Rodney King and the L.A. riots this issue is no small feat. Overall, his opinions were upheld in the appeal process over 90 percent of the time, a record which any jurist would envy.

As for his current job, Mr. McAnulty admits that it is rife with peaks and valleys. Due to the current scandal in the national United Way office, public sentiment is waning. But this challenge is nothing to a man like Bill McAnulty. In fact, he says that "In the early days I was like Don Quixote. I wanted to change things for the better. I haven't lost that." Let us hope that for the city of Louisville and all those whose lives he touches, he never does.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing this marvelous individual and example to all. In addition, I ask that an article from the June 1, 1992, edition of Business First be included in the RECORD.

The article follows:

WILLIAM MCANULTY TAKES CONTROVERSY HEAD ON

(By Rachael Kamuf)

William McAnulty Jr. and controversy are not strangers. After all the former Jefferson Circuit Court judge has dealt with sometimes heartwrenching disputes on almost a daily basis in the 18 years since he graduated from law school.

The experiences of the 44-year-old attorney, who presided in 1986 over the most publicized capital murder trial of that decade, have served him well in the early days of his two-year stint as chairman of the Metro United Way.

Normally, McAnulty would be concerning himself with the usual board duties involved with overseeing the agency. Metro United Way is considered to be one of the most effective United Way operations—88 cents of every dollar raised goes to support human-services agencies in Jefferson and seven other Kentucky and Indiana counties—in the country.

The job has been anything but routine, however, since the March disclosures that William Aramony had abused his position as president of United Way of America, enjoying a salary and benefits of almost $500,000, plus expensive perks.

Instead of handling requests from social-service groups for financial assistance and preparing for this year's fund-raising campaign, the Metro United Way staff, directors and other volunteers have spent most of their time and efforts dealing with the sometimes virulent reaction to the reports.

Only a handful of people have withdrawn their pledges—about $5,000 worth—to the Metro United Way, which has raised approximately $20 million annually in recent years. But questions have been asked about the agency's management, and concern exists about the impact of the national scandal on the local 1992 fall campaign.

"It has been a very difficult time," says McAnulty, an ardent defender of the Metro United Way and its president, Rob Reifsnyder. "This was not in my script when I signed on."

In the plan or not, McAnulty, a partner at Greenbaum, Doll & McDonald, has not backed away from his commitment to the organization.

Reifsnyder, who was named to the national search committee looking for Aramony's replacement, says of McAnulty:

"He has been amazing. He has been there whenever we have needed him. He could easily have said, 'I didn't bargain for this.' But he didn't. He said, 'The local United Way is strong. I need to be there.'"

United Way director Dan Lynch says the chairman responded quickly to the reports about the national operation. "Bill feels personally responsible for the effectiveness of the United Way. He has poured his heart and soul into it."

The Louisville board issued a statement condemning Aramony and chiding the national executive board for its failure to monitor the day-to-day activities and expenses of United Way of America.

The group also voted to withhold a portion of its second-quarter dues until an evaluation of the new management practices of United Way of America is completed. And looking ahead, Metro United Way officials began a public relations campaign to nullify the controversy's effect on this year's local fund-raising efforts.

Those who have worked with McAnulty on civil projects, or have watched him in action as a lawyer and judge, have no doubts about his ability to lead the Metro United Way through what is considered to be the most difficult period in its 75-year history.

"I don't think it will be a terrible challenge for him," says attorney Frank Haddad Jr. "He has the ability to build consensus and congeal a group."

Judge Ellen Ewing says her former colleague is "up for anything he undertakes."

McAnulty compares the position he finds himself in as Metro United Way chairman to his legal practice. 'Crisis management—as a lawyer, this is what I do every day. This is that I do for a living."

Meanwhile, McAnulty's law firm has encouraged him to do whatever it takes to protect the United Way organization—no matter how long it takes.

"If it takes time, so be it," says Laramie Leatherman, managing partner of Greenebaum, Doll & McDonald. "He is asked to do things because he is respected. That spills over to the firm. It indicates there are people at Greenebaum, Doll & McDonald who are concerned about their community."

Although he is the product of an Indianapolis middle-class home, has been a success professionally and enjoys a comfortable lifestyle with his family, McAnulty can empathize with many of the people aided by the social-service groups supported by the United Way.

His mother suffers from schizophrenia. She no longer needs medication, but her condition was incorrectly diagnosed when McAnulty, the youngest of three children, was 12 years old. The result was ineffective treatment for her and long periods of hospitalization. "It made me an adult a lot earlier than I wanted to be," McAnulty says.

Ann McAnulty's condition also was a factor in her son earning a teaching degree at Indiana University in 1970. McAnulty said he always wanted to work in a field where he could "make a difference," and had a goal of becoming a special-education teacher.

After graduation, he and his bride Brenda headed south when he received a fellowship to study for the master's of arts and education degree at the University of Louisville. McAnulty says he intended to complete the fellowship and return to IU to study for a doctorate in education.

Along the way, though, two things happened; he fell in love with Louisville and decided to become a lawyer.

"I felt, politically and otherwise, lawyers can have an impact. And I felt as a lawyer, I could have an impact in more areas. . . . In the early days I was like Don Quixote. I wanted to change things for the better. I haven't lost that."

He was accepted at both the IU and U of L law schools. McAnulty says he chose to remain here because, "I decided this is where I wanted to spend the rest of my days."

McAnulty hasn't abandoned teaching altogether, however. He has taught classes at the U of L School of Law, and now spends time training young Greenebaum, Doll & McDonald associates.

The best lesson he can give is himself, Brenda McAnulty says of her husband. "He is a role model for young African-Americans," she says, mentioning that he takes advantage of any opportunity to demonstrate that race need not be a barrier to success in talks to youth and educational groups.

Eric Ison, head of the litigation division at Greenebaum, Doll & McDonald, says McAnulty has taught him and others the nuances of stereotyping.

"He will confront you in a kind way, if you use words that are not meant to be derogatory or show prejudice. It makes you wipe out certain words from your vocabulary," Ison says. "He asks you to step in the shoes of a black child who would hear such a comment."

Over the years, McAnulty has been involved in a wide variety of professional, civic and charitable organizations, ranging from the Kidney Foundation to the committee that hired Thomas Boysen to spearhead education reform in Kentucky. But children hold a special appeal to the father of two: Patrick, 16, and Kathryn, 11.

"He has always been interested in kids," says Brenda McAnulty, a professor and director of academic counseling at the Speed Scientific School.

Her husband, who spent three years as a juvenile court judge, says, "Children are truly the disenfranchised individuals in our society."

McAnulty speaks passionately about the pain that neglected and abused children carry over into adulthood, and of how inadequate medical care, housing and education affects society as a whole and individuals.

"We expect children abused as children to wipe away those memories when they become adults. We are not entitled to that expectation.

"If we divert resources we are now using for punitive uses and put it into prenatal care, preschool education and housing, we would not need so many juvenile facilities and prisons.

"We know that if kids written off as nonlearners to accommodate our failures are given the commitment they deserve, they can learn. (Educator) Marva Collins has proven that in Chicago. If such programs are funded and expanded, we can change our society dramatically."

Bigotry is another area that draws McAnulty's ire. "I don't countenance ignorance very well, I don't tolerate it, I deal with it."

Still, he admits that going up against someone who can only see the color of his skin "sometimes takes the air out of your balloon. But if you allow it to get the better of you, you're lost. And I would rather win."

McAnulty once said he was convinced that he was elected circuit judge in 1984 because most of the voters believed he was a "nice Irish-Catholic boy who grew up in the West End of Louisville."

The Presbyterian from Indianapolis admits he did not try to dispel that image. He also did not put his picture on campaign materials, which were printed in green ink. "I used to lot of green ink. With a name like McAnulty, people might think they were voting for a leprechaun."

He defends the tactic saying, "If you are not given an opportunity to prove yourself, it doesn't matter. There are some people who have preconceptions."

Judge Martin Johnstone, who served with McAnulty in both juvenile and circuit courts recalls how an opponent tried to use McAnulty's race against him and how his friend won over a potentially hostile group.

Johnstone said the meeting was held in "a pretty rough-looking, dark place. You could barely make out individual forms in the crowd. No one noticed Bill until he came out of the crowd and the spotlight was on him. You could hear a pin drop. And he said, 'I understand there is a rumor going around about me. As you can see it is true.' Everyone broke up. When it was all over everyone crowded around him."

Johnstone echoes others when he says voters won when they elected McAnulty to the bench.

Haddad, who appeared before Judge McAnulty on numerous occasions, says: "I found Bill to be a very highly qualified, moral, intelligent judge. He allowed everyone to make their points, ruled quickly and very competently, He was a judge's judge."

William McAnulty the judge will always be remembered as the person who presided in the trials of two inner-city youths accused of the kidnapping and gruesome murder of two Trinity High School students in 1984.

The case, which eventually was transferred to Lexington because of publicity, had racial overtones because the victims where white and accused, George Ellis Wade and Victor Dewayne Taylor, black.

McAnulty was not chosen to hear the case; his name came up in a routine draw for assignments by the chief judge. Johnstone refers to it as the "unluck of the draw."

McAnulty could have stepped down, though, when the defendants were granted a change in venue. He says he stayed on, because after going through the pretrial proceeding for 1½ years, it would have been unfair to another judge and the people involved to bring in someone unfamiliar with the case.

In retrospect, Johnstone says, McAnulty may have been the best candidate for the job because of his skin colar, and judicial temperament and abilities. "He conducted a fair trial for all involved."

A low point in the proceedings for McAnulty was listening to a radio call-in show after Wade, who testified against Taylor and stood trial first, was sentenced to life in prison. The caller said the reason Wade didn't receive the death penalty was because the judge and prosecutor (Ernie Jasmin) were black.

Taylor, however, was sentenced to die in the electric chair for shooting Scott Christopher Nelson and Richard David Stephenson.

The Taylor sentencing was especially difficult for McAnulty, who personally opposes the death penalty. He could have ignored the jury's recommendation and sentenced Taylor to life imprisonment, but McAnulty says:

"I took an oath when I agreed to sit on the bench to uphold the laws of this commonwealth. After considering the alternatives available and the circumstances involved, that particular punishment was necessary."

The Wade verdict, in McAnulty's opinion, was also correct.

"I think he aged 10 years going through those trials," Brenda McAnulty says.

Earlier this year, Taylor's conviction and death penalty were upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court without comment.

The stress of those trials was a factor in McAnulty's decision to step down from the bench when his term expired at the end of 1989.

"I sort of lost the freshness I felt was needed for undertaking that kind of a job. It is not exactly a pleasant job," says McAnulty, who was the judge in 13 murder cases. The jury in the Taylor proceeding was the only one that recommended the death penalty.

In the years since his 1974 graduation from the U of L law school, McAnulty—a former secretary of the Kentucky Department of Justice—had worked for the city, been a judge and a consultant for the Arthur D. Little Co., but had never been in private practice.

In addition to the experience, McAnulty says he was looking for financial security for his family when he decided to join a law firm. "It sounds insensitive and obnoxious when you say you can't raise and educate your children on $61,200," the salary for a circuit judge in 1989. "But I want to provide for my children without mortgaging myself out of existence."

Robert Doll, retired managing partner of Greenebaum, Doll & McDonald, said McAnulty was offered a partnership there because "we had been impressed by his legal ability as well as his personality. He studies the law. He is a good listener and a careful thinker. When he takes a position, he is well-prepared."

During his years as a judge, appellate courts affirmed McAnulty in more than 90 percent of the cases he heard. He is proud of that record, but says there were instances when he looked at reversal rulings, "slapped myself and said, 'You dummy.'

"Law is not a science. It is not a simple thing," McAnulty says.

Still, he says, nothing is worse than being around a judge who has been overturned. He then goes into a pantomime to describe how a judge opens the telltale letter from an appellate court, looking for the words "affirmed" or "reversed."

McAnulty's sense of humor, whether aimed at himself or others, is a great source of fun for his friends.

"He is a funny man. He could roll into the Comedy Club and be a stand-up comic," says Lynch, general manager of Philip Morris USA. "Reverence is not Bill's strong suit."

Almost everyone has a favorite story about McAnulty, whether it be the one about the campaign posters—depicting Judge Ewing as an elderly woman with no teeth smoking a corncob pipe—that he distributed throughout the Hall of Justice, or the times he left telephone messages, purportedly from the governor or other elected officials, for an unsuspecting Johnstone.

Another often repeated anecdote involves the "Things Are Well in Fairdale" bumper sticker that McAnulty did not discover for two weeks after Johnstone put it on his old BMW.

"He couldn't understand why all these strangers were honking and waving," says Johnstone, who grew up in the Fairdale area.

No Bill McAnulty story would be complete without a report on his prowess, or lack thereof, on the golf course. "He lives up to his (high) handicap," is Reifsnyder's evaluation.

Lynch, who plays with McAnulty almost every Saturday, refers to him as "my personal annuity. I have to give him strokes just to keep it even."

McAnulty, according to Lynch, spends almost every Saturday trying to antagonize a Golden Retriever who lives near the 15th hole of the Standard Country Club. Whenever they approach the spot, he says, the dog begins barking. McAnulty barks back. "I have trouble concentrating. I'm trying to play, and here is this dog barking his head off. I think Bill is trying to screw me up."

Reifsnyder says McAnulty uses golf to help break the tension at points when he is feeling particularly down because of the problems the Metro United Way is facing. "He says something that gets me laughing."

Such as the first time they hit the links together. They were at the last hole, and as Reifsnyder was sizing up the putt that could win him the match, he says McAnulty said: "'Don't let the fact that I chaired the committee that hired you, or that I will have a great effect on your future here bother you.'"

Reifsnyder sank the putt, and said, "I won't."

Helping him to smile during a difficult period is one of the reasons Reifsnyder says he has "been blessed" to have McAnulty as chairman during the current crisis.

"I value him as a friend as well as a boss," Reifsnyder says. "Every chairman we have had was right for the time, and Bill is no exception. He has reminded us that we must deal with our normal functions as well. That has helped us keep the organization on track and not sidetracked by what is happening elsewhere."

COLUMBUS, NY, QUINCENTENNIAL

• Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the quincentennial celebration of Columbus, NY. The town of Columbus, NY, will be hosting the Mount Rushmore Flag Raising Ceremony and procession of nine peace flags on Saturday, July 4, 1992, to commemorate the landing of Christopher Columbus 500 years ago.

Christopher Columbus had a lifelong dream, "the enterprise of the east." His persistence in living out that dream is testimony to the bold vision of a great man who was willing to overcome any obstacle in the way of his great goal. During Columbus' four voyages, he discovered many lands which opened the way to a new world. His quest later spurred the immigration that made America the great Nation that it is today. We are all the beneficiaries of the legacy of Columbus.

This year marks the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' voyage to the new world. This weekend will witness a whole host of celebrations which will be part of a national celebration of this quincentennial. One special town in America will register this particular anniversary with, perhaps, a little more significance than some others, and that town is Columbus, NY.

New York is 1 of 24 States to have a community named for Christopher Columbus. Columbus, NY, is recognized as the oldest Columbus in the United States by Discovery 92. As such, it is only right that we recognize Columbus, NY, as a historic location for quincentennial activities. This very appropriate community will embody our desire for a meaningful commemoration of half of a millennium with cultural, historical, educational, and recreational activities and events during the quincentennial period.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in supporting the quicentennial celebration of Columbus, NY, this weekend.•

MAKING A LIVING OFF THE DYING

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, recently, I read an article that appeared in the New York Times written by a physician titled, "Making a Living Off the Dying."

It is a disconcerting article, both from the viewpoint of simple humanitarianism and from the viewpoint of sound use of dollars.

There is no question that we waste far too much money on those who are dying, who would prefer to die in simple dignity, and we do not give them that dignity.

This article appeared in April. Ordinarily, I see the New York Times each day but somehow missed this article, and my brother Arthur Simon sent it to me. I am grateful to him for doing it.

I am also grateful to Dr. Norman Paradis, the courageous author of this article, who also is director of emergency medicine research at New York University-Bellevue Hospital.

I urge my colleagues to read the article, and I urge our friends at the Medicare office to reexamine what we are doing in this field.

I am sending a copy of my remarks to the Social Security Commissioner and will insert into the Record the response of the Commissioner when I receive it.

I ask to insert Dr. Paradis' article into the Record at this point.

The article follows:

[From the New York Times, Apr. 25, 1992]

Making a Living Off the Dying

(By Norman Paradis)

It has been more than a year since my father died, and I have come to believe that the circumstances of his death demonstrate much of what is wrong with our medical system.

As I grew up, I heard so much about what a good and gentle physician my father was that at first I ran from the idea of becoming a physician myself. But at 35, I was well along in my own medical career and with pride brought him to Britain to hear me deliver a paper. He had trained there and wanted to find out what had become of his classmates. He seemed to lose some vitality when he heard they were all dead. In perfect health his whole life, he began to complain of back pain.

In the United States, he was examined by several internists. All his blood tests were normal, and they declared him healthy. Yet the pain persisted. We felt it might be spinal irritation and arranged for a neurologist to see him. This doctor said his CAT scan was normal, and he was reassuring; it may just be a pinched nerve, he said. "Your father is 75 years old, but doesn't look a day over 50." How could he know that just months earlier he had looked 40?

My mother called regularly. "He doesn't look well and has no appetite." Relatives agreed. His physicians did not. Then he developed a blood clot and was admitted to the university hospital. Blood clots are a sign of cancer, and I insisted that they work him up from head to toe. Another CAT scan showed a lesion in the pancreas, and others in the liver. Waves of pain passed over me as I realized that back pain, weight loss and bloods clots were the classic triad of pancreatic cancer.

I flew to his home to see him. Years of training did not prepare me to see my father ill. He looked old and frail. I went to radiology to see the CAT scan. When I put it in the light box, I knew that my father would soon die.

I asked the rest of the family to step outside so he and I could be alone. I could not stop my tears. He held me and whispered that everything would be O.K. "Norman, I have been a surgeon for almost 50 years," he said. "In that time, I have seen physicians torture dying patients in vain attempts to prolong life. I have taken care of you most of your life. Now I must ask for your help. Don't let them abuse me. No surgery, no chemotherapy."

I assured him I would take care of everything. Before returning to New York, I thought I had made our wishes clear to his doctors: treat the clot, get a biopsy if possible, but, above all, make him comfortable. Almost immediately, a series of surgical and radiological procedures started.

When hysterical phone calls from my mother began, I quickly realized what was going on. Consulting surgeons get paid thousands of dollars an hour when they "decide" to operate. So that was what they were deciding to do. It's an old story of inflated fees charged by sub-specialists with procedure-based practices.

When I finally got my father's physicians on the phone, I insisted that he be cared for only by internists who had no incentive to do anything but make him comfortable. They assured me they understood my concerns and would keep in close contact. I never heard from them again.

My mother continued to describe procedures that were draining his energy. When my brother, a lawyer, arrived, he found our father in a hallway where he had been left after "a test." He pleaded: "They are treating me like an animal. Please get me out of here."

With difficulty, my brother contacted the physicians in charge and was assured things would improve. We said legal things about performing procedures without consent, and thought the problem was solved.

I can't describe the anger I felt when my mother called to say that they had continued the endless procedures as soon as we left. My father had been in the hospital for two weeks. He had spent most of that time receiving unnecessary "bilable" high-tech therapy that could not possibly cure him or relieve his pain. Many things had been done to correct problems caused by earlier "therapies." When my mother put him on the phone, he was incoherent.

We arranged a conference call with the hospital administrator and chief of staff. The surgeons were "too busy" to come to the phone. "Despite our clear instructions, you have continued to perform invasive procedures on our father," my brother said. "He is now incompetent, so we are invoking our power of attorney and explicitly forbidding you from doing anything that is not directed at relieving his suffering."

After my mother called the next morning to say he had again spent the night undergoing surgery, I called almost every other hospital in his state trying to arrange a transfer. Again and again, I was assured that he was "in the best of hands" and that I must be mistaken in describing his therapy as unacceptable. Each time we arranged to move him home or to a hospice, a test or procedure would be performed, making him temporarily too unstable to be transported.

When I again flew down, I found my father alone in a hallway after an ultra-sound exam. He was skeletal and barely arousable. I moved him back to his room. Within hours, my sister and I had him moved to a nearby hospice. He died the next morning.

For months, I lay awake trying to understand what had gone wrong. If a doctor and a lawyer could not get decent care for a doctor, what chance does the public have?

When I asked by mother if the hospital bills were a hardship, she said Medicare had paid for the whole thing—more than $150,000 on a patient who needed only a bed and some morphine. I called the Medicare inspector general's office. It agreed that if the hospital had billed for unauthorized procedures it was possibly a violation. "In that state, we have so many fraud cases over a million dollars that we wouldn't even investigate one involving only $150,000," I was told.

Our health care system is structured to meet reimbursement rather than patients' needs. Tremendous amounts of money are spent prolonging death, not life. If the story of my father's suffering can help improve our medical system, it will have been worth telling. Though I was unable to get him the care he deserved. I believe he would forgive me.•

THE 90TH ANNIVERSARY OF SURPRISE LAKE CAMP

• Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, this October 24, the New York Jewish community will celebrate the 90th anniversary of Surprise Lake Camp. Manhattan Borough President Ruth Messinger, herself an alumna of this dynamic program, will be the keynote speaker on this special occasion. Even the Members of the Senate who have not heard of Surprise Lake Camp are familiar with some of its famous graduates, including entertainer Eddie Cantor, playwright Neil Simon, and New York Attorney General Robert Abrams.

Mr. President, I ask that a brief history of Surprise Lake Camp be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I am sure my colleagues will join me in saluting this exciting camp on its 90th anniversary.

The history follows:

SURPRISE LAKE CAMP

Surprise Lake Camp was founded in 1902 by the Educational Alliance to provide fresh air and outdoor recreation for young boys from the teeming, congested tenements of the Lower East Side. "They scooped us up off the parched summer streets of New York and sent us to heaven," wrote Eddie Cantor who spent several weeks at the camp in 1903 and 1904.

"I became a camp clown in the hope that I'd be held over for more than the two weeks. It worked." After he became famous, Cantor lent his name and devoted a great deal of energy to fund-raising efforts on behalf of the camp. A 1000-seat outdoor amphitheater was named in his honor, and the story of his relationship to Surprise Lake Camp is still told at the end of each camping session.

PROUD HISTORY AND TRADITION

In its ninety years, Surprise Lake Camp has grown from an initial six tents for 25 campers and five counselors to over 200 structures for 450 campers and a staff of 200. Located on 750 wooded acres near Cold Spring, New York, the camp features a sliding fee scale based on family size and income. Last year it provided over $450,000 in fee reductions, which it believes makes it the most generous Jewish scholarship camp in the country.

Surprise Lake Camp has a special tradition for providing assistance to Jewish immigrants. It began in the early 1900's, and it still persists today as emigres from the former Soviet Union now comprise nearly 20% of the camp population.

But it doesn't just serve children in need. Approximately a third of its families pay full fee, and most of them choose Surprise Lake Camp over more expensive private camps because of its outstanding reputation and special emphasis on helping children achieve personal growth and character development.

Its size, diversity, and longevity have given this agency an unusual opportunity to impact New York's Jewish community. "Although they may not realize it, virtually everybody knows someone who went to Surprise Lake Camp," says Executive Director Jordan Dale. "When new staff members start telling friends and family where they'll be working for the summer, they inevitably hear: "That's the camp so-and-so went to."

Some of the "so-and-so's" who are included among those who went to the camp include singer Neil Diamond, comedian Jerry Stiller, playwright Neil Simon, and New York Attorney General Robert Abrams. "We are proud of how successful so many of our alumni have become," says Dale, "not only the ones who make headlines, but also the businessmen and professionals who are productive, hard-working members of the community and who epitomize the kind of character and values camp seeks to instill."

BOARD MEMBERS RUTH MESSINGER AND LEONARD MARX

The agency is also proud of its Board of Directors, which counts Borough President Messinger among its ranks. Indeed, not only is Ms. Messinger a Board member, but so is her mother and so was her grandfather before her. Both have served terms as Board President.

This kind of multigenerational affiliation is not unique on the Surprise Lake Camp Board. Ms. Messinger is one of eight current members who had a parent on the Board before them. She is also one of 26 members who have served for more than ten years. Eight of these senior members are also Past Presidents.

This unprecedented continuity of leadership is exemplified by the Ninetieth Anniversary's Honorary Chairperson, Leonard Marx. Originally a counselor at Surprise Lake Camp himself, Mr. Marx has gone on to achieve extraordinary success in real estate. His tenure on the Board spans some 45 years, including a term as President. His outstanding financial leadership during this period is the foundation that has made it possible for the camp to enter its 90th year with a balanced budget, an achievement few nonprofits can match in this era of recession and runaway cuts in government funding.

STAFF MEMBERS TO BE HONORED

At its 90th Anniversary event, the camp will honor two men who have made outstanding contributions as staff members. One is Asher Melzer, a former Director of Surprise Lake Camp for over 20 years and currently the Director of Camping Services for UJA-Federation. During his years at Surprise Lake, Mr. Melzer supervised the complete rebuilding of the camp, which included the original construction of the Eddie Cantor Theater. He also pioneered many innovations, including the hiring of Israelis as counselors, a practice since adopted throughout the Jewish camping field. He is currently recognized as a top authority on Jewish camping both at home and abroad. Two years ago, in fact, he assisted with the formation of a new children's camp for the Jewish community of Hungary.

The other honoree is Harry Vogel, a member of the current staff who has worked at the camp for an incredible forty consecutive summers. "Harry is destined to become one of camp's legends," says Dale. "After 40 years, he still works harder and gives more of himself than anyone else on the staff." Known simply as "Harry" to everyone connected with camp, this remarkable man takes only one hour off a day throughout the summer during which he can usually be found windsurfing on the lake with his favorite passenger—the camp dog, Bear, who rides gamely alongside him on the board.

The Ninetieth Anniversary Dinner Dance will be filled with many stories and special memories about Surprise Lake Camp as it proudly celebrates its long and colorful history of service to the New York City Jewish Community. The event will take place on Saturday evening, October 24th at the Holiday Inn, Crowne Plaza in mid-town Manhattan, and it will be attended by hundreds of alumni as well as many leaders from organized camping, Jewish Communal Services, and the community at large.•

IGNACY JAN PADEREWSKI'S RETURN TO POLAND

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, on July 5, 1992, the remains of Ignacy Jan Paderewski will be placed in a crypt at the St. John Cathedral in Warsaw, Poland. Today, June 29, his remains will be removed from his burial site of 51 years, from the mast of the U.S.S. Maine at Arlington National Cemetery. The return of his remains will fulfill the final wishes of Paderewski and his sister, Antonia Wilkonska, and will also represent an important day for all Poles and Polish-Americans alike.

Ignacy Jan Paderewski was a great composer and an equally great statesman. Mr. Paderewski raised a great amount of money for Polish relief, helped to recruit over 22,000 Poles in America who were not U.S. citizens to fight for the Allies in World War I, and signed the Treaty of Versailles for Poland. Paderewski even convinced President Woodrow Wilson to include a point in the Treaty of Versailles that stated Poland should be a free and independent nation. He died June 29, 1941, unable to be buried in a free Poland. As President Roosevelt directed, Mr. Paderewski's body was to be entombed at Arlington National Cemetery only until Poland was free. Little did we know in 1941 that Jan Paderewski would have to wait so long. Now, after years of Nazi and Soviet domination, Poland is a free and democratic country.

As Paderewski had wanted, his heart will remain where his life was, in the United States. As is customary in the old European tradition, his heart will be enshrined at Our Lady of Czestochowa in Doylestown, PA. In this sense, although Paderewski is finally going home, a part of him will remain in the country that he adopted as his home.

Ignacy Jan Paderewski did great work to help Poland what it is today. Through his music, he has also enriched the lives of countless other people. Poles all over the world are proud of compatriots such as Paderewski. Throughout Poland they are now able to experience the freedom that Paderewski had worked for during his lifetime. We share the Polish people's love of freedom and their great admiration for Paderewski. This honor is truly deserved.•

U.N. SECRETARY GENERAL ON PAYING FOR PEACEKEEPING

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, on June 17, 1992, Mr. Boutros Boutros-Ghali, the U.N. Secretary General, sent a remarkable report to the General Assembly and Security Council entitled "An Agenda for Peace." It is well worth the time of each Member of this body to read his address.

Boutros-Ghali covers a number of topics, from peacekeeping to peacemaking to peacebuilding, with some intriguing ideas about financing U.N. operations in these areas, such as a U.N. Peace Endowment Fund of $1 billion to finance the initial costs of authorized peacekeeping operations and other activities to resolve conflict.

But I want to highlight here one area in particular. Some of my colleagues have heard me speak of the need to find a way to pay for the increasing number of U.N. peacekeeping operations that have multiplied in the past few years, and promise to grow still further. I have introduced a bill, S. 2560, that would pay for our contributions to international peacekeeping out of national defense funds, instead of our current procedure where the money comes from international affairs funds. The money for peacekeeping for next year is about one-tenth of 1 percent of the defense budget functions, 050. Compare that to the State Department budget, which is part of the international affairs budget function, 150, where the expenditure for peacekeeping would equal about 10 percent of that agency's budget. That is quite a difference.

In his report, Mr. Boutros-Ghali says:

> I strongly support proposals in some Member States for their peacekeeping contributions to be financed from defense, rather than foreign affairs, budgets and I recommend such action to others. I urge the General Assembly to encourage this approach.

Mr. President, I ask that U.N. Secretary-General Boutros-Ghali's report be printed in the RECORD in full, and I commend his wisdom to my colleagues.

The report follows:

AN AGENDA FOR PEACE: PREVENTIVE DIPLOMACY, PEACEMAKING AND PEACE-KEEPING

(Report of the Secretary-General pursuant to the statement adopted by the Summit Meeting of the Security Council on 31 January 1992)

INTRODUCTION

1. In its statement of 31 January 1992, adopted at the conclusion of the first meeting held by the Security Council at the level of Heads of State and Government, I was invited to prepare, for circulation to the Members of the United Nations by 1 July 1992, an "analysis and recommendations on ways of strengthening and making more efficient within the framework and provisions of the Charter the capacity of the United Nations for preventive diplomacy, for peacemaking and for peace-keeping."[1]

2. The United Nations is a gathering of sovereign States and what it can do depends on the common ground that they create between them. The adversarial decades of the cold war made the original promise of the Organization impossible to fulfill. The January 1992 Summit therefore represented an unprecedented recommitment, at the highest political level, to the Purposes and Principles of the Charter.

3. In these past months a conviction has grown, among nations large and small, that an opportunity has been regained to achieve the great objectives of the Charter—a United Nations capable of maintaining international peace and security, of securing justice and human rights and of promoting, in the words of the Charter, "social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom". This opportunity must not be squandered. The Organizations must never again be crippled as it was in the era that has now passed.

4. I welcome the invitation of the Security Council, early in my tenure as Secretary-General, to prepare this report. It draws upon ideas and proposals transmitted to me by Governments, regional agencies, non-governmental organizations, and institutions and individuals from many countries. I am grateful for these, even as I emphasize that the responsibility for this report is my own.

5. The sources of conflict and war are pervasive and deep. To reach them will require our utmost effort to enhance respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, to promote sustainable economic and social development for wider prosperity, to alleviate distress and to curtail the existence and use of massively destructive weapons. The United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, the largest summit ever held, has just met at Rio de Janerio. Next year will see the second World Conference on Human Rights. In 1994 Population and Development will be addressed. In 1995 the World Conference on Women will take place, and a World Summit for Social Development has been proposed. Throughout my term as Secretary-General I shall be addressing all these great issues. I bear them all in mind as, in the present report, turn to the problems that the Council has specifically requested I consider: preventive diplomacy, peacmaking and peace-keeping—to which I have added a closely related concept, post-conflict peace-building.

6. The manifest desire of the membership to work is a new source of strength in our common endeavour. Success is far from certain, however. While my report deals with ways to improve the Organization's capacity to pursue and preserve peace, it is crucial for all Member States to bear in mind that the search for improved mechanisms and techniques will be of little significance unless this new spirit of commonality is propelled by the will to take the hard decisions demanded by this time of opportunity.

7. It is therefore with a sense of moment, and with gratitude, that I present this report to the members of the United Nations.

I. THE CHANGING CONTEXT

8. In the course of the past few years the immense ideological barrier that for decades gave rise to distrust and hostility—and the terrible tools of destruction that were their inseparable companions—has collapsed. Even as the issues between States north and south grow more acute, and call for attention at the highest levels of government, the improvement in relations between States east and west affords new possibilities, some already realized, to meet successfully threats to common security.

9. Authoritarian regimes have given way to more democratic forces and responsive Governments. The form, scope and intensity of these processes differ from Latin America to Africa to Europe to Asia, but they are sufficiently similar to indicate a global phenomenon. Parallel to these political changes, many States are seeking more open forms of economic policy, creating a world-wide sense of dynamism and movement.

10. To the hundreds of millions who gained their independence in the surge of decolonization following the creation of the United Nations, have been added millions more who have recently gained freedom. Once again new States are taking their seats in the General Assembly. Their arrival reconfirms the importance and indispensability of the sovereign State as the fundamental entity of the international community.

11. We have entered a time of global transition marked by uniquely contradictory trends. Regional and continental associations of States are evolving ways to deepen cooperation and ease some of the contentious characteristics of sovereign and nationalistic rivalries. National boundaries are blurred by advanced communications and global commerce, and by the decisions of States to yield some sovereign prerogatives to larger, common political associations. At the same time, however, fierce new assertions of nationalism and sovereignty spring up, and the cohesion of States is threatened by brutal ethnic, religious, social, cultural, or linguistic strife. Social peace is challenged on the one hand by new assertions of discrimination and exclusion and, on the other, by acts of terrorism seeking to undermine evolution and change through democratic means.

12. The concept of peace is easy to grasp; that of international security is more complex, for a pattern of contradictions has arisen here as well. As major nuclear Powers have begun to negotiate arms reduction agreements, the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction threatens to increase and conventional arms continue to be amassed in many parts of the world. As racism becomes recognized for the destructive force it is and as apartheid is being dismantled, new racial tensions are rising and finding expression in violence. Technological advances are altering the nature and the expectation of life all over the globe. The revolution in communications has united the world in awareness, in aspiration and in greater solidarity against injustice. But progress also brings new risks for stability: Ecological damage, disruption of family and community life, greater intrusion into the lives and rights of individuals.

13. This new dimension of insecurity must not be allowed to obscure the continuing and devastating problems of unchecked population growth, crushing debt burdens, barriers to trade, drugs and the growing disparity between rich and poor. Poverty, disease, famine, oppression and despair abound, joining to produce 17 million refugees, 20 million displaced persons and massive migrations of peoples within and beyond national borders. These are both sources and consequences of conflict that require the ceaseless attention and the highest priority in the efforts of the United Nations. A porous ozone shield could pose a greater threat to an exposed population than a hostile army. Drought and disease can decimate no less mercilessly than the weapons of war. So at this moment of renewed opportunity, the efforts of the Organization to build peace, stability and security must encompass matters beyond military threats in order to break the fetters of strife and warfare that have characterized the past. But armed conflicts today, as they have throughout history, continue to bring fear and horror to humanity, requiring our urgent involvement to try to prevent, contain and bring them to an end.

14. Since the creation of the United Nations in 1945, over 100 major conflicts around the world have left some 20 million dead. The United Nations was rendered powerless to deal with many of these crises because of the vetoes—279 of them—cast in the Security Council, which were a vivid expression of the divisions of that period.

15. With the end of the cold war there have been no such vetoes since 31 May 1990, and demands on the United Nations have surged. Its security arm, once disabled by circumstances it was not created or equipped to control, has emerged as a central instrument for the prevention and resolution of conflicts and for the preservation of peace. Our aims must be:

To seek to identify at the earliest possible stage situations that could produce conflict, and to try through diplomacy to remove the sources of danger before violence results;

Where conflict erupts, to engage in peacemaking aimed at resolving the issues that have led to conflict;

Through peace-keeping, to work to preserve peace, however fragile, where fighting has been halted and to assist in implementing agreements achieved by the peacemakers;

To stand ready to assist in peace-building in its differing contexts: rebuilding the institutions and infrastructures of nations torn by civil war and strife; and building bonds of peaceful mutual benefit among nations formerly at war;

And in the largest sense, to address the deepest causes of conflict: economic despair, social injustice and political oppression. It is possible to discern an increasingly common moral perception that spans the world's nations and peoples, and which is finding expression in international laws, many owing their genesis to the work of this Organization.

16. This wider mission for the world Organization will demand the concerted attention and effort of individual States, of regional and non-governmental organizations and of all of the United Nations system, with each of the principal organs functioning in the balance and harmony that the Charter requires. The Security Council has been assigned by all Member States the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security under the Charter. In its broadest sense this responsibility must be shared by the General Assembly and by all the functional elements of the world Organization. Each has a special and indispensable role to play in an integrated approach to human security. The Secretary-General's contribution rests on the pattern of trust and cooperation established between him and the deliberative organs of the United Nations.

17. The foundation-stone of this work is and must remain the State. Respect for its fundamental sovereignty and integrity are crucial to any common international progress. The time of absolute and exclusive sovereignty, however, has passed; its theory was never matched by reality. It is the task of leaders of States today to understand this and to find a balance between the needs of good internal governance and the requirements of an ever more interdependent world. Commerce, communications and environmental matters transcend administrative borders; but inside those borders is where individuals carry out the first order of their economic, political and social lives. The United Nations has not closed its door. Yet if every ethnic, religious or linguistic group claimed statehood, there would be no limit to fragmentation, and peace, security and economic well-being for all would become ever more difficult to achieve.

18. One requirement for solutions to these problems lies in commitment to human rights with a special sensitivity to those of minorities, whether ethnic, religious, social or linguistic. The League of Nations provided a machinery for the international protection of minorities. The General Assembly soon will have before it a declaration on the rights of minorities. That instrument, together with the increasingly effective machinery of the United Nations dealing with human rights, should enhance the situation of minorities as well as the stability of States.

19. Globalism and nationalism need not be viewed as opposing trends, doomed to spur each other on to extremes of reaction. The healthy globalization of contemporary life requires in the first instance solid identities and fundamental freedoms. The sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence of States within the established international system, and the principle of self-determination for peoples, both of great value and importance, must not be permitted to work against each other in the period ahead. Respect for democratic principles at all levels of social existence is crucial: in communities, within States and within the community of States. Our constant duty should be to maintain the integrity of each while finding a balanced design for all.

II. DEFINITIONS

20. The terms preventive diplomacy, peacemaking and peace-keeping are integrally related and as used in this report are defined as follows:

Preventive diplomacy is action to prevent disputes from arising between parties, to prevent existing disputes from escalating into conflicts and to limit the spread of the latter when they occur.

Peacemaking is action to bring hostile parties to agreement, essentially through such peaceful means as those foreseen in Chapter VI of the Charter of the United Nations.

Peace-keeping is the deployment of a United Nations presence in the field, hitherto with the consent of all the parties concerned, normally involving United Nations military and/or police personnel and frequently civilians as well. Peace-keeping is a technique that expands the possibilities for both the prevention of conflict and the making of peace.

21. The present report in addition will address the critically related concept of post-conflict peace-building—action to identify and support structures which will tend to strengthen and solidify peace in order to avoid a relapse into conflict. Preventive diplomacy seeks to resolve disputes before violence breaks out; peacemaking and peacekeeping are required to halt conflicts and preserve peace once it is attained. If successful, they strengthen the opportunity for post-conflict peace-building, which can prevent the recurrence of violence among nations and peoples.

22. These four areas for action, taken together, and carried out with the backing of all Members, offer a coherent contribution towards securing peace in the spirit of the Charter. The United Nations has extensive experience not only in these fields, but in the wider realm of work for peace in which these four fields are set. Initiatives on decolonization, on the environment and sustainable development, on population, on the eradication of disease, on disarmament and on the growth of international law—these and many others have contributed immeasurably to the foundations for a peaceful world. The world has often been rent by conflict and plagued by massive human suffering and deprivation. Yet it would have been far more so without the continuing efforts of the United Nations. This wide experience must be taken into account in assessing the potential of the United Nations in maintaining international security not only in its traditional sense, but in the new dimensions presented by the era ahead.

III. PREVENTIVE DIPLOMACY

23. The most desirable and efficient employment of diplomacy is to ease tensions before they result in conflict—or, if conflict breaks out, to act swiftly to contain it and resolve its underlying causes. Preventive diplomacy may be performed by the Secretary-General personally or through senior staff or specialized agencies and programs, by the Security Council or the General Assembly, and by regional organizations in cooperation with the United Nations. Preventive diplomacy requires measures to create confidence; it needs early warning based on information gathering and informal or formal fact-finding; it may also involve preventive deployment and, in some situations, demilitarized zones.

Measures to build confidence

24. Mutual confidence and good faith are essential to reducing the likelihood of conflict between States. Many such measures are available to Governments that have the will to employ them. Systematic exchange of military missions, formation of regional or subregional risk reduction centers, arrangements for the free flow of information, including the monitoring of regional arms agreements, are examples. I ask all regional organizations to consider what further confidence-building measures might be applied in their areas and to inform the United Nations of the results. I will undertake periodic consultations on confidence-building measures with parties to potential, current or past disputes and with regional organizations, offering such advisory assistance as the Secretariat can provide.

Fact-finding

25. Preventive steps must be based upon timely and accurate knowledge of the facts. Beyond this, an understanding of developments and global trends, based on sound analysis, is required. And the willingness to take appropriate preventive action is essential. Given the economic and social roots of many potential conflicts, the information needed by the United Nations now must encompass economic and social trends as well as political developments that may lead to dangerous tensions.

(a) An increased resort to fact-finding is needed, in accordance with the Charter, initiated either by the Secretary-General, to enable him to meet his responsibilities under the Charter, including Article 99, or by the Security Council or the General Assembly. Various forms may be employed selectively as the situation requires. A request by a State for the sending of a United Nations fact-finding mission to its territory should be considered without undue delay.

(b) Contacts with the Governments of Member States can provide the Secretary-General with detailed information on issues of concern. I ask that all Member States be ready to provide the information needed for effective preventive diplomacy. I will supplement my own contacts by regularly sending senior officials on missions for consultations in capitals or other locations. Such contacts are essential to gain insight into a situation and to assess its potential ramifications.

(c) Formal fact-finding can be mandated by the Security Council or by the General Assembly, either of which may elect to send a mission under its immediate authority or may invite the Secretary-General to take the necessary steps, including the designation of a special envoy. In addition to collecting information on which a decision for further action can be taken, such a mission can in some instances help to defuse a dispute by its presence, indicating to the parties that the Organization, and in particular the Security Council, is actively seized of the matter as a present or potential threat to international security.

(d) In exceptional circumstances the Council may meet away from Headquarters as the Charter provides, in order not only to inform itself directly, but also to bring the authority of the Organization to bear on a given situation.

Early warning

26. In recent years the United Nations system has been developing a valuable network of early warning systems concerning environmental threats, the risk of nuclear accident, natural disasters, mass movements of populations, the threat of famine and the spread of disease. There is a need, however, to strengthen arrangements in such a manner that information from those sources can be synthesized with political indicators to assess whether a threat to peace exists and to analyse what action might be taken by the United Nations to alleviate it. This is a process that will continue to require the close cooperation of the various specialized agencies and functional offices of the United Nations. The analyses and recommendations for preventive action that emerge will be made available by me, as appropriate, to the Security Council and other United Nations organs. I recommend in addition that the Security Council invite a reinvigorated and restructured Economic and Social Council to provide reports, in accordance with Article 65 of the Charter, on those economic and social developments that may, unless mitigated, threaten international peace and security.

27. Regional arrangements and organizations have an important role in early warning. I ask regional organizations that have not yet sought observer status at the United Nations to do so and to be linked, through appropriate arrangements, with the security mechanisms of this Organization.

Preventage deployment

28. United Nations operations in areas of crisis have generally been established after conflict has occurred. The time has come to plan for circumstances warranting preventive deployment, which could take place in a variety of instances and ways. For example, in conditions of national crisis there could be preventive deployment at the request of the Government or all parties concerned, or with their consent; in inter-State disputes such deployment could take place when two countries feel that a United Nations presence on both sides of their border can discourage hostilities; furthermore, preventive deployment could take place when a country feels threatened and requests the deployment of an appropriate United Nations presence along its side of the border alone. In each situation, the mandate and composition of the United Nations presence would need to be carefully devised and be clear to all.

29. In conditions of crisis within a country, when the Government requests or all parties consent, preventive deployment could help in a number of ways to alleviate suffering and to limit or control violence. Humanitarian assistance, impartially provided, could be of critical importance; assistance in maintaining security, whether through military, police or civilian personnel, could save lives and develop conditions of safety in which negotiations can be held; the United Nations could also help in conciliation efforts if this should be the wish of the parties. In certain circumstances, the United Nations may well need to draw upon the specialized skills and resources of various parts of the United Nations system; such operations may also on occasion require the participation of non-governmental organizations.

30. In these situations of internal crisis the United Nations will need to respect the sovereignty of the State; to do otherwise would not be in accordance with the understanding of Member States in accepting the principles of the Charter. The Organization must remain mindful of the carefully negotiated balance of the guiding principles annexed to General Assembly resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991. Those guidelines stressed, inter alia, that humanitarian assistance must be provided in accordance with the principles of humanity, neutrality and impartiality, that the sovereignty, territorial integrity and national unity of States must be fully respected in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations; and that, in this context, humanitarian assistance should be provided with the consent of the affected country and, in principle, on the basis of an appeal by that country. The guidelines also stressed the responsibility of States to take care of the victims of emergencies occurring on their territory and the need for access to those requiring humanitarian assistance. In the light of these guidelines, a Government's request for United Nations involvement, or consent to it, would not be an infringement of that State's sovereignty or be contrary to Article 2, paragraph 7, of the Charter which refers to matters essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State.

31. In inter-State disputes, when both parties agree, I recommend that if the Security Council concludes that the likelihood of hostilities between neighboring countries could be removed by the preventive deployment of a United Nations presence on the territory of each State, such action should be taken. The nature of the tasks to be performed would determine the composition of the United Nations presence.

32. In cases where one nation fears a cross-border attack, if the Security Council concludes that a United Nations presence on one side of the border, with the consent only of the requesting country, would serve to deter conflict, I recommend that preventive deployment take place. Here again, the specific nature of the situation would determine the mandate and the personnel required to fulfill it.

Demilitarized zones

33. In the past, demilitarized zones have been established by agreement of the parties at the conclusion of a conflict. In addition to the deployment of United Nations personnel in such zones as part of peace-keeping operations, consideration should now be given to the usefulness of such zones as a form of preventive deployment, on both sides of a border, with the agreement of the two parties, as a means of separating potential belligerents, or on one side of the line, at the request of one party, for the purpose of removing any pretext for attack. Demilitarized zones would serve as symbols of the international community's concern that conflict be prevented.

IV. PEACEMAKING

34. Between the tasks of seeking to prevent conflict and keeping the peace lies the responsibility to try to bring hostile parties to agreement by peaceful means. Chapter VI of the Charter sets forth a comprehensive list of such means for the resolution of conflict. These have been amplified in various declarations adopted by the General Assembly, including the Manila Declaration of 1982 on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes[2] and the 1988 Declaration on the Prevention and Removal of Disputes and Situations Which May Threaten International Peace and Security and on the Role of the United Nations in this Field.[3] They have also been the subject of various resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolution 44/21 of 15 November 1989 on enhancing international peace, security and international cooperation in all its aspects in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations. The United Nations has had wide experience in the application of these peaceful means. If conflicts have gone unresolved, it is not because techniques for peaceful settlement were unknown or inadequate. The fault lies first in the lack of political will of parties to seek a solution to their differences through such means as are suggested in Chapter VI of the Charter, and second, in the lack of leverage at the disposal of a third party if this is the procedure chosen. The indifference of the international community to a problem, or the marginalization of it, can also thwart the possibilities of solution. We must look primarily to these areas if we hope to enhance the capacity of the Organization for achieving peaceful settlements.

35. The present determination in the Security Council to resolve international disputes in the manner foreseen in the Charter has opened the way for a more active Council role. With greater unity has come leverage and persuasive power to lead hostile parties towards negotiations. I urge the Council to take full advantage of the provisions of the Charter under which it may recommend appropriate procedures or methods for dispute settlement and, if all the parties to a dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties for a pacific settlement of the dispute.

36. The General Assembly, like the Security Council and the Secretary-General, also has an important role assigned to it under the Charter for the maintenance of international peace and security. As a universal forum, its capacity to consider and recommend appropriate action must be recognized. To that end it is essential to promote its utilization by all Member States so as to bring greater influence to bear in pre-empting or containing situations which are likely to threaten international peace and security.

37. Mediation and negotiation can be undertaken by an individual designated by the Security Council, by the General Assembly or by the Secretary-General. There is a long history of the utilization by the United Nations of distinguished statesmen to facilitate the processes of peace. They can bring a personal prestige that, in addition to their experience, can encourage the parties to enter serious negotiations. There is a wide willingness to serve in this capacity, from which I shall continue to benefit as the need arises. Frequently it is the Secretary-General himself who undertakes the task. While the mediator's effectiveness is enhanced by strong and evident support from the Council, the General Assembly and the relevant Member States acting in their national capacity, the good offices of the Secretary-General may at times be employed most effectively when conducted independently of the deliberative bodies. Close and continuous consultation between the Secretary-General and the Security Council is, however, essential to ensure full awareness of how the Council's influence can best be applied and to develop a common strategy for the peaceful settlement of specific disputes.

The World Court

38. The docket of the International Court of Justice has grown fuller but it remains an under-used resource for the peaceful adjudication of disputes. Greater reliance on the Court would be an important contribution to United Nations peacemaking. In this connection, I call attention to the power of the Security Council under Articles 36 and 37 of the Charter to recommend to Member States the submissions of a dispute to the International Court of Justice, arbitration or other dispute settlement mechanisms. I recommend that the Secretary-General be authorized, pursuant to Article 96, paragraph 2, of the Charter, to take advantage of the advisory competence of the Court and that other United Nations organs that already enjoy such authorization turn to the Court more frequently for advisory opinions.

39. I recommend the following steps to reinforce the role of the International Court of Justice:

(a) All Member States should accept the general jurisdiction of the International Court under Article 36 of its Statute, without any reservation, before the end of the United Nations Decade of International Law in the year 2000. In instances where domestic structures prevent this, States should agree bilaterally or multilaterally to a comprehensive list of matters they are willing to submit to the Court and should withdraw their reservations to its jurisdiction in the dispute settlement clauses of multilateral treaties;

(b) When submission of a dispute to the full Court is not practical, the Chambers jurisdiction should be used;

(c) States should support the Trust Fund established to assist countries unable to afford the cost involved in bringing a dispute to the Court, and such countries should take full advantage of the Fund in order to resolve their disputes.

Amelioration through assistance

40. Peacemaking is at times facilitated by international action to ameliorate circumstances that have contributed to the dispute or conflict. If, for instance, assistance to displaced persons within a society is essential to a solution, then the United Nations should be able to draw upon the resources of all agencies and programmes concerned. At present, there is no adequate mechanism in the United Nations through which the Security Council, the General Assembly or the Secretary-General can mobilize the resources needed for such positive leverage and engage the collective efforts of the United Nations system for the peaceful resolution of a conflict. I have raised this concept in the Administrative Committee on Coordination, which brings together the executive heads of United Nations agencies and programmes; we are exploring methods by which the inter-agency system can improve its contribution to the peaceful resolution of disputes.

Sanctions and special economic problems

41. In circumstances when peacemaking requires the imposition of sanctions under Article 41 of the Charter, it is important that States confronted with special economic problems not only have the right to consult the Security Council regarding such problems, as Article 50 provides, but also have a realistic possibility of having their difficulties addressed. I recommend that the Security Council devise a set of measures involving the financial institutions and other components of the United Nations system that can be put in place to insulate States from such difficulties. Such measures would be a matter of equity and a means of encouraging States to cooperate with decisions of the Council.

Use of military force

42. It is the essence of the concept of collective security as contained in the Charter that if peaceful means fail, the measures provided in Chapter VII should be used, on the decision of the Security Council, to maintain or restore international peace and security in the face of a "threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression". The Security Council has not so far made use of the most coercive of these measures—the action by military force foreseen in Article 42. In the situation between Iraq and Kuwait, the Council chose to authorize Member States to take measures on its behalf. The Charter, however, provides a detailed approach which now merits the attention of all Member States.

43. Under Article 42 of the Charter, the Security Council has the authority to take military action to maintain or restore international peace and security. While such action should only be taken when all peaceful means have failed, the option of taking it is essential to the credibility of the United Nations as a guarantor of international security. This will require bringing into being, through negotiations, the special agreements foreseen in Article 43 of the Charter, whereby Member States undertake to make armed forces, assistance and facilities available to the Security Council for the purposes stated in Article 42, not only on an ad hoc basis but on a permanent basis. Under the political circumstances that now exist for the first time since the Charter was adopted, the long-standing obstacles to the conclusion of such special agreements should no longer prevail. The ready availability of armed forces on call could serve, in itself, as a means of deterring breaches of the peace since a potential aggressor would know that the Council had at its disposal a means of response. Forces under Article 43 may perhaps never be sufficiently large or well enough equipped to deal with a threat from a major army equipped with sophisticated weapons. They would be useful, however, in meeting any threat posed by a military force of a lesser order. I recommend that the Security Council initiate negotiations in accordance with Article 43, supported by the Military Staff Committee, which may be augmented if necessary by others in accordance with Article 47, paragraph 2, of the Charter. It is my view that the role of the Military Staff Committee should be seen in the context of Chapter VII, and not that of the planning or conduct of peace-keeping operations.

Peace-enforcement units

44. The mission of forces under Article 43 would be to respond to outright aggression, imminent or actual. Such forces are not likely to be available for some time to come. Cease-fires have often been agreed to but not complied with, and the United Nations has sometimes been called upon to send forces to restore and maintain the cease-fire. This task can on occasion exceed the mission of peace-keeping forces and the expectations of peace-keeping force contributors. I recommend that the Council consider the utilization of peace-enforcement units in clearly defined circumstances and with their terms of reference specified in advance. Such units from Member States would be available on call and would consist of troops that have volunteered for such service. They would have to be more heavily armed than peace-keeping forces and would need to undergo extensive preparatory training within their national forces. Deployment and operation of such forces would be under the authorization of the Security Council and would, as in the case of peace-keeping forces, be under the command of the Secretary-General. I consider such peace-enforcement units to be warranted as a provisional measure under Article 40 of the Charter. Such peace-enforcement units should not be confused with the forces that may eventually be constituted under Article 43 to deal with acts of aggression or with the military personnel which Governments may agree to keep on stand-by for possible contribution to peace-keeping operations.

45. Just as diplomacy will continue across the span of all the activities dealt with in the present report, so there may not be a dividing line between peacemaking and peace-keeping. Peacemaking is often a prelude to peace-keeping—just as the deployment of a United Nations presence in the field may expand possibilities for the prevention of conflict, facilitate the work of peacemaking and in many cases serve as a prerequisite for peace-building.

V. PEACE-KEEPING

46. Peace-keeping can rightly be called the invention of the United Nations. It has brought a degree of stability to numerous areas of tension around the world.

Increasing demands

47. Thirteen peace-keeping operations were established between the years 1945 and 1987; 13 others since then. An estimated 528,000 military, police and civilian personnel had served under the flag of the United Nations until January 1992. Over 800 of them from 43 countries have died in the service of the Organization. The costs of these operations have aggregated some $8.3 billion till 1992. The unpaid arrears towards them stand at over $800 million, which represent a debt owed by the Organization to the troop-contributing countries. Peace-keeping operations approved at present are estimated to cost close to $3 billion in the current 12-month period, while patterns of payment are unacceptably slow. Against this, global defence expenditures at the end of the last decade had approached $1 trillion a year, or $2 million per minute.

48. The contrast between the costs of United Nations peace-keeping and the costs of the alternative, war—between the demands of the Organization and the means provided to meet them—would be farcical were the consequences not so damaging to global stability and to the credibility of the Organization. At a time when nations and peoples increasingly are looking to the United Nations for assistance in keeping the peace—and holding it responsible when this cannot be so—fundamental decisions must be taken to enhance the capacity of the Organization in this innovative and productive exercise of its function. I am conscious that the present volume and unpredictability of peace-keeping assessments poses real problems for some Member States. For this reason, I strongly support proposals in some Member States for their peace-keeping contributions to be financed from defence, rather than foreign affairs, budgets and I recommend such action to others. I urge the General Assembly to encourage this approach.

49. The demands on the United Nations for peace-keeping, and peace-building, operations will in the coming years continue to challenge the capacity, the political and financial will and the creativity of the Secretariat and Member States. Like the Security Council, I welcome the increase and broadening of the tasks of peace-keeping operations.

New departures in peace-keeping

50. The nature of peace-keeping operations has evolved rapidly in recent years. The established principles and practices of peace-keeping have responded flexibly to new demands of recent years, and the basic conditions for success remain unchanged: a clear and practicable mandate; the cooperation of the parties in implementing that mandate; the continuing support of the Security Council; the readiness of Member States to contribute the military, police and civilian personnel, including specialists, required; effective United Nations command at Headquarters and in the field; and adequate financial and logistic support. As the international climate has changed and peace-keeping operations are increasingly fielded to help implement settlements that have been negotiated by peacemakers, a new array of demands and problems has emerged regarding logistics, equipment, personnel and finance, all of which could be corrected if Member States so wished and were ready to make the necessary resources available.

Personnel

51. Member States are keen to participate in peace-keeping operations. Military observers and infantry are invariably available in the required numbers, but logistic units present a greater problem, as few armies can afford to spare such units for an extended period. Member States were requested in 1990 to state what military personnel they were in principle prepared to make available; few replied. I reiterate the request to all Member States to reply frankly and promptly. Stand-by arrangements should be confirmed, as appropriate, through exchanges of letters between the Secretariat and Member States concerning the kind and number of skilled personnel they will be prepared to offer the United Nations as the needs of new operations arise.

52. Increasingly, peace-keeping requires that civilian political officers, human rights monitors, electoral officials, refugee and humanitarian aid specialists and police play as central a role as the military. Police personnel have proved increasingly difficult to obtain in the numbers required. I recommend that arrangements be reviewed and improved for training peace-keeping personnel—civilian, police, or military—using the varied capabilities of Member State Governments, of non-governmental organizations and the facilities of the Secretariat. As efforts go forward to include additional States as contributors, some States with considerable potential should focus on language training for police contingents which may serve with the Organization. As for the United Nations itself, special personnel procedures, including incentives, should be instituted to permit the rapid transfer of Secretariat staff members to service with peace-keeping operations. The strength and capability of military staff serving in the Secretariat should be augmented to meet new and heavier requirements.

Logistics

53. Not all Governments can provide their battalions with the equipment they need for service abroad. While some equipment is provided by troop-contributing countries, a great deal has to come from the United Nations, including equipment to fill gaps in under-equipped national units. The United Nations has no standing stock of such equipment. Orders must be placed with manufacturers, which creates a number of difficulties. A pre-positioned stock of basic peace-keeping equipment should be established, so that at least some vehicles, communications equipment, generators, etc., would be immediately available at the start of an operation. Alternatively, Governments should commit themselves to keeping certain equipment, specified by the Secretary-General, on stand-by for immediate sale, loan or donation to the United Nations when required.

54. Member States in a position to do so should make air- and sea-lift capacity available to the United Nations free of cost or at lower than commercial rates, as was the practice until recently.

VI. POST-CONFLICT PEACE-BUILDING

55. Peacemaking and peace-keeping operations, to be truly successful, must come to include comprehensive efforts to identify and support structures which will tend to consolidate peace and advance a sense of confidence and well-being among people. Through agreements ending civil strife, these may include disarming the previously warring parties and the restoration of order, the custody and possible destruction of weapons, repatriating refugees, advisory and training support for security personnel, monitoring elections, advancing efforts to protect human rights, reforming or strengthening governmental institutions and promoting formal and informal processes of political participation.

56. In the aftermath of international war, post-conflict peace-building may take the form of concrete cooperative projects which link two or more countries in a mutually beneficial undertaking that can not only contribute to economic and social development but also enhance the confidence that is so fundamental to peace. I have in mind, for example, projects that bring Skates together to develop agriculture, improve transportation or utilize resources such as water or electricity that they need to share, or joint programmes which barriers between nations are brought down by means of freer travel, cultural exchanges and mutually beneficial youth and educational projects. Reducing hostile perceptions through educational exchanges and curriculum reform may be essential to forestall a re-emergence of cultural and national tensions which could spark renewed hostilities.

57. In surveying the range of efforts for peace, the concept of peace-building as the construction of a new environment should be viewed as the counterpart of preventive diplomacy, which seeks to avoid the breakdown of peaceful conditions. When conflict breaks out, mutually reinforcing efforts at peacemaking and peace-keeping come into play. Once these have achieved their objectives, only sustained, cooperative work to deal with underlying economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems can place an achieved peace on a durable foundation. Preventive diplomacy is to avoid a crisis; post-conflict peace-building is to prevent a recurrence.

58. Increasingly it is evident that peace-building after civil or international strife must address the serious problem of land mines, many tens of millions of which remain scattered in present or former combat zones. De-mining should be emphasized in the terms of reference of peace-keeping operations and is crucially important in the restoration of activity when peace-building is under way: agriculture cannot be revived without de-mining and the restoration of transport may require the laying of hard surface roads to prevent re-mining. In such instances, the link becomes evident between peace-keeping and peace-building. Just as demilitarized zones may serve the cause of preventive diplomacy and preventive deployment to avoid conflict, so may demilitarization assist in keeping the peace or in post-conflict peace-building, as a measure for heightening the sense of security and encouraging the parties to turn their energies to the work of peaceful restoration of their societies.

59. There is a new requirement for technical assistance which the United Nations has an obligation to develop and provide when requested: support for the transformation of deficient national structures and capabilities, and for the strengthening of new democratic institutions. The authority of the United Nations system to act in this field would rest on the consensus that social peace is as important as strategic or political peace. There is an obvious connection between democratic practices—such as the rule of law and transparency in decision-making—and the achievement of true peace and security in any new and stable political order. These elements of good governance need to be promoted at all levels of international and national political communities.

VII. COOPERATION WITH REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS AND ORGANIZATIONS

60. The Covenant of the League of Nations, in its Article 21, noted the validity of regional understandings for securing the maintenance of peace. The Charter devotes Chapter VIII to regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action and consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The cold war impaired the proper use of Chapter VIII and indeed, in that era, regional arrangements worked on occasion against resolving disputes in the manner foreseen in the Charter.

61. The Charter deliberately provides no precise definition of regional arrangements and agencies, thus allowing useful flexibility of undertakings by a group of States to deal with a matter appropriate for regional action which also could contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security. Such associations or entities could include treaty-based organizations, whether created before or after the founding of the United Nations, regional organizations for mutual security and defense, organizations for general regional development or for cooperation on a particular economic topic or function, and groups created to deal with a specific political, economic or social issue of current concern.

62. In this regard, the United Nations has recently encouraged a rich variety of complementary efforts. Just as no two regions or situations are the same, so the design of cooperative work and its division of labour must adapt to the realities of each case with flexibility and creativity. In Africa, three different regional groups—the Organization of African Unity, the League of Arab States and the Organization of the Islamic Conference—joined efforts with the United Nations regarding Somalia. In the Asian context, the Association of the South-East Asian Nations and individual States from several regions were brought together with the parties to the Cambodian conflict at an international conference in Paris, to work with the United Nations. For El Salvador, a unique arrangement—"The Friends of the Secretary-General"—contributed to agreements reached through the mediation of the Secretary-General. The end of the war in Nicaragua involved a highly complex effort which was initiated by leaders of the region and conducted by individual States, groups of States and the Organization of American States. Efforts undertaken by the European Community and its member States, with the support of States participating in the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, have been of central importance in dealing with the crisis in the Balkans and neighboring areas.

63. In the past, regional arrangements often were created because of the absence of a universal system for collective security; thus their activities could on occasion work at cross-purposes with the sense of solidarity required for the effectiveness of the world Organization. But in this new era of opportunity, regional arrangements or agencies can render great service if their activities are undertaken in a manner consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the Charter, and if their relationship with the United Nations, and particularly the Security Council, is governed by Chapter VIII.

64. It is not the purpose of the present report to set forth any formal pattern of relationship between regional organization and the United Nations, or to call for any specific division of labour. What is clear, however, is that regional arrangements or agencies in many cases possess a potential that should be utilized in serving the functions covered in this report: preventive diplomacy, peace-keeping, peacemaking and post-conflict peace-building. Under the Charter, the Security Council has and will continue to have primary responsibility for maintaining international peace and security, but regional action as a matter of decentralization, delegation and cooperation with United Nations efforts could not only lighten the burden of the Council but also contribute to a deeper sense of participation, consensus and democratization in international affairs.

65. Regional arrangements and agencies have not in recent decades been considered in this light, even when originally designed in part for a role in maintaining or restoring peace within their regions of the world. Today a new sense exists that they have contributions to make. Consultations between the United Nations and regional arrangements or agencies could do much to build international consensus on the nature of a problem and the measures required to address it. Regional organizations participating in complementary efforts with the United Nations in joint undertakings would encourage States outside the region to act supportively. And should the Security Council choose specifically to authorize a regional arrangement or organization to take the lead in addressing a crisis within its region, it could serve to lend the weight of the United Nations to the validity of the regional effort. Carried forward in the spirit of the Charter, and as envisioned in Chapter VIII, the approach outlined here could strengthen a general sense that democratization is being encouraged at all levels in the task of maintaining international peace and security, it being essential to continue to recognize that the primary responsibility will continue to reside in the Security Council.

VIII. SAFETY OF PERSONNEL

66. When United Nations personnel are deployed in conditions of strife, whether for preventive diplomacy, peacemaking, peace-keeping, peace-building or humanitarian purposes, the need arises to ensure their safety. There has been an unconscionable increase in the number of fatalities. Following the conclusion of a cease-fire and in order to prevent further outbreaks of violence, United Nations guards were called upon to assist in volatile conditions in Iraq. Their presence afforded a measure of security to United Nations personnel and supplies and, in addition, introduced an element of reassurance and stability that helped to prevent renewed conflict. Depending upon the nature of the situation, different configurations and compositions of security deployments will need to be considered. As the variety and scale of threat widens, innovative measures will be required to deal with the dangers facing United Nations personnel.

67. Experience has demonstrated that the presence of a United Nations operation has not always been sufficient to deter hostile action. Duty in areas of danger can never be risk-free; United Nations personnel must expect to go in harm's way at times. The courage, commitment and idealism shown by United Nations personnel should be respected by the entire international community. These men and women deserve to be properly recognized and rewarded for the perilous tasks they undertake. Their interests and those of their families must be given due regard and protected.

68. Given the pressing need to afford adequate protection to United Nations personnel engaged in life-endangering circumstances, I recommend that the Security Council, unless it elects immediately to withdraw the United Nations presence in order to preserve the credibility of the Organization, gravely consider what action should be taken towards those who put United Nations personnel in danger. Before deployment takes place, the Council should keep open the option of considering in advance collective measures, possibly including those under Chapter VII when a threat to international peace and security is also involved, to come into effect should the purpose of the United Nations operation systematically be frustrated and hostilities occur.

IX. FINANCING

69. A chasm has developed between the tasks entrusted to this Organization and the financial means provided to it. The truth of the matter is that our vision cannot really extend to the prospect opening before us as long as our financing remains myopic. There are two main areas of concern: the ability of the Organization to function over the longer term; and immediate requirements to respond to a crisis.

70. To remedy the financial situation of the United Nations in all its aspects, my distinguished predecessor repeatedly drew the attention of Member States to the increasingly impossible situation that has arisen and, during the forty-sixth session of the General Assembly, made a number of proposals. Those proposals which remain before the Assembly, and with which I am in broad agreement, are the following:

Proposal one. This suggested the adoption of a set of measures to deal with the cash flow problems caused by the exceptionally high level of unpaid contributions as well as with the problem of inadequate working capital reserves:

(a) Charging interest on the amounts of assessed contributions that are not paid on time;

(b) Suspending certain financial regulations of the United Nations to permit the retention of budgetary surpluses;

(c) Increasing the Working Capital Fund to a level of $250 million and endorsing the principle that the level of the Fund should be approximately 25 per cent of the annual assessment under the regular budget;

(d) Establishment of a temporary Peacekeeping Reserve Fund, at a level of $50 million, to meet initial expenses of peace-keeping operations pending receipt of assessed contributions;

(e) Authorization to the Secretary-General to borrow commercially, should other sources of cash be inadequate.

Proposal two. This suggested the creation of a Humanitarian Revolving Fund in the order of $50 million, to be used in emergency humanitarian situations. The proposal has since been implemented.

Proposal three. This suggested the establishment of a United Nations Peace Endowment Fund, with an initial target of $1 billion. The Fund would be created by a combination of assessed and voluntary contributions, with the latter being sought from Governments, the private sector as well as individuals. Once the Fund reached its target level, the proceeds from the investment of its principal would be used to finance the initial costs of authorized peace-keeping operations, other conflict resolution measures and relative activities.

71. In addition to these proposals, others have been added in recent months in the course of public discussion. These ideas include: a levy on arms sales that could be related to maintaining an Arms Register by the United Nations; a levy on international air travel, which is dependent on the maintenance of peace; authorization for the United Nations to borrow from the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund for peace and development are interdependent; general tax exemption for contributions made to the United Nations by foundations, businesses and individuals; and changes in the formula for calculating the scale of assessments for peace-keeping operations.

72. As such ideas are debated, a stark fact remains: the financial foundations of the Organization daily grow weaker, debilitating its political will and practical capacity to undertake new and essential activities. This state of affairs must not continue. Whatever decisions are taken on financing the Organization, there is one inescapable necessity: Member States must pay their assessed contributions in full and on time. Failure to do so puts them in breach of their obligations under the Charter.

73. In these circumstances and on the assumption that Member States will be ready to finance operations for peace in a manner commensurate with their present, and welcome, readiness to establish them, I recommend the following:

(a) Immediate establishment of a revolving peace-keeping reserve fund of $50 million;

(b) Agreement that one third of the estimated cost of each new peace-keeping operation be appropriated by the General Assembly as soon as the Security Council decides to establish the operation; this would give the Secretary-General the necessary commitment authority and assure an adequate cash flow; the balance of the costs would be appropriated after the General Assembly approved the operation's budget;

(c) Acknowledgement by Member States that, under exceptional circumstances, political and operational considerations may make it necessary for the Secretary-General to employ his authority to place contracts without competitive bidding.

74. Member States wish the Organization to be managed with the utmost efficiency and care. I am in full accord. I have taken important steps to streamline the Secretariat in order to avoid duplication and overlap while increasing its productivity. Additional changes and improvements will take place. As regards the United Nations system more widely, I continue to review the situation in consultation with my colleagues in the Administrative Committee on Coordination. The question of assuring financial security to the Organization over the long term is of such importance and complexity that public awareness and support must be heightened. I have therefore asked a select group of qualified persons of high international repute to examine this entire subject and to report to me. I intend to present their advice, together with my comments, for the consideration of the General Assembly, in full recognition of the special responsibility that the Assembly has, under the Charter, for financial and budgetary matters.

X. AN AGENDA FOR PEACE

75. The nations and peoples of the United Nations are fortunate in a way that those of the League of Nations were not. We have been given a second chance to create the world of our Charter that they were denied. With the cold war ended we have drawn back from the brink of a confrontation that threatened the world and, too often, paralysed our Organization.

76. Even as we celebrate our restored possibilities, there is a need to ensure that the lessons of the past four decades are learned and that the errors, or variations of them, are not repeated. For there may not be a third opportunity for our planet which, now for different reasons, remains endangered.

77. The tasks ahead must engage the energy and attention of all components of the United Nations system—the General Assembly and other principal organs, the agencies and programmes. Each has, in a balanced scheme of things, a role and a responsibility.

78. Never again must the Security Council lose the collegiality that is essential to its proper functioning, an attribute that it has gained after such trial. A genuine sense of consensus deriving from shared interests must govern its work, not the threat of the veto or the power of any group of nations. And it follows that agreement among the permanent members must have the deeper support of the other members of the Council, and the membership more widely, if the Council's decisions are to be effective and endure.

79. The Summit Meeting of the Security Council of 31 January 1992 provided a unique forum for exchanging views and strengthening cooperation. I recommend that the Heads of State and Government and the members of the Council meet in alternate years, just before the general debate commences in the General Assembly. Such sessions would permit exchanges on the challenges and dangers of the moment and stimulate ideas on how the United Nations may best serve to steer change into peaceful courses. I propose in addition that the Security Council continue to meet at the Foreign Minister level, as it has effectively done in recent years, whenever the situation warrants such meetings.

80. Power brings special responsibilities, and temptations. The powerful must resist the dual but opposite calls of unilateralism and isolationism if the United Nations is to succeed. For just as unilateralism at the global or regional level can shake the confidence of others, so can isolationism, whether it results from political choice or constitutional circumstance, enfeeble the global undertaking. Peace at home and the urgency of rebuilding and strengthening our individual societies necessitates peace abroad and cooperation among nations. The endeavors of the United Nations will require the fullest engagement of all of its Members, large and small, if the present renewed opportunity is to be seized.

81. Democracy within nations requires respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, as set forth in the Charter. It requires as well a deeper understanding and respect for the rights of minorities and respect for the needs of the more vulnerable groups of society, especially women and children. This is not only a political matter. The social stability needed for productive growth is nurtured by conditions in which people can readily express their will. For this, strong domestic institutions of participation are essential. Promoting such institutions means promoting the empowerment of the unorganized, the poor, the marginalized. To this end, the focus of the United Nations should be on the "field", the locations where economic, social and political decisions take effect. In furtherance of this I am taking steps to rationalize and in certain cases integrate the various programmes and agencies of the United Nations within specific countries. The senior United Nations official in each country should be prepared to serve, when needed, and with the consent of the host authorities, as my Representative on matters of particular concern.

82. Democracy within the family of nations means the application of its principles within the World Organization itself. This requires the fullest consultation, participation and engagement of all States, large and small, in the work of the Organization. All organs of the United Nations must be accorded, and play, their full and proper role so that the trust of all nations and peoples will be retained and deserved. The principles of the Charter must be applied consistently, not selectively, for if the perception should be of the latter, trust will wane and with it the moral authority which is the greatest and most unique quality of that instrument. Democracy at all levels is essential to attain peace for a new era of prosperity and justice.

83. Trust also requires a sense of confidence that the World Organization will react swiftly, surely and impartially and that it will not be debilitated by political opportunism or by administrative or financial inadequacy. This presupposes a strong, efficient and independent international civil service whose integrity is beyond question and an assured financial basis that lifts the Organization, once and for all, out of its present mendicancy.

84. Just at it is vital that each of the organs of the United Nations employ its capabilities in the balanced and harmonious fashion envisioned in the Charter, peace in the largest sense cannot be accomplished by the United Nations system or by Governments alone. Non-governmental organizations, academic institutions, parliamentarians, business and professional communities, the media and the public at large must all be involved. This will strengthen the world Organization's ability to reflect the concerns and interests of its widest constituency, and those who become more involved can carry the word of United Nations initiatives and build a deeper understanding of its work.

85. Reform is a continuing process, and improvement can have no limit. Yet there is an exception, which I wish to see fulfilled, that the present phase in the renewal of this Organization should be complete by 1995, its fiftieth anniversary. The pace set must therefore be increased if the United Nations is to keep ahead of the acceleration of history that characterizes this age. We must be guided not by precedents alone, however wise these may be, but by the needs of the future and by the shape and content that we wish to give it.

86. I am committed to broad dialogue between the Member States and the Secretary-General. And I am committed to fostering a full and open interplay between all institutions and elements of the Organization so that the Charter's objectives may not only be better served, but that this Organization may emerge as greater than the sum of its parts. The United Nations was created with a great and courageous vision. Now is the time, for its nations and peoples, and the men and women who serve it, to seize the moment for the sake of the future.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senators GORTON, JEFFORDS, and WOFFORD be recognized to address the Senate, and that at the conclusion of their remarks the Senate then stand in recess as ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Let me again reiterate my gratitude to the distinguished Senator from Washington.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington [Mr. GORTON] is recognized.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO BALANCE THE BUDGET

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, during the course of the business tomorrow and on Wednesday there will be as many as four recorded votes cast by the Senate in relation to the debate over an amendment to the Constitution of the United States mandating a balanced budget under certain circumstances.

That set of votes will not include a direct vote on the constitutional amendment unless one of the two cloture motions receives the requisite 60 votes, either tomorrow or on the next day.

Since this will be the climax and perhaps the termination of the debate over this vitally important issue, it seemed appropriate to this Senate at least at least to speak once again in favor of that amendment to the Constitution, and to do so tonight by examining the arguments which have been so forcefully stated at such length by the distinguished President pro tempore of this body, and by the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The debate has been long and has been detailed, but I believe that as we approach its climax, Mr. President, we can summarize the objections to proposing such an amendment to the Constitution to the Senate under six hearings.

I should like briefly to go through each of those six headings, and make a few remarks on each of them, since it is the view of this Senator, who, as the President may remember, previously voted against such a constitutional amendment, believes that none of the arguments today are valid and that the situation which we are faced in this country demands that we propose such a constitutional amendment to the States.

The first set of arguments really could perhaps be titled "It Is the President's Fault, Not Ours." The Senators who have argued against this constitutional amendment have pointed out I suppose correctly that no President for well over a decade has so much as proposed a balanced budget in any given year, that under most circumstances Congress votes slightly less money in discretionary programs than the President has asked for, albeit for rather profoundly different sets of priorities and, therefore, this is not a matter with which we should be concerned, or certainly is not a matter about which we should propose a constitutional amendment.

In fact, Mr. President, if that criticism is correct, if, in fact, Presidents of the United States have been as cavalier as has been the Congress about the necessity to balance the budget, it not only does not undercut the necessity for such an amendment to the Constitution, but it illustrates and reinforces it.

It is obvious that the requirement in the Constitution that we balance our budget under all except extraordinary circumstances will be as binding on the President as it is on Members of Congress. It is the failure of the Government of the United States as a whole without allocating responsibility that has brought us to the point where we need this discipline.

One need not agree entirely with the argument of the opponents that it is all the President's fault to illustrate or to stand for the proposition that whosoever fault it is, it is time for a dramatic and considerable change.

Moreover, Mr. President, while it may be true in the most narrow sense that Presidents recently have not directly proposed a balanced budget, in the budget itself, the current President, President Bush, did, in fact, in the budget which is before us right now point out a way, a direction and a policy recommendation which would, in fact, balance the budget no later than the end of this decade.

It was a proposal which would have controlled the growth in the entitlement spending, would have allowed that spending to grow by the rate of inflation, plus the growth in caseload, plus between 1 and 2 percent over and above that figure.

That proposal was brought up on the floor of the U.S. Senate in April. It was debated very seriously for the better part of a day. That proposal in its single test vote got 26 favorable votes and 66 negative votes, illustrating once again that it really does not matter whether the President of the United States proposes a balanced budget or even a method by which we will reach a balanced budget. This Congress without some outside discipline simply is not going to reach that goal.

The second argument which goes through the long weeks of debate on this issue which is placed against a balanced budget constitutional amendment is that the change in the Constitution cannot create the will or the consensus to balance the budget in and of itself.

Again, Mr. President, that argument, narrowly taken, is probably true. A constitutional amendment, a change, the addition of a page to the Constitution of the United States, will not automatically create that consensus. It will, however, do something more significant. It will require that consensus.

We will be required to take an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. We will find it much more difficult, even from the point of view of votes in this Chamber, to support an unbalanced budget, and the moral suasion of the people's adopting such a constitutional amendment will, in my view, require a consensus to take place, which seems, to this Senator at least, to be highly unlikely in any other event.

The third argument which I heard as a threat, through the remarks of almost all of those who oppose this proposal to amend the Constitution, is that it will relieve the pressure which is presently imposing itself on Congress because by the very nature of the ratification process together with the mechanism included in the proposal which is before us at the present time, it would be 1997 or 1998 before a balanced budget would be required; and in the meantime, presumably, the lambs in the Congress would frolic, Presidents would ignore the requirements, and nothing would be done.

There is an implication in that argument, Mr. President, that not only of the responsibility on Members of the Congress, there is an implication that somehow or other there will be a sufficient degree of pressure on Members of Congress, without such a constitutional amendment, to cause them to do something before 1997 or 1998. To see the fallacy of that argument, one need only look at the statutory attempts to cause a balanced budget to take place, which have been considered or passed by this Congress during the course of the last decade or so. The most famous was Gramm-Rudman-Hollings.

The second effort was the 1990 budget agreement. The third was the approach to which I have already referred, which got only 28 votes earlier this year. Each of them, however, had one feature in common. Each of them recognized the truth that you do not go from a $200 billion deficit or a $400 billion deficit to a balance in a single year. Each came with the promise that it would take a 3- or 4- or 5-year period to reach a balanced budget. Each of those statutory approaches has failed and has failed utterly.

Gramm-Rudman did arrest the increase of budget deficits, did, in fact, cause budget deficits to decrease, at least modestly, during the period of time it was in effect. But when it really began to pinch in 1990, it was almost immediately abandoned by the Congress, and the 1990 budget summit agreement was substituted for it, also with the promise that within 4 or 5 years, it would bring a balanced budget. It did not even have the modest initial success that Gramm-Rudman did, and it has led us directly to the position in which we find ourselves today with a budget deficit of almost $400 billion staring us in the face.

Finally, of course, the effort early this year to put in place even modest controls on entitlement spending failed to get much more than the vote of a quarter of the Members of this body. So to say that to pass this constitutional amendment would take the pressure off, and that we should continue to keep the pressure on is a contradiction in terms, Mr. President. The pressure had been on for a decade or a decade and a half, and that pressure has had no impact whatsoever. It is time to try something really quite different.

The fourth argument against the constitutional amendment is that present deficits are caused very largely by the skyrocketing increase in the health care costs. Each of the two distinguished Senators who preceded me on the floor this evening have given thoughtful and detailed prescriptions with respect to health care costs. Each of them has made points which I think are important for consideration by every Member of this body. Neither of them—and others including this Senator fall into the same category—had a proposal which was a cure-all, which was comprehensive in nature, which was guaranteed to work by any stretch of the imagination. Each of them also, it seems to me, did reflect the views of a vast majority of the Members of this body, and for that matter, of the House of Representatives, that health care costs are at the center, not only of a crisis with respect to health care, but with respect to the deficit.

It is imperative that the Congress work diligently on as broad a base as possible to meet those requirements. Nevertheless, to say that we should not deal with a constitutional amendment mandating a balanced budget until we have solved the health care crisis puts the carts before the horse, in the view of this Senator.

Once again, passing and submitting this constitutional amendment would not decrease the demand of the country and in this body for comprehensive health care reform. It would put a very clear deadline on its accomplishment, and I think it would hasten the time of the date which the issue would be taken up, and not only taken up but dealth with successfully.

The fifth argument, one that I can deal with in passing relatively quickly, is that this constitutional amendment would inhibit or even prevent Congress from dealing with passing countercyclical spending programs such as dealing with recessions, like the one which we are, one hopes, just emerging from at the present time.

Mr. President, that argument misstates entirely the nature of this constitutional amendment. It is perhaps overadvertising to say that it mandates a balanced budget. It does not do so. It simply requires a 60-percent super majority on the part of both Houses of Congress to unbalance the budget. If the economists of the United States, and Members of this body, believe that additional deficits and countercyclical spending is necessary during the course of a recession, they are easily able to meet that 60 vote requirement. We have demonstrated that in connection with at least a couple or three of the bills which have gone through this Congress in the course of the last year.

The real problem, Mr. President, is that we seem to have been in a countercycle with respect to spending for the last 20 years. In good times and bad, recession and boom, we continue to spend beyond our means.

The real reason, the overwhelming reason for such a constitutional amendment is to allow exactly that kind of sophisticated response to the various economic cycles through which we pass.

That leads me to the last, but I think the most important of the arguments against this proposal, eloquently stated by the President pro tempore and by other opponents to it. It comes down to this proposition: A constitutional amendment mandating a balanced budget would alter the status quo. It would change the dynamics which move both Congress and the national administration at the present time. It would lessen the power of some interest groups and some Members of Congress and some members of the administration. It would increase that of others.

And to that proposition that this constitutional amendment would alter the status quo, I say right on. Those of you who oppose are absolutely correct. The status quo would indeed be altered and it would be altered significantly. And, Mr. President, that is exactly what this country requires. It is business as usual, it is the status quo that leaves us this year with a $350 to $400 billion deficit. It is the status quo that for one reason or another gives overwhelming influence to those interest groups in the United States which call for increased spending, whether discretionary or mandatory. It is the status quo which stifles the voice for the general interest for those who feel that we are eating our seed corn.

One statistic I saw recently was a count of witnesses before committees of the Congress with something like 17 to 19 witnesses asking for new spending programs for every witness who advised caution and spoke for the general interest in restraining the growth of spending.

The status quo needs to be changed again, Mr. President. There needs to be a greater balance in favor of the general interest. When one group, by a change in spending programs, can gain $10 at the expense of 10 cents to every Member of the general public, those who will gain the $10 will be before the Congress, they will form political action committees, they will involve themselves in the political election process. Those who will lose the 10 cents will not.

It is for exactly that reason that an amendment which requires a 60-percent majority in both the House and the Senate will provide a greater degree of balance and anchor to windward which will cause the fiscal policies of the United States to be better balanced.

So the principal argument against the constitutional amendment, that it alters the power structure, that it changes the dynamics of the way in which we set public policy, that it makes it more difficult to spend, is perhaps the greatest argument in favor of that constitutional amendment.

It is possible—it may be unlikely—but it is still possible, Mr. President, that during the course of the debate tomorrow we will reject the Byrd amendment, which of course is designed to and will kill the proposed constitutional amendment to mandate a balanced budget and that we will find the 60 votes for cloture so that we can move on to a vote here in the Senate, which I suspect will be replicate in the House, under its rules it must come up again and gives the people of the United States to make the profound and dramatic change which it seems to me quite obvious they wish to make.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. WOFFORD] is recognized.

A REPORT FROM PENNSYLVANIA

Mr. WOFFORD. Mr. President, the Senator from Vermont has kindly offered to let me have 3 or 4 minutes before I have the privilege of replacing you and hearing his remarks here to just report at the end of the colloquy on the balanced budget and the probable health care, a report from Pennsylvania.

I just returned on an airplane with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Dr. Sullivan, and I refrained, I restrained myself from taking issue from the study that the Senator from South Dakota talked about or the other matters in which he has been hard put to defend the administration's programs in health care, because he looked tired. And I think one of the reasons he was tired is that it has been very hard to defend the inadequate proposals from this administration on either the matter of controlling costs or extending access to everyone.

This morning I was with the borough leaders, the local government officials from all over Pennsylvania, and if there was one thing that they responded to and made clear to me that they have at the top of their agenda is controlling health care costs. They feel it every day. They want in some way for us to take action.

I cannot say how they would vote on a constitutional amendment to balance the budget. But I can say that there would be no effective action to deal with the problem of the deficit that we could take that would show that we want action and not promises than to deal comprehensively with the question of health care reform and health care costs.

This afternoon I spent 2 hours plus with a dozen business, labor, educational, and county leaders in Bainbridge, PA, on the question of competitiveness and what we can do to help our small business and our manufacturers in this country become competitive and world class in the world market. And again, every one of them at that table today had their own vivid stories as to what the costs of health care are doing to their companies, their unions, the labor disputes. The United Steelworker representative there said most of their disputes in recent times have turned on the question of health care costs.

So I come back here with a sense that we must find a way to break the gridlock in Government. We must show that we can move from the sense of this basic health care being a fundamental right for every American, which is I think now more and more a self-evident truth, to the next stage of turning that into a reality. And I asked those who were pressing for us to deal with the deficit to show that we mean business and deal this session in this body across the lines of party with the problem of comprehensive health care reform, the lack of which, the rising costs that come from a lack of which is the fastest growing part of our deficit. That I think is the test for action, and I hope we will pass that test.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS] is recognized.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR—S. 2532

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, first I ask unanimous consent that floor privileges be extended to Mary E. Daley during the duration of the Senate consideration of S. 2532, the Freedom of Support Act. She is a Department of State fellow assigned to my staff this year and she is doing an incredibly fine job.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WOFFORD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

FREEDOM FOR RUSSIA AND EMERGING EURASIAN DEMOCRACIES AND OPEN MARKETS SUPPORT ACT OF 1992

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, we have before us today an opportunity not one of us expected to experience in our lifetime. Where Stalinist terror once raged, where the gulag symbolized entire nations held in bondage, and where expressing one's views could be fatal, there have now emerged 15 states, free from communism. These 15 countries—rich in resources and at last free—can become our partners in peace and trade, a vast new market for the goods and services American workers produce. Coming from the State of Vermont, the adopted home of Alexander Solzhenitsyn, I am acutely aware of the sea of change that has occurred. We must seize this opportunity and make the experience of being the world leader a positive thing back home.

Our greatest domestic problem is that the U.S. standard of living is stagnant. With real wages remaining flat for two decades, American parents fear that their children may not be able to achieve the same standard of living. If we are going to pass the American dream on to our children, we are going to have to boost productivity. Long-term growth and labor productivity slowed in the early 1970's from more than 2.5 percent per year since World War II to only 0.7 per year from 1973–79.

Since 1979, it has been stuck at 1 percent. To boost productivity, we are going to have to maintain our edge in technology. We are going to have to make sure that American workers have access to the best education and health care in the world. And we are going to have to create new markets for American goods and services.

There is no better new market for us than the countries of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. These countries are rich in natural resources; they are the new frontier. When they get on their feet, they could be the largest new consumer market we have ever had. If the United States is going to tap that market, it is going to have to get plugged in now.

Right now, these countries are begging for U.S. assistance to help them create democracy and free market economies. If we help them now, if we answer their request for technical assistance in agriculture, business, health care, and the environment, we will establish connections that will pay off later, boosting U.S. industrial manufacturing and raising the standard of living for American families. But if we ignore the former Soviet Union, we will lose this vast market to other nations. Now is the time to become engaged, to make contacts and to get these countries hooked on American goods and services. Foreign aid in the case of the former Soviet Union is not altruism. It is self-interest.

After World War II, we found the wisdom and heart to help rebuild Western Europe. These countries are now our strongest allies and partners in trade. Had we left them unattended as some wanted, Europe's poverty, despair, and bitterness could have led again to war, just as Versailles was prelude to Vichy. Just so, we must not turn inward now. Our ability to address domestic problems, from health care and education to infrastructure and job creation, depends on a peaceful world and on turning Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union into a market for our goods.

I believe the American people are looking for courageous leadership from us. With vigor, let us meet that challenge on both the domestic and international fronts.

My concern about the former Soviet Union and the impact the situation there will have on Americans increased during my trip there in April. With Senator DECONCINI, cochairman of the Helsinski Commission, I traveled to 6 of the 15 former Soviet Republics. Clearly, all is not well in these Republics. During consideration of this bill in the Foreign Relations Committee, I did my best to ensure a commitment to technical assistance. I believe strongly that the most effective technical assistance programs are those that draw from the talents of private American citizens, from farmers to health care workers, environmental experts and business people.

In that spirit, I amended the bill in the Foreign Relations Committee. The bill now stresses the importance of drawing on the talents of the U.S. business community. Such programs give the American business community the chance to see firsthand the potential benefits and pitfalls of doing business in the former Soviet Union. My amendment is one concrete example of how helping the former Soviet Union can help the United States economy.

There is another aspect to business investment that I want to raise today. During my trip to Central Asia, I was disturbed by the potential for those countries to veer down the path of Central American nations, rather than adopt the kind of free market system we enjoy. The stability of Central Asia, and therefore of United States business in the region, depends on the ability of these new nations to create societies of broad opportunity, not narrow exploitation. This possibility is threatened as the old Communist leaders rush to grab the most profitable sectors of the economies for themselves. While we cannot control political evolution, we can affect it. Section 7 of this bill discusses the importance of developing a legal framework that will promote democracy and the rule of law, protect private ownership and worker safety and rights, and establish regulations to protect the environment and guide natural resource utilization.

Technical assistance of this type is absolutely essential. Otherwise, we may become accomplices in the exploitation of the environment and people. Moreover, American workers are concerned about losing their jobs to countries that cut their costs of production by underpaying their employees. Such distortions of the labor market hurt American workers. In contrast, the growth of healthy democracies in the former Soviet Union, with healthy economies in which workers earn wages comparable to ours, will create markets for our goods and safeguard American jobs.

Just as we impress upon the new states the importance of laws protecting private property, the environment and workers, we should also ensure that Western investment in the area does not inadvertently become the dupe of those former Communists who want to grab all the resources for themselves, with no regard for equity, political stability, or the environment.

I am reminded of a scene from Solzhenitsyn's classic novel of life in a Soviet prison camp, "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich." Solzhenitsyn describes the effort a squad leader put into work reports. As Solzhenitsyn writes, the squad leader "had to prove that work which hadn't been done had been done." This ensured that the camp got "thousands of extra rubbles * * * and so could give higher bonuses to its guard-lieutenants, such as to Volkovoi for using his whip." And the prisoners? All they got, according to Solzhenitsyn, was an "extra six ounces of bread. * * *"

This scene is a suitable metaphor for what can happen as former Communist bosses grab hold of assets. We must ensure that Western investors do not inadvertently become party to such enterprises. I believe it would be helpful to devise a list of principles to guide businesses as they invest in the new states. These principles would be drawn up in concert with American business, and would be adopted by all nations doing business in the former Soviet Union. The time has come to establish guidelines for doing business in the former Soviet Union, to establish guidelines to ensure the creation of a strong democracy, a healthy economy, to a large stable affluent middle class to purchase our commodities.

Let me turn now to agricultural issues. When Ambassador Armitage testified this spring, he discussed how the international community is sharing responsibility for aiding the former Soviet Union and pointed out that agriculture is an area where the United States can be very effective. We have a competitive advantage here which we should press. This comes as no surprise to a Senator from a rural State: I know that U.S. agriculture is the best in the world. The needs of the new states in this area are immense and we have got to find ways to match our skills and products with their needs. Our suppliers and our agribusiness can reap great benefit to supplying their developing agribusiness.

With authorities the U.S. Department of Agriculture already has, and with the technical assistance and additional authorities provided in this bill, the United States can mobilize the agricultural sector of the economies in these new states. We must do so. Nothing destabilizes a fragile government more than dashed hopes and empty stomachs. By improving their agricultural sector, we bolster their drive to freedom and democracy and hence our own security. At the same time, as I will say over and over again, helping them helps us economically. American farmers need new markets for their products. We have the dairy products, grains, meats, tractors, and know-how they need. Even so, we may lose this opportunity to the EC and others if USDA does not use the authorities it already has to make our products competitive.

Let me give you one example. The Prime Minister of Kazakhstan has written to the Senate Agriculture Committee for help in buying United States heifers. Our heifers are three times more productive than those in the former Soviet Union, and Kazakhstan is willing to pay more per head for them. But the sale has not gone through because USDA refuses to put its heifer export program in gear. As USDA dithers, other countries are offering heifers at prices Kazakhstan may not be able to turn down. I call on USDA to use the authority it already has through the Export Enhancement Program to run a heifer export program with the newly independent states. The sense of Congress is clear on this point. Section 7 of this bill stresses that the export of farm animals should be a central part of our assistance to the former Soviet Union. The point is underscored again in the technical amendments to this bill where the current definition of agricultural commodities is expanded to include livestock. Let us get on the stick. Let us not lose a sale, and potentially an entire market for U.S. farm animals, by being late off the block. A heifer export program is a prime way to make foreign aid advantageous to American people.

Mr. President, let me turn now to another way this bill can help America's farmers. In November of 1991, I introduced the Food for Enterprise Act, an innovative way to get two bangs for every buck of food aid we provide the new states. This program was inspired by the testimony of Jack Matlock, former United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union. Under the Food for Enterprise Act, the new states would be required to establish a revolving loan fund in exchange for food from the Commodity Credit Corporation [CCC] stocks of dairy and other products. Enterpreneurs could borrow from the fund, the preference given to those in food distribution or production. When the term of the CCC loan expires, the new states would be required to repay the United States, either in real dollars or in an equivalent amount of a marketable commodity such as oil or gold. Food for Enterprise thus feeds the people and helps establish private agriculture, without any dollars leaving the United States. At the same time, American farmers get a break.

I am pleased to see that the objectives of Food for Enterprise can be achieved through this bill. One of the technical amendments to this bill allows the Commodity Credit Corporation to monetize the sale of commodities for development purposes. I urge USDA to use this authority immediately. It simply makes sense. Why give away what we can loan, and why provide just food when we can use this food as capital for development?

This is a time for creativity, for boldness, for courage, and for celebration. Freedom has triumphed over tyranny. Yet, the confidence the Nation should have after such a victory seems strangely tempered by uncertainty. With this bill today, we have the opportunity to be the wise men of our generation. Like George Kennan, Dean Atcheson, Charles Bohlen, and the other wise men of the postwar period, we must begin to stir hope here at home by creating concrete plans of action. At this turning point in history, we must let America and the world know where we stand, what we believe in and where we are going. We must declare what we know to be true: that the health of these great United States is linked inextricably to the state of the world. The choice is not whether to focus on domestic issues or international ones; not whether to rebuild Los Angeles or provide technical assistance to the newly independent states of Europe. The question is only how to aid the newly independent states of our former adversary in a way that directly benefits the United States: politically, militarily, and economically. The decision today is whether we choose to be leaders.

Mr. President, I thank you for your patience and I yield the floor.

ORDERS FOR TOMORROW

Mr. DASCHLE. I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in recess until 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, June 30; that following the prayer, the Journal of proceedings be deemed approved to date; that the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day; that there then be a period for morning business, not to extend beyond 12:30 p.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each; that immediately following the Chair's announcement Senator BIDEN be recognized to speak for 1½ hours, with Senators ADAMS, HEFLIN, and GORTON recognized for up to 10 minutes each; Senator WARNER or his designee for up to 30 minutes; and Senator LEAHY for up to 15 minutes; that on Tuesday, the Senate stand in recess from 12:30 to 2:15 p.m., in order to accommodate the respective party conferences.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate stands in recess until 9:30 a.m. tomorrow.

Whereupon, the Senate, at 7:20 p.m., recessed until Tuesday, June 30, 1992 at 9:30 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive Nominations received by the Secretary of the Senate after the recess of the Senate on June 26, 1992, under authority of the order of the Senate of January 3, 1991:

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

HUGO POMREHN, OF CALIFORNIA, TO BE UNDER SECRETARY OF ENERGY, VICE JOHN CHATFIELD TUCK, RESIGNED.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

JOHN A. MENDEZ, OF CALIFORNIA, TO BE U.S. ATTORNEY FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA FOR THE TERM OF 4 YEARS VICE JOSEPH P. RUSSONIELLO, RESIGNED.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Monday, June 29, 1992

The House met at 12 noon.

The Reverend Dr. Ronald F. Christian, office of the bishop, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Washington, DC, offered the following prayer:

Our Father and our God:

Lord of all nations, we call upon Your name, O God, and ask—

That You guide Your people in paths of peace;

That You direct Your people in ways of truth; and

That You lead us all in the ways of justice.

Lord of all goodness, we use Your name, O God, to offer our thanksgiving—

For home and country;

For health and hope, and

For family and friends.

Lord of all compassion, we remember, O God, all those it would be so easy to forget: the tired of heart and the sick of mind, the lost, the old, the weak, and the poor.

May we, each one, this day, dedicate ourselves again to the task of doing just and right deeds, and walking humbly before You. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI] please come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. MAZZOLI led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H.J. Res. 459. Joint resolution designating the week beginning July 26, 1992, as "Lyme Disease Awareness Week."

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill and joint resolutions of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 2901. An act to direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to extend the waiver granted to the Tennessee Primary Care Network of the enrollment mix requirement under the medicaid program;

S.J. Res. 248. Joint resolution designating August 7, 1992, as "Battle of Guadalcanal Remembrance Day";

S.J. Res. 252. Joint resolution designating the week of April 18 through 24, 1993, as "National Credit Education Week";

S.J. Res. 287. Joint resolution to designate the week of October 4, 1992, through October 10, 1992, as "Mental Illness Awareness Week";

S.J. Res. 288. Joint resolution designating the week beginning July 26, 1992, as "Lyme Disease Awareness Week";

S.J. Res. 294. Joint resolution to designate the week of October 18, 1992, through October 24, 1992, as "National Radon Action Week";

S.J. Res. 295. Joint resolution designating September 10, 1992, as "National D.A.R.E. Day";

S.J. Res. 301. Joint resolution designating July 2, 1992, as "National Literacy Day";

S.J. Res. 303. Joint resolution to designate October 1992 as "National Breast Cancer Awareness Month";

S.J. Res. 304. Joint resolution designating January 3, 1993, through January 9, 1993, as "National Law Enforcement Training Week";

S.J. Res. 305. Joint resolution to designate October 1992 as "Polish American Heritage Month";

S.J. Res. 307. Joint resolution designating the month of July 1992 as "National Muscular Dystrophy Awareness Month";

S.J. Res. 309. Joint resolution designating the week beginning November 8, 1992, as "National Women Veterans Recognition Week";

S.J. Res. 318. Joint resolution designating November 13, 1992, as "Vietnam Veterans Memorial 10th Anniversary Day";

S.J. Res. 319. Joint resolution to designate the second Sunday in October of 1992 as "National Children's Day"; and

S.J. Res. 324. Joint resolution to commend the NASA Langley Research Center on the celebration of its 75th anniversary on July 17, 1992.

THE FREEDOM OF CHOICE ACT

(Mrs. BOXER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Speaker, in its decision on the Pennsylvania case, the Supreme Court has issued an open invitation to every politician in this country, an invitation to restrict a woman's right to choose.

Never before in our Nation has the Supreme Court granted a right and then taken away that right, but they have done so in this case. And it is a very sad day for those who believe that the people in our country should be free to make personal and private decisions.

The lines are drawn, and they are clear. Congress must act to restore the right to choose, and we will do that. We will pass the Freedom of Choice Act and, of course, I believe the President will veto that act.

Then the American voters must decide this issue in November. In order to ensure that a woman has the right to choose, we must elect a pro-choice President or a two-thirds pro-choice House and Senate. Freedom lies at the ballot box. America must awaken and vote for their freedom this November.

GRAZING FEES

(Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, I rise to talk about an issue that comes up each year. We have an annual dance on grazing fees in the West. This week we will be talking about the Interior appropriations, and that will be one of the areas for debate.

There are some in this House who have made this a career, to seek to raise the grazing fees in the West. Basically a regional issue, I am sorry to say, in which most folks in this House do not have any particular interest. So it is an easy throwaway vote.

We do not want an Appalachian Commission in our region in the 17 western public-land States. We do not want $55 billion for cities. We would like, however, to be able to manage the lands that we have, one-half of which belong to the Federal Government in my State, in a way which gives optimum development to natural resources. We would like to have hunting. There is better hunting there than there was before ranchers came because they provide water, they provide winter feed.

We would like to have recreation. We would like to have jobs, and an economy.

So, Mr. Speaker, I hope that when we deal with this issue again, we will say, let us use those resources to an optimum of multiple use and not get ranchers off by raising fees too much for us to be able to operate.

THE REVENUE ACT OF 1992 INCLUDES ENTERPRISE ZONES AND OTHER PROVISIONS IMPORTANT TO URBAN AREAS

(Mr. MAZZOLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, later in the week we will take up the Revenue Act of 1992, which has in it some provisions I would like to briefly address and to urge our colleagues to adopt these matters. One is the Federal Enterprise Zone Act. This would allow cities like mine, of Louisville, to provide special tax preferences and advantages to businesses which locate in areas of high poverty and high unemployment or which would expand their businesses in those districts.

The bill we will take up will provide some 50 enterprise zones over a 3-year period, half in the cities and half in the rural areas. I hope that that ratio could be revisited because I think it should be more in the favor of the cities, but that is for a later date.

The bill also, Mr. Speaker, extends permanently low-income housing tax credits, mortgage revenue bonds, and what we call the targeted jobs tax credit. I think this is a very salutary bill. I think it is one that all of us can support.

I think it would make a very strong move in the direction that the mayors of the country have talked about, which is to put the cities of America in a setting in which the lives of people who live there can be improved.

SUPPORT URGED FOR THE FREEDOM OF CHOICE ACT

(Mrs. MORELLA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, the Supreme Court today has significantly eroded the fundamental right of a woman to choose. While the Court ruled to uphold Roe versus Wade, it also agreed that the States have the right to intrude in that decision. We now face years of fights in the courts over State efforts to further restrict abortion. Roe may still stand, but it has been substantially weakened today.

Now more than ever, it is clear that Congress needs to approve H.R. 25, the Freedom of Choice Act. This legislation codifies the Roe decision, thereby protecting women's reproductive choice. A number of polls have indicated the overwhelming support of the American people for the preservation of reproductive rights; a majority of Americans recognize that to be prochoice is not to be pro-abortion.

Mr. Speaker, although Roe still stands, the Supreme Court has changed the criteria by which reproductive decisions can be made. It is clear that this right will be further eroded by other States. We in this body must immediately take action to protect this freedom. I urge my colleagues to vote for the Freedom of Choice Act.

LET US INSIST UPON EQUAL RIGHTS FOR MEN AND WOMEN

(Mrs. SCHROEDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, today the Supreme Court has said that adult women in America are incapable of really having a fundamental right, standing free and clear. What did they say? They said that if any women had decided that it might be necessary for her to have an abortion, whether it was for her health or for whatever reason, when she went to a doctor she still could not be trusted. She has to listen to a 30-minute lecture written by the State and given by the doctor, but written by the State, whoever that could be. Then she still cannot make that decision, she must return home and can come back no earlier than 24 hours later, and there are all sorts of other restrictions in there.

If we put those restrictions on any other fundamental right, such as voting or speech, this Court would have dumped them instantly. I find it very, very, very heartbreaking that this Court is saying that my son can have fundamental rights, but my daughter cannot be trusted to really judge them. That is a sad day for me, and I certainly hope we move vigorously tomorrow to push out the freedom of choice bill and say this House and this Senate will insist upon having equal rights for men and women in the Constitution, as has been our heritage for a long time, and overrule the decision today.

INTRODUCTION OF THE HEALTH CARE REFORM ACT

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, our health care delivery system is collapsing. The number of uninsured is mounting, 34 million last year, an estimated 35 to 40 million this year. The families of this country spent an average of $4,296 per family on health care last year and, if current trends continue, will spend more than twice that, $9,397, on health care in the year 2000. Doing nothing is no longer an option: The statistics are getting worse by the day.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today not to bemoan our situation, but to propose a solution. The Republican leader's task force on health care has made some tough choices and submitted for consideration H.R. 5325, the Action Now Health Care Reform Act. We cannot afford to ignore the trends any longer. As a resident of my district says, "People are dying every day because they can't afford to live." I am challenging my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, join more than 90 of us in cosponsoring H.R. 5325, the health care reform bill with the largest number of cosponsors. We are building consensus, and we need your help.

CONGRESS MUST PASS THE FREEDOM OF CHOICE ACT

(Ms. PELOSI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, today when the Supreme Court decision was announced a cheer went up from the antichoice forces standing before the Supreme Court Building. Why? Because the Supreme Court's decision today significantly eroded a woman's right to reproductive choice, and of course is a victory for antichoice forces. By allowing States to limit access and availability, they have effectively, if not specifically, denied women their constitutional right to privacy.

Now Congress must act. Congress must act to pass the Freedom of Choice Act. As chairman of the Platform Committee for the Democratic Party, I am very proud to read to my colleagues the language that we have in our platform about a woman's right to choose:

> Democrats stand behind the right of every woman to choose, consistent with Roe v. Wade, regardless of ability to pay, and support a national law to protect that right.
> It is a fundamental constitutional liberty that individual Americans, not government, can best take responsibility for making the most difficult and intensely personal decisions regarding reproduction. The goal of our nation must be to make abortion less necessary, not more difficult or more dangerous.
> We pledge to support contraceptive research, family planning, comprehensive family life education, and policies that support healthy childbearing and enable parents to care more effectively for their children.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is necessary for us to pass the Freedom of Choice Act and urge my colleagues to do so.

THE SUPREME COURT RULING: A VICTORY FOR MOTHERS AND BABIES

(Mr. SMITH of New Jersey asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, the U.S. Supreme Court today wisely upheld major portions of Pennsylvania's very modest safeguards that are designed to protect mothers and at least some unborn babies from the violence of abortionists. But the imposition of the so-called undue burden test to determine the constitutionality of abortion laws is of deep concern and is likely in Justice Scalia's words to prove "hopelessly unworkable." The affirmation of Roe was just plain wrong.

Nevertheless, today's ruling gives us cause for some hope that the day will dawn when unborn children are protected.

Let me point out that lost in the angry denunciations by the proabortion side is the substance of what was specifically affirmed.

The Court majority said yes to informed consent—a view backed by 86 percent of the American people according to a Gallup poll—January 1992.

The Court majority said yes to a 24-hour waiting period—a view backed by 75 percent of the American people—Gallup, 1992.

The Court said yes to parental consent—a view backed by 70 percent of the American people—Gallup, 1992.

In all candor I am disappointed that the Court struck the spousal notification requirement. Informing the husband that his wife intends to abort their child is a position backed by 73 percent of Americans—Gallup, 1992.

That the proabortion side is going ballistic over this ruling underscores just how extreme and radical they are. They demand nothing less than abortion on demand, a position that treats the baby as mere property, to be cut, dismembered or chemically poisoned at will. Such a view is clearly out of the mainstream of American thought and opinion.

In opposing the Pennsylvania law, the proabortionists are telling American women that they prefer that women be uninformed and inadequately briefed on the medical risks of abortion and information concerning the child.

The proabortionists opposing today's decision are telling American women that a minimum of 1 day reflection time before procuring an abortion is excessive.

The proabortionists are telling the parents of America that their teenage daughters have a right to a secret abortion without parental involvement.

Today's ruling continues the incremental progress we have made over the past two decades in reestablishing basic protections for the weakest and most vulnerable among us—unborn babies. Today's ruling rejects the extremism of the abortion industry and is a modest victory for both mothers and their children.

CONGRESS MUST PASS THE FREEDOM OF CHOICE ACT

(Mr. DEFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, with today's Supreme Court decision the fundamental constitutional right of a woman to control her own body is no more. The empty shell of Roe v. Wade stands with a scant 5 to 4 majority. The Court would have been more honest had it eliminated Roe v. Wade. For with this decision, the Supreme Court has freed the 50 State legislatures to manipulate America's women through a labyrinth of rules and regulations that will effectively preclude legal abortion for many.

Abortion policy in the United States will become as Balkanized as the former nation of Yugoslavia, complete with chaos, suffering, and loss of life. The House of Representatives can no longer straddle the fence on this issue.

We must promptly begin debate and vote to pass the Freedom of Choice Act to restore this most private and fundamental right to America's women.

A LEGISLATIVE ALTERNATIVE FOR EARTHQUAKE DEVASTATION CLEAN UP

(Mr. DREIER of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, just over 2 hours ago southern Californians felt a very serious aftershock from the major quake from yesterday morning. Clearly our thoughts and prayers go out to those who were victimized by this tragic development.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that as we look at the fact that when tragedies occur, such as earthquakes, those victims look to one source, the Federal Government, and our Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Small Business Administration as their source of relief.

We in the Congress must look at an alternative. We have bipartisan legislation which is designed to get the private insurance industry involved in meeting the devastation caused in the aftermath of an earthquake. Many people think that earthquakes are a California or Alaska or Western phenomenon, but frankly, we have to recognize that 39 States have a propensity to suffer from earthquakes, so we must move ahead with this legislation so that we can try to meet this very serious concern and problem that confronts us.

URGING CONGRESS TO PASS THE FREEDOM OF CHOICE ACT

(Ms. DELAURO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, this is a sad day for our Nation. With today's decision, the Supreme Court has seriously undermined our fundamental right to choose and the fundamental right to privacy. By upholding most of the Pennsylvania statute, today's decision has given license to States to impose wide-ranging and extreme restrictions on freedom of choice. The Court has ignored legal precedent, reversing its previous ruling that these same restrictions are unconstitutional. The Court has attempted to hide the true effect of its decision by stating that it has upheld Roe, but American women will not be fooled. With this one decision the Court has placed women at risk and stripped from all of us the right to privacy, which should be a fundamental tenet of our Constitution.

The right to choose that women have had under Roe v. Wade cannot be relinquished, and certainly not by a decision from a Court directed more by politics than by respect for our Constitution or women's rights. The Court's decision moves this fight for our Constitution and for women's rights to the Congress, and makes it more important than ever to enact the Freedom of Choice Act.

I urge my colleagues to support the Freedom of Choice Act.

RUSSIA AND PRAYER IN SCHOOLS

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, recently it was reported in the Washington Times that a senior superintendent of Moscow Public Education has advocated the introduction of religion into the public schools of the former Communist world capital. And why is this being done?

"There are no values in our society," said the Moscow councilman, Valentin Yefremov. Another high official said, "The biggest question for education is the moral education of young people."

The moral wreckage in the former Soviet Union probably eclipses, in size and weight, its economic wreckage.

Let's view this action by the former Soviet Union in light of the recent denial of prayer in our schools by the Supreme Court. The great teaching institutions of any great society are the family, the church, and the school.

We cannot continue moral neutrality. It's time to change and provide moral instruction and the Judeo-Christian ethics as a value code for all American schools.

Our schools represent the only institution common to the vast majority of Americans where we need this instruction now.

THE DENIAL OF A WOMAN'S RIGHT TO CHOOSE

(Ms. NORTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, the Freedom of Choice Act has now become an act of necessity for this House. This morning three Justices upheld Roe but only on a de facto basis. This must not obscure the reality that there is no constitutional majority for Roe v.

Wade as we knew it and that Roe is dead.

A fundamental right cannot be redefined to mean anything that happens to cross the minds of Justices. It is defined by the Constitution. It is virtually absolute. It is not absolute today, and so we must act.

Today's decision hurts two groups of women. First, all women, and then the most vulnerable women. The Casey decision hurts all women not only because of specific limitations approved, but because in point of fact it leaves no limitation on a State's right to restrict abortion over a woman's right to choose. The door has been opened. The Court has not indicated that it can be closed. Perhaps it can be closed in the event of criminalization. We have seen three attempts in that direction. But surely there is doubt that it won't easily be closed apart from a criminal prohibition.

This decision hurts the most vulnerable women, poor women, of course, because it restricts their already limited options, and it hurts women of color who use abortion at a rate twice that of other women.

Mr. Speaker, the ball is now in our court, not in the Supreme Court.

RESPONDING TO THE CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE

(Mr. LEWIS of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, disaster has struck my district in southern California with a series of earthquakes and aftershocks. The loss of life and property and human injury creates an environment of crisis.

Over the weekend I spent hours on the telephone, Sunday talking with the Governor, with his people at the State agencies that are appropriate, the Federal Emergency Management Agency. We joined together to urge the President to declare the area a disaster area. Just this morning I addressed the full Appropriations Committee in which essentially we put the House on notice that there will be emergency assistance needed.

Currently there are some 245 injuries that have occurred, the loss of one life, a tragedy that struck that family, over 1,100 homes damaged or destroyed. some 33 businesses similarly damaged or destroyed. The cost, the current guesstimate is in excess of $16 million. The assessment will go forward.

In the meantime, the Federal Government is responding as quickly as possible. We urge all of the agencies involving the Federal Government to cooperate with one another. Let us not put numbers on the foreheads of these people who are affected by this crisis, but rather respond to each citizen in every way as though he or she were a part of our own family.

SUPREME COURT CASEY DECISION

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, many Americans are surprised. They did not know the view of many of our Supreme Court members on abortion.

The reason is simple, ladies and gentleman. The President nominates a candidate that never took a position on choice, never did any writing on the issue, and in fact never even publicly stated a position on a woman's right to choose. The truth is that the Supreme Court is being filled up with what I call stealth candidates. They cannot be seen, they cannot be heard, and they cannot even be detected by political radar.

The problem in America today, and one of the sad facts is more Americans know more about Judge Wapner than they do about the powerful Supreme Court.

INTERVENING TO STOP THE HOSTILITIES IN FORMER REPUBLICS OF YUGOSLAVIA

(Mr. WYLIE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, the headline on the front page of the Columbus Dispatch today reads, "Frantic Bosnians Hail Visiting Mitterrand." I want to commend President Mitterrand for his personal attention to an intolerable situation in Yugoslavia which should incur the anger of the people in every other nation of the world.

The New York Times of June 21 had a story headlined, "Nazi Deeds Mirrored in Bosnian Account of Grisly Executions." The account said that witnesses told of children being executed and nailed to trees, and of people eating weeds to avoid starving to death.

Before the civil war broke out, my wife, Marjorie, went to Yugoslavia. Our daughter, Jacquelyn Poston, has been there three times. While they were there they met with Father Philip Pavich who has been in the United States seeking help for the people of Croatia and Bosnia.

The Senate has passed a resolution identical to one which I have introduced in the House, House Resolution 490, calling on the U.N. Security Council to direct the Secretary General of the United Nations to provide a plan for such intervention as may be necessary to enforce the Security Council resolution seeking cessation of hostilities in the former republics of Yugoslavia. To date, I have over 30 cosponsors. I think the House should follow the lead of the Senate by passing House Resolution 490, and I ask the Members' help by agreeing to be a cosponsor.

NATIONAL VOTER REGISTRATION ACT AWAITS PRESIDENT'S SIGNATURE

(Mr. SWIFT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Speaker, on June 17, for the second straight Congress, the House passed the National Voter Registration Act. This legislation is now at the White House awaiting the President's signature. This bill is a major reform and will have a significant and positive effect on improving citizen participation in our electoral process.

Last week, one of our colleagues stated in a radio debate on this measure that the President was going to try to pull off a pocket veto, quietly, over the July 4 recess.

While the constitutionality of such a veto in this situation is doubtful, the suggestion that the President is not only afraid of promoting full citizen participation in our political process, but is also afraid of a veto override debate and vote—that is a sorry indictment of this administration.

I trust our colleague was misled and that the President is not afraid of the people and that he will eagerly sign this legislation, and boast about it, again underscoring to the world our commitment to full democracy.

PROPOSAL FOR CREATION OF RIO COMMISSION ON THE WORLD ENVIRONMENT

(Mr. PORTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, the President said at the Earth summit at Rio de Janiero that as important as the road to Rio has been, the road from Rio is even more important.

He is right and for that reason we clearly need to institutionalize our commitment and that of other nations to the agreements, recommendations, and spirit of the UNCED conference to ensure they do not languish.

At the time the United States signed with the Soviet Union and 33 other European nations the Helsinki accords, we institutionalized our commitments and theirs in the Helsinki Commission, on which I serve, which has been extremely effective in promoting the treaty, with special emphasis on human rights.

Mr. Speaker, I am proposing the creation of the Rio Commission on this same model, with four House Members, four Senate Members, and three from the executive branch, including the EPA, CEQ, and State Department. I respectfully request the cosponsorship of Members. Marking his strong words, I trust the President will also be supportive.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV. Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken at the end of legislative business today.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION INDEPENDENCE ACT

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5429) to establish the Social Security Administration as an independent agency, which shall be headed by a Social Security Board, and which shall be responsible for the administration of the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II of the Social Security Act and the supplemental security income program under title XVI of such Act, as amended.

H.R. 5429

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE AND TABLE OF CONTENTS.

This Act may be cited as the "Social Security Administration Independence Act of 1992".

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Sec. 1. Short title and table of contents.
Sec. 2. Declaration of purposes.
TITLE I—ESTABLISHMENT OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION AS AN INDEPENDENT AGENCY
Sec. 101. Establishment of the Social Security Administration as a separate, independent agency; responsibilities of the agency.
Sec. 102. Social Security Board, Executive Director, Deputy Director, Beneficiary Ombudsman; other officers.
Sec. 103. Personnel; budgetary matters; facilities; and procurement; seal of office.
Sec. 104. Transfers to the new Social Security Administration.
Sec. 105. Transitional rules.
Sec. 106. Effective dates.
TITLE II—CONFORMING AMENDMENTS AND RULES OF CONSTRUCTION
Sec. 201. Amendments to titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act.
Sec. 202. Other conforming amendments.
Sec. 203. Rules of construction.
Sec. 204. Effective dates.

SEC. 2. DECLARATION OF PURPOSES.

The purposes of this Act are as follows:

(1) to establish the Social Security Administration as an independent agency, separate from the Department of Health and Human Services;

(2) to charge the Social Security Administration with administration of the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program and supplemental security income program;

(3) to establish a Social Security board as head of the Social Security Administration and define the powers and duties of such Board;

(4) to establish an Executive Director of the Administration and define the powers and duties of the Executive Director; and

(5) to provide for delegating major authorities to the Board and the Executive Director.

TITLE I—ESTABLISHMENT OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION AS AN INDEPENDENT AGENCY

SEC. 101. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION AS A SEPARATE, INDEPENDENT AGENCY; RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE AGENCY.

Section 701 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 901) is amended to read as follows:

"SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 701. There is hereby established, as an independent agency in the executive branch of the Government, a Social Security Administration. It shall be the duty of the Administration to administer the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II and the supplemental security income program under title XVI.".

SEC. 102. SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, DEPUTY DIRECTOR, BENEFICIARY OMBUDSMAN; OTHER OFFICERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 702 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 902) is amended to read as follows:

"SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD; EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR; OTHER OFFICERS

"Social Security Board

"SEC. 702. (a)(1)(A) The Administration shall be governed by a Social Security Board. The Board shall be composed of three members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The members shall be chosen on the basis of their integrity, impartiality, and good judgment, and shall be individuals who are, by reason of their education, experience, and attainments, exceptionally qualified to perform the duties of members of the Board.

"(B)(i) Except as provided in clauses (ii) and (iii), members of the Board shall be appointed for terms of six years. A member of the Board may be removed only pursuant to a finding by the President of neglect of duty or malfeasance in office. The President shall transmit any such finding to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the majority leader of the Senate not later than five days after the date on which such finding is made.

"(ii) Of the members first appointed—

"(I) one shall be appointed for a term ending June 30, 1997,

"(II) one shall be appointed for a term ending June 30, 1999, and

"(III) one shall be appointed for a term ending June 30, 2001, as designated by the President at the time of appointment. Such members shall be appointed after active consideration of recommendations made by the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and of recommendations made by the chairman of the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

"(iii) The President may not nominate an individual for appointment to a term of office as member of the Board before the commencement of the President's term of office in which the member's term of office commences. Any member appointed to a term of office after the commencement of such term may serve under such appointment only for the remainder of such term. A member may, at the request of the President, serve for not more than one year after the expiration of his or her term until his or her successor has taken office. A member of the Board may be appointed for additional terms.

"(C) Not more than two members of the Board shall be of the same political party.

"(D) A member of the Board may not, during his or her term as member, engage in any other business, vocation, profession, or employment. A member of the Board may continue as a member of the Board for not longer than the 30-day period beginning on the date such member first fails to meet the requirements of the preceding sentence.

"(E) Two members of the Board shall constitute a quorum, except that one member may hold hearings.

"(F) A member of the Board shall be designated by the President to serve as Chairperson of the Board for a term of 4 years.

"(G) The Board shall meet at the call of the Chairperson or two members of the Board.

"(2) Each member of the Board shall be compensated at the rate provided for level II of the Executive Schedule.

"(3) The Board shall—

"(A) govern by regulation the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II and the supplemental security income program under title XVI,

"(B) establish the Administration and oversee its efficient and effective operation,

"(C) establish policy and devise long-term plans to promote and maintain the effective implementation of programs referred to in subparagraph (A),

"(D) appoint an Executive Director of the Administration, as described in subsection (b), to act as the chief operating officer of the Administration responsible for administering the programs referred to in subparagraph (A),

"(E) constitute three of the members of the Board of Trustees of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, with the Chairperson of the Social Security Board serving as Chairperson of such Board of Trustees,

"(F) prepare an annual budget, which shall be presented by the President to the Congress without revision, together with the President's annual budget for the Administration,

"(G) study and make recommendations to the Congress and the President as to the most effective methods of providing economic security through social insurance, supplemental security income, and related programs and as to legislation and matters of administrative policy concerning the programs referred to in subparagraph (A),

"(H) provide the Congress and the President with the ongoing actuarial and other analysis undertaken by the Administration with respect to the programs referred to in subparagraph (A) and any other information relating to such programs, and

"(I) conduct policy analysis and research relating to the programs referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(4)(A) The Board may prescribe such rules and regulations as the Board determines necessary or appropriate to carry out the functions of the Administration. The regulations prescribed by the Board shall be subject to the rulemaking procedures established under section 553 of title 5, United States Code.

"(B) The Board may establish, alter, consolidate, or discontinue such organizational units or components within the Administration as the Board considers necessary or appropriate to carry out its functions, except that this subparagraph shall not apply with respect to any unit, component, or position provided for by this Act.

"(C) The Board may, with respect to the administration of the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II and the supplemental security income program under title XVI, assign duties, and delegate, or authorize successive redelegations of, authority to act and to render decisions, to such officers and employees as the Board may find necessary. Within the limitations of such delegations, redelegations, or assignments, all official acts and decisions of such officers and employees shall have the same force and effect as though performed or rendered by the Board.

"Executive Director

"(b)(1) There shall be in the Administration an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Social Security Board.

"(2)(A) The Executive Director shall be appointed for a term of four years, except that the individual first appointed to the office of Executive Director shall be appointed for a term ending September 30, 1997. An individual appointed to a term of office as Executive Director after the commencement of such term of office as Executive Director after the commencement of such term may serve under such appointment only for the remainder of such term. An individual may, at the request of the Chairperson of the Board, serve as Executive Director after the expiration of his or her term for not more than one year until his or her successor has taken office. An individual may be appointed as Executive Director for additional terms.

"(B) An individual may be removed from the office of Executive Director before completion of his or her term only for cause found by the Board.

"(3) The Executive Director shall be compensated at the rate provided for level II of the Executive Schedule.

"(4) The Executive Director shall—

"(A) constitute the chief operating officer of the Administration, responsible for administering, in accordance with applicable statutes and regulations, the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II and the supplemental security income program under title XVI,

"(B) maintain an efficient and effective operational structure for the Administration,

"(C) implement the long-term plans of the Board to promote and maintain the effective implementation of such programs,

"(D) report annually to the Board on program costs under titles II and XVI, make annual budgetary recommendations to the Board for the ongoing administrative costs of the Administration under this Act, and defend the recommendations before the Board,

"(E) advise the Board and the Congress on the effect on the administration of such programs of proposed legislative changes in such programs,

"(F) serve as Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund,

"(G) report in December of each year to the Board for transmittal to the Congress concerning the administrative endeavors and accomplishments of the Administration, and

"(H) carry out such additional duties as are assigned by the Board from time to time. Any reference to the Board in this Act or any other provision of law in connection with the exercise of a function of the Board which is delegated to the Executive Director pursuant to this section shall be considered a reference to the Executive Director.

"Deputy Director of Social Security

"(c)(1) There shall be in the Office of the Executive Director a Deputy Director, who shall be appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the Executive Director.

"(2) The Deputy Director shall be compensated at the rate provided for level III of the Executive Schedule.

"(3) The Deputy Director shall perform such duties and exercise such powers as the Executive Director shall from time to time assign or delegate. The Deputy Director shall be Acting Executive Director of the Administration during the absence or disability of the Executive Director and, unless the Board designates another officer of the Government as Acting Executive Director, in the event of a vacancy in the office of the Executive Director.

"General Counsel

"(d)(1) There shall be in the Administration a General Counsel, who shall be appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the Board. The General Counsel shall be the principal legal officer in the Administration.

"(2) The General Counsel shall be compensated at the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule.

"Inspector General

"(e)(1) There shall be in the Administration an Office of the Inspector General. Such Office shall be headed by an Inspector General appointed in accordance with the Inspector General Act of 1978.

"(2) The Inspector General shall be compensated at the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule.

"Beneficiary Ombudsman

"(f)(1) There shall be in the Administration an Office of the Beneficiary Ombudsman, to be headed by a Beneficiary Ombudsman appointed by the Board.

"(2)(A) The Beneficiary Ombudsman shall be appointed for a term of five years, except that the individual first appointed to the Office of Beneficiary Ombudsman shall be appointed for a term ending September 30, 1996. An individual appointed to a term of office as Beneficiary Ombudsman after the commencement of such term may serve under such appointment only for the remainder of such term. An individual may, at the request of the Chairperson of the Board, serve as Beneficiary Ombudsman after the expiration of his or her term for not more than one year until his or her successor has taken office. An individual may be appointed as Beneficiary Ombudsman for additional terms.

"(B) An individual may be removed from the office of Beneficiary Ombudsman before completion of his or her term only for cause found by the Board.

"(3) The Beneficiary Ombudsman shall be compensated at the rate provided for level V of the Executive Schedule.

"(4) The duties of the Beneficiary Ombudsman are as follows:

"(A) to represent within the Administration's decisionmaking process the interests and concerns of beneficiaries under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II and the supplemental security income program under title XVI;

"(B) to review the Administration's policies and procedures for possible adverse effects on such beneficiaries;

"(C) to recommend within the Administration's decisionmaking process changes in policies which have caused problems for such beneficiaries;

"(D) to help resolve the problems under such programs of individual beneficiaries in unusual or difficult circumstances, as determined by the Administration; and

"(E) to represent within the Administration's decisionmaking process the views of beneficiaries in the design of forms and the issuance of instructions.

"(5) The Board shall assure that the Office of the Beneficiary Ombudsman has staff sufficient to enable the Beneficiary Ombudsman to efficiently carry out his or her duties. Such staff shall be located in the regional offices, program centers, and central office of the Administration.

"(6) The annual report of the Board under section 704 shall include a description of the activities of the Beneficiary Ombudsman.

"Administrative Law Judge

"(g)(1) There shall be in the Administration an Office of the Chief Administrative Law Judge, who shall be appointed by the Board. The duty of the Chief Administrative Law Judge shall be to administer the affairs of the administrative law judges serving in the Administration in a manner so as to ensure that hearings and other business are conducted by the administrative law judges in accordance with applicable law and regulations.

"(2) The Chief Administrative Law Judge shall report directly to the Board.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS RELATING TO COMPOSITION OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF OASDI TRUST FUNDS.—Section 201(c) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 401(c)) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by striking "shall be composed of" and all that follows down through "ex officio" and inserting the following: "shall be composed of the members of the Social Security Board, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, all ex officio";

(2) by inserting after the first sentence the following new sentence: "The Chairperson of the Social Security Board shall be the Chairperson of the Board of Trustees."; and

(3) by striking "Commissioner of Social Security" and inserting "Executive Director of the Social Security Administration".

(c) INTERIM AUTHORITY OF THE COMMISSIONER.—The President shall nominate for appointment the initial members of the Social Security Board not later than April 1, 1993. In the event that, as of July 1, 1993, all members of the Social Security Board have not entered upon office, until all members of the Board have entered upon office, the officer serving on July 1, 1993, as Commissioner of Social Security in the Department of Health and Human Services (or Acting Commissioner, if applicable), or such officer's successor, shall, while continuing to serve as Commissioner of Social Security (or Acting Commissioner) in such Department, serve as head of the Social Security Administration established under section 701 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this Act) and shall assume the powers and duties of such Board and of the Executive Director under such Act (as amended by this Act).

SEC. 103. PERSONNEL; BUDGETARY MATTERS; FACILITIES; AND PROCUREMENT; SEAL OF OFFICE.

Section 703 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 903) is amended to read as follows:

"ADMINISTRATIVE DUTIES OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD

"Personnel

"SEC. 703. (a)(1) The Social Security Board shall appoint such additional officers and employees as it considers necessary to carry out its functions. Except as otherwise provided in any other provision of law, such officers and employees shall be appointed, and their compensation shall be fixed, in accordance with title 5, United States Code.

"(2) The Board may procure the services of experts and consultants in accordance with the provisions of section 3109 of title 5, United States Code.

"(3) The Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall authorize for the Administration a total number of Senior Executive Service positions which is greater than the number of such positions authorized in the Social Security Administration in the Department of Health and Human Services as of immediately before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Administration Independence Act of 1992, to the extent that the greater number of such authorized positions is specified in the comprehensive workforce plan as established and revised by the Board under subsection (b)(1). The total number of such positions authorized for the Administration pursuant to such section 3133 shall not at any time be less than the number of such authorized positions as of immediately before such date.

"(4) In addition to the positions of the Administration in the Executive Schedule specified in section 702, the Administration is authorized six additional positions at level IV of the Executive Schedule and six additional positions at level V of the Executive Schedule.

"Budgetary Matters

"(b)(1) Appropriations requests for staffing and personnel of the Administration shall be based upon a comprehensive workforce plan, which shall be established and revised from time to time by the Board. The entire amount of appropriations provided for the administrative costs of the Administration shall be apportioned in the time period provided in title 31, United States Code, for apportionment and shall be apportioned for the entire period of availability without restriction or deduction by the apportioning officer or employee of the Office of Management and Budget or any other entity within the executive branch of the Federal Government, except as otherwise provided in this subsection.

"(2) The report submitted pursuant to section 704 shall include a section reflecting the use of budget authority provided to the Administration by quarters.

"(3)(A) The authority of the Administration for facilities construction, and any authority of the Administration for automated data processing procurement which is delegated thereto, shall be provided in the form of contract authority covering the total costs thereof, to be available until expended.

"(B) Amounts necessary for the liquidation of contract authority provided pursuant to this paragraph are hereby made available from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund to the extent that the Board, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Treasury, determines that such amounts are not necessary to meet the current obligations for benefit payments from the Trust Funds.

"(C) Funds appropriated for the Administration to be available on a contingency basis shall be apportioned only upon the occurrence of the stipulated contingency, as determined by the Board and reported to each House of the Congress.

"Seal of Office

"(c) The Board shall cause a seal of office to be made for the Administration of such design as the Board shall approve. Judicial notice shall be taken of such seal.".

SEC. 104. TRANSFERS TO THE NEW SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION.

(a) FUNCTIONS.—There are transferred to the Social Security Administration all functions carried out by the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to the programs and activities the administration of which is vested in the Social Security Administration by reason of this Act and the amendments made thereby. The Social Security Board shall allocate such functions in accordance with sections 701, 702, and 703 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this Act).

(b) PERSONNEL, ASSETS, ETC.—(1) There are transferred from the Department of Health and Human Services to the Social Security Administration, for appropriate allocation by the Social Security Board in the Social Security Administration—

(A) the personnel (other than administrative law judges) employed in connection with the functions transferred by this Act and the amendments made thereby, as considered appropriate by the Board in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services,

(B) such number of administrative law judges as are necessary to carry out the functions transferred by this Act and the amendments made thereby, as determined by the Board in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and

(C) the assets, liabilities, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balance of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds employed, held, or used in connection with such functions, arising from such functions, or available, or to be made available, in connection with such functions.

(2) Unexpended funds transferred pursuant to this subsection shall be used only for the purposes for which the funds were originally authorized and appropriated.

(3) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall terminate—

(A) six positions in the Department of Health and Human Services placed in level IV of the Executive Schedule (or equivalent positions) other than positions specifically required under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, or any other provision of law, and

(B) six positions in such Department placed in level V of the Executive Schedule (or equivalent positions) other than positions specifically required under section 5316 of such title or any other provision of law.

(4) The transfer pursuant to this section of full-time personnel (except special Government employees) and part-time personnel holding permanent positions shall not cause any such employees to be separated or reduced in grade or compensation for 1 year after such transfer or July 1, 1993, whichever is later.

(c) ABOLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF COMMISSIONER IN THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES.—Effective upon the entry upon office of all initial members of the Social Security Board pursuant to section 702 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this Act), the position of Commissioner of Social Security in the Department of Health and Human Services is abolished.

SEC. 105. TRANSITIONAL RULES.

(a) INTERIM AUTHORITY FOR APPOINTMENT AND COMPENSATION.—At any time on or after the date of the enactment of this Act—

(1) any of the officers provided for in section 702 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this Act) may enter upon office, as provided in such section, and

(2) the Social Security Board, upon entry upon office of all of the members thereof, may prescribe regulations providing for the orderly transfer of proceedings before the Secretary of Health and Human Services to the Social Security Board.

Funds available to any official or component of the Department of Health and Human Services, functions of which are transferred to the Social Security Board or the Social Security Administration by this Act, may be used, with the approval of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, to pay the compensation and expenses of any officer entering upon office pursuant to this section until such time as funds for that purpose are otherwise available.

(b) CONTINUATION OF ORDERS, DETERMINATIONS, RULES, REGULATIONS, ETC.—All orders, determinations, rules, regulations, permits, contracts, collective bargaining agreements, recognitions of labor organizations, certificates, licenses, and privileges—

(1) which have been issued, made, promulgated, granted, or allowed to become effective, in the exercise of functions (A) which were exercised by the Secretary of Health and Human Services (or his delegate), and (B) which relate to functions which, by reason of this Act, the amendments made thereby, and regulations prescribed thereunder are vested in the Social Security Board, and shall (to the extent that they relate to functions described in paragraph (1)(B)) continue in effect according to their terms until modified, terminated, suspended, set aside, or repealed, in accordance with law, by such Board.

(2) which are in effect immediately before July 1, 1993,

(c) CONTINUATION OF PROCEEDINGS.—The provisions of this Act (including the amendments made thereby) shall not affect any proceeding pending before the Secretary of Health and Human Services immediately before July 1, 1993, with respect to functions vested (by reason of this Act, the amendments made thereby, and regulations prescribed thereunder in the Social Security Board, except that such proceedings, to the extent that they relate to such functions, shall continue before such Board. Orders shall be issued under any such proceeding, appeals taken therefrom, and payments shall be made pursuant to such orders, in like manner as if this Act had not been enacted, and orders issued in any such proceeding shall continue in effect until modified, terminated, superseded, or repealed by such Board, by a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law.

(d) CONTINUATION OF SUITS.—Except as provided in this subsection—

(1) the provisions of this Act shall not affect suits commenced prior to July 1, 1993; and

(2) in all such suits proceedings shall be had, appeals taken, and judgments rendered, in the same manner and effect as if this Act had not been enacted. No cause of action, and no suit, action, or other proceeding commenced by or against any officer in his official capacity as an officer of the Department of Health and Human Services, shall abate by reason of the enactment of this Act. Causes of action, suits, actions, or other proceedings may be asserted by or against the United States and the Social Security Administration, or such official of such Administration as may be appropriate, and, in any litigation pending immediately before July 1, 1993, the court may at any time, on its own motion or that of a party, enter an order which will give effect to the provisions of this subsection (including, where appropriate, an order for substitution of parties).

(e) CONTINUATION OF PENALTIES.—This Act shall not have the effect of releasing or extinguishing any criminal prosecution, penalty, forfeiture, or liability incurred as a result of any function which (by reason of this Act), the amendments made thereby, and regulations prescribed thereunder is vested in the Social Security Board.

(f) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Orders and actions of the Social Security Board in the exercise of functions vested in such Board under this Act (and the amendments made thereby) shall be subject to judicial review to the same extent and in the same manner as if such orders had been made and such actions had been taken by the Secretary of Health and Human Services in the exercise of such functions immediately before July 1, 1993. Any statutory requirements relating to notice, hearings, action upon the record, or administrative review that apply to any function so vested in such Board shall continue to apply to the exercise of such function by such Board.

(g) EXERCISE OF FUNCTIONS.—In the exercise of the functions vested in the Social Security Board under this Act, the amendments made thereby, and regulations prescribed thereunder, such Board shall have the same authority as that vested in the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to the exercise of such functions immediately preceding the vesting of such functions in such Board, and actions of such Board shall have the same force and effect as when exercised by such Secretary.

(h) OPERATION OF TRANSITIONAL RULES IN THE EVENT OF INTERIM AUTHORITY IN THE COMMISSIONER.—For purposes of this section, in any case in which the powers and duties to be transferred to the Social Security Board are transferred to the Commissioner of Social Security (or acting Commissioner) in the Department of Health and Human Services for an interim period pursuant to section 102(c), the preceding provisions of this section shall apply with respect to the transfer of such powers and duties to and from such Commissioner (or acting Commissioner) pursuant to section 102(c) in the same manner and to the same extent as they would have applied to a direct transfer from the Secretary of Health and Human Services to the Social Security Board if all members of the Board had entered upon office.

SEC. 106. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Sections 101, 102(a), 103, and 104 of this Act shall take effect July 1, 1993.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—Section 102(b) of this Act shall take effect upon the entry upon office of all initial members of the Social Security Board. Sections 102(c) and 105 of this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) NEW SPENDING AUTHORITY.—Any new spending authority provided by this title shall be effective for any fiscal year only to such extent or in such amounts as are provided in advance in appropriation Acts.

TITLE II—CONFORMING AMENDMENTS AND RULES OF CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 201. AMENDMENTS TO TITLES II AND XVI OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title II of the Social Security Act (other than section 201, section 218(d), section 226, section 226A, and section 231(c)) and title XVI of such Act are each amended—

(e) AMENDMENT TO SECTION 1615.—Section 1615(d) of such Act (422 U.S.C. 1832d(d)) is amended by striking "Commissioner of Social Security" and inserting "Executive Director of the Social Security Administration".

SEC. 202. OTHER CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

Title VII of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking section 704 (42 U.S.C. 904) and inserting the following new section:

"REPORTS

"SEC. 704. The Secretary and the Social Security Board shall make full reports to Congress, within 120 days after the beginning of each regular session, of the administration of the functions with which they are charged under this Act. In addition to the number of copies of such reports authorized by other law to be printed, there is hereby authorized to be printed not more than 5,000 copies of each such report for use by the Secretary and Social Security Board for distribution to Members of Congress and to State and other public or private agencies or organizations participating in or concerned with the programs provided for in this Act.";

(2) in section 709(b)(2) (42 U.S.C. 910(b)(2)), by striking "(as estimated by the Secretary)" and inserting ", as estimated by the Social Security Board or the Secretary (whichever administers the program involved),"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"DUTIES AND AUTHORITY OF SECRETARY

"SEC. 712. (a) The Secretary shall perform the duties imposed upon him by this Act and shall also have the duty of studying and making recommendations as to the most effective methods of providing economic security and as to legislation and matters of administrative policy concerning the programs administered by the Secretary and related subjects; except that nothing in this section shall be construed to require the Secretary to make studies or recommendations with respect to programs administered by the Social Security Administration.

"(b) The Secretary is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such officers and employees, and to make such expenditures, as may be necessary for carrying out the Secretary's functions under this Act. Appointments of attorneys and experts may be made without regard to the civil service laws.".

SEC. 203. RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.

(a) REFERENCES TO THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES.—Whenever any reference is made in any provision of law (other than this Act or a provision of law amended by this Act), regulation, rule, record, court order, or other document to the Department of Health and Human Services with respect to such Department's functions under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II of the Social Security Act or the supplemental security income program under title XVI of such Act, such reference shall be considered a reference to the Social Security Administration.

(b) REFERENCES TO THE SECRETARY OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES.—Whenever any reference is made in any provision of law (other than this Act or a provision of law amended by this Act), regulation, rule, record, court order, or other document to the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to such Secretary's functions under such programs, such reference shall be considered a reference to the Social Security Board.

(c) REFERENCES TO OTHER OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.—Whenever any reference is made in any provision of law (other than this Act or a provision of law amended by this Act), regulation, rule, record, or document to any other officer or employee of the Department of Health and Human Services with respect to such officer's or employee's functions under such programs, such reference shall be considered a reference to the appropriate officer or employee of the Social Security Administration.

SEC. 204. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The preceding provisions of this title shall take effect July 1, 1993.

(b) NEW SPENDING AUTHORITY.—Any new spending authority provided by this title shall be effective for any fiscal year only to such extent or in such amounts as are provided in advance in appropriation Acts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BUNNING] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 5429, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5429, the Social Security Administration Independence Act of 1992, which would make the Social Security Administration an independent agency governed by a bipartisan Social Security Board, with responsibility for the Social Security and SSI programs.

The Federal Government has no greater obligation to the American work force than to protect and strengthen the Social Security system. Today 9 out of 10 workers contribute payroll taxes to the Social Security trust fund, entitling them to benefit payments when they retire or become disabled. We must ensure that the Federal Government's promise to pay these benefits is a good one by managing the Social Security trust funds wisely.

It was with this obligation in mind that Congress removed the Social Security trust fund from the Federal budget in 1990: We wanted to shield Social Security from short-term political pressures. The House was nearly unanimous in taking this action, excluding Social Security from the budget by a vote of 413 to 15.

Yet, in spite of this budgetary reform, it is clear that the Government agency that administers Social Security continues to be vulnerable to political pressures. Over the past decade, these pressures have been highly destabilizing:

During the early 1980's, the Reagan administration ordered a sharp acceleration of SSA's continuing disability reviews, removing thousands of disabled Americans from the Social Security rolls—and eventually prompting legislative action to reverse the policy.

During the mid-1980's the Reagan administration reduced SSA's staff by more than 20 percent. In the wake of this reduction, benefit payment errors have risen sharply, agency telephones have gone unanswered, and office waiting times have increased.

During the 1990's, SSA has been overwhelmed with disability applications, largely because—under pressure from OMB—it has failed to ask Congress for the administrative funding it needs to process them. As a result, disabled Americans must now wait more than 3 months for an initial decision from SSA; and those who appear must wait a full year.

Mr. Speaker, it is the responsibility of this body to remove the pressures on SSA that are causing these problems—and I believe that the legislation before us would do just that. Under H.R. 5429, SSA would be separated from the Department of HHS and placed under the leadership of a Social Security Board. The Board would be independent and bipartisan, and its members would serve staggered 6-year terms. Such a Board would strengthen public confidence in the Social Security system and free its operations from short-term political pressure. This administrative structure would also emphasize the fact that the Government is acting as a trustee, protecting the investment of workers who have built up rights under the system.

As an enthusiastic cosponsor of independent agency legislation for the past 4 years and its principal sponsor during this Congress, I see this vote as an opportunity to do something tangible this year to strengthen the Social Security system—not only for today's seniors but for generations of retirees yet to come. I urge my colleagues to give H.R. 5429 their strong support.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5429 is a bill whose time has come. It proposes to make the Social Security Administration independent from the Department of Health and Human Services, and the bill received strong bipartisan support from the Ways and Means Committee. Of all the Federal agencies, the Social Security Administration is one that needs to be above politicization. This bill does that.

Specifically, H.R. 5429 provides that a three-member Social Security Board be appointed by the President—with no more than two from the same political party—and the Senate would confirm them for staggered 6-year terms. The Board would, in turn, appoint an Executive Director to handle its day-to-day affairs.

I can appreciate why the administration would be opposed to this bill since it means that one of the largest Federal agencies would be operating outside the cabinet structure. However, over the years, the Social Security Subcommittee has heard reams of persuasive testimony from a wide range of groups, including actual employees at SSA, senior citizens and advocacy groups for seniors, and the disabled. All of whom have pointed out that the bureaucratic redtape that Social Security has to go through would be considerably less if the agency could act on its own.

In my opinion, many of the problems I've witnessed and heard about stem from the fact that SSA has had nine Commissioners in 15 years, with four who lasted less than 18 months. During that same time, the average tenure of the Secretary of Health and Human Services—the Department within which Social Security is located—has been about 2 years.

I'm not saying that the Secretaries and Commissioners haven't been capable or well-intentioned, but it is obvious that each person has brought different management styles, priorities, and organizational concepts. With that many turnovers, the result has been weakened public confidence and lowered employee morale.

By making Social Security an independent agency, continuity and stability can be achieved for the 46 million beneficiaries who rely on SSA and its programs. I hope the administration will reconsider its opposition to H.R. 5429 because our best hope for the Social Security Administration is to make it a separate agency. I urge the bill's enactment.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], our chairman, and the ranking member of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BUNNING], have made eloquent statements about the purpose of this legislation.

I might say that the last time the legislation was on the floor of the House it passed 401 to zip, zero.

I might also say for the record an example of the organizations who are supporting this legislation, mainly for the reasons mentioned by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BUNNING] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI]. They include the American Association of Retired Persons—and I prefer People—but that is what they call themselves, National Council of Senior Citizens, Older Women's League, Families U.S.A., National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, Gray Panthers, National Council on the Aging, National Hispanic Council on the Aging, National Caucus and Center for Black Aged, Inc., National Association of Area Agencies on Aging, American Federation of Government Employees, National Treasury Employees Union, National Association of Retired Federal Employees, and the National Association of Disability Examiners.

Mr. Speaker, in a nutshell, this legislation allows Social Security to fully become what it was meant to be, an agency of independence. In short, it allows the Social Security system to mind its own business, and requires the U.S. Government, the rest of the U.S. Government, to mind its own business, no subterfuge about surpluses to cover up actual deficits and all the rest.

It is an idea whose time surely came a long time ago, but at long last I think we are moving toward fruition.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. CARDIN].

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my Social Security Committee chairman, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS], for yielding me this time, and I want to congratulate him and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BUNNING] for bringing this bill forward.

I have a special interest in this legislation in that I not only serve on the Subcommittee on Social Security in the Ways and Means Committee, but it is my region of Maryland in which the Social Security Administration is located.

We have very dedicated employees and we have an outstanding leader in Gwen King. It is particularly important, I think, that we pass this legislation that will establish Social Security as an independent agency.

The Social Security Administration basically administers a trust. Most of its revenues come from a trust. The elderly, the disabled, and many millions of Americans depend upon the ability of this agency to carry out that trust.

In 1990, we recognized that the revenue was special and not to be used to mask the size of the Federal deficit.

It is important now that we take the next step and recognize the Social Security Administration as an independent agency.

In spite of the fact that the number of elderly are increasing in our society and the work of the Social Security Administration is increasing in our society, when we look at the type of budget support that the Social Security Administration has received from the administration, we know full well that this agency needs better consideration.

Since 1984, the number of employees has declined by 21 percent, despite the fact that the work of this agency has increased. If we adjust their budget for inflation, we find that since 1985 it has been actually reduced by about 16 percent.

The most important reason to pass this bill, though, is to remove the SSA from the political intervention that we have seen by past administrations. All we need to do is look at disability determinations and see what has happened in regard to the ability of the SSA to handle disability determinations. By its own estimates, if the fiscal year 1993 budget were passed by Congress as recommended by the administration, we would see the backlog increase by 70 percent, and the number of people waiting for disability determinations increase from 800,000 of our constituents to 1.3 million. The average length of time it would take for a person to receive disability benefits would increase from 3 months to 7 months.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to take the step that is badly needed to make the Social Security Administration an independent agency so that it can carry out its purpose.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RAVENEL].

Mr. RAVENEL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana several questions about the legislation under consideration.

We all know that as the excess comes into the trust fund, we know that the people who pay the payroll taxes, you have an excess there with the outgo and income. Historically, as the excess has been coming in, that money has been loaned to the Treasury. In other words, the Treasury takes the money that comes in on Monday to cover those bills of the Nation, the checks that have been written the previous week. The Treasury then gives the trust fund bonds, short-term securities, debt securities of the U.S. Government and those are what go into the trust fund.

So the criticism of what has been going on with the trust fund is valid. There is no money, no cash in the sense that we have cash in our trust funds in South Carolina with the moneys deposited and it is real money. The Treasurer of the State can write a check on the trust fund and, of course, that check will be good because he is not writing on an IOU or a State bond or what have you. He is writing against real cash.

Now, of course, that is the situation, as we all know, as it involves the trust fund, the Social Security trust fund, as it is operated by the Federal Government.

Now, my question is, there will be no change in this procedure if this legislation is passed and, of course, the President signs it. Of course, he has threatened to veto it.

I am inclined to vote for it, but there will be no change in the way the moneys, the excess that comes into the trust fund is handled, will there?

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, there will be no change. I am not sure I agree precisely with the gentleman's prescription. Since the inception of the Social Security system there has been a requirement by law that any surplus in the trust fund be invested as conservatively as possible.

There is a strange convolution that has grown up around this whole issue, and that is if my wife and I want to invest our money, our savings, as safely as possible, Jane Bryant Quinn and everybody else will tell you the U.S. securities are the safest, but when it comes to Social Security somehow or another those same securities become worthless IOU's.

I have never been smart enough to understand, since it is exactly the same obligation, exactly the same interest payments, where there is any difference.

I might say to the gentleman, a few years ago a bill was before Congress to allow the trustees to invest the surplus funds in high yield private interest. One of them, I believe, was the WPPSS bonds out in the Northwest. Congress wisely decided to stay on the conservative course, and that is exactly what this legislation would not interfere with.

Mr. RAVENEL. Well, I see. Tell me this. The gentleman talks about the safety of U.S. Government securities. Would the gentleman say with our deficit, the annual debt now being substantially in excess of $3 trillion and this year for the first time the annual deficit approaching $400 billion and continuing to grow, and in the light of what occurred here just a few days ago when this House failed by either 9 or 10 votes to pass the balanced budget amendment, would the gentleman say that the debt securities of the U.S. Government, given the fact that the annual deficit is as large as it is and is continuing to rapidly grow, would the gentleman say that the debt securities of the Federal Government are still the safest securities to be found in this country? Does the gentleman feel it is safer than cash on deposit?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The time of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RAVENEL] has expired.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 additional minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. RAVENEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this additional time.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, let me preface my response by telling the gentleman that I happen to be the one who began the balanced budget amendment to the Constitution movement here in the House of Representatives in 1976. At that time there were just two groups who opposed the proposal. They were the Democrats and the Republicans. A lot of people have changed their minds about that since.

Now, to answer the gentleman's question, yes, I would say and so would any leading economists say that it remains the safest investment, for this reason: the Whiskey Rebellion. The U.S. Government was badly in debt at the time the Continentalist Papers were issued, and Alexander Hamilton, the first Secretary of the Treasury, insisted that the U.S. Government pay off its debt. In order to do so, they put a whiskey tax on some people way out west in Pennsylvania. We can recall General Washington had to hop back on his horse and enforce that tax.

The reason is the U.S. Government, for all its profligacy, for all the waste, remains the safest bet in that it has the means by which to enforce its taxes and private parties who go out and have big parties do not. That is the reason.

Mr. RAVENEL. Well, I thank the gentleman very much, but I would just remind the gentleman and remind those who may be interested——

Mr. JACOBS. The gentleman does not need to remind me. It is much on my mind. I am the father of this effort.

Mr. RAVENEL. Well, for that the gentleman should be commended.

The gentleman knows that if he had a thousand dollars and he put it in the bank of his choice and he wrote a check on that thousand dollars for the thousand dollars, took the cash and spent it and sent the bank an IOU for the thousand dollars, if the gentleman tried to write a check against that IOU, I think the gentleman would experience some problems.

Given the financial problems the U.S. Government is experiencing, it would seem to me that the moneys from the trust fund would be better invested in the banks of the Nation around the country than in the IOU's of the Government.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, all I can say to the gentleman on behalf of my wife and myself is that I hope the gentleman is mistaken, because most of our life savings are tied up in U.S. securities.

Mr. RAVENEL. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman is correct.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MCDERMOTT], a member of the subcommittee.

□ 1250

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Social Security Administration Independence Act. This agency is the custodian of a solemn promise by our Government to our people—that after you have worked all your life, or if disability keeps you from working, you can depend on a source of retirement income. That promise has been kept for half a century.

But more and more Americans are questioning that promise. They see a Social Security system held hostage to the deficit, subordinated to the President's political agenda. The Social Security Administration should have only one purpose—to administer, fairly, and efficiently, the benefit programs all Americans pay for. That is what the people are entitled to expect for the taxes they pay.

But that is not what they get. OMB routinely cuts the SSA budget before it comes to us. President Reagan presided over a wholesale purge of the disability rolls that did untold harm to thousands of vulnerable citizens. President Bush has presided over a systematic reduction of service in local offices, starting with a cutoff of telephone access.

If you do not speak English, you cannot get an interpreter when you talk to Social Security. The new system for approving representation fees has been delayed more than a year. The President's budget would double the delay in disability decisions. SSA disability standards discriminate against women and children with HIV infection. Twenty percent of supervisors have no training.

This agency has been systematically starved for over a decade. Thousands of Social Security employees, including the present Commissioner, work very hard to maintain and improve services. They deserve better. They deserve the independence this bill would give them, the power to speak for themselves. Millions of Americans who depend on Social Security programs deserve an agency that is independent and accountable to them.

This legislation will not solve all the problems of Social Security. But it will help. It is needed. I urge my colleagues to support it today.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes and 45 seconds to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. Speaker, I yield the additional 15 seconds to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] in recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. HUGHES. First, Mr. Speaker, let me congratulate the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS] and his colleague, the ranking Republican, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BUNNING], for moving H.R. 5429 forward, a bill that would create an independent Social Security Administration.

In my judgment it will not solve all the problems of Social Security, but it is a giant step forward.

Mr. Speaker, I chair a subcommittee on the Select Committee on Aging which is looking at some of the problems that have been created in some of the areas such as a disability review. It is rather apparent that, unfortunately, the Social Security laws and the fund, the tremendous sums that are there for future beneficiaries, have been manipulated for other than Social Security purposes.

Mr. Speaker, we just took some testimony recently on disability reviews. These are cases of people on disability, people who have applied for disability, where in many instances they are entitled to disability, and the Social Security Administration is not reaching some of these cases before the beneficiary actually dies.

So up front we are not processing cases expeditiously. It is taking us too long to reach those who are seriously disabled, who are entitled to those funds which they contributed for a number of years; and on the back end people who have been on Social Security for years we are not reaching, we are not taking those off the Social Security rolls who are no longer entitled to Social Security disability. We are actually losing tens of millions of dollars every year. The estimates are as high as $100 to $150 million that we are losing because people are collecting disability who should not be but because we have so few staff persons who are, in fact, looking at these ongoing disability cases that we are losing those moneys.

So on the front end we are not reaching those who are entitled to it and on the back end we are not reaching those who are not entitled to those funds.

My other point is that Social Security should be administered honestly, without ulterior motives. We should not be determining Social Security matters just because we want to cloak the Federal deficit, or keep administrative costs down. Yet that is what we are doing. If the Social Security Administration costs a lot of money, that would be one thing, but the estimates are that Social Security costs about 1 percent of the moneys coming in to administer. We are not really spending a lot on administrative costs, but we are wasting tens of millions of dollars because we are not committing resources so that those who administer the Social Security programs can do a decent job.

Mr. Speaker, I think that an independent agency is the right way to go and that is what this legislation would do, and I congratulate and commend my colleagues once again for moving this bill forward.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes to respond to some of the things that have been said.

First of all, in a bipartisan bill—and this is a bipartisan bill—it serves little purpose to bash the administration in the way they have handled the Social Security Administration. The Congress of the United States could have appropriated at any time more money for the administration of Social Security if they so chose. It was not the administration that did that; the Congress of the United States did that.

So it serves little purpose to beat up on the Bush and Reagan administrations because we hold the ultimate purse strings as the Congress, in allocating to the Social Security Administration the amount of money needed to run that agency.

So the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MCDERMOTT], who spent time in saying that the Bush and Reagan administrations systematically cut back on the administrative costs of Social Security by withholding money, well, the Congress of the United States could have at any time appropriated more money if they so chose.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 15 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to add to the response that I gave earlier to the questions about the Social Security funds that many States and many pension funds are invested in U.S. securities for the same reason.

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, over the past decade, the Social Security Administration has been overwhelmed with disability claims. Consequently, disabled Americans now wait more than 3 months for an initial decision and those who appeal are expected to wait up to a full year for a final decision to be rendered on their claim. Needless to say, this is one of the most telling symptoms of the Social Security Administration's problems.

I am pleased to lend my support to H.R. 5429, legislation which would make the Social Security Administration an independent agency. Such legislation would help ensure that the agency is run in a stable and professional manner by reducing the potential for political intervention in agency decisionmaking. It is clear that the Social Security Administration has become vulnerable to both budget problems and to political manipulation.

Like many of you, when I return home to my district, I am often confronted with compelling complaints of service problems within the agency. In 1984, the Office of Management and Budget ordered a 6-year, more than 20 percent staff reduction, which the Social Security Administration implemented through attrition. The reductions contributed to a serious decline in service. Although those beneficiaries who lost their Social Security disability benefits were eventually reinstated, they suffered needlessly. SSA's fiscal year 1993 budget request projects that even if the agency's funding request is fully honored, the agency will have a backlog of almost 1.5 million disability applications by the end of 1993. It can take up to 7 months to process applications. Although this bill does not solve all of the budgetary and staffing problems at SSA, I believe that it would help to build confidence in the program. It provides SSA with greater autonomy from the Office of Management and Budget [OMB]. This will allow SSA to implement the necessary reforms to get their job done well for our Social Security recipients.

In the 101st Congress, we responded to public concern over the alleged use of Social Security trust funds to mask actual Federal deficits. In essence we made the Social Security trust funds independent of the regular Federal budget. Accordingly, the SSA should become an independent agency in order to ensure that its operations reflect the needs of those the program was designed to serve.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5429, legislation to establish the Social Security Administration as an independent government agency.

Today the Social Security Administration pays benefits to over 40 million individuals and covers 133 million workers. This enormous responsibility will only increase as our Nation continues to age. Therefore, it is more necessary today than ever before that the Social Security Administration be sound and financially secure.

As Representatives, we have a responsibility to our retired constituents. We must ensure that a secure retirement income in the form of Social Security is available to both current and future retirees. We can and we should ensure this security by recognizing the uniqueness of the Social Security Administration. Already, the Social Security Administration accounts for 54 percent of the Department of Health and Human Services employees and 60 percent of its expenditures. It is critical that we separate the Social Security Administration from its current position in the Department of Health and Human Services.

Mr. Speaker, last week the House debated the issue of a constitutional amendment to balance the Federal budget. Many of the opponents of this bill used tactics to scare seniors into believing that an amendment of this type would also legislate reductions in their Social Security benefits. Unfortunately, this is not the first time Social Security recipients have been made to fear that the Federal budget would be balanced at the expense of seniors. I believe that this ritual must come to an end.

The Social Security Program is built upon a solemn agreement between the Federal Government and the people, whereby individuals pay into the system during their working years and are assured benefits after their retirement. To threaten Social Security benefits would be to jeopardize the bond between the Government system they supported throughout their working years.

Seniors who are living on fixed incomes already worry about making ends meet. They should not have to add to these worries every time the Congress talks seriously about balancing the Federal budget. Establishing the Social Security Administration as a separate agency is a fundamental way in which the Congress can ensure that the Federal budget will be balanced responsibly, without arbitrary reductions in domestic programs.

It is time to make the Social Security Administration a separate, independent agency. We have waited and we have been patient, thinking that the issue of creating a secure Social Security Program could be addressed in other ways but, Mr. Speaker, we cannot afford to wait any longer.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5429, establishing the Social Security Administration as an independent agency. I commend the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS] for introducing this important measure.

H.R. 5429 establishes the Social Security Administration as an independent agency, separate from the Department of Health and Human Services. Additionally, this measure establishes a new management of the agency. More specifically, a three member Social Security Board will be appointed by President and approved by the Senate, and Board Members will serve for overlapping 6-year terms.

Mr. Speaker, our Nation's seniors are concerned about the state of our Social Security system, especially the Social Security trust fund. It is time for Congress to take the necessary steps needed to make the Social Security Administration an independent agency, in order to enhance and protect our Nation's Social Security programs.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to send a clear message to our Nation's seniors and disabled that we are concerned about the state of our Nation's Social Security trust fund and that we are undertaking significant steps to protect the future of the Social Security system by supporting H.R. 5429.

Mr. JACOBS. With that, Mr. Speaker, we have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5429, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

MEMBRANE PROCESSES RESEARCH ACT OF 1992

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3673) to authorize a research program through the National Science Foundation on the treatment of contaminated water through membrane processes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3673

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE

This Act may be cited as the "Membrane Processes Research Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) there is an increasing threat of impairment to the quantity and quality of the Nation's water resources due to, among other things, growing national needs, recurring drought in the western states, point and nonpoint source pollution, and salt-water intrusion into existing groundwater supplies;

(2) many communities in the United States have water supplies containing high salinity levels or contaminants which pose health risks;

(3) the Nation needs to develop economical processes to treat existing water supplies that are contaminated;

(4) it is necessary to provide for research into new techniques to reclaim wastewater and to convert saline and other contaminated waters to a quality suitable for municipal, industrial, agricultural, recreational, and other beneficial uses;

(5) there is very little Federal funding being applied to basic research in the field of treatment of contaminated water through membrane processes; and

(6) the treatment of contaminated water through membrane processes will solve a wide variety of water treatment problems, including compliance with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act and the Safe Drinking Water Act.

SEC. 3. RESEARCH PROGRAM.

The Director of the National Science Foundation shall establish a basic research program on membranes and membrane processes. Such program may be carried out through awarding grants, entering into contracts or cooperative agreements, or direct research.

SEC. 4. GOALS OF RESEARCH PROGRAM.

The goals of the research program established under section 3 shall be—

(1) the development of membranes resistant to degradation, bacterial or otherwise, thereby extending the life of such membranes;

(2) the development of membranes useful for the efficient and cost effective treatment of contaminated water; and

(3) the development of innovative technologies for membrane processes.

SEC. 5. COORDINATION WITH OTHER RESEARCH.

The research program established under section 3 shall be carried out in coordination with any other related Federal research efforts.

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Director of the National Science Foundation, from sums otherwise authorized to be appropriated, $2,500,000 for fiscal year 1993, for carrying out this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER].

(Mr. BOUCHER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3673, entitled the Membrane Processes Research Act, directs the National Science Foundation to conduct research in new and less costly ways to purify water through the expanded use of membranes.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the ranking Republican member of our Subcommittee on Science of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD] for his foresight in suggesting that this was an area in which the subcommittee should direct time and attention and also suggesting the legislation which the House is considering today.

This bill is brought before the body at the request, and with the assistance and cooperation, of the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD].

Mr. Speaker, recent years of drought in the Western States have underscored the need for new approaches to assuring an adequate supply of freshwater, both for municipal and for industrial purposes. The desalinization of seawater through the use of membranes is one promising means of meeting that need.

In fact, throughout the Nation, a growing demand is being placed on our limited freshwater supplies. One of the largest public policy debates that is occurring in my State of Virginia today is the appropriate means for meeting the need of the growing Tidewater area for freshwater, and various aspects of the citizenry of Virginia are involved in that public policy debate. Similar challenges are facing literally hundreds of other localities across the United States.

The development of new membrane technology is clearly a step in the right direction in meeting that growing need for freshwater. Membranes act as screens through which water containing salt and other impurities is pumped and, therefore, clarified.

In addition to providing salt-free drinking water, membranes can also be used to return purified water to the environment following industrial use. In the 1970's, the National Science Foundation took the lead in developing the technology for membrane use and water purification, but since that time very little has been accomplished in the way of new innovation, and new improvements and new technology in that basic design.

Given the scope of the national need that we now confront for freshwater, a renewed focus on membrane research is appropriate, and H.R. 3673 is the correct way to provide that focus.

Mr. Speaker, that concludes my opening remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, my thanks to both Mr. BROWN and Mr. WALKER, the chairman and ranking Republican of the Science, Space, and Technology Committee for their support of my bill—H.R. 3673, the Membrane Processes Research Act of 1992.

A special thanks goes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER], the chairman of the Science Subcommittee, for his cooperation and valuable input in shaping this bill.

PURPOSE OF THE BILL

One of the main purposes of H.R. 3673 is to spur innovative ideas and research in a field that is ripe with potential—treating contaminated water through a specific desalination technique. This bill authorizes a research program to be administered by the National Science Foundation. The program is authorized at $2.5 million for fiscal year 1993 out of existing authorizations. No New Money.

The goal of the bill is to provide cost effective, viable alternatives to current water treatment systems. Treating contaminated water through membrane processes, such as reverse osmosis, will have broad applications from desalting seawater and brackish water to reclaiming wastewater.

The future market for this type of technology will be driven by the continuing development of increasingly stringent standards for drinking water, industrial wastewater discharges, and hazardous waste disposal.

EXPLANATION OF MEMBRANES

The focus of H.R. 3673 is research on membranes and membrane processes. Reverse osmosis, which is the most widely used desalination technology in the United States, uses pressure to force water through membranes in order to separate dissolved salts and minerals from freshwater.

Due to the fact that these membranes have a short life expectancy and are easily fouled, the cost of reverse osmosis is too high for widespread use in decontaminating water.

H.R. 3673 directs the National Science Foundation to establish a basic research program on these desalination technologies. The goals of the bill include developing membranes resistant to degradation and developing membranes useful for the efficient and cost-effective treatment of contaminated water.

NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

Federal funding into this type of research is needed in order to continue development of this relatively new technology. Federal funding of research and development for converting saline and brackish water into usable water began with the passage of the Saline Water Act of 1952.

This research, which was essentially discontinued in 1982, was instrumental in the development of reverse osmosis and advances in distillation techniques. Due to the dramatic scaling-back of the program, cost savings and technological developments since 1982 have resulted primarily from refinements of existing technology.

The research that is to be conducted under H.R. 3673 is narrowly focused on a process that has applications that range from desalination to reclamation. And it is particularly well-suited for being carried out by the National Science Foundation.

Last year, Chairman BOUCHER and I heard testimony from the administration as well as industry and university representatives who were all very supportive of increased Federal attention on desalination research.

My interest in desalination research is no doubt obvious—drought continually plagues the Southwest, and in particular southern California.

It has become apparent to those in California and the Southwest that conservation, by itself, will not provide the ultimate solution to the desperate situation that exists in that part of the country.

What is probably less obvious is the benefit that this research program can have for the rest of the country. Critical water shortages have become a fact of life for numerous communities along the east coast as well as many communities in the heartland of this Nation.

Saltwater intrusion into existing freshwater supplies as well as the lack of adequate freshwater supplies require that many communities desalt brackish ground water before it can be used for drinking water.

Florida, alone, has the most number of desalination plants in the United States that are dedicated to producing municipal drinking water supplies.

SUMMARY

It is imperative that, we as a nation, develop efficient, cost-effective alternatives to current water treatment technologies so that water will be available for municipal, industrial, agricultural, and recreational uses.

Since 1982, investment in basic research for new and improved water treatment technologies has held a lower priority than many other research activities. It is obvious that numerous benefits could be realized from cost-effective, viable water treatment technologies.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for basic research to generate innovative ideas on how to treat contaminated water. My bill moves the country in this direction by providing for a modest research program on a specific desalination technology.

I urge its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD], my friend, for yielding this time to me, and I thank the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER] for this legislation.

I rise in strong support of H.R. 3673, and it is imperative that we, in southern California, continue to research new and various means for increasing our water supplies. We are in a 6-year drought in southern California, and most of the people around the country have heard recently that we just had two major earthquakes, and even a third this morning. All of the water supply that we import from San Diego comes across the San Andreas Fault, and that severely threatens the capability of California to receive any kind of water. Population growth has been expansive in California, by nearly 40 percent over the last 10 years. That is one reason we are picking up seven congressional seats, is the population, and, of course, there are demands on housing, on schools, and everything else which has impacted the water demands for southern California.

Mr. Speaker, that is why the Membrane Process Research Act of 1992 has got my support. It is imperative that both in quantity and quality that the water supplies in southern California, and all of California for that matter of fact, through the desalinization technologies. Can my colleagues imagine, here last week we had a pretty good rainfall in Virginia. Imagine only having that once every 6 years, and it has been disastrous. General Atomics in San Diego is looking at fusion-fission for desalinization. Kuwait desalts water at hundreds of millions of gallons per day, but their fuel is unlimited.

We do not have that advantage here in the United States.

These goals can be attained through cooperative effects by both the State governments and the Federal Government.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we are also looking at other areas in California for doing the job. Under the leadership of Secretary Lujan, we are looking at how to increase the snowpack in the mountains to have storage, in light of the environmental concerns of endangered species, and how to collect water, all to the benefit of California. And it is not just California that will benefit from this study; it will be all of the Nation once we find out how to desalt water.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like again to thank the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER], and my friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD]. I would also like to recognize the staff of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology for their hard work to see that we find alternative methods to meet our growing demand for freshwater in this country.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS], a member of the committee.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I rise in strong support of the Membrane Processes Research Act of 1992, H.R. 3673.

I want to congratulate the subcommittee chairman, Mr. BOUCHER, and the ranking member, Mr. PACKARD, for bringing forward this important legislation.

On a global basis, one of the most limited natural resources is drinkable water. In my own State of Florida, fresh water is becoming more and more scarce. In fact, several coastal regions are experiencing severe salt water intrusion problems.

Desalination is one of the procedures that could lead to unlimited supplies of fresh water and reverse the salt water intrusion problem. Unfortunately, the current technology is too expensive for widespread use.

The research called for in this legislation will lead to the development of the next-generation desalination technology. Hopefully, the drinking water prepared from sea water will be cheaper and more efficiently produced.

With increasing population and industrial demands, this research program could have one of the highest payoffs of any Federal research program.

I want to commend the gentleman from California for introducing this legislation. The bill addresses an issue of great concern to California and many other sections of the country—converting salt water to fresh water.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation, H.R. 3673.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself one minute.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply like to say that we on our committee are looking at many different ways to do research to recapture and better manage our water supplies.

I serve on the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, which also has jurisdiction over much of our water supply. Certainly we must do a better job of managing this life-saving commodity in our country. This bill is one effort in that direction, combined with several other efforts to try to better govern and better use water and find new sources of clean, pure, and drinkable water.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3673, the Membrane Processes Research Act of 1992. The research program established by this legislation will fund basic research to develop membranes that are longer lasting and more resistant to fouling than those currently available to industry.

Membranes are essential to many chemical processes, including the most widely used methods to desalinate seawater and brackish groundwater. Better membranes will greatly reduce the costs of water treatment to U.S. industries and municipalities.

I congratulate Mr. BOUCHER and Mr. PACKARD for initiating this important legislation, and I urge my colleagues to support this important measure.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3673, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the legislation just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION COMPUTER NETWORK

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5344) to authorize the National Science Foundation to foster and support the development and use of certain computer networks.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5344

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. ADMINISTRATIVE AMENDMENT.

Section 3 of the National Science Foundation Act of 1950 (42 U.S.C. 1862) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) In carrying out subsection (a)(4), the Foundation is authorized to foster and support the development and use of computer networks which may be used substantially for purposes in addition to research and education in the sciences and engineering, if the additional users will tend to increase the overall capabilities of the networks to support such research and education activities.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER].

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5344, a bill to amend the NSF Act of 1950. H.R. 5344 provides additional flexibility to NSF in establishing policies for access to and use of computer networks supported by the Foundation.

I want to acknowledge the able assistance of the ranking Republican member of the Subcommittee on Science, Mr. PACKARD, regarding the subcommittee's consideration of this legislation.

The purpose of H.R. 5344 is to speed development of the National Research and Education Network—the so called NREN—which will be created pursuant to the High-Performance Computing Act of 1991.

By means of this powerful tool, scientists will be as close as their personal computers to collaboration with colleagues throughout the Nation, to access to remote data bases or libraries, and to use of specialized scientific facilities or instruments. The NREN will truly change the way research is done and will create access to critical resources for all researchers, regardless of geographic location.

But beyond scientific and technical applications, the NREN is a major step on the road to the future information infrastructure of the Nation. This future, ubiquitous network for voice, video and data communications of all kinds, will connect homes, schools and workplaces. It will constitute an essential ingredient for our future economic competitiveness and will open new worlds of information and services for all of our citizens.

The NREN will not be a network in the traditional sense. It will not be a collection of wires and cables. Rather, it will be a new generation of software and switches, and uniform standards to facilitate the transmission of data at high rates through existing fiber optic cables. The goal is to achieve a hundred fold increase in data transmission speed on user-friendly, widely accessible network.

The first steps toward the NREN are represented by the NSFNet, a national backbone computer network supported by NSF, which provides connections to more than 4,000 research and education institutions through the Nation. In the past 5 years, NSFNet has advanced from serving few supercomputer centers in a narrow research mission to serving millions of scholars and researchers in scores of industrial labs and in most universities and Federal labs in the United States. It also connects thousands of high schools and hundreds of libraries.

The success of NSFNet can be measured by its rate of growth of 11 percent per month. Overall, the Federal investment in NSFNet Mr. President, has leveraged by 30 to 1 the investment by States, industry and universities in developing the network infrastructure in the United States.

The policies of management and operation of NSFNet are of particular importance since the NREN will evolve as an outgrowth of this current backbone network and will be influenced by current practices. The purpose of H.R. 5344 is to ensure that the strong growth of NSFNet continues and to stimulate access via the network to new information resources.

At present, NSF provides NSFNet backbone services only to non-proprietary research and education activities. Electronic traffic for research and education purposes may travel on NSFNet at no cost while the cost of other traffic must be recovered. The rule imposing this requirement is known as the acceptable use policy.

At a March oversight hearing of the Science Subcommittee on management and operation of the NSFNet, representatives of network users and network service providers, as well as NSF, all recommended relaxing or eliminating the acceptable use policy.

Concerns were raised that some commercial network service providers have refrained from providing access to their services via the NSFNet because of uncertainties about the application of the current policy. Such constraints on use of NSFNet reduce the rate of growth that would otherwise be possible. The effect of slower growth ultimately is to increase the cost per message of network traffic and to raise the overall cost of network operation to the disadvantage of commercial and noncommercial user alike.

H.R. 5344 modifies a provision of the NSF Act of 1950, which NSF has cited as requiring imposition of the current acceptable use policy. The amendment authorizes NSF to support the development and use of computer networks, which may carry a substantial volume of traffic that does not conform to the acceptable use policy. I would stress that this new authority is subject to the condition that any changes to the acceptable use policy must increase the overall capability of the network to support research and education activities. Accordingly, the legislation does not alter the basic mission of NSF regarding support for networks but allows the Foundation to institute more effective policies necessary to achieve the long-term goals for the NREN.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation will allow for accelerated growth of the NREN, while reducing costs to the Government and increasing network services available for network users. H.R. 5344 will give NSF additional flexibility for developing, in concert with the private sector, a highly capable computer network for meeting critical national needs in support of research and education. The bill will help advance the goals of the High-Performance Computing Act and, ultimately provide the technology base for a modern information infrastructure for the Nation.

I am pleased to commend this bill to the House for its approval.

□ 1320

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. BOUCHER], who is the chairman of the Science Subcommittee has explained exactly what this bill is intended to do—namely, the intent of the bill is to provide flexibility to the National Science Foundation to change the access requirements for its national computer network.

H.R. 5344 amends a provision of the NSF Act of 1950 by authorizing NSF to support the development of a computer network which carries a substantial volume of traffic not associated with research and education purposes. This new authority is subject to the condition that the presence of the nonconforming traffic would increase the overall capability of the network to support research and education activities.

This issue of changing current access requirements was raised before the Science Subcommittee in an oversight hearing which reviewed NSF policies on management and operation of NSFNet. In drafting this bill, the idea was to try and correct a situation that appeared to be hampering the evolution of the NSFNet to the National Research and Education Network.

We have just received a statement from the administration stating that the legislation could be unnecessary because NSF has recently devised a technical solution to this problem.

I would note, however, that the science adviser to the President is still concerned about federally subsidizing commercial use of this network.

If this bill moves to conference, I am committed to addressing any remaining concerns of the administration.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5344 amends, the National Science Foundation Act of 1950 for the purpose of assisting the foundation in its role of advancing computer network technologies and operational capabilities. In particular, the amendment provides additional flexibility to NSF in its activities to support development of the National Research and Education Network, referred to as the NREN.

I want to congratulate Mr. BOUCHER, the Science Subcommittee chairman, for initiating this legislation and Mr. PACKARD, the ranking Republican member of the subcommittee, for his assistance during all the committee proceedings.

This legislation arose from the oversight activities of the science subcommittee regarding NSF network programs. The purpose is to allow exploration of policies for use of NSF sponsored networks that will lead to better networking services for scientists, educators, and students throughout the Nation.

The NREN will provide a resource to stimulate the creative imaginations of the scientists, engineers and educators. In addition, it is a key component for developing the technologies and operational experience essential for putting in place the future information infrastructure of the Nation.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5344 will remove a potential impediment to maintaining progress toward the goals of the NREN. I urge my colleagues to support this important measure.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, I have no additional requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOUCHER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill H.R. 5344.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the legislation just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS TO THE AMERICAN TECHNOLOGY PREEMINENCE ACT OF 1991

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5343) to make technical amendments to the American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991 and the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act with respect to their treatment of the SI metric system, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5343

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.

The Fair Packaging and Labeling Act (15 U.S.C. 1451 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in sections 4(a)(2), (4), and (5), 4(b), and 5(c)(1), by striking "weight" and inserting in lieu thereof "weight or mass";

(2) in sections 4(a)(5) and 5(d), by striking "weights" and inserting in lieu thereof "weights or masses";

(3) in section 4(a)(2), by inserting ", using the most appropriate units of both the customary inch/pound system of measure, as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, and, except as provided in paragraph (3)(A)(ii) or paragraph (6) of this subsection, the SI metric system" after "panel of that label";

(4) in section 4(a)(3)(A)—

(A) by striking "containing less than four pounds" and all that follows through "pounds for weight units" in clause (i) and inserting in lieu thereof "labeled in terms of weight, shall be expressed in pounds";

(B) by striking "two" in clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "three";

(C) by inserting "and is not required to, but may, include a statement in terms of the SI metric system carried out to not more than three decimal places" after "decimal places" in clause (ii);

(D) by striking "both in terms of inches and" in clause (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof "in terms of"; and

(E) by striking "both in terms of square inches and" in clause (iv) and inserting in lieu thereof "in terms of"; and

(5) in section 4(a), by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) The requirement of paragraph (2) that the statement of net quantity of contents include a statement in terms of the SI metric system shall not apply to foods that are packaged at the retail store level.".

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by section 1 shall take effect on February 14, 1994. The amendments made by section 1 shall have no effect on the sale or distribution of products whose labels have been printed before such effective date. Nothing in the amendments made by section 1 shall apply to unit pricing, advertising, recipe programs, nutrition labeling, or other general pricing information. Nothing in the amendments made by section 1 shall be construed to require changes in package size or to affect in any way the size of packages.

SEC. 3. REPEAL.

Section 107 of the American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991 is repealed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE].

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5343, which seeks to clarify the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act amendments found in section 107 of the American Technology Preeminence [ATP] Act of 1992.

H.R. 5343 was introduced to end the food industry's concerns regarding the scope of the metric requirements contained in that section.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate our chairman, Mr. BROWN on his authorship of this bill and to thank Congressman WALKER and Congressman LEWIS, the Republican leaders of our committee and subcommittee, for their cooperation in moving the legislation forward in an expeditious manner. I would also like to thank Chairman DINGELL for his help in expediting consideration of the legislation.

The Fair Packaging and Labeling Act [FPLA] traditionally has required use of the inch/pound system on all consumer product labels. Section 107 of the ATP Act, which was signed into law February 14, 1992, amends this provision of the FPLA.

It gives packagers 2 years within which to redesign their labels to include metric measurements, and gives packagers the option to also continue use of customary english measurement.

The purpose of section 107 is to conform U.S. labeling to the emerging worldwide metric standard which is being required to do business in more and more countries.

Section 107 was drafted to affect the labeling of packages, but not the customary sizing of products.

However, section 107's characterization of metric as the primary system of measurement caused concern in the food industry that the section might be interpreted to require expensive conversion to metric sizing in the packaging of goods.

H.R. 5343 puts metric and inch/pound measurement on an equal footing by requiring the use of both on consumer packages. It eliminates mention of the SI metric system as the primary system for measuring quantity and makes clear that no changes are required in package sizing.

In addition, the bill clarifies that metric labeling applies only to prepackaged goods and not to food products measured at the retail store level. Other minor changes, suggested by the food industry, simplify the way english units are displayed on packages.

H.R. 5343 has satisfied the concerns of the critics of section 107 as can be seen from letters from the Food Marketing Institute and International Dairy Foods Association.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD at this point the letters to which I just referred:

INTERNATIONAL DAIRY FOOD ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, June 24, 1992.

Hon. GEORGE BROWN,
Chairman, House Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: On behalf of the members of the Milk Industry Foundation, National Cheese Institute and International Ice Cream Association we thank you for your assistance in correcting problems presented to these industries by the metric provisions of the American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991. Your leadership in the recent introduction and approval by your Committee of H.R. 5343, to make technical corrections to the American Technology Preeminence Act in that regard, are most appreciated.

Without passage of this technical correction, dairy product processors, manufacturers and retailers will be faced with extensive and costly changes in their product packaging and distribution systems. It is important that the intent of the Committee be clarified so that the addition of metric measurement information on the label of products will not be misinterpreted to mean a more extensive conversion of packaging, etc. H.R. 5343, if passed, will make this clarification.

We urge swift action by the House of Representatives in adopting your amendment so that dairy foods companies and other businesses across America will not be unnecessarily burdened by conversion of packages to metric sizes. Our member companies and our staff here in Washington stand ready to help propel this needed technical correction.

Sincerely,

E. LINWOOD TIPTON,
President and CEO.

FOOD MARKETING INSTITUTE,
Washington, DC, June 18, 1992.

DEAR MEMBER OF CONGRESS: The Food Marketing Institute (FMI), on behalf of our nation's food retailers and wholesalers, strongly supports H.R. 5343 which repeals section 107 of the American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991 (P.L. 102-245) and makes technical amendments to the metric provisons in the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act. It is our understanding that H.R. 5343 will soon be placed on the Suspension Calendar and we urge you to vote in favor of this important legislation when that occurs.

FMI strongly supports this non-controversial legislation because it makes several important clarifications to the metric law. First and foremost, H.R. 5343 eliminates the requirement that metric units are to be the primary system of measurement on affected products. By providing for a dual system of English Units and Metric measurement declaration, H.R. 5343 avoids significant compliance and conversion costs to the food distribution industry and consumers. Additionally, the legislation clarifies that changes in packaging sizes are not required, and that only pre-packaged food items must display metric measurements on their labels. Thirdly, the technical amendments make it clear that unit pricing, advertising, nurition information, consumer recipe programs and general pricing information are not subject to metric requirements.

Finally, the technical amendments reaffirm that metric measurements shall appear on the label of a wide range of consumer products in order to enhance our nation's ability to compete in the global market place as we continue our efforts to educate American consumers about the metric system. For all these reasons, FMI endorses H.R. 5343 sponsored by Congressman George Brown (D-Calif.), Chairman of the House Science, Space, and Technology Committee, and we request your support for this bill.

Sincerely,

GEORGE GREEN,
Vice President, Assistant General Counsel.

Mr. Speaker, in my judgment, the amendments contained in H.R. 5343 are largely technical in nature; they change the wording of the statute to match our committee's intent in the American Technology Preeminence Act.

To make H.R. 5343 more consistent with House committee jurisdiction, the House Energy and Commerce Committee requested that we rewrite H.R. 5343 to repeal section 107 and to amend the FPLA directly.

This restructuring does not change the substance of H.R. 5343, but it does make it clear that the ATP Act is within the sole jurisdiction of the House Science Committee.

Likewise, the Committee on Energy and Commerce retains sole jurisdiction over the FPLA except for the limited overlap with Science Committee jurisdiction for those provisions that specify measurement systems.

At this point, I submit for the RECORD an exchange of letters between Chairmen BROWN and DINGELL which elaborate further on this jurisdictional point.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD the correspondence to which I referred:

COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE, SPACE, AND TECHNOLOGY,
Washington, DC, June 17, 1992.

Hon. JOHN DINGELL,
Chairman, Committee on Energy and Commerce, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR JOHN: On June 9, 1992, I introduced H.R. 5343 which was referred to the House Committees on Science, Space, and Technology, and Energy and Commerce. H.R. 5343 replaces amendments to the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act (FPLA) which were made in Section 107 of the American Technology Preeminence (ATP) Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-245).

Section 107 of the ATP Act amended the FPLA to make the SI metric system the primary system of measuring quantity on labels covered by that Act while permitting dual measurement in English units. The change was meant to be a "soft" metric conversion and to affect labels only. However, some packagers have interpreted Section 107 as requiring an expensive "hard" metric conversion leading to changes in the size of packaged goods, and requiring retailers to make costly changes. H.R. 5343 clarifies the amended FPLA by requiring use of both English and metric units on labels and by listing those measurements which are not covered by the Act.

On June 10, 1992, the Science, Space, and Technology Committee marked up H.R. 5343, and at your Committee's request, recast the amendment, without changing the substance, as an amendment solely to the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act in recognition of the Energy and Commerce Committee's jurisdiction over that Act. As you know, provisions dealing with the metric system of measurement are expressly within the Science Committee's jurisdiction, and our interest in the FPLA goes no further. In light of these assurances, I would appreciate your agreement to permit the scheduling of H.R. 5343 on the suspension calendar next week. Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

GEORGE E. BROWN, Jr.,
Chairman.

COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND COMMERCE,
Washington, DC, June 17, 1992.

Hon. GEORGE E. BROWN, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letter of June 17, 1992 concerning H.R. 5343. As you indicated, H.R. 5343 replaces amendments to the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act (FPLA) which were made in Section 107 of the American Technology Preeminence (ATP) Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-245).

As you will recall from last year, our Committee did not request a sequential referral of the ATP Act because of the leadership's desire to move the bill expeditiously. However, Section 107 of that Act did amend the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act, a statute that falls within the sole jurisdiction of this Committee. We have no substantive objection to H.R. 5343, and appreciate your Committee's recognition of our jurisdiction over this legislation. With that agreement, we have no objection to your placing H.R. 5343 on the suspension calendar and request that you place this exchange of letters in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD during floor consideration of the bill.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

JOHN D. DINGELL,
Chairman.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that H.R. 5343 is a very important clarification regarding measurement on labels and I urge my colleagues to support its enactment.

□ 1330

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. The bill, technical amendments to the American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991 and the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act, clarifies a metric provision in Public Law 102-245.

Currently, the law requires packaged goods to be labeled in both English and metric units. The wording in the existing law could be interpreted to require the use of metric units, for example, in produce in grocery stores.

The changes made by H.R. 5343 make it clear that stores would not be forced to sell grapes or green beans by the kilogram.

The intent of the metric provision in current law is to provide a gentle push to simply include metric units on packaging labels. It is not the legislative intent to force the United States industry into abandoning the English units.

Many people will remember that in the 1970's an attempt to force conversion to metric units was met with great resistance by the American public.

The sentiment was illustrated in the comic strip "Peanuts." When faced with learning unfamiliar metric units, Sally responded by saying, "If I saw a centimeter, I would step on it."

We do not wish to repeat the mistakes of the past and therefore the Committee brings to the House for consideration H.R. 5343.

I want to thank Chairman BROWN and ranking member WALKER for their leadership in moving this legislation through the committee and bringing it before the House in such an expeditious manner.

I also want to thank the subcommittee chairman, Mr. VALENTINE, for his willingness to forge this bipartisan legislation to clarify the current law before it caused a negative impact on the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to engage in a colloquy with the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE], the chairman of the subcommittee.

H.R. 5343 makes some important and necessary changes to rationalize the requirement of metric labeling. It clarifies that the metric requirement is intended only to cover labeling, and not to require packaging in metric units. It also specifically exempts food packaged at the retail level. Of course, there may be other businesses adversely affected. So I'd just like to note that section 1454(b) of Chapter 39 of the United States Code, Exemption of Commodities From Regulations, allows the Secretary of HHS to exempt others from the metric labeling requirement if impracticable. Certainly if the requirement will result in economic hardship or significant cost to an affected part it should be deemed impracticable. After all, since the goal of metric labeling is competitiveness, we should be sure to avoid any anticompetitiveness effects.

Does this reflect the gentleman's understanding?

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. VALENTINE. The gentleman is correct. The exceptional circumstances exemption to the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act requirements in section 1454(b) will apply to these amendments as well as the underlying act.

Mr. BROWN: Mr. Speaker, the SI metric system of measurement very rapidly is becoming a worldwide commercial standard. In the past 20 years, virtually every nation has taken major steps to adopt this system. By the time of the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988, the United States was alone among its trading partners in having failed in its conversion attempt. In 1975, the United States passed the Metric Conversion Act, a bill designed to facilitate voluntary U.S. conversion to metric measurement. Yet infighting on the Metric Board which was set up to promote volun'tary conversion to metric and some unfortunate choices, in initial conversion targets meant very little progress occurred during the 1970's. When President Reagan was elected in 1981 on a pledge to eliminate unnecessary Government agencies, the Metric Board was an easy target for consolidation. So President Reagan abolished the Metric Board and assigned its functions to a tiny, underfunded office in the Department of Commerce.

Section 5164 of the Ominbus Trade and Competitiveness Act took a different approach to meteric conversion. It declared metric to be the preferred U.S. system of measurement and focused on Government procurement and other business-related activities. Section 5164 mandated that these activities be conducted in metric to the extent feasible by the end of the current fiscal year. Although the effort had a slow start, conversion activities picked up significantly after the issuance of a Presidential Executive order last summer. The Japanese Government's identification as a nontariff trade barrier of the United State failure to convert to metric and the European Community's rapid movement towards metric in unified European commercial standards also have made it clear that inability to export in metric will hurt United States businesses dearly.

The Congress, when it required use of metric measure in the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act through section 107 of the American Technology Preeminence Act, removed one of the last vestiges of statutory language which discriminated against metric. To me, changing the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act to require metric on consumer product labels was a conforming amendment to bring that statute in line with the overall Government policy as set forth in the Ominbus Trade and Competitiveness Act. Our debate in the Science Committee focused exclusively on labels. This provision was meant to require a soft metric conversion. To comply, a business was not required to redesign its products in hard metric measurements however desirable that may be in the long term. Rather, it was required to state on its labels the metric equivalent of the inch-pound measurements. Furthermore, nothing in the statute was intended to stop packagers from also using inch-pound units and putting those units first if the packager so desired. However, the wording of the statute caused fear among certain members of the food industry that regulations promulgated under this section would be considerably less flexible than the statute itself.

Therefore, I introduced H.R. 5343 to clarify what is required of labelers and to end controversy surrounding section 107. H.R. 5343 repeals section 107 and replaces it with a requirement that by February 14, 1994, labels contain both metric and inch-pound measurements. H.R. 5343, by listing what is not covered by this requirement, also makes clear that the change applies only to labels and not to the sizing of packages. Packagers are free to use either metric or English units in creating their packages so long as the equivalent measure in the other system also appears on the package.

Mr. Speaker, this is a sensible, clarifying change which is worthy or our colleague's support. The change is also supported by those in the food industry who were disturbed by section 107 of the American Technology Preeminence Act. Therefore, I urge its passage so that we can get on with the more important matter of revamping our system of measurement to permit ease of trade with the rest of the industrial world.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his response.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER, pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The qestion is on the motion offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5343, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to make technical amendments to the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act with respect to its treatment of the SI metric system, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the legislation just considered and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND RELATED DEMENTIAS RESEARCH AMENDMENTS OF 1992

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3082) to amend the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act of 1986 to reauthorize the act, and other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3082

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Research Amendments of 1992".

SEC. 2. SHORT TITLE OF ACT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 901 of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act of 1986 (42 U.S.C. 11201 note) is amended by striking "Services Research Act of 1986" and inserting "Research Act of 1992".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Public Law 99-660 is amended in the heading for title IX by striking "SERVICES".

SEC. 3. REFERENCES.

Except as otherwise specifically provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or a repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to that section or other provision of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Research Act of 1992, as designated pursuant to the amendment made by section 2 of this Act.

SEC. 4. FINDINGS.

Section 902 (42 U.S.C. 11201) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (7) through (12) as paragraphs (9) through (14);

(2) by striking paragraphs (4), (5), and (6); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraphs:

"(4) the cost of caring for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias is great, and conservative estimates range between $38,000,000,000 and $42,000,000,000 per year solely for direct costs;

"(5) progress in the neurosciences and behavioral sciences has demonstrated the interdependence and mutual reinforcement of basic science, clinical research, and services research for Alzheimer's disease and related dementias;

"(6) programs initiated as part of the Decade of the Brain are likely to provide significant progress in understanding the fundamental mechanisms underlying the causes of, and treatments for, Alzheimer's disease and related dementias;

"(7) although substantial progress has been made in recent years in identifying possible leads to the causes of Alzheimer's disease and related dementias, and more progress can be expected in the near future, there is little likelihood of a breakthrough in the immediate future that would eliminate or substantially reduce—

"(A) the number of individuals with the disease and dementias; or

"(B) the difficulties of caring for the individuals;

"(8) the responsibility for care of individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias falls primarily on their families, and the care is very often financially and emotionally devastating;".

SEC. 5. COUNCIL ON ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE.

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in paragraph (2), by striking "Surgeon General of the United States" and inserting "Surgeon General of the Public Health Service";

(B) in paragraph (6), by striking "and Communicative Diseases" and inserting "Disorders";

(C) by striking paragraphs (10), (11), and (12); and

(D) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(10) the Administrator for Health Care Policy and Research;

"(11) the Administrator of the Health Resources and Services Administration;

"(12) the Director of the National Center for Nursing Research;

"(13) the Chief Medical Director of the Department of Veterans Affairs;

"(14) the Director of the National Center for Health Statistics; and

"(15) such additional members as the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter referred to as the 'Secretary') considers appropriate.";

(2) by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following new subsection:

"(b) The Assistant Secretary for Health shall serve as the Chairman of the Council."; and

(3) in subsection (d), by striking "twice" and inserting "once".

(b) FUNCTIONS.—Section 912 (42 U.S.C. 11212) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by adding "and" at the end of paragraph (3);

(B) by striking "; and" at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting a period; and

(C) by striking paragraph (5); and

(2) by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) The Chairman of the Council shall annually submit to the committees listed in paragraph (2) a report containing information on—

"(A) progress made by research, sponsored by the Federal Government, on Alzheimer's disease and related dementias; and

"(B) new directions that the Council considers potentially important in research on Alzheimer's disease and related dementias.

"(2) The Chairman of the Council shall submit the report described in paragraph (1) to—

"(A) the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives;

"(B) the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives;

"(C) the Committee on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives;

"(D) the Select Committee on Aging of the House of Representatives;

SEC. 6. ADVISORY PANEL ON ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Section 921 (42 U.S.C. 11221) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(2), by striking "the Director of the National Center for Health Services Research and Health Care Technology Assessment" and inserting "the Administrator for Health Care Policy and Research";

(2) in subsection (d), to read as follows:

"(d)(1)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), members of the Panel appointed under subsection (a)(1) shall each serve for a term of 3 years.

"(B) Of the members appointed under subsection (a)(1) that are serving on the Panel on the day before the date of the enactment of this subsection—

"(i) five shall serve for a term that expires on such date;

"(ii) five shall serve for a term that expires 1 year after such date; and

"(iii) five shall serve for a term that expires 2 years after such date.

"(2) A vacancy on the Panel shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment was made, and not later than 90 days after the date on which the vacancy first arises. A vacancy on the Panel shall not affect the powers of the Panel.";

(3) in subsection (f), by striking "twice" and inserting "once";

(4) in subsection (h), by striking "of $100 per day" and inserting "at the daily equivalent of the maximum rate specified for GS–15 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code,"; and

(5) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(i) Notwithstanding section 14 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.), on September 30, 1994, the Panel shall be abolished and all programs established under this part shall terminate.".

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 923 (42 U.S.C. 11223) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 923. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1996.".

SEC. 7. RESEARCH RELATING TO SERVICES FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND RELATED DEMENTIAS AND FAMILIES OF THE INDIVIDUALS.

(a) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF MENTAL HEALTH.—

(1) GRANTS.—Section 931 (42 U.S.C. 11251) is amended—

(A) by striking subsections (b)(2) and (c);

(B) in subsection (a), by inserting "and specialized care" after "services"; and

(C) in subsection (b)(1)—

(i) by striking "Within 6 months" and all that follows through "plan shall" and inserting "The Director of the National Institute of Mental Health shall";

(ii) in subparagraph (A)—

(I) by striking "provide for" and inserting "ensure that the research conducted under subsection (a) includes";

(II) by striking clause (iii) and inserting the following new clause:

"(iii) the optimal range, types, and cost-effectiveness of services and specialized care for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and for their families, in community, residential, and institutional settings, particularly with respect to—

"(I) the design of the services and care;

"(II) appropriate staffing for the provision of the services and care;

"(III) the timing of the services and care during the progression of the disease or dementias; and

"(IV) the appropriate mix and coordination of the services and specialized care;";

(III) in clause (iv), by inserting "the evaluation of best practices for the development of" before "appropriate"; and

(IV) in clauses (v) and (vii), by striking "and nursing home services" and inserting "nursing home services, and other residential services and care"; and

(iii) in subparagraph (B), by striking "research carried out under the plan" and inserting "the research".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 931(b), as amended by paragraph (1) of this subsection, is amended—

(A) by striking "(1)";

(B) by redesignating subparagraphs (A) and (B) as paragraphs (1) and (2), respectively;

(C) in paragraph (1) (as so redesignated), by redesignating clauses (i) through (vii) as subparagraphs (A) through (G), respectively; and

(D) in paragraph (1)(C) (as so redesignated), by redesignating subclauses (I) through (IV) as clauses (i) through (iv), respectively.

(3) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 933 (42 U.S.C. 11253) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 933. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subpart such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1996.".

(b) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE AGENCY FOR HEALTH CARE POLICY AND RESEARCH.—

(1) RESEARCH PROGRAM AND PLAN.—Subpart 2 of part D (42 U.S.C. 11261 et seq.) is amended—

(A) in the heading for the subpart, by striking "National Center" and all that follows and inserting the following: "Agency for Health Care Policy and Research"; and

(B) by amending section 934 to read as follows:

"SEC. 934. RESEARCH PROGRAM.

"(a) GRANTS FOR RESEARCH.—The Administrator for Health Care Policy and Research shall conduct, or make grants for the conduct of, research relevant to appropriate services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and for their families.

"(b) RESEARCH SUBJECTS.—The Administrator for Health Care Policy and Research shall ensure that research conducted under subsection (a) shall include research concerning—

"(1) improving the organization, delivery, and financing of services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and for their families, including research on the design, staffing, and operation of special care units for the individuals in institutional settings;

"(2) the costs incurred by individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and by their families in obtaining services, particularly services that are essential to the individuals and that are not generally required by other patients under long-term care programs; and

"(3) the costs, cost-effectiveness, and effectiveness of various interventions to provide services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias and for their families."

(2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 936 (42 U.S.C. 11263) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 936. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subpart such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1996.".

SEC. 8. TECHNICAL CORRECTION.

Section 782(g)(1)(A) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 295g–2(g)(1)(A)) is amended by inserting "a school of osteopathic medicine," after "a school of medicine,".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 3082, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3082, as amended, to revise and extend various authorities established under the 1986 Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Research Act. This legislation was introduced by two champions of research on Alzheimer's disease—our subcommittee colleague, Mr. BRUCE, and our House colleague, Ms. SNOWE. It enjoys broad bipartisan support and was reported out of both the Health Subcommittee and the full Energy and Commerce Committee without dispute.

The purpose of the legislation. Mr. Speaker, is to reauthorize and improve a number of sections to the 1986 research law which established—for the first time—a comprehensive Alzheimer's disease research program.

Among the most important elements of this program is the Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's Research. This group has published a number of significant reports that include recommendations on appropriate action by both the Congress and the Department of Health and Human Services on Alzheimer's disease and other dementias. It continues to work on additional studies and recommendations for our consideration. H.R. 3082 would reauthorize the Panel for a number of years so that it may be able to pursue this and other important matters.

H.R. 3082 also includes several minor changes and technical corrections to the 1986 statute. Together, these amendments will serve to improve the basic authority and operation of the Alzheimer's disease research program.

Again, Mr. Speaker, this legislation enjoys strong bipartisan support. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to my colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3082, the Alzheimer's disease and related dementia's research amendments. I commend the gentlewoman from Maine [Ms. SNOWE] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRUCE] for introducing this important measure. I also commend the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], and the subcommittee's ranking minority member, the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER], for bringing this important measure to the floor at this time.

The Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act was enacted in 1986 to establish a council on Alzheimer's disease to coordinate programs and help agencies to share information, establish an advisory council on Alzheimer's disease made up of experts to provide advice to the Department of Health and Human Services on priority research and treatment, requiring the National Institute of Mental Health and the National Center for Health Services Research and Health Care Technology Assessment to support research into Alzheimer's disease and related dementias, and to develop a plan to conduct this research.

H.R. 3082 reauthorizes such sums as necessary for the 1967 act through fiscal year 1994 and makes technical changes to some of its programs.

Mr. Speaker, an estimated 4 million older Americans suffer from Alzheimer's disease and this figure may double or triple in the next century. More specifically, there are an estimated 16,000 Alzheimer's disease victims in my district. We need to find ways to help our families cope with this devastating disease.

We need to continue to address our concerns for our Nation's health care system as well as support for its improvement in order to ensure all Americans the best health care possible, especially those who suffer from long-term diseases such as Alzheimer's disease. We need to find solutions which continue to allow our citizens access to the finest therapies, most capable providers, and which preserves individual choice and responsibility. Our society must make certain that every American has access to our quality health care system without discriminating against the elderly and disabled.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to continue to advocate and support the needs of Alzheimer's patients, and to maintain their concerns as a high priority in Congress by supporting H.R. 3082.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to our colleague, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS].

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of H.R. 3082, the Alzheimer's disease and related dementias research amendments, I rise in strong support for this much needed legislation.

H.R. 3082 extends our research efforts to find a cure for this tragic illness. Approximately 4 million Americans are afflicted with Alzheimer's.

Unless we find a cure or means of prevention, it is estimated that 14 million Americans could fall victim to the disease by the middle of the next century.

I congratulate my colleague, Ms. SNOWE, for her continued dedication to this cause, and her hard work in bringing this legislation before us.

I strongly believe that medical advances and improvements in the health of our citizens are heavily dependent on Federal medical research programs. These programs have resulted in steady progress on Alzheimer's, but much more must be done.

I urge all Members to support this bill so that our research scientists can continue their vital work to understand and treat Alzheimer's and related disorders.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3082, legislation designed to promote and coordinate Federal research into treatment and services for patients suffering from Alzheimer's disease and for their families.

Alzheimer's disease currently affects an estimated 4 million Americans. This devastating disease is manifested initially by mild forgetfulness and eventually erodes all cognitive and functional abilities, leading to total dependence on caregivers and ultimately results in death.

The prevalence of this disease increases with age. Persons in the 65 to 74 year age range have a 1 in 25 chance of developing Alzheimer's disease; for those 85 and older, this likelihood rises to a nearly 1 in 2 chance. As we all know, this 85-plus age group is the most rapidly growing sector of the American population. Thus, it appears that our country may be facing a dramatic increase in the overall number of individuals suffering from this disease in the coming century.

I commend Representatives SNOWE and BRUCE for their leadership on this issue and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this bill.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3082, the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Research Amendments of 1991. First, I would like to commend Subcommittee Chairman WAXMAN for addressing the need for expanded Federal research funding on Alzheimer's disease.

This bill extends the Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's Disease, and research relating to services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias, and their families, as originally authorized in Public Law 99–660. This is legislation which Senator GRASSLEY and I introduced in 1986, and in which Senator METZENBAUM also played a leading role.

For many years, I have been concerned about the physical, emotional, and financial devastation which Alzheimer's disease inflicts upon its victims, including the hidden victim, the family caregiver. As an early leader in Congress on behalf of families affected by Alzheimer's disease, I have sponsored legislation and held forums and hearings in support of Alzheimer's disease research and supportive services for caregivers since 1983.

As you are probably aware, recent research indicates that the prevalence of Alzheimer's disease is considerably higher than previously estimated. The increasing prevalence of Alzheimer's disease is a result of our rapidly aging population. Consequently, the number of Alzheimer's patients may reach 14 million by the middle of the next century if biomedical research does not soon find the cause and ways to treat and eventually cure this dreaded disease. Certainly the projected increase in people with Alzheimer's disease will have a staggering impact on the need and costs of long-term care for families, communities, and State and Federal Government.

Although Federal funding for biomedical research on Alzheimer's disease has more than doubled in the past few years, it is still far short of what is needed to follow promising leads and conquer this dreaded disease. It is imperative that the Federal Government continue to fund research that may provide insight into all aspects of Alzheimer's disease.

The Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's Disease, which this bill reauthorizes, was established by the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Act of 1986 to advise Congress and the executive branch about emerging issues and priorities in research and service delivery regarding Alzheimer's disease and related dementias. In its two published reports, this panel of outstanding experts evaluated the current status of, and made recommendations for legislative and administrative action in, four mandated areas: biomedical research, research relating to services for individuals with Alzheimer's disease and their families, systems of home and community-based services, and health care and social services financing. The Panel has fulfilled its mandates most effectively. However, given the magnitude of the disorder, the number of still unanswered questions and the need for further advice to Congress and the executive branch about new directions in research and the provisions of care, the Panel needs to be reauthorized.

Likewise, the Council on Alzheimer's Disease was established to coordinate continuing research on Alzheimer's disease within the Department of Health and Human Services [DHHS], to establish a mechanism for the sharing of information, to identify the most promising areas of research, and to establish mechanisms to use the results of research. The Council has been very effective in this mandate among numerous DHHS programs and agencies, within a broad-based research framework. As a result, the need to extend the Council is clear.

Until more progress is made in biomedical research, it is imperative to enhance focusing on finding the best ways to care for people with Alzheimer's disease, and to alleviate the stress of and strengthen and support family caregivers. Studies being funded by the National Institutes of Mental Health have found evidence that the chronic impact of caregiving affects immune functioning, thus increasing the incidence of infectious diseases. The need for services research is clear.

Until the cause, cure, and treatment are found, the human and fiscal costs of Alzheimer's and related diseases will accelerate precipitously with our rapidly aging population. The reauthorization of the Advisory Panel and Council on Alzheimer's disease, and of services research, will help to coordinate and give expert guidance to ensure a stronger and more coherent, focused Federal response to this devastating disease.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3082, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FERTILITY CLINIC SUCCESS RATE AND CERTIFICATION ACT OF 1992

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4773) to provide for reporting of pregnancy success rates of assisted reproductive technology programs and for the certification of embryo laboratories, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4773

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Fertility Clinic Success Rate and Certification Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. ASSISTED REPRODUCTIVE TECHNOLOGY PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Effective 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, each assisted reproductive technology (as defined in section 7) program shall annually report to the Secretary through the Centers for Disease Control—

(1) pregnancy success rates achieved by such program through each assisted reproductive technology, and

(2) the identity of each embryo laboratory (as defined in section 7) used by such program and whether the laboratory is certified under section 3 or has applied for such certification.

(b) PREGNANCY SUCCESS RATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsection (a)(1), the Secretary shall, in consultation with the organizations referenced in subsection (c), define pregnancy success rates and shall make public any proposed definition in such manner as to facilitate comment from any person (including any Federal or other public agency) during its development.

(2) DEFINITION.—In developing the definition of pregnancy success rates, the Secretary shall take into account the effect on success rates of age, diagnosis, and other significant factors and shall include in such rates—

(A) the basic live birth rate calculated for each assisted reproductive technology performed by an assisted reproductive technology program by dividing the number of pregnancies which result in live births by the number of ovarian stimulation procedures attempted by such program, and

(B) the live birth rate per successful oocyte retrieval procedure calculated for each assisted reproductive technology performed by an assisted reproductive technology program by dividing the number of pregnancies which result in live births by the number of successful oocyte retrieval procedures performed by such program.

(c) CONSULTATION.—In developing the definition under subsection (b), the Secretary shall consult with appropriate consumer and professional organizations with expertise in using, providing, and evaluating professional services and embryo laboratories associated with assisted reproductive technologies.

SEC. 3. CERTIFICATION OF EMBRYO LABORATORIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) DEVELOPMENT.—Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary, through the Centers for Disease Control, shall develop a model program for the certification of embryo laboratories (referred to in this section as a "certification program") to be carried out by the States.

(2) CONSULTATION.—In developing the certification program under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consult with appropriate consumer and professional organizations with expertise in using, providing, and evaluating professional services and embryo laboratories associated with the assisted reproductive technology programs.

(b) DISTRIBUTION.—The Secretary shall distribute a description of the certification program to—

(1) the governor of each State,

(2) the presiding officers of each State legislature,

(3) the public health official of each State, and

(4) the official responsible in each State for the operation of the State's contract with the Secretary under section 1864 of the Social Security Act and shall encourage such officials to assist in the State adopting such program.

(c) REQUIREMENTS.—The certification program shall include the following requirements:

(1) ADMINISTRATION.—The certification program shall be administered by the State and shall provide for the inspection and certification of embryo laboratories in the State by the State or by approved accreditation organizations.

(2) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The certification program shall provide for the submission of an application to a State by an embryo laboratory for certification, in such form as may be specified by the State. Such an application shall include—

(A) assurances satisfactory to the State that the embryo laboratory will be operated in accordance with the standards under subsection (d),

(B) a report to the State identifying the assisted reproductive technology programs with which the laboratory is associated, and

(C) such other information as the State finds necessary.

An embryo laboratory which meets the requirements of section 353 of the Public Health Service Act shall, for the purposes of subparagraph (A) be considered in compliance with the standards referred to in such subparagraph which are the same as the standards in effect under such section 353.

(d) STANDARDS.—The certification program shall include the following standards developed by the Secretary:

(1) A standard to assure consistent performance of procedures by each embryo laboratory certified under the certification program or by an approved accreditation organization in a State which has not adopted the certification program.

(2) A standard for a quality assurance and a quality control program to assure valid, reliable, and reproducible procedures in the laboratory.

(3) A standard for the maintenance of records (on a program by program basis) on laboratory tests and procedures performed, including the scientific basis of, and the methodology used for, the tests, procedures, and preparation of any standards or controls, criteria for acceptable and unacceptable outcomes, criteria for sample rejection, and procedures for safe sample disposal.

(4) A standard for the maintenance of written records on personnel and facilities necessary for proper and effective operation of the laboratory, schedules of preventive maintenance, function verification for equipment, and the release of such records to the State upon demand.

(5) A standard for the use of such personnel who meet such qualifications as the Secretary may develop.

(e) CERTIFICATION UNDER STATE PROGRAMS.—A State may qualify to adopt the certification program if the State has submitted an application to the Secretary to adopt such program and the Secretary has approved the application. Such an application shall include—

(1) assurances by the State satisfactory to the Secretary that the certification program within the State meets the requirements of this section,

(2) an agreement to make such reports as the Secretary may require, and

(3) information about any proposed use of accreditation organizations under subsection (g).

(f) USE OF ACCREDITATION ORGANIZATIONS.—A State which has adopted the certification program may use accreditation organizations approved under section 4 to inspect and certify embryo laboratories.

(g) INSPECTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A State which qualifies to adopt the certification program within the State shall conduct inspections in accordance with paragraph (2) to determine if laboratories in the State meet the requirements of such program. Such inspections shall be carried out by the State or by accreditation organizations used by the State under subsection (g).

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—Inspections carried out under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) be periodic and unannounced, or

(B) be announced in such circumstances as the Secretary determines will not diminish the likelihood of discovering deficiencies in the operations of a laboratory.

Before making a determination under subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall make public, in such manner as to facilitate comment from any person (including any Federal or other public agency), a proposal indicating the circumstances under which announced inspections would be permitted.

(3) RESULTS.—The specific findings, including deficiencies, identified in an inspection carried out under paragraph (1) and any subsequent corrections to those deficiencies shall be announced and made available to the public upon request beginning no later than 60 days after the date of the inspection.

(h) VALIDATION INSPECTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may enter and inspect, during regular hours of operation, embryo laboratories—

(A) which have been certified by a State under the certification program, or

(B) which have been certified by an accreditation organization approved by the Secretary under section 4 for the purpose of determining whether the laboratory is being operated in accordance with the standards in subsection (d).

(2) ACCESS TO FACILITIES AND RECORDS.—In conducting an inspection of an embryo laboratory under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall have access to all facilities, equipment, materials, records, and information which the Secretary determines is necessary to determine if such laboratory is being operated in accordance with the standards in subsection (d). As part of such an inspection, the Secretary may copy any material, record, or information inspected or require it to be submitted to the Secretary. Such an inspection may be made only upon the presentation of identification to the owner, operator, or agent in charge of the laboratory being inspected.

(3) FAILURE TO COMPLY.—If the Secretary determines as a result of an inspection under paragraph (1) that the embryo laboratory is not in compliance with the standards in subsection (d), the Secretary shall—

(A) notify the State in which the laboratory is located and, if appropriate, the accreditation organization which certified the laboratory,

(B) make available to the public the results of the inspection,

(C) conduct additional inspections of other embryo laboratories under paragraph (1) to determine if—

(i) such State in carrying out the certification program is reliably identifying the deficiencies of such laboratory, or

(ii) the accreditation organization which certified such laboratories is reliably identifying such deficencies, and

(D) if the Secretary determines—

(i) that such State in carrying out the certification program has not met the requirements applicable to such program, or

(ii) the accreditation organization which certified such laboratory has not met the requirements of section 4, the Secretary may revoke the approval of the State certification program or revoke the approval of such accreditation organization.

(i) LIMITATION.—

(1) SECRETARY.—In developing the certification program, the Secretary may not establish any regulation, standard, or requirement which has the effect of exercising supervision or control over the practice of medicine in assisted reproductive technology programs.

(2) STATE.—In adopting the certification program, a State may not establish any regulation, standard, or requirement which has the effect of exercising supervision or control over the practice of medicine in assisted reproductive technology programs.

(j) TERM.—The term of a certification issued by a State or an accreditation organization in a State shall be prescribed by the Secretary in the certification program and shall be valid for a period of time to be defined by the Secretary through the public comment process described in subsection (h)(2). The Secretary shall provide an application for recertification to be submitted at the time of changes in the ownership of a certified laboratory or changes in the administration of such a laboratory.

SEC. 4. ACCREDITATION ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) APPROVAL OF ACCREDITATION ORGANIZATIONS.—Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act the Secretary, through the Centers for Disease Control, shall promulgate criteria and procedures for the approval of accreditation organizations to inspect and certify embryo laboratories. The procedures shall require an application to the Secretary by an accreditation organization for approval. An accreditation organization which has received such an approval—

(1) may be used by States in the certification program under section 3 to inspect and certify embryo laboratories, or

(2) may certify embryo laboratories in States which have not adopted such a certification program.

(b) CRITERIA AND PROCEDURES.—The criteria and procedures promulgated under subsection (a) shall include—

(1) requirements for submission of such reports and the maintenance of such records as the Secretary or a State may require, and

(2) requirements for the conduct of inspections under section 3(h).

(c) EVALUATIONS.—The Secretary shall evaluate annually the performance of each accreditation organization approved by the Secretary by—

(1) inspecting under section 3(i) a sufficient number of embryo laboratories accredited by such an organization to allow a reasonable estimate of the performance of such organization, and

(2) such other means as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(d) TRANSITION.—If the Secretary revokes approval under section 3(i)(3)(D) of an accreditation organization after an evaluation under subsection (c), the certification of any embryo laboratory accredited by the organization shall continue in effect for 60 days after the laboratory is notified by the Secretary of the withdrawal of approval, except that the Secretary may extend the period during which the certification shall remain in effect if the Secretary determines that the laboratory submitted an application to another approved accreditation organization for certification after receipt of such notice in a timely manner.

SEC. 5. CERTIFICATION REVOCATION AND SUSPENSION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A certification issued by a State or an accreditation organization for an embryo laboratory shall be revoked or suspended if the State or organization finds, on the basis of inspections and after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the owner or operator of the laboratory, that the owner or operator or any employee of the laboratory—

(1) has been guilty of misrepresentation in obtaining the certification,

(2) has failed to comply with any standards under section 3 applicable to the certification, or

(3) has refused a request of the State or accreditation organization for permission to inspect the laboratory, its operations, and records.

(b) EFFECT.—If the certification of an embryo laboratory is revoked or suspended, the certification of the laboratory shall continue in effect for 60 days after the laboratory receives notice of the revocation or suspension. If the certification of an embryo laboratory is revoked or suspended, the laboratory may apply for recertification after one year after the date of the revocation or suspension.

SEC. 6. PUBLICATION.

The Secretary, through the Centers for Disease Control, shall not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act and annually thereafter publish and distribute to the States and the public—

(1)(A) pregnancy success rates reported to the Secretary under section 2(a)(1) and, in the case of an assisted reproductive technology program which failed to report one or more success rates as required under such section, the name of each such program and each pregnancy success rate which the program failed to report, and

(B) from information reported under section 2(a)(2)—

(i) the identity of each embryo laboratory in a State which has adopted the certification program under such program and whether such laboratory is certified under section 3,

(ii) the identity of each embryo laboratory in a State which has not adopted such certification program and which has been certified by an accreditation organization approved by the Secretary under section 4, and

(iii) in the case of an embryo laboratory which is not certified under section 3 or certified by an accreditation organization approved by the Secretary under section 4, whether the laboratory applied for certification.

SEC. 7. FEES.

The Secretary may require the payment of fees for the purpose of, and in an amount sufficient to cover the cost of, administering this Act. A State operating a program under section 3 may require the payment of fees for the purpose of, and in an amount sufficient to cover the costs of, administering its program.

SEC. 8. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act:

(1) ASSISTED REPRODUCTIVE TECHNOLOGY.—The term "assisted reproductive technology" means all treatments or procedures which include the handling of human oocytes or embryos, including in vitro fertilization, gamete intrafallopian transfer, zygote intrafallopian transfer, and such other specific technologies as the Secretary may include in this definition, after making public any proposed definition in such manner as to facilitate comment from any person (including any Federal or other public agency).

(2) EMBRYO LABORATORY.—The term "embryo laboratory" means a facility in which human oocytes are subject to assisted reproductive technology treatment or procedures based on manipulation of oocytes or embryos which are subject to implantation.

(3) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

SEC. 9. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect upon the expiration of 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4773, as amended. This legislation was introduced by two of our colleagues on the Health Subcommittee, Mr. WYDEN and Mr. LENT. It enjoys broad bipartisan support and was reported out of both the Health Subcommittee and the full Energy and Commerce Committee without dispute.

The purpose of H.R. 4773, Mr. Speaker, is to require infertility programs to report pregnancy success rates to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and to direct the Secretary to develop a model program for State certification of embryo laboratories.

During hearings conducted by our subcommittee, we learned that significant advancements in assisted reproductive technologies have made it possible for thousands of couples to conceive a child. In 1990, almost 20,000 women underwent in vitro fertilization procedures resulting in nearly 4,000 live births.

Unfortunately, the costs of these programs are high—fees in excess of $10,000 per month have been reported—and the information available to consumers is often incomplete and misleading. Many couples have been misled by success claims that are distorted and inflated.

As a result of these problems, infertility experts, consumers, and the Government have been working together to improve the performance of these programs, and to provide for better public information and accountability.

As I noted previously, our subcommittee colleague, Congressman WYDEN, has been a leader in these efforts. He has held a number of hearings in his own Small Business Subcommittee and has worked with professional and consumer groups to fashion the bill before us today. I want to commend both him, and Mr. LENT, for their efforts to address these problems, and to develop a bill which has broad support.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation to encourage the accreditation of infertility laboratories to ensure that the growing market for highly sophisticated infertility services is appropriately monitored.

I want to commend the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN], and the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT] for working out the concerns that have been raised about this proposal, and I urge colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN], the author of this legislation who has done the preliminary work and the legislative work to bring this bill before us today.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank both the ranking minority member and the chairman of the subcommittee, Chairman WAXMAN and Mr. DANNEMEYER, as well as the majority and minority staff for putting in a tremendous amount of time with the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT], and myself to try to perfect this legislation. This has been truly a bipartisan bill. And I think it is especially important at this time to note the role of the administration as well. Both Dr. Roper and Dr. Sullivan have over the last year or year-and-a-half spent a considerable amount of time discussing this issue with me. They have contributed in a very positive and significant way to getting this bill to the floor, and I want to extend my thanks to Dr. Sullivan and to Dr. Roper for their support and the time that they have given to this Member.

Mr. Speaker, almost 1 in 10 couples in our country are infertile.

This number is expected to rise in the years ahead as more and more couples wait until later in life to have children, and our country faces the increased incidence of sexually transmitted diseases, which can cause infertility problems.

Almost $1 billion was spent on infertility services last year. In vitro fertilization, which this bill deals with specifically, is one of the fast-growing areas of our health care system.

As the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], the chairman, noted, extraordinary sums of money can be spent by vulnerable couples on these services. Our committee heard that it is not uncommon for a couple to spend $30,000 to $40,000 for these services.

Yet, with what we see in this very fast-growing area of health care is that infertility services are completely unregulated, and infertile couples have been exploited, and continue to be exploited. This has been seen most recently in a major case here in the Virginia area.

What we face in our Nation now is millions of couples reaching out to use these services, couples who want a baby more than anything else in their life. You have innovative technologies many citizens are unfamiliar with, together with a completely unregulated health care environment. This combustible mix has created a field that is just ripe for exploitation.

For years now, leaders in the infertility field have sounded the alarm bell about the exploitation of consumers. For example, in the November 1987 issue of "Fertility and Sterility," appeared an editorial entitled "Are We Exploiting the Infertile Couple?" This landmark statement of professional principles was authored by 11 of the most distinguished fertility specialists in the United States.

They stated that "the lack of standards and absence of a credentialing process with [In Vitro Fertilization is] disturbing," and expressed concern that "the motive for establishing [some infertility] programs may be [little more than] * * * an attempt by a hospital corporation to increase its market share."

But these whistleblowing experts reserved their most scathing criticism for their colleagues who exaggerated pregnancy success rates and misled couples seeking help at infertility clinics. They stated that:

> Infertile patients often develop unrealistically high expectations regarding specific therapies. The medical community is partly responsible for these inflated expectations when practitioners claim pregnancy rates that far exceed those found in the current literature. * * *
> [For example,] patients are often not told that the practitioner has limited experience or success with this operative procedure or is quoting another surgeon's statistics * * * we strongly advise that each surgeon present his or her own pregnancy rates in talking with patients.

In an effort to remedy this situation, Mr. LENT and I drafted this legislation that stipulates the following:

First, all fertility clinics would be required to report their pregnancy success rates, in line with the uniform definitions worked out by the Secretary in consultation with the Centers for Disease Control.

Second, the Federal Government would annually publish these pregnancy success rates in a consumer guide booklet, noting where appropriate the clinics which had failed to report some or all of their success rates.

Third, all fertility clinics would be required to identify the embryo laboratories that they rely on for labwork. This information would also be published in the Secretary's annual consumer guide.

Fourth, the HHS Secretary would develop a model program for the inspection and certification of embryo labs, and promulgate this model certification program to every State for their consideration and voluntary adoption.

Fifth, States may implement the model lab certification program in either of two ways: Either directly through a State inspection program, or through a private accreditation organization approved by the HHS Secretary.

If a State fails to implement this model certification program, the Federal Government would simply report this fact to the public in its annual consumer guide. Also, under our bill, embryo labs operating in a State that did not adopt the model certification program would still get certified by an accreditation organization which has been approved by the Secretary, and have their certification status published in the annual consumer guide.

This legislation would empower infertile couples by giving them a consumer guide in which the clinics with low success rates, or those that don't report, will be exposed. Couples will for the first time have the tools to be informed consumers, and can either avoid these clinics, or ask the clinic administrators to supply them with unreported success rate information.

Mr. Speaker, this whole bill is predicated on the well-accepted idea that consumers, empowered with sound information about patient outcomes, can reward the best fertility clinics by taking their business to those clinics, and avoid those with poor success rates or those that use uncertified embryo labs to perform critical procedures, or which simply fail to report their success rate experience.

The legislation involves no unfunded Federal or State costs. The States and the Federal Government would be authorized to assess fees so that clinics would pay for the quality assurance program.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, there are many honorable and compassionate health care professionals working in the fertility field. But the infertility business is booming, and the lure of deep pockets has already attracted entrepreneurs less interested in health care than in cashing in on hopeful couples' willingness to pay huge sums for a chance to have a family. The legislation we are considering today will establish a meaningful set of consumer protections to help these couples get what they want most—a child.

A number of professional groups, as the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], the chairman, and the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER], have noted, have worked hard to try to address these concerns. In particular, I would like to single out the excellent work of the American Fertility Society, both in terms of their voluntary guidelines and the cooperation they have shown the majority and the minority of our committee in working on this legislation. I think they have a very fine program, and they are to be commended for it.

The problem, however, is that any professional society can, at best, have a voluntary program. We know that perhaps 15 percent of the clinics, those that probably cause the most problems in terms of exploitation of families and the consumers, are the ones where couples are not getting voluntary success-rate information, and where we are not seeing them follow the sensible guidelines of the American Fertility Society. That is why it is time for government to step in and set some basic ground rules to protect consumers and families in this area. That is what this legislation does.

It provides for the Department of Health and Human Services to ensure uniform reporting of pregnancy success rates, and to develop a model program that all States could adopt. This will allow consumers to determine, first, whether a clinic had success rates that were acceptable to them and, second, whether a State and a program was in compliance with these model guidelines. That seems to me to be a responsible way to address the growing consumer concerns about infertility services.

I would just like to thank my colleagues again and also the staff of the minority, Howard Cohen and Mary McGrane, who I understand we are going to be losing shortly to another assignment. She has been awfully helpful to this Member, and I know Members on both sides of the aisle. Thanks also to Ruth Katz and Michael Hash and Karen Nelson on the majority staff who were very helpful, and finally my friend and chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN]. Somehow he always makes time for the kinds of consumer concerns that this Member has, even when he has a full plate of legislation. I want to thank the chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN].

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to announce to my colleagues that Mary McGrane's achievements and abilities have been recognized. She is soon to become next Monday, I am told, Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Department of Agriculture for Marketing and Inspection Services. I think we would all like to congratulate her. We are sorry to see her leave. She tells me she will no longer have to put up with me, and so she is happy about that. Other than that, we wish you well, Mary. You have been a real pleasure to serve with in serving the Members of the subcommittee and the full committee.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to join in saluting the very able staff person of our committee and wish her the very best in the future. I am sure my colleagues, the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER], leaving had a lot to do with her decision, but we are going to miss, in fact, both of you.

Mr. Speaker, I do want to commend the gentleman from Oregon for his legislation and thank him for his kind words. He is a most productive member of our subcommittee and of this House. There are many statutes on the books that will reflect his diligent efforts, and this will be added among them all to the benefit of trying to protect the consumers so that they will be able to accomplish what they want to accomplish, and to know the success rates of fertility clinics will allow them to make a better decision to have a family and to try to do what they so very much desire.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4773, the Fertility Clinic Success Rate and Certification Act of 1992 which I joined with my colleague, Mr. WYDEN, in cosponsoring. Currently, there are an estimated 2.4 million married American couples who are infertile. Among infertile couples seeking treatment, 85 to 90 percent are treated with conventional medical or surgical therapy. Unfortunately, as many as half the couples seeking treatment remain unsuccessful and some of these couples seek help through another category of techniques, known as assisted reproductive technologies such as in vitro fertilization. It is this category of treatments that H.R. 4773 addresses.

H.R. 4773 will encourage the accreditation of infertility laboratories to ensure that the fast-growing market for infertility services is monitored and regulated by the appropriate private sector accrediting bodies.

The two main features of this bill provide that infertility clinics report their pregnancy success rates to the Secretary for publication in an annual consumer guide and that the Secretary must develop a model program for the State certification of embryo laboratories. Any costs incurred by these programs would have to be paid for by user fees.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4773, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PORT CHICAGO NATIONAL MEMORIAL ACT OF 1992

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 306) to designate the Port Chicago Naval Magazine as a national memorial, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.J. RES. 306

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be referred to as the "Port Chicago National Memorial Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress hereby finds that—

(1) the Port Chicago Naval Magazine, located in Contra Costa County, California, served as the major West Coast munitions supply facility during World War II, during which time the facility played a critical role in the success of the war effort;

(2) on July 17, 1944, an explosion at Port Chicago, the origin of which has never been determined, resulted in the deaths of 320 officers and sailors, the largest domestic loss of life during World War II, and the injury of many others; and

(3) it is fitting and appropriate that the site of the Port Chicago Naval Magazine, which is currently included in the Concord Naval Weapons Station, be designated as a National Memorial to commemorate the role of the facility during World War II, to recognize those who served at the facility, and to honor the memory of those who gave their lives and were injured in the explosion on July 17, 1944.

SEC. 3. PORT CHICAGO NATIONAL MEMORIAL.

(a) DESIGNATION.—In order to recognize the critical role Port Chicago, located at the Concord Naval Weapons Station in Contra Costa County, California, played in the Second World War by serving as the main facility for the Pacific Theater and the historic importance of the explosion which occurred at the Port Chicago Naval Magazine on July 17, 1944, such Naval Magazine is hereby designated as a National Memorial, to be known as the Port Chicago Naval Magazine National Memorial. The Secretary of the Interior shall take appropriate action to assure that the Memorial is announced in the Federal Register and that official records and lists are amended, in due course, to reflect the inclusion of this memorial along with other national memorials established by an Act of Congress.

(b) MARKER.—The Secretary of the Interior, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Defense, is authorized and directed to place at the site of the Port Chicago Naval Magazine National Memorial, as designated under subsection (a), an appropriate plaque or marker commemorating the critical role Port Chicago played in the Second World War and the historic importance of the explosion which occurred at that location on July 17, 1944. The plaque or marker shall include a listing of the names of those who lost their lives during the explosion.

(c) PUBLIC ACCESS.—The Secretary of the Interior shall enter into a cooperative agreement with the Secretary of the Navy to provide for public access to the Memorial.

SEC. 4. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on House Joint Resolution 306, the joint resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. House Joint Resolution 306 designates the site of the Port Chicago Naval Magazine a national memorial. Chairman MILLER of California introduced House Joint Resolution 306 on July 17, 1991, and the bill was approved by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs on June 3, 1992.

The Port Chicago Naval Magazine was the site of the U.S. Navy's major west coast munitions supply facility during World War II. On July 17, 1944, an explosion killed 320 sailors and officers, "the largest domestic war-related loss of life" during World War II. Another 390 men were injured. The U.S. Navy continues to operate a munitions facility at the site in Contra Costa County, CA, and provides escorts for visitors who wish to view the scene of the explosion. The Navy also holds a memorial service annually in memory of those who died as a result of the explosion.

House Joint Resolution 306 would designate the site of the Port Chicago Naval Magazine, currently included in the Concord Naval Weapons Station, a national memorial. A plaque or marker would be placed at the site commemorating the role Port Chicago played in the Second World War and the historic importance of the explosion and resulting loss of life which occurred at that location on July 17, 1944.

The Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs adopted an amendment to House Joint Resolution 306 which states that the Secretary of the Interior shall enter into a cooperative agreement with the Secretary of the Navy to provide for public access to the site. During the hearing on House Joint Resolution 306, the Navy expressed concerns about public safety at the Memorial given the site's current use as an active naval weapons station; the need for controlled, escorted visits was clearly indicated. The U.S. Navy currently provides escorts and tours of the site upon request; this provision simply affirms the existing arrangement.

The eloquent and moving testimony given at the hearing on this bill indicates the importance of this memorial to the survivors of the explosion and the families of those who were killed at Port Chicago. I believe this memorial is an appropriate recognition of the sacrifices made by those who served at Port Chicago, and I urge my colleagues to support House Joint Resolution 306.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to be recognized on the Port Chicago National Memorial Establishment Act. Mr. VENTO has already explained the historical events which took place here on July 7, 1944, and the tragic loss of life. I agree with the author of the bill, the gentleman from California, that the events which occurred here are worthy of recognition. Therefore, I support his intent to erect a plaque on the site to commemorate the loss of life which occurred here.

However, this bill goes much further than needed, by establishing this area as an affiliated area of the National Park System and by requiring the Secretary of the Interior to become involved in public use at an active naval munitions base. These provisions are not only totally unnecessary, but are simply wrong. The Department of the Navy has been providing appropriate public access to this restricted site for some time and does not need interference of the Secretary of the Interior in base operations as proposed in this bill.

I note that the administration opposes this bill for that reason. I hope that if the Senate takes this measure up, they will resolve these problems.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

□ 1400

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, as I said, I spoke in favor of the joint resolution. I think it is a modest measure to recognize a very important event in our history with the loss of hundreds of American soldiers and sailors lives, nearly 400 American soldiers and sailors and officers wounded. It is an important measure, I think, to recognize in our Nation's history this event during World War II.

I might add that many of those who died in this blast were African-American soldiers and sailors—people of color. I think for a long time there was not the recognition of the fact that these individuals, many of them had to go back or were forced to go back to work in the same types of conditions where such risk continued to exist. This was a very traumatic experience at that time in our history. As occurs very often, various allegations of activity or negligence of that led to this explosion were advanced. Unfavorable working conditions and circumstances that existed today are clear. I can only imagine the type of trauma and anxiety that occurred in the minds and the spirit of those who were working in this environment when our Nation was really under siege and the frenzied work that had to go on to keep those hundreds of battleships and other vessels in the Pacific armed that were so essential to our Nation's defense in World War II. All too often, I think, the unsung service of those working in this type of hazardous duty, not on the front lines, but certainly at risk to their life, to make certain that U.S. vessels were armed and ready to effectively engage in combat.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER], the committee chairman who introduced this legislation, and I urge my colleagues to support this measure.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, today the House is considering the Port Chicago Memorial Act, a bill I introduced to honor the memory and contributions of those who served at the Port Chicago Naval Magazine. By designating the Port Chicago National Memorial, we will pay homage to the 320 men who died in a cataclysmic explosion that caused the greatest domestic loss of life during World War II.

Today, Port Chicago is the home of the Concord Naval Weapons facility in my district. But during World War II, Port Chicago was a major weapons shipping facility. Most of the liberty ships carrying munitions and supplies to those fighting the Japanese in the Pacific came from Port Chicago.

On July 17, 1944, two ships—the E.A. Bryan and the Quinalt Victory—exploded. The blast was equivalent to five kilotons of TNT, on the same order of magnitude as the atomic bomb dropped a year later on Hiroshima, Japan.

Everyone on the pier and aboard the ships was killed instantly. Locomotives and rail cars, large portions of the pier, and the ships themselves, and hundreds or men were vaporized. Of the 320 deaths, more than 200 were black Americans who exclusively had the responsibility to load the dangerous munitions onto the ships, generally with little if any training.

This disaster alone accounted for over 15 percent of the total black American naval casualties during the war. Another 390 military civilians were blinded, disabled, and otherwise injured. The cause of the explosion remains unanswered today.

By establishing a national memorial at Port Chicago, we will mark the historic significance of the base itself to winning the war in the Pacific. We also will give national recognition to those hundreds who gave their lives or were injured on the home front while serving our country in the battle for peace.

The Port Chicago National Memorial will especially commemorate the sacrifice of hundreds of black Americans who served, fought, and died for rights they were denied at home.

This will be a simple memorial, and will include a list of the names of those killed during the explosion.

House Joint Resolution 306 will remind future generations of the contributions made by the Port Chicago sailors and by many others who served and sacrificed at home during World War II. I encourage my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of House Joint Resolution 306 to designate the Port Chicago Naval Magazine as a national memorial. The significance of this military facility during World War II was incomparable and, after nearly five decades, it is more than time that the valor and dedication of those individuals who served at the Port Chicago Naval Magazine be acknowledged and properly commemorated.

The Port Chicago Naval Magazine's contributions to the military efforts in the Pacific theater during World War II were of inestimable value since the facility served as the major west coast munitions supply during World War II. On July 17, 1944, there was an explosion at the port which resulted in the deaths of 320 officers and sailors, the largest domestic casualty during World War II.

Let us take this opportunity to join together in expressing our deep respect and gratitude to a group of exceptional Americans by designating the Port Chicago Naval Magazine as a national memorial in recognition of the invaluable role this facility played in our history.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] that the House suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution, House Joint Resolution 306, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the joint resolution, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DISPOSING OF SENATE AMENDMENTS TO H.R. 2032, NEZ PERCE NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK ADDITIONS ACT OF 1991

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 504) to dispose of Senate amendments to H.R. 2032.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 504

Resolved, That upon adoption of this Resolution the House will be considered to have concurred in the Senate amendments to H.R. 2032 numbered (1), (2), and (3) and to have concurred in Senate amendment numbered (4) with an amendment as follows:

On page 1 of the Senate amendments, strike line 6 and all that follows down through line 2 on page 2 (the entire text of Senate amendment number 3) and insert:

(3) In section 3, strike the proviso in the first sentence and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Lands or interests therein owned by a State or political subdivision of a State may be acquired under this section only by donation or exchange. In the case of sites designated as components of the Nez Perce National Historical Park after November 1, 1991, the Secretary may not acquire privately owned land or interests in land without the consent of the owner unless the Secretary finds that—

"(1) the nature of land use has changed significantly or that the landowner has demonstrated intent to change the land use significantly from the condition which existed on the date of the enactment of the Nez Perce National Historical Park Addition Act of 1991;

"(2) the acquisition by the Secretary of such land or interest in land is essential to assure its use for purposes set forth in this Act; and

"(3) such lands or interests are located:

"(A) within an area depicted on Sheet 3, 4, or 5 of the map entitled 'Nez Perce Additions,' numbered 429-20018, and dated September 1991, or

"(B) within the 8-acre parcel of Old Chief Joseph's Gravesite and Cemetery, Oregon, depicted as 'Parcel A' on Sheet 2 of such map.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on House Resolution 504, the resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2032 is legislation introduced by Representative PAT WILLIAMS to make additions to the Nez Perce National Historical Park.

The Nez Perce National Historical Park was established in 1965 to preserve and interpret the history and culture of the Nez Perce Indian country. H.R. 2032 would add 14 sites to the park in the States of Idaho, Oregon, Washington, and Montana that are critical to telling the story of Chief Joseph and the 1877 war.

The House of Representatives passed H.R. 2032 last October by a margin of 402-21. The strong bipartisan support for this bill was evidence of the hard work which went into crafting the legislation. The bill, as passed by the House, was developed with the close cooperation of the National Park Service, the Nez Perce Tribe, the bill's sponsor—Representative WILLIAMS—the ranking member of the subcommittee—Mr. LAGOMARSINO—and Mr. SMITH of Oregon. (H.R. 2032, as adopted by the House significantly scaled back the eminent domain authority of the bill as introduced by allowing it only at four specific sites.)

The Senate added several amendments to the House bill and passed it on November 27, 1991. Senate amendments 1, 2, and 3, which provide for the addition of the Hasotino village site in Idaho, are worthwhile amendments which merit our support. However, Senate amendment 4 adds language which upsets the careful compromise of the House passed bill and leaves the National Park Service with no ability to protect the most significant sites added to the park by this bill. Under the Senate language, there would be no way to protect nationally significant cultural and archaeological sites from being damaged or destroyed by development pressures. This is particularly true for the old Chief Joseph gravesite in Oregon, where a developer is planning a condominium complex adjacent to the gravesite.

Since the Senate action, we have worked with interested Members from both sides of the aisle to fashion a new bipartisan compromise to the land acquisition provisions of H.R. 2032. The House amendment to the bill before us today is the result of these efforts. The amendment provides that eminent domain authority can only be exercised if three conditions are met. First, the lands must be located within the four sites previously identified where the landowners are willing sellers; second, the Secretary of the Interior must find that the nature of the land use has changed or is proposed to be changed significantly from its existing use; and third, the acquisition of land must be essential to assure its use for purposes set forth in this act. All of these conditions must be met before the Secretary can exercise any eminent domain authority. I would remind my colleagues that in the 26-year history of the park, condemnation authority has never been used, nor does the National Park Service intend to use it now. Nevertheless, it is a necessary management tool if we are to adequately protect the resources of the park.

The amendment before us is reasonable and balanced. It respects private property rights while still providing protection for nationally significant cultural and archaeological resources. I urge Members to support H.R. 2032, as amended.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of these amendments to the Nez Perce National Historical Park expansion bill. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Minnesota has already explained these amendments.

Let me just say that I believe that these amendments are a reasonable attempt to ensure that private property owners within the new park boundary will be able to continue to productively utilize their lands with only limited fear of intervention or harassment by Federal bureaucrats. That has clearly not been the case at some recently established park areas. For example, at Glorietta Battlefield in New Mexico, the National Park Service has issued draft guidelines which require private property owners to get permission of the park superintendent before they cut vegetation or plant a garden on their private land. This level of governmental interference is unwarranted. If the Federal Government wants to take away private property rights, they should pay for them, not attempt to erase them through regulation.

Let me just say that while I support this language as a reasonable attempt to preclude Government intervention, I also note that the Senate sponsors have indicated their interest to limit all future Federal acquisition at this park to willing sellers only. I would certainly defer to them with respect to how this measure should address the interests of their constituents.

Mr. Speaker, I hope my colleagues will join with me in supporting this bill.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, again I want to thank Congressmen WILLIAMS, LAROCCO, SMITH of Oregon, and LAGOMARSINO for their work on this measure. It is a good bill. We have got maps. I think we have advanced some good policy and procedures in acting on the Nez Perce designation measure. This will add to the existing sites that have composed a successful park resource. I commend my colleagues for their work and action here and urge the House to act positively on the measure before us.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, House Resolution 504.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ASSATEAGUE ISLAND NATIONAL SEASHORE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the House amendment to the Senate bill (S. 1254) to increase the authorized acreage limit for the Assateague Island National Seashore on the Maryland mainland, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment to House amendment: Page 2, strike out all after line 22 over to and including line 8 on page 3 of the House engrossed amendment, and insert:

"(c) The Secretary is authorized to enter into cooperative agreements with local, State, and Federal agencies and with educational institutions and nonprofit entities to coordinate research designed to ensure full protection of the natural and cultural resources of the seashore, consistent with the purposes for which the seashore was established, and other applicable law. The Secretary is also authorized to provide technical assistance to local, State, and Federal agencies and to educational institutions and nonprofit entities in order to further such purposes. The Secretary shall submit a report every two years to the Congress on the results of the coordinated research program authorized by this section and plans to implement the recommendations arising from such research.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the measure presently being considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 1254, as amended, increases the authorized acreage limit for the Assateague Island National Seashore.

The legislation was initially considered and passed by the Senate on October 16, 1991. The House passed S. 1254, with an amendment, on March 24, 1992. Subsequently the Senate considered S. 1254 on April 9, 1992, and returned the measure to the House with an amendment to the House amendment.

The Senate amendment, which is acceptable to me, alters somewhat the provisions of the bill regarding the national seashore's comprehensive research program. More parks should have such programs so that park managers and the public will be better able to understand park resources, their needs and their appropriate management. In order to be effective, Assateague's research program needs to continue to be cooperative and comprehensive as well as encompass both the specific purposes of Assateague Island National Seashore and the requirements of the 1916 Organic Act that established the National Park Service.

Mr. Speaker, concurrence by the House today will complete legislative action on S. 1254. I support passage of the bill, as amended, and urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to be recognized on S. 1254, a bill to expand Assateague Island National Seashore. Mr. Speaker, I agree with the basic premise of this bill, that additional lands should be added to this park in the vicinity of the proposed visitor center. However, the new park boundary proposed in this bill includes lands which have no legitimate justification for inclusion within the park. Further, I am concerned that elimination of current limitations on acquiring lands on the mainland could lead to significant, unnecessary Federal acquisitions in the future.

Despite repeated questioning of the administration, we were unable to get any solid information on why these specific boundaries were being proposed. The language of this bill authorizing inclusion within the park of a 224-acre scenic easement on soybean fields up to a mile from the park visitor center is totally unnecessary from a resource preservation standpoint.

Finally, it is my understanding that the Trust for Public Lands is involved in the acquisition of this property. According to a recent Interior inspector general report, involvement of land trusts in Federal acquisition is costing the taxpayers millions of dollars. The IG found that the NPS and other Interior agencies paid more than the fair market value for properties around the country and that the Trust for Public Lands was one of the major beneficiaries of these practices. I hope that Congress will more thoroughly review proposed acquisitions in the future when involvement of these groups is known.

While amendments adopted in the Senate do address another problem in the original House-passed bill which could have been read to direct the Secretary to implement resource protection actions outside of his current area of jurisdiction, those amendments do not address most of my concerns. Therefore, I cannot support this measure.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GILCHREST].

Mr. GILCHREST. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak in favor of the bill and maybe I can address some of the concerns which have been put forward today.

The expansion of the national park is a direct result of the number of people who visit the park. Well over a million people visit the park annually.

It has been concluded that in the coming years there are going to be an additional 250,000 people who will visit the national park. The land for a visitors center has been donated by the State. The visitors center is to be used to accommodate the visitors, educate the people in the particular area, especially students, as to the importance of a barrier reef as far as habitat is concerned, shoreline erosion, and a whole host of other things.

So the expansion of the park, the extra acreage, is essential for that.

No. 2, the soybeans that are about a mile away from the visitors center are parallel with Assateague Bay and the ocean. So it is not unwise to take into consideration the amount of soil erosion or pesticide or herbicide or other runoff problems that pollute Assateague Bay.

Now, with proper management and buffer zones, this can result in good agriculture, but the easements are for future use and the idea that we can protect this natural resource is pretty important.

Fair market value from around the country: It might be higher around Assateague than it is in other areas of the country, but when you look at the high, high cost of oceanside property, it is rather enormous. And I think the amount of money spent for this particular property was fair market value for the particular region, and I think that goes along with the few other things that I mentioned heretofore, that is expansion of the national park being essential for the integrity of the national park. It is essential also for habitat, for wildlife, and it is also essential for holding onto the critical areas of the seashore.

The final point I want to make is the Chesapeake Bay program protects the Chesapeake Bay. If we can reflect that type of program in those regional efforts to ensure quality of water on the oceanside, we go a long way toward doing that.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend Congressman GILCHREST for his statement and point out that he is joined in support of his position by the other Member from Maryland, Congressman MCMILLEN, both of whom support this measure.

Of course Senator SARBANES testfied before the committee in the House and answered numerous questions. I think the expansion is a necessary and appropriate addition to the park, and the research center language changes, which are really the difference between the House and the Senate bill, are acceptable to us. I hope we can move forward and offer strong support for this important unit of the National Park System.

Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 1254, a bill to increase the authorized acreage limit for the Assateague Island National Seashore.

This legislation was passed by the House in March, since which time the Senate has made some minor changes to the bill.

S. 1254, introduced by Senators SARBANES and MIKULSKI, seeks to expand the boundaries of the Assateague Island National Seashore to include 96 of the 320-acre tract of privately owned land adjacent to the southern border of the park.

Congress first created the national seashore in 1965.

The legislation we are considering today is crucial to protecting this pristine coastal area which is an important natural resource as well as of great historic value.

Without this legislation, there is an imminent danger that the privately owned land directly adjacent to, and within the viewshed of, Assateague will be consumed by commercial development. S. 1254 will prevent this by authorizing the purchase of the most critical portion of this land for inclusion in the national seashore.

This park should be protected not just for the benefit of the State of Maryland, but for the 2 million people who visit the park each year. It is truly a national treasure. I strongly encourage my colleagues to support its passage.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the House amendment.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendment to the House amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL UNDERSEA RESEARCH PROGRAM ACT OF 1992

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 487 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 487

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3247) to establish a National Undersea Research Program within the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and which shall not exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. In lieu of the amendment now printed in the bill, it shall be in order to consider an amendment in the nature of a substitute consisting of the text of the amendment printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule, said substitute shall be considered by title instead of by section and each title shall be considered as having been read. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text by this resolution. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN], and pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 487 is an open rule for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 3247, which will establish the National Undersea Research Program.

The resolution provides 1 hour of general debate to be equally divided between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

The rule also makes in order an amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in the Rules Committee report accompanying House Resolution 487.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3247 reauthorizes funding for the National Undersea Research Program or NURP. This important program falls under the jurisdiction of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Since its beginning in 1980, this program has provided an integrated approach to research of the world's large lakes and oceans.

This research is centered at five coastal locations in the United States, each of which is responsible for a specific geographical location.

Mr. Speaker, these centers conduct research on marine habitats, mineral resources, and many other facets of the marine environment.

These centers also conduct critical research in the area of submersibles and specialized scuba systems.

Since 1983 the administration has requested no funding for this program.

However, Congress has always affirmed its support of the important research done at these institutions by appropriating funds each year.

Mr. Speaker, as I am sure you recall, this legislation fell just a few votes short of passing under the suspension of the rules on May 6 of this year.

Since that time the committee of jurisdiction has gotten together and worked out a fair compromise that will allow these research centers to continue their important work.

This open rule will allow any germane amendments to the bill and I urge its adoption and the adoption of the bill.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and of H.R. 3247 a bill to establish the National Undersea Research Program [NURP]. I have had a strong interest in NURP for several years and am very pleased that we are voting on the formal establishment of this program today.

The NURP program has been in effect for over a decade, yet, year after year, the administration either reduces or entirely eliminates the program from the budget and Congress is charged with the task of restoring funding through the appropriations process.

This program has consistently proven its important role in providing opportunities for the scientific community to conduct research not possible within the limits of traditional ship-based research and laboratories.

NURP assists leading scientists with research in the Great Lakes, the oceans, and on the sea floor using the most modern technology and undersea habitats. Undersea research has enhanced our knowledge of the dynamic processes governing our oceans, increased our understanding of recruitment to fisheries, and expanded our general knowledge of the deep sea environment.

NURP has also contributed to advances in biotechnology and gear design, advanced underwater technology, and fostered the development of small businesses.

I am pleased that this legislation expands the existing NURP program. Specifically, the bill defines 10 undersea regions and requires NOAA in consultation with a steering committee to designate the responsibility for conducting undersea research in these regions to individual national undersea research centers.

Today there are six centers in existence, including one at Rutgers University in New Jersey. Although it was created as the New York Bight Center, clearly the intent is that the Rutgers NURP Center retain the responsibility for the entire mid-Atlantic region as defined in H.R. 3247.

For the past decade, Rutgers has been conducting undersea research in the mid-Atlantic region supported through various NURP centers or directly through the national office. Therefore, the establishment of the Center at this time is a formality, yet essential to, among other purposes, continue the monitoring of ocean dumping at the 106-mile site.

Indeed, Rutgers has been very active in undersea research. Currently, they are preparing to lay a fiber-optic cable out to a long-term ecosystem observatory site in Little Egg Inlet, NJ. This cable will be connected to classrooms and give children throughout the entire State the opportunity to view and learn about the seafloor.

I am also pleased that the bill calls for outside peer review of research proposals and the appointment of an independent science adviser to the program director. In addition, I believe that the nine member steering committee is appropriate to conduct oversight and periodic review of the undersea research centers throughout the country as long as the membership maintains objectivity and a representative balance between the priority research areas.

The NURP program provides the opportunity to study the processes governing our oceans and Great Lakes so that we may make the appropriate decisions regarding proper management and protection of these valuable resources.

The statutory establishment of the National Undersea Research Program within the Department of Commerce is essential to demonstrate not only the value and importance of the undersea research program, but our intention to strengthen and expand it as well. I strongly urge my colleagues' support for this very important legislation.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the chairman of the Rules Committee, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY], has ably explained the provision of the rule, and I am pleased to be handling this completely open rule because they are so rare anymore.

In 1980, Mr. Speaker, the National Undersea Research Program was administratively established within NOAA to seek a better understanding of the process in the world's oceans and large lakes. It currently has five national undersea research centers, as the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] has pointed out, which are located throughout the United States. The centers fund research through a competitive peer-review grant process and provide scientists with underwater research systems.

H.R. 3247 statutorily establishes the National Undersea Research Program within NOAA, and sets forth administrative procedures for operation of the program.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that the administration opposes this bill. The President's advisers find that this program has been handled administratively by NOAA since 1980 and that statutory establishment of a new program is unnecessary. They also believe that the program growth authorized by the bill would place higher priority NOAA programs in direct competition for increasingly scarce resources.

Mr. Speaker, under this open rule any problems with the bill can be addressed. I urge adoption of this rule so that the House can get down to the business at hand.

Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 487 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H.R. 3247.

□ 1427

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3247) to establish a National Undersea Research Program within the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, with Mr. PENNY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SAXTON] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, the House is considering the National Undersea Research Program Act of 1992. This bill was introduced on August 2, 1991, and referred to the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

The Subcommittee on Oceanography, Great Lakes and the Outer Continental Shelf has jurisdiction over civilian undersea research activities conducted through the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration [NOAA]. The subcommittee held a hearing on this legislation on October 5, 1991. At that hearing, the subcommittee reviewed current civilian undersea research projects and received recommendations for a variety of statutory changes to improve coordination between NOAA and academic users, undersea research program directors, and the research community in general.

Several recommendations from our witnesses were incorporated into H.R. 3247 as reported by the full Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries on January 29, 1992.

A substitute amendment was brought to the House floor for consideration on May 6, 1992, under suspension of the rules. Following the Merchant Marine Committee's markup of H.R. 3247, I received correspondence from the chairman of the Subcommittee on the Environment of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology concerning two provisions of the bill. A substitute amendment resolved these concerns, and it appeared the bill would support ongoing research without controversy or substantial change. However, due to primary elections on May 6, the absence of 46 Members of the House, and perhaps the unfamiliarity of some with the merits of the National Undersea Research Program, the substitute amendment fell short of the necessary two-thirds vote for passage.

Under the open rule provided today, the House has the opportunity to review the provisions of H.R. 3247 and to examine the three modifications made to the bill supported by the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and the majority of the Science, Space, and Technology Committee. With these three changes, I believe the bill is worthy of adoption today.

The first change establishes 10 research regions for undersea research. It provides a procedure for assigning one or more regions to the six existing centers, with the activities of each subject to a 5-year evaluation cycle.

The second change provides a 3-year trial time for researchers to respond to comments by research proposal reviews so necessary for adequate and responsible peer-reviewed research.

The third change eliminates the specific designation of the Mid-Atlantic Bight Research Center. This center was formally established by the administration since the bill was reported in January, making this designation superfluous.

Mr. Chairman, I would now like to briefly summarize the effect of this legislation. H.R. 3247 authorizes by Federal statute the administrative framework for civilian undersea research. The Federal Government has engaged in undersea research since the early 1970's, and NOAA received its first appropriation for underwater research programs in 1976. Since 1980, the National Undersea Research Program has been credited with a broad array of successful projects. Studies of the sea and seafloor are conducted in cooperation with academic centers throughout the United States.

However, during this time, there has never been a formal congressionally approved mechanism for coordinating undersea research. H.R. 3247 provides such a mechanism by establishing the Office of Undersea Research within NOAA, giving it responsibility for implementing projects based on seven specific national research priorities and selecting project proposals based on merit and optimal results. These priority areas include: oceanfloor and mineral resource studies; undersea exploration technologies; coastal ecosystems research; ocean and lake monitoring; and studies of processes affecting climate changes. Under the bill, research projects will be selected and coordinated by the National Undersea Research Program Director appointed to administer the program with the advice of a non-Federal scientific advisor and steering committee.

The 10 undersea regions established by the bill will be served by the existing 6 National Undersea Research Centers. These centers are located at several universities and institutions in the following regions:

Rutgers University—mid-Atlantic Bight region;

The University of Connecticut—North Atlantic and Great Lakes regions;

The University of North Carolina—the South Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico regions;

The University of Alaska—Alaska and the west coast regions:

The University of Hawaii—the Western Pacific region; and

The Caribbean Marine Research Center—Caribbean region.

The bill allows for new centers in the four expansive regions now coupled at existing centers. The authorization levels provided takes into account that funds for on-going research at existing centers may not be diminished to start a new center. To ensure that only quality research programs are in effect, all centers, old and new, will be subject to a 5-year review, evaluation, and potential sunset.

Research centers may be established at institutions of higher education or oceanographic research only in States bordering one of the designated regions. Grants procedures are standardized, and at least 60 percent of the funds appropriated must go for actual research projects under grants or contracts. The bill provides for an authorization of appropriations through fiscal year 1996. The amounts provided for each year are as follows: for 1992, $24 million; for 1993, $29.2 million; for 1994, $34.4 million; for 1995, $39.6 million; and for 1996, $44.8 million. The amounts ensure that appropriate equipment and the variety of research projects underway, and in the planning stages, can continue.

Given that this legislation provides a fair and balanced structure for competitive, peer-reviewed undersea research, I urge its adoption.

□ 1530

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, today I rise in support of H.R. 3247, the National Undersea Research Program Act of 1992. This program and the technologies which it has inspired has allowed us to expand beyond conventional research methods in understanding the dynamics of the Earth's oceans and the marine resources on which the world depends.

Whether we are discussing ecology, economics, technological advancement, or sustainable management of marine resources, the National Undersea Research Program has proven to be vital on all four fronts.

Two of the most fundamental advances provided through NURP technology has been the ability to determine the impacts of man's activities first hand, and to understand the dynamics and habitats of marine resources which we commercially depend on.

Currently, undersea research is being conducted at the 106-mile sewage sludge dumpsite. Conventional wisdom historically claimed that the 8 million tons of sewage sludge dumped annually off the Atlantic coast never reached the bottom or affected living marine resources.

Because of the Undersea Research Program—today we know that sewage sludge, and the contaminants it contains not only accumulate on the ocean floor, but also impact the creatures which live in that environment. How this has affected commercial fisheries, human health, and other living marine resources is dependent on further research.

In addition, the prospects offered by NURP for internationally managing marine resources in a sustainable manner is an issue of increasing importance.

Whether we are discussing highly migratory species prized by the many nations of the world, or the extraction and discovery of new mineral resources for energy and technological advancements, undersea research will play the pivotal role in understanding these resources, their abundance and their management.

Last, Mr. Chairman, the technology of undersea research is in itself an economic frontier vital for U.S. competitiveness in the emerging global economy.

A primary factor for any healthy economy will depend on its technological and scientific ability to address ecological issues and resource sustainability. Increasing clusters of private enterprise emerging around sciences such as undersea technology and pollution mitigation are evidence of this trend.

Although the prospects of space exploration may be exciting and hold new frontiers for the future—the fact is that two-thirds of the Earth is covered by ocean and we have only begun to understand that frontier.

Mr. Chairman, this is a valuable and vitally important program and I urge my colleagues to support its passage.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONES], the distinguished chairman of the full Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 3247, the National Undersea Research Program Act. This bill establishes the National Undersea Research Program [NURP] by law. H.R. 3247 also sets out procedures for the establishment and operation of undersea research centers as well as procedures for reviewing and funding undersea research.

As Members may recall, this bill was brought up under suspension of the rules on May 6, 1992, but even though 255 Members voted for it, the bill failed to receive the two-thirds majority necessary for passage. I would like to address some of the criticisms raised during the floor debate on May 5.

First, why should we be spending our scarce Federal resources on undersea research? The answer lies in the sheer size of the world's oceans. Approximately 70 percent of the surface of the Earth is covered by water. If we look at the volume of the Earth, we see that 99 percent of the Earth's volume is water. How can we afford to ignore this much of our planet? What undiscovered chemical and biological resources lie in this vast area?

In the wake of the Rio Conference, I'm sure that many Members have an increased appreciation for biodiversity and the importance of cataloging and preserving it. What Members probably don't know is that the diversity of life in the oceans is far greater than the diversity on land. This point is illustrated by a recent article in the New York Times which reported that researchers at Rutgers University had collected 90,677 creatures at a site the size of two tennis courts off the New Jersey coast. That same sample yielded 798 species, 460 of which were previously undiscovered. Just imagine how many more undiscovered species there are in the rest of the world's oceans. What undiscovered medical agents lie in this vast area?

Second, why can't we use surface vessels to investigate the deep ocean, instead of scuba or submersibles? The simple answer is that being able to see what is being collected vastly improves the quality of the samples, and allows samples to be collected carefully at precise locations. Additionally, there are many organisms that, because of their delicate makeup, can only be sampled using submersibles or scuba.

Third, why should the Federal Government run a National Undersea Research Program? Witnesses at the October 15, 1991, hearing by the Subcommittee on Oceanography, Great Lakes and the Outer Continental Shelf on H.R. 3247, specifically addressed this question. Every witness testified that NURP provides scientists with unique equipment which is essential for the conduct of undersea research. They stated that NURP is often the only source scientists have for state-of-the-art underwater equipment. One witness compared NURP's mission of facilitating access to inner space—our oceans and large lakes—with NASA's mission to provide access to outer space.

Fourth, opponents of H.R. 3247 called NURP a pork-barrel program which should be eliminated. Unfortunately NURP has had this reputation since it was established in 1980, because several of the existing centers were established through earmarks in appropriations bills without competition. This is precisely why Members should vote for H.R. 3247. This bill will set in place procedures for competitively awarding new NURP centers. H.R. 3247 also sets up a procedure for the periodic evaluation of existing centers and authorizes the closure of nonperforming centers. In my opinion, this bill will ensure that the American taxpayer gets the biggest bang for its research buck.

Finally, I found it very ironic that on the same day last month that H.R. 3247 was considered, the House voted to spend $2.25 billion for the space station in fiscal year 1993, but some of the same Members who supported the space station were balking at spending a tiny fraction of that on exploration of the oceans. I am not criticizing support for the space station, but I do think that the same arguments for exploring outer space hold true for exploring our oceans.

The National Undersea Research Program is a good program which serves national interests. H.R. 3247 will provide a statutory basis for NURP, as well as a framework for its operation. I urge all Members to support it.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERTEL], chairman of the Subcommittee on Oceanography, Great Lakes and the Outer Continental Shelf, and I congratulate him on moving this legislation forward. It is a good bill.

Mr. HERTEL. Mr. Chairman, I would like to provide an example for the RECORD of how the National Undersea Research Program has assisted scientists in the Great Lakes with the plaguing problem of the zebra mussel. Although the Great Lakes region does not have an existing research center, scientists there have benefited from the help of the NURP Program in achieving expert training and diving certification necessary to conduct research that, hopefully, will soon eradicate the zebra mussel.

Scientists at NOAA's Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory in Ann Arbor, MI, are now looking at the ecological changes in Lake Huron's Saginaw Bay following the spread of zebra mussels to this area. Part of the sampling required is best accomplished by direct collection by scuba divers of sediments and biota.

In late April 1992, the Great Lakes Laboratory arranged to send one of its biological technicians out to Seattle, WA for an intensive 3-week course in research diving sponsored by NURP. Prior to the training, the technician had no diving experience, but 3 weeks later, he returned as a fully qualified NOAA diver after logging some 27 dives. This research scientist will be working in Saginaw Bay with a diver from the University of Michigan's Cooperative Institute for Limnology and Ecosystem Research, and the two will carry out sampling operations throughout the rest of this year.

This added scuba sampling capability will provide for highly reliable and cost-effective data collection and was made possible by access to NURP.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON].

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my strong support for H.R. 3247, legislation to authorize the National Undersea Research Program within the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. I would also like to take this opportunity to commend Chairman WALTER JONES of the full Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and Chairman HERTEL of the Oceanography Subcommittee for their diligent work in bringing this important bill to the floor.

Mr. Chairman, the oceans of this planet make up more than 317 million cubic miles or 71 percent of the surface of the planet. Oceans have a significant impact on global temperature and weather patterns, yet we know very little about this resource. Enactment of this legislation will enable our scientists to more fully understand the mysteries of the oceans and help us to protect the ocean and freshwater resources more effectively.

For several years, under the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, National Undersea Research Centers, including one at the University of Connecticut, have been sponsoring and conducting research to help us to understand the mysteries of the oceans. This legislation will recognize the importance of that work to our planet and will establish a clear administrative framework for those centers to operate. It is my belief that passage of this legislation will show that we are committed to understanding the oceans and managing the resources of this planet more effectively.

As I mentioned, one of the existing NURP centers is based in my district at the University of Connecticut [NURC–UCAP]. For the past several years, it has been my good fortune to know and work with Dr. Richard Cooper, Director of NURC–UCAP. Dick Cooper, Lance Stewart, Ivar Babb, Douglas Lee, and the other scientists at NURC–UCAP have been extremely important resources for me and my staff in understanding environmental and economic issues related to ocean dumping, sewage sludge, fisheries management, the Long Island Sound and the Georges Bank off the coast of Massachusetts, one of the richest fisheries in the world.

But more important than the advice they have provided me are the research and educational programs that NURP and NURC–UCAP have sponsored and will continue to initiate and expand with passage of this legislation.

Since their inception in 1983, NURC–UCAP's research efforts have focused on both basic and mission-oriented activities providing a greater understanding of some of the most crucial environmental and economic issues facing our Nation's coastal areas. In particular, NURC–UCAP provides oceanic and freshwater researchers the opportunity to use some of the most advanced underwater research technology that has been developed. A recent NOAA study reported that the biggest gaps in our understanding of oceanic processes are defined by the biases in traditional surface-based research techniques. NURC–UCAP is one of the world leaders in developing innovative undersea dive systems, including manned submersibles and unmanned undersea robotic vehicles that will help scientists to fill the gaps in our understanding. Passage of this legislation will enable that effort to move forward.

In 1984, NURC–UCAP conducted its first diving operation. Since that time, the robotic and manned submersible dive systems have provided support to more than 300 scientists from 16 States, 18 universities, numerous government agencies, and at least 6 countries.

In particular, their efforts on ocean dumping, zebra mussels in the Great Lakes, aquatic pollution, and fisheries management issues have been extremely timely, considering the economic importance of the management and protection of commercial and recreational fisheries of the Great Lakes and northwestern Atlantic Ocean. These resources are estimated to be valued at more than $6 billion annually.

NURC–UCAP scientists have been studying the ocean disposal of sewage sludge, particularly at the 106-mile site off the coast of New Jersey. By taking core samples from the ocean floor, NURP scientists will be able to get a better understanding of the effects of ocean dumping and can advise policymakers at the Environmental Protection Agency, NOAA, and in Congress on the effects of this dumping method and whether better alternatives exist.

NURC–UCAP scientists have undertaken a number of projects in the Long Island Sound to improve our understanding of the sound. In addition to increasing our understanding of the marine environment, their work will help resource managers to more effectively address the pollution problems, cleanup, and fisheries management issues that we are facing.

NURC–UCAP scientists, through the use of traditional methods and submersibles, have been conducting extensive multidisciplinary research throughout the Great Lakes and the North Atlantic Ocean on fisheries habitat and the impacts of gillnets, lobster traps, trawls, and scallop drag gear. This will provide much needed information on fisheries productivity that will help to make more realistic estimations of fisheries productivity, improve the efficiency of fishing practices, and more effectively manage our fisheries resources.

Mr. Chairman, in addition to their research efforts, NURC–UCAP has established the High School Aquanauts Program, which is an innovative marine sciences education program. As the first such program of its kind in the nation, the Aquanauts Program provides students the opportunity to experience the real scientific process. Scientists and educators develop specially designed marine sciences curriculum, the students then develop their own research project, and during the summer have an opportunity to make deep sea and Great Lakes dives in a sophisticated submersible or work with unmanned underwater robots in the Long Island Sound. This program not only provides potential future scientists with some true hands on experience, it also promotes a greater understanding and appreciation for the ocean and for the need to protect it.

Mr. Chairman, the scientists working through the National Undersea Research Program, whether it be at NURC-UCAP or the NURP center in Hawaii or in North Carolina, or Alaska, do extremely important research on probably the least well understood part of the Earth, the oceans. Passage of this legislation will enable not only current marine scientists but future scientists to unlock mysteries of the oceans. The potential for new discoveries in the seas and more sustainable management practices are tremendous. However, in order to move in that direction, it will take new technologies, new research systems like those being developed at NURC-UCAP, and a greater commitment to that effort to enable us to more fully understand, utilize, and manage the aquatic resources that are there.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, this is a very good bill. It probably would be here under suspension of the rules if we had a few more votes.

Mr. Chairman, I have a simple amendment that I will be bringing up to the bill. It requires that all those who are involved in participating in any funds available under this bill comply with the buy-American laws that we do have on the books now. Although we have these laws, it seems that people forget about them and Congress does not necessarily provide the oversight to ensure that the buy-American law is ever really adhered to.

This amendment reminds people of that compliance, No. 1. It provides for a notice to be made for anybody who will be participating in funding under the program to buy American-made goods and products. I think that it should be a consistent procurement policy that our Congress should support.

Mr. Chairman, I would also like to say this: Being here 8 years, being seated nearly every week next to the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONES], the chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, any time the gentleman is involved in a bill I think the bill is readily dispatched and met with favor.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate this time. The amendment is not controversial and I appreciate the support that has been granted from both sides of the aisle.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, we have been told on numerous occasions on the floor in the last few weeks about the size of the budget deficit that we have, the size of the debt we have, the problem that we have with Government spending, the problem that we have with too many Government programs. The problem is that we do not have the votes to get a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution because what we are told is what we ought to do is summon up the courage in the House to do something about these problems without modifying the Constitution.

Well, here is a program where we ought to take a look. Let me tell you why.

First of all, this is a program that the administration does not want to fund, period. They have zeroed it out of their budget. Since 1983, this is a program that the administration has said they do not want to fund.

Congress, in its infinite wisdom, has said no, you can't end the program; you have got to fund it.

Now, what has Congress done about the funding in this program? Since 1980, when this program was brought into being, the funding for this program has gone up by more than 500 percent. In a 12-year program, this is a program that Congress not only said we have got to keep, but we have got to keep spending at ever increasing levels.

So in a 10-year period it has gone up by over 500 percent. Understand, that averages a 50-percent-a-year increase in spending—well, not quite. Not quite. Forty percent a year. Let us make it 40 percent a year since it is a 12-year period, not a 10-year period. Forty percent a year.

One wonders why we are in trouble. How long can you go on piling up debt and deficit at the rate where programs grow 40 percent a year?

Right here is a problem. Understand, this is a program that the administration does not want to fund at all. Congress over the last decade has increased the spending 40 percent a year.

Now we have the reauthorization before us. The reauthorization is interesting. What this does is takes a program that up until now has been a program operated within the Department as kind of an administratively oriented agency, and what we do is officially create a new bureaucracy here and add some more bureaucrats. We add a director, and we add a deputy director.

We are going to go hog wild. So we are now establishing a brandnew bureaucracy. And we are going to hold down the spending?

Well, as the bill comes before us, over the next 5 years the bill goes up 260 percent. So we are going to continue to spend at a 50-percent-a-year increase in the spending.

This is not what I am saying. This is what the bill says. The bill says that for the next 5 years we are going to see the program increase by a percentage, 50 percent a year, for a 260-percent increase over the next 5 years.

Now, I think perhaps this is a program that is useful. We ought to do something in this area. The gentlemen who have spoken before me make a case that this is some useful research for the Government to be doing.

But is it something that we have to do to the tune of 50-percent increases every year? I do not think so. I think what we ought to do is take a look at this program and decide that the administration may be wrong in wanting to zero it out, but, at the very least, what Congress could do is freeze the spending.

A program that has grown at 40 percent a year for a 12-year period is now at a level that you could freeze the program very easily. I will have an amendment later on that simply calls for that. Let us take these 40-percent increases that have gone up every year for the last 12 years and live with that. Let us freeze the level at $17.2 million, where it is right now—$17.2 million ought to be enough. Just freeze it there and hold it there for the next several years.

Mr. Chairman, that is the way you begin to get budgets under control. I would suggest that this is a good place to start the business of getting budgets under control.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I would just like to respond to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], who makes some very good points, a gentleman with whom I very often agree.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that the gentleman describes the situation here in which I find him making some very meritorious points. However, at the same time, I also heard the gentleman say some things which I believe the gentleman and I agree on with regard to this bill. Namely, first, that this is a bill which for the first time publicly, legislatively, statutorily, will authorize the National Undersea Research Program to take place.

The Congress has been appropriating money to it every year since 1976 or 1980, depending on which year you use, and this bill will provide for the statutory provisions that should be in place for the program to operate.

Second, the gentleman probably recognzies that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] and I and others on the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries are interested in this bill dealing with issues on an ongoing basis, which are very, very difficult issues. And we find ourselves in the situation very often of making decisions based on less than perfect science, to say the least.

The research that is ongoing through this program and that will be ongoing through this program will be a tremendous help in aiding us in our efforts to come to grips with many of the problems that we, as human beings, have created with regard to the ocean environment over the years. We deal with issues that have to do with fisheries, how to protect fisheries, how to keep fisheries healthy and growing so that we can harvest them and benefit from them, how to harvest other ocean resources. And all of those issues that we deal with we believe are very, important.

I know the gentleman from Pennsylvania agrees with much of what I say because he is not for zeroing out the authorization. He is for confining it to something that he thinks is an appropriate level.

I do not know whether the numbers that are written in the bill are the right numbers, the most appropriate numbers, or whether the gentleman's suggestion that we freeze this program is appropriate. But I do know that it is a very meritorious program and one which should continue, and I suspect that we will arrive at some agreement here during the day.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAXTON. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. As I said in my statement, I think that there is a reason for doing the program and getting the research, as the gentleman points out. It does make some sense to have a good research base on which to act.

On the other hand, we really do have to take a look at what we are doing as we bring bills to the floor. This bill that the gentleman has brought here literally is a 260-percent increase in spending over the next 5 years. I am telling the gentleman that no reasonable person believes that we can control debt and deficits in this country if we are going to authorize spending levels that grow 250 percent in just a 5-year period. That just is totally out of the realm of good sense when we are faced with $4 trillion in debt and a growing Federal deficit that is funding that debt.

So it seems to me that the reasonable thing to do here is to freeze the program, get the research base which is useful and move on from there, but not give massive increases that in my mind are not justifiable.

I think most working families in this country would love to think that they are going to get a 250-percent increase in their pay over the next 5 years. I think most of them realistically expect that it will be more like a 10-percent increase in their pay over the next 5 years. And a 250-percent increase versus their 10 percent, I think most of them are going to regard as unreasonable.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I do not understand the arithmetic of the gentleman from Pennsylvania. When I went to school, a $5 million increase, and that is what it is, in the bill is not 50 percent of the $20 million or $24 million.

But be that as it may, most importantly, we are talking about $24 million for ocean research. The gentleman does not think anything of spending $2.2 billion for space research. The oceans and ocean research is one of the things we have neglected for too many years.

One of the reasons why we are attempting to expand the program modestly is because we do not have research centers throughout the country. This legislation does a number of things, as I tried to indicate in my opening statement.

No. 1, we attempt to formalize what has been done heretofore by Executive order. We try to develop some criteria so that we can measure projects up against specific criteria. We try to make the organization within NOAA more orderly by trying to set up a director who is responsible for the program. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is the first one to criticize when we cannot hold anybody accountable in the bureaucracy. We tried to do that by holding somebody responsible for this particular program.

The work that is being performed in these NURP centers is outstanding. We are talking about research.

I have heard the gentleman from Pennsylvania and others on this floor argue about how it is important for us to increase our basic research in this country, and that is what this bill does. It increases basic research. These are universities, other centers of learning around the country that are doing basic research on ocean policy, ocean issues.

It seems to me that that is what we need to do, if we are going to try to expand this economy, make ourselves more competitive. We have to better understand the waters around the world. They comprise most of the globe, and yet we have neglected ocean policy in years past.

This is a movement forward. Modestly, I grant my colleagues, but it is a movement forward in trying to develop better research centers.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUGHES. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

He understands that this bill goes to $45 million over the next 5 years. That is where I get the 260-percent increase. But the gentleman's bill takes it from the 1992 funding, where there is $17 million, he takes it to $24 million. That is a 40-percent increase this year.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, it is $5 million a year. It is a 5-year authorization. It is an authorization bill.

I say to my colleague, we are attempting to develop new centers around the country. That was the consensus of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, that we needed to expand modestly these centers so that we could do a far better job in all parts of this country: Great Lakes, gulf, east coast, North Atlantic, Pacific coast.

And frankly, that is exactly what we are doing. It is for the first time we develop criteria in this legislation. That is not increasing bureaucracy. We are talking about the same people administering the program that have been administering the program. And the administration created the program.

All we are doing is formalizing in organic law what we have been doing and trying to streamline it and hold somebody accountable for the programs. It seems to me that is exactly what the gentleman has argued for in past bills.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. JOHNSON].

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3247, the underwater research authorization bill. I believe our long-term national goal as a maritime nation and as a world leader is to focus on the world's oceans as we have focused on space many years ago. Just as we have pursued an aggressive strategy on space exploration and have benefited greatly from our increased understanding of the universe, we need now to pursue an aggressive strategy as we address the little-understood resource, the oceans.

H.R. 3247 will provide us with the tolls necessary to accomplish this goal.

We are just beginning to realize the vast mineral and food resources that lie in the depths of the sea. Advances in biotechnology, especially improved larvae development, will enhance man's ability to cultivate the oceans and enable us to rely more heavily on them to feed the world's hungry.

Likewise, advances in ocean thermal energy conversion [OTEC] will lessen our Nation's dependence on oil as an energy source. The differences between Sun-heated surface waters and the underlying polar currents, if successfully harnessed, can be put to use generating electricity by utilizing low-boiling liquids like ammonia to drive turbines in closed systems. Large floating power-generating plants could be moored in warm seas and the resulting electricity transferred via submarine cable to land. The beauty of this form of energy is, unlike fossil fuels, it is virtually pollution-free and renewable.

Finally, as nations run out of space for waste storage on land and recycling efforts peak, scientists have concluded that the deep, barren, ocean floor contains stable crust areas where waste can be implanted far from human populations and with less opportunity to contaminate the rich food and marine resources found in coastal waters.

H.R. 3247 will promote scientific advances in all of these areas and will allow our technologically advanced submarine industrial base to use its engineering experience to develop new subs to assist in research in these areas. Electric Boat has spent years developing the most highly advanced submarines in the world. This brain trust, which helped to win the cold war, should now be used to help us achieve our undersea exploration goals by building research subs equipped to collect data on underwater ecology and energy resources.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I commend Chairmen JONES and HERTEL for developing this legislation, which provides a structure for the existing NOAA National Undersea Research Program. I am especially pleased that while the program is called the National Undersea Research Program, the Great Lakes are part of it.

I voice my support for this measure and urge my colleagues to add theirs. Again, I commend subcommittee Chairman HERTEL for reminding NOAA that the continental United States does enjoy four coastal areas.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

☐ 1500

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in House Report 102–573 shall be considered by title as an original bill for the purpose of amendment, and each title is considered as read.

Mr. HUGHES of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from new Jersey?

There was no objection.

The text of the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 3247

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—NATIONAL UNDERSEA RESEARCH PROGRAM

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "National Undersea Research Program Act of 1992".

SEC. 102. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The world's oceans occupy 317,000,000 cubic miles, and constitute 71 percent of the surface of the earth.

(2) The Great Lakes comprise 20 percent of the world's freshwater and are a valuable, international, commercial, and recreational resource.

(3) The oceans and Great Lakes are inextricably linked to many important global processes, such as global temperature, weather patterns, and nutrient cycling.

(4) The oceans and Great Lakes hold many undiscovered or unexploited mineral and biological resources.

(5) A majority of invertebrate phyla and over half the vertebrate species inhabit the oceans.

(6) The genetic diversity of marine organisms makes the oceans a potentially important source of undiscovered medical agents.

(7) Understanding of the physical, chemical, geological, and biological processes which govern dynamics in the oceans and Great Lakes, particularly the deep ocean, is limited.

(8) Oceanic and limnological researchers require increasingly more advanced technologies and methodologies to accomplish complex research goals.

(9) Advanced underwater technology, including diving, underwater laboratories, research submersibles, and remotely operated vehicles, must be an integral part of the Nation's efforts to study, understand, utilize, conserve, and wisely manage the aquatic environment.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to establish a program of research to better understand ocean and large lakes ecosystems and their role in global systems.

SEC. 103. DEFINITIONS.

For the purposes of this title, the term—

(1) "Administration" means the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration;

(2) "Center" means any National Undersea Research Center in existence prior to the date of enactment of this Act or established pursuant to section 106;

(3) "Center Director" means the Director of any National Undersea Research Center;

(4) "Committee" means the National Undersea Research Steering Committee established pursuant to section 105;

(5) "Office" means the Office of Undersea Research established under section 104(c)(1);

(6) "priority research area" means any of the priority research areas under section 104(f), as those areas may be revised by the Under Secretary under section 104(f)(2).

(7) "Program" means the National Undersea Research Program established under section 104;

(8) "Program Director" means the Director of the National Undersea Research Program appointed pursuant to section 104(c)(2);

(9) "undersea region" means each of—

(A) the North Atlantic region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters north of Montauk, New York, and off Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut;

(B) the Mid-Atlantic region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters south of Montauk, New York, and off New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia;

(C) the South Atlantic region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters off North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and the Atlantic coast of Florida (including the Florida Keys);

(D) the Gulf of Mexico region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters of the Gulf of Mexico off Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas;

(E) the Great Lakes region, comprised of the waters of the Great Lakes;

(F) the Southern Pacific region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters off California;

(G) the Northern Pacific region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters off Oregon and Washington;

(H) the Western Pacific region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters off Hawaii, Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands;

(I) the Alaskan region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters off Alaska;

(J) the Caribbean region, comprised of the coastal and oceanic waters off Puerto Rico and the United States Virgin Islands; and

(K) any other undersea region resulting from an establishment, modification, or merger under section 106(f)(2);

(10) "undersea research" means scientific research carried out in the oceans or large lakes of the world, using underwater vehicles or techniques; and

(11) "Under Secretary" means the Under Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere.

SEC. 104. ESTABLISHMENT AND ADMINISTRATION OF NATIONAL UNDERSEA RESEARCH PROGRAM.

(a) PROGRAM ESTABLISHMENT AND MAINTENANCE.—The Under Secretary shall establish and maintain within the Administration a program to be known as the "National Undersea Research Program".

(b) PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The Program shall, for the purpose of enhancing scientific understanding of processes in the oceans and large lakes of the world—

(1) develop, maintain, and conduct scientific and engineering undersea research programs; and

(2) investigate, develop, and apply technology for undersea research.

(c) OFFICE OF UNDERSEA RESEARCH.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Administration the Office of Undersea Research, which shall conduct the Program.

(2) PROGRAM DIRECTOR.—The head of the Office shall be the Director of the National Undersea Research Program, who shall be appointed by the Under Secretary from among individuals with extensive knowledge and expertise in undersea research, and having appropriate administrative experience.

(d) DUTIES OF PROGRAM DIRECTOR.—The Program Director shall administer the Program subject to the supervision of the Under Secretary. In addition to any other duty prescribed by law or assigned by the Under Secretary, the Program Director shall—

(1) establish and maintain a list for each priority research area of scientists who are actively conducting research in that area, for the purpose of—

(A) providing peer reviews of individual research proposals under the Program; and

(B) participating in site visits pursuant to section 107(c)(2); and

(2) develop guidelines for the submission and review of proposals from Centers and individual researchers for research under the Program.

(e) SCIENCE ADVISOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Under Secretary shall, pursuant to the Intergovernmental Personnel Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 4701 et seq.) and by not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, appoint to serve as a science advisor to the Director on the scientific needs of the Program, an individual who—

(A) is a scientist active in one or more priority research areas;

(B) is not employed by the Federal Government; and

(C) during the period of such service, is on leave of absence from an institution of higher education or oceanographic research.

(2) TERMS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term of an individual as a science advisor under this subsection shall be one year.

(B) LIMITATION.—An individual may serve not more than 2 terms as a science advisor under this subsection.

(f) PRIORITY RESEARCH AREAS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Under Secretary may use amounts appropriated for the Program to fund research, including long-term studies, within the following priority research areas:

(A) Oceanic, coastal, estuarine, and limnological processes.

(B) Pathways and fates of materials in the oceans and large lakes.

(C) Diversity, distribution, productivity, and recruitment of organisms with respect to habitat characteristics in the oceans and large lakes.

(D) Global change processes.

(E) Ocean lithosphere processes and mineral resources.

(F) Undersea research platform and instrument technology.

(G) Diving safety, physiology, and technology.

(2) REVISION OF PRIORITY AREAS.—Upon the recommendation of the Committee, the Under Secretary may, after public comment, revise the priority research areas under paragraph (1).

SEC. 105. STEERING COMMITTEE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE.—The Under Secretary shall establish an independent steering committee to be known as the "National Undersea Research Steering Committee".

(b) COMPOSITION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Committee shall consist of 9 members appointed by the Under Secretary from individuals who are professional scientists or engineers and active in at least one priority research area, of whom 2 members shall be appointed from individuals nominated by Center Directors. The Under Secretary shall complete appointments under this paragraph by not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) BALANCE.—In appointing members of the Committee, the Under Secretary shall seek to ensure balanced representation of priority research areas, disciplines related to those research areas, and geographic regions of the United States.

(3) PROHIBITION ON APPOINTMENT OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES.—No member of the Committee may be an employee of the Federal Government, except the Chief Scientist of the Administration.

(4) EX OFFICIO MEMBER.—The Chief Scientist of the Administration shall be a nonvoting ex officio member of the Committee.

(c) DUTIES.—The Committee shall advise the Under Secretary and the Program Director concerning—

(1) the quality of research performed with grants awarded under section 108, including the applicability of such research to the priority research areas;

(2) the designation, establishment, merger, and operation of Centers;

(3) the modification and merger of undersea regions;

(4) the need to revise the priority research areas;

(5) the process of responding to research proposal reviews, including making determinations and recommendations under section 107(a)(3)(B).

(6) any other matters the Under Secretary refers to the Committee for review and advice or the Committee considers appropriate.

(d) TERM OF MEMBERSHIP.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), the term of membership on the Committee shall be 3 years.

(2) INITIAL APPOINTMENTS.—Of the members first appointed to the Committee—

(A) 3 members shall serve a term of one year;

(B) 3 members shall serve a term of 2 years; and

(C) 3 members shall serve a term of 3 years; as specified by the Under Secretary at the time of appointment.

(3) TERM LIMITATION.—No Committee member may serve consecutive terms as a member of the Committee.

(e) COMPENSATION.—Members of the Committee, while performing official duties as members of the Committee, are entitled to receive compensation for travel and transportation expenses under section 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(f) CHAIRPERSON.—The members of the Committee shall select annually from among themselves an individual who shall serve as Chairperson of the Committee. No member of the Committee may serve more than 2 annual terms as a chairperson.

(g) CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.—The Committee shall conduct its business according to the majority vote of those members present at a meeting of the Committee.

(h) EXEMPTION.—The Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply to the Committee.

SEC. 106. ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL UNDERSEA RESEARCH CENTERS.

(a) ASSIGNMENT AND ESTABLISHMENT OF CENTERS.—

(1) ASSIGNMENT OF REGIONS TO EXISTING CENTERS.—The Under Secretary shall, in consultation with the Committee, assign one or more undersea regions to each Center in existence on the date of the enactment of this Act, by not later than 6 months after that date.

(2) ESTABLISHMENT OF NEW CENTERS.—The Under Secretary may establish a new Center to implement the Program for any undersea region at an institution of higher education or oceanographic research located in a State bordering the region—

(A) if there are adequate funds available for the establishment of the Center;

(B) after reviewing each proposal submitted under subsection (b) with respect to that region; and

(C) if the Committee concurs in the selection of that institution.

(3) LIMITATION.—The Under Secretary may not establish a new Center for an undersea region if the expenditure of amounts for that Center would result in any reduction of amounts available for expenditure for any existing Center.

(b) SOLICITATION OF PROPOSALS FOR NEW CENTERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Under Secretary may solicit proposals for the establishment of a new Center under subsection (a)(2) from institutions of higher education or oceanographic research.

(2) PROPOSAL REQUIREMENTS.—A proposal under this subsection shall consist of—

(A) a proposed science program;

(B) a program management plan;

(C) a description of the facilities of the institution submitting the proposal;

(D) a description of relevant institutional capabilities;

(E) an operational safety plan;

(F) mechanisms for information transfer;

(G) a budget for the Center; and

(H) any other information the Under Secretary considers necessary.

(c) REVIEW OF PROPOSALS.—The Under Secretary and the Committee shall review each proposal submitted under subsection (b) on the basis of—

(1) relevance of the proposal to priority research areas; and

(2) the capability of the applicant institution to administer and direct research in those areas.

(d) CENTER DIRECTOR.—Each institution at which a Center is established under this section may select an individual who shall be the Director for that Center.

(e) 5-YEAR REVIEW OF CENTERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Under Secretary and the Committee shall jointly review the operation of each Center every 5 years. The first review of a Center shall be completed—

(A) in the case of a Center in existence on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act, by not later than the date which is 5 years after that date of enactment; and

(B) in the case of a Center established on or after that date of enactment, by the date which is 5 years after the date of the establishment of the Center.

(2) CONTENT OF REVIEW.—A review under this subsection shall consist of—

(A) an evaluation of the quality of the research conducted at the Center under the Program and the applicability of the research to the priority research areas, including consideration of the annual reviews and site visits conducted under section 107(c);

(B) recommendations for changes in the scientific research program and operations of the Center, that are considered beneficial by the Committee and the Under Secretary; and

(C) a determination of whether the continued operation of the Center will increase knowledge in the priority research areas.

(3) ESTABLISHMENT OF NEW CENTER AT DIFFERENT INSTITUTION.—If the Under Secretary and the Committee determine as a result of a review under this subsection that continued operation of a Center is not warranted, the Under Secretary shall—

(A) provide notification of that determination to the Center, including a description of any changes in the operations of the Center the Under Secretary considers necessary for continued operation of the Center;

(B) after 18 months after providing that notice, and not later than 2 years after providing that notice, review the implementation of those changes by the Center; and

(C) establish, at a different institution of higher education or oceanographic research, a new Center for the same undersea region in accordance with this section, if the Under Secretary determines as a result of that review that those changes are not implemented.

(f) 5-YEAR REVIEW OF UNDERSEA REGIONS.—

(1) REVIEW BY COMMITTEE.—The Committee shall—

(A) review the configurations of undersea regions every 5 years following the date of the enactment of this Act to determine whether those regions meet scientific needs for research in priority research areas; and

(B) provide to the Under Secretary appropriate recommendations for meeting those needs, regarding—

(i) any modification or merger of existing undersea regions, or establishment of new undersea regions, and

(ii) the establishment of new Centers or merger of existing Centers for any undersea regions recommended to be established or merged.

(2) MODIFICATION, MERGER, OR ESTABLISHMENT OF REGIONS.—The Under Secretary may establish a new undersea region or modify or merge any existing undersea region or regions if, based on a recommendation by the Committee under paragraph (1)(B), the Under Secretary determines there is a scientific need for that establishment, modification, or merger.

(3) ESTABLISHMENT OR MERGER OF CENTERS.—If the Under Secretary establishes or merges any undersea region under paragraph (2), the Under Secretary may, in accordance with section 106 and any recommendations provided by the Committee under paragraph (1)(B), establish a new Center or merge existing Centers for the resulting undersea region.

(g) PROHIBITION.—Except as provided in subsections (a) and (f)(3), the Under Secretary may not establish or merge any Centers.

SEC. 107. NATIONAL UNDERSEA RESEARCH CENTER RESEARCH PROGRAMS.

(a) INDIVIDUAL RESEARCH PROPOSALS.—

(1) SOLICITATION.—Each Center Director shall annually solicit individual proposals from the scientific community for research to advance the priority research areas of the Program. Research under each proposal shall be primarily conducted within the undersea region of the Center, but may be conducted in another undersea region in cooperation with the Center for that region, or other geographic areas with the approval of the Program Director. Individual proposals shall adhere to guidelines established by the Program Director pursuant to section 104(d)(2). Proposals under this paragraph may be for multi-year research.

(2) INDIVIDUAL PROPOSAL REVIEW PROCESS.—Each individual proposal shall be reviewed by the Center Director or his or her designees and not less than 3 anonymous mail reviewers from the list of reviewers maintained by the Program Director pursuant to section 104(d)(1). Each review shall consider—

(A) the scientific merit of the proposal;

(B) the applicability of the proposal to the priority research areas; and

(C) the capability of the principal investigator to carry out the proposed research.

(3) ALLOWANCE FOR RESPONSE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to any regulation that is issued by the Program Director under subparagraph (C), a Center Director shall provide to each person who submits a proposal under this section to the Center copies of all written reviews of the proposal conducted by the Center Director, his or her designees, and anonymous reviewers, and shall give the person not less than 14 days to respond to those reviews before rendering any final decision regarding funding for the proposal.

(B) REVIEW OF PROCESS BY COMMITTEE.—Not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Committee shall—

(i) determine whether all Centers are implementing subparagraph (A);

(ii) determine whether the opportunity of persons who submit proposals to respond to reviews pursuant to subparagraph (A) has been utilized by those persons;

(iii) determine whether those responses have been effective in ensuring full and fair consideration of those proposals; and

(iv) recommend to the Program Director that the procedures established by subparagraph (A) be continued, terminated, or modified (including the specific modifications which should be made).

(C) ISSUANCE OF REGULATION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the Program Director may issue a regulation implementing any recommendation made by the Committee under subparagraph (B)(iv).

(b) PROPOSED CENTER PROGRAM.—Not later than October 31 of each year, each Center Director shall submit to the Program Director—

(1) a proposed program for the Center for that fiscal year, which shall adhere to guidelines established by the Program Director pursuant to section 104(d)(2) and shall include—

(A) a description of the activities performed and research funded by the Center in the previous fiscal year;

(B) those individual research proposals submitted under subsection (a) that the Center Director determines to be meritorious based on reviews conducted under that subsection;

(C) a proposed budget for operation of the Center for the current fiscal year; and

(D) any other materials requested by the Program Director to clarify the proposed program; and

(2) reviews (including responses under subsection (a)(3) to the reviews) of all individual research proposals submitted to the Center Director for the current fiscal year, including those research proposals not selected for inclusion in the proposed program of the Center.

(c) REVIEW OF PROPOSED CENTER PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Program Director, in consultation with the Committee, shall review the proposed program for the current fiscal year submitted by each Center Director under subsection (b).

(2) SITE VISITS.—At least once every 2 years, the review of a proposed program of a Center under this subsection shall include a formal inspection of the Center by a site visit team. The site visit team shall—

(A) be composed of not less than 4 individuals appointed by the Program Director with experience in undersea research, at least one of whom shall be a member of the Committee and 2 of whom are selected from the list maintained under section 104(d)(1);

(B) assess the quality of the individual research proposals included in the proposed program; and

(C) assess the ability of the Center to oversee the research included in the proposed program.

(d) REQUIRING ADDITIONAL PROPOSED PROGRAMS PROHIBITED.—Except as provided in this section, a center shall not be required to submit to the Program Director or the Under Secretary any program proposal.

(e) GIFTS, DEVISES, AND BEQUESTS.—Each Center may accept, solicit, and use the services of volunteers, and may accept, receive, hold, administer, and use gifts, devises, and bequests, to carry out the research program of the Center.

SEC. 108. REGIONAL UNDERSEA RESEARCH CENTER PROGRAM GRANTS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—The Under Secretary may use amounts appropriated to carry out the Program to make grants and enter into contracts under this subsection to fund any Center program if the Under Secretary finds that the program will advance knowledge in the priority research areas.

(b) ALLOCATION OF FUNDING.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than April 1 of each year and based on the reviews under section 107(c) of proposed programs, the Under Secretary shall—

(A) allocate among the Centers, in such manner as will best advance knowledge in the priority research areas, all amounts available for the current fiscal year for research to be conducted by, and administration of, the Centers; and

(B) notify each Center Director of the amount allocated to that Center under subparagraph (A) for the current fiscal year.

(2) LIMITATION ON ALLOCATION PER CENTER.—The total amount which may be allocated for any fiscal year for activities conducted by any one Center shall not exceed 20 percent of the total amounts available for the Program for that fiscal year, except that the Under Secretary may allocate a greater amount for a Center for the purpose of making major capital expenditures for the Center.

(c) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Any grant made, or contract entered into, under this section shall be subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), and to any other terms, conditions, and requirements the Under Secretary considers necessary.

(2) LIMITATIONS ON USES.—

(A) LAND AND BUILDINGS.—No payment under any grant or contract under this section may be applied to—

(i) the purchase of any land; or

(ii) the purchase or construction of any building.

(B) ADMINISTRATION.—At least 60 percent of the amount of a grant or contract under this section shall be used to fund individual research proposals carried out with the grant or contract.

(3) MAINTENANCE OF RECORDS.—Any person who receives or utilizes any proceeds of any grant or contract under this section shall keep any records the Under Secretary prescribes as necessary to facilitate effective audit and evaluation, including reports which fully disclose the amount and disposition of funds received under this title, the total cost of activities for which those funds were used, and the amount, if any, of costs which were provided through other sources. The records shall be maintained for 3 years after the completion of the activity. The Under Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access, for the purpose of audit and evaluation, to any books, documents, papers, and records of receipts which, in the opinion of the Under Secretary or of the Comptroller General, may be related or pertinent to the grants and contracts.

SEC. 109. FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE REVIEW BOARD.

After the date of the enactment of this Act, grants and contracts under the Program shall not be subject to review by the board in the Department of Commerce known as the Financial Assistance Review Board.

SEC. 110. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) CENTER PROGRAM FUNDING.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary for use for grants and contracts under section 108, to remain available until expended—

(1) $20,000,000, for fiscal year 1992,

(2) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1993,

(3) $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1994,

(4) $35,000,000 for fiscal year 1995, and

(5) $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1996.

(b) MANAGEMENT, ADMINISTRATION, AND STUDIES.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Under Secretary for management and administration of the Program (including administration of grants and contracts under section 108, the development of undersea research technology, and the conduct of studies of underwater diving techniques and equipment under section 21(e) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1347(c)), to remain available until expended—

(1) $4,000,000 for fiscal year 1992;

(2) $4,200,000 for fiscal year 1993;

(3) $4,400,000 for fiscal year 1994;

(4) $4,600,000 for fiscal year 1995; and

(5) $4,800,000 for fiscal year 1996.

(c) LIMITATION ON USE.—Amounts appropriated under the authority of subsection (a) shall not be available for administration of this Act by the Office, or for program or administrative expenses of the Administration.

(d) REVERSION OF UNOBLIGATED AMOUNTS.—The amount of any grant, contract, or portion of a grant or contract, made under section 108 that is not obligated before the end of the third fiscal year in which it is authorized to be obligated shall revert to the Under Secretary. The Under Secretary shall add that reverted amount to the funds available for grants under section 108.

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 201. GREAT LAKES UNDERSEA RESEARCH CENTER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the limitations in subsections (a)(2)(A) and (a)(3) of section 106, and not later than December 31, 1993, the Under Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere shall establish a National Undersea Research Center for the Great Lakes region in accordance with section 106 to implement the National Undersea Research Program established under section 104 for that region, at a qualified institution.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) "qualified institution" means an institution of higher education—

(A) located directly on the shoreline of one of the Great Lakes;

(B) with strong undergraduate and graduate programs in engineering, science, and technology as they may apply to undersea research;

(C) with facilities for maintaining research vessels appropriate for deployment of equipment necessary to conduct undersea research;

(D) with faculty and other personnel with expertise in undersea research;

(E) which has received funding from the National Undersea Research Program in the past; and

(F) which maintains cooperative institutional relationships with Federal agencies responsible for research work on the Great Lakes; and

(2) "undersea research" has the meaning that term has in section 103(10).

SEC. 202. PROCEDURES FOR JOINT REVIEW OF RESEARCH PROPOSALS.

The Under Secretary, in consultation with the Program Director, and jointly with the Director of the National Science Foundation and the Secretary of the Navy, shall—

(1) develop procedures for the submittal and joint review of proposals for research in priority research areas to be carried out with assistance from 2 or more agencies within the Department of Commerce, the National Science Foundation, or the Department of Defense; and

(2) issue final rules establishing those procedures by not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TRAFICANT:

At the end of the bill, add the following new sections:

SEC. . COMPLIANCE WITH BUY AMERICAN ACT.

No funds appropriated pursuant to this Act may be expended by an entity unless the entity agrees that in expending the assistance the entity will comply with sections 2 through 4 of the Act of March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a–10c, popularly known as the "Buy American Act").

SEC. . SENSE OF CONGRESS; REQUIREMENT REGARDING NOTICE.

(a) PURCHASE OF AMERICAN-MADE EQUIPMENT AND PRODUCTS.—In the case of any equipment or product that may be authorized to be purchased with financial assistance provided under this Act, it is the sense of the Congress that entities receiving such assistance should, in expending the assistance, purchase only American-made equipment and products.

(b) NOTICE TO RECIPIENTS OF ASSISTANCE.—In providing financial assistance under this Act, the Under Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere shall provide to each recipient of the assistance a notice describing the statement made in subsection (a) by the Congress.

Mr. TRAFICANT (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I support the efforts of the committee and the subcommittee in furthering our research into the oceans, the seas, and our Great Lakes as well. I believe this, my amendment, calls for an adherence of those participating in funds under this bill to abide by the buy American laws in effect.

In addition, it has a sense of the Congress that encourage those involved to purchase American-made goods and products. I would just like to say this: If we are going to become the leader in research, our research community is going to be, in my opinion, under the necessity to purchase American-made goods, so the infrastructure that supports that research will have an American presence.

The bill does not handcuff anybody to mandatory provisions, but it does in fact encourage those providers out there receiving funds to keep in mind we have a buy American law. It is good for the country and it is good for the infrastructure of research. It is a gift that keeps on giving.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I yield to the chairman, the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, the Chair is prepared to accept the gentleman's amendment. It is a good amendment. It is a buy American amendment. We should be encouraging the purchase of American equipment.

I congratulate the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] on his leadership in ensuring that we put America back to work.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERTEL].

Mr. HERTEL. Mr. Chairman, we do support the amendment. We think it is well-drawn, and the subcommittee supports it also.

Mr. TRAFICANT. I appreciate that very much.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I, too, commend the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] for the amendment which he has offered with regard to buy American. Just this morning I spent an hour and a half back in the district with a business person who brought to my attention many facts with regard to this type of an issue, and certainly one of the things that will go to make our economy more competitive is when we start doing more business at home, and perhaps recognizing the importance of doing that. So I commend the gentleman, and I am in full support of his amendment.

Mr. TRAFICANT. I appreciate the gentleman's support.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WALKER

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALKER: Page 25, strike line 24 and all that follows through page 26, line 4 and insert the following: "available until expended, $14,409,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996.".

Page 26, beginning at line 13, strike "expended—" and all that follows through page 26, line 18, and insert the following: "expended, $2,793,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996.".

Mr. WALKER (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, across America people are demanding that Congress get its house in order and do something about the Federal debt. People are concerned when they understand that their children and themselves are burdened with thousands, in fact tens of thousands of dollars of debt that has been piled up in their name based upon Federal spending.

Mr. Chairman, here is a bill where we could at least begin to take the right kind of steps. I have heard a couple of arguments as I have raised some figures on the floor here earlier.

First of all, I heard the argument that we care about space spending, that I personally care about space spending, not national underseas research. I would remind the people who want to make that argument, and I am sure I am going to hear it here again, I cut the NASA budget on the floor because I think there are places that we can do that, too. I offered the amendment that cut the NASA budget here on the floor. There is no reason why we cannot cut this one, too. In the NASA budget we found some places that it could be trimmed. We will find some places here that can be trimmed. We ought to get our house in order. We ought to begin the process of doing something real about spending in this House.

I also heard the argument that we do not have to be responsible in authorization bills because this is not the real appropriation, this is only an authorization. How do the Members think such spending gets started? When we authorize too much money, we appropriate too much money. I think it is ludicrous argument to suggest that somehow we ought to be irresponsible in authorization bills in hopes that it will not catch up with us at some point in the future.

Now, understand what the spending in this bill does. The spending in this bill says in 1992, that is the current fiscal year, when we are actually spending $17 million, this bill would say we ought to spend $24 million. Are we going to look for a supplemental? We are authorizing far more than is in the bill. Is this going to be part of the supplemental?

The bill also then calls for the $17 million next year to become $29 million. If my math is not too far off, that is a major increase, about a 60-percent increase in 1 year in this bill. That is a lot of money.

Then if we look out over the period of 5 years in the bill, we find in 5 years the spending is going to go from $17.2 million to $48.5 million or $44.5 million. This is a 260-percent increase in spending. These are not small figures.

The gentleman says "It is just $5 million a year. It is peanuts, just $5 million a year." Five million a year is big money. It is big money in his district, and it is big money in my district, and it adds up percentage-wise to major spending.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I was just correcting the gentleman's arithmetic, that is all I was doing. Five million is a lot of money, but when we are trying to create new nerve centers, let us be honest, when we are trying to create new nerve centers to try to be a little more comprehensive, to try to cover ocean research throughout this country, and we do not have research centers in many parts of the country——

Mr. WALKER. I do not understand what the gentleman says is wrong with my figures. It is a 260-percent increase over 5 years, is it not?

Mr. HUGHES. If the gentleman will continue to yield, the gentleman was saying cumulative. We were talking about increases each and every year. The gentleman's arithmetic indicated it was——

Mr. WALKER. It is about 40 percent a year.

Mr. HUGHES. The gentleman said 60 percent a year.

Mr. WALKER. 260 percent over 5 years.

Mr. HUGHES. When I went to school that was not 50 percent.

Mr. WALKER. 260 percent over 5 years is an average of 50 percent a year, I would say to my colleague. In the first year in the program when we go from 17 to 29, that is over 60 percent in 1 year. So these are not mistaken figures. This is absolutely factual.

All the amendment that we have before us now says is, "Let us freeze the program. Let us not do what the administration says should be done and absolutely eliminate the program, let us just freeze the program."

What kind of a program are we freezing? We are going to freeze a program that has gone up by 500 percent in 12 years, so it has had a pretty steep growth curve. So what we are saying is, given the situation that we are in financially, having had this very, very steep growth curve, why do we not just flatten it off for a period of time and say that we will live with $17.2 million for a while and save some money? I do not think that that is terribly irresponsible to contemplate.

There are a couple of other things that need to be understood, the reasons for doing this. First of all, the administration that opposes the bill that is before us will probably veto it, will probably have its veto sustained, unless we do something with it. We already showed on a vote earlier this year that there were more than a third of the Members of the House who were willing to vote against this bill, so if we do not make it responsible, the administration is probably going to veto the bill and it will be lost anyway. So why not take the responsible step right now, knowing that they oppose the bill?

Finally, they say the beneficiaries of all these specialized results that I have heard people discuss here today—maybe the private industries and the States ought to contribute something for the work that is being done. The question here is whether or not this is a time to be deficit spending on submarines, robots, and scuba equipment. That is in large part what we are doing.

If we would hold the line with the amendment that I have before us, it would be a vote not to spend $86 million over a period of 5 years. That is some real money. I would also point out one other reason for supporting my bill. The administration states, and I quote:

> The program growth authorized by the bill would place higher priority NOAA programs in direct competition for increasingly scarce resources.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WALKER was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. WALKER. Understand what that statement means. It means that the moneys in this bill are in direct competition with the new weather technology and with the new weather offices, the Global Change Research Program and the Fisheries Management Program.

The way this bill is structured, it puts it in direct competition with each of those things. So let me tell my colleagues, if they have a weather office that they are trying to keep open or they have a new one to come on line, this is a bill to take money out of that program and put it in this priority instead of that one.

If they are concerned about global change research, this is to take money out of global change and put it into this program.

□ 1510

If you are concerned about fisheries management, this is to take money out of that program and put it in this one, because that is the way the priorities end up being skewed when you take what the language of this bill says.

Let me repeat again, the amendment before us does not kill the NURP program, it does not even cut it. All it does is freeze it at the $17.2 million level, the 500-percent increase level of the program over the last 10 or 12 years.

In light of all of the speeches that we have heard about balanced budgets, in light of all of the discussion we have heard about courage, in light of all of the Members that have come to the floor and said the buck has to stop here, we have to begin to belly up to the bar and do the right thing. I think the very least we could do on a program that has grown as astronomically, and which the committee wants to have continue to grow astronomically, is to begin to trim it.

Let us do the same thing here we did with the NASA budget on the floor. Let us cut spending. I offered the amendment then, and I offer the spending cut amendment now. I hope it will be supported in the same way the NASA bill was.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. HUGHES TO THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WALKER

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Amendment offered by Mr. HUGHES to the amendment offered by Mr. WALKER: in the first paragraph of the Walker amendment, after "expended," strike the remainder of the paragraph, and insert:

"$20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $22,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, $24,000,000 for fiscal year 1995; $26,000,000 for fiscal year 1996; and $28,000,000 for fiscal year 1997."

In the second paragraph of the Walker amendment, strike out all after "expended," and insert:

"$3,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $3,100,000 for fiscal year 1994, $3,200,000 for fiscal year 1995; $3,300,000 for fiscal year 1996, and $3,400,000 for fiscal year 1997."

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, this amendment modifies the fiscal years of the authorization from 1992 to 1996, to 1993 to 1997. It makes sense to have a 5-year authorization in the bill since the centers are on a 5-year cycle of review for continuation, sunset, or relocation.

The amendment scales down the authorization in H.R. 3247 by $36 million from that the committee reported. The amendment still augments the authorization for each year by about $2 million, because it is necessary to provide inflationary adjustments and to allow for the potential establishment of new centers in any of the four currently underserved, coupled-up regions.

The amendment is modest, and demonstrates reasonableness in the face of austere budget times, without sacrificing our national investment and the benefits of undersea research in improving our lives.

Mr. HERTEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUGHES. I am happy to yield to my colleague from Michigan, the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. HERTEL. Mr. Chairman, I support the Hughes amendment. I think it is a reduction but a responsible reduction, and I ask my colleagues to vote yes.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUGHES. I yield to the distinguished chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES]. The Hughes amendment reduces the total 5-year authorization for NURP by $36 million. While these are barebones authorization levels, they will allow the program to grow. Growth is very important for scientists conducting research in the Great Lakes, the Gulf of Mexico, California, and the Pacific Northwest, because the current program is concentrated on the east coast of the United States. Expansion into the Great Lakes, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Pacific Ocean is essential for NURP to truly become a national program.

I urge all Members to support the Hughes amendment, because it significantly reduces the authorization levels, but sill allows for the program to grow.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, what we are faced with here is something that goes on in the normal course of our deliberations in the House, and that is what is it that we want to prioritize, what is it that we think is important, and perhaps what is it in some cases that we do not think is important.

What the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] has suggested here I believe is a very well-thought-out compromise. It is a compromise between what my friend from Pennsylvania would do, and that is to provide for no increase in this funding whatsoever for the NURP program, to one that is an increase of much less than was originally written in the bill, but still would permit the program to go forward in the face of inflation.

Let me talk about setting priorities. Not long ago here on the House floor my good friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] and I agreed with him on the issue, suggested, and very skillfully provided for a bill or helped to provide for the passage of a bill that spent $2 billion on space exploration. There was good logic to that, there are reasons that we need to know about space, there are things in space that we can use for the betterment of mankind. And so the House, in its collective wisdom, decided to support that $2 billion authorization bill.

This bill provides for an authorization of 1 percent of that, 1 percent of the amount of money that we are spending to explore space, with the space station, to try to learn more about two-thirds of the Earth. That sounds like a pretty good expenditure of money to me.

We deal with issues on an ongoing basis that have to do with the ocean that we do not understand. Perhaps somebody could explain to us why just a couple of years ago we found out in dolphin's meat that there were 16,000 parts per million of PCB's. Does anybody know why? Does anybody want to explain how that is good to be in the food chain?

Not long after that we were doing some research that had to with the 106-mile dump site, and we found that crustaceans, lobsters had boils on them, were diseased. Why? Was it because of the dump site or was it because of something else that is happening in the ocean?

The migratory fish population, swordfish are in diminished supply. Fishermen have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars equipping themselves to catch swordfish, and today they are faced with the possibility, the real possibility that we are going to close down the fishery, or at least diminish it to the point where they cannot make a living. Do we understand why the swordfish population has diminished?

So, as was said during 1987 and 1988 when dolphins were washing up on the New Jersey coast, the South Carolina coast and the Connecticut coast, when it was said that the dolphins are dying and trying to tell us something, what this bill moves to do is to spend one-one hundredths of what we want to spend to establish the space station and run it, one-one hundredths, 1 percent of that amount to try to learn about solutions to the problems that we face in the ocean environment.

So, I generally agree with my colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] when he suggests that spending is out of control. I voted for the balanced budget amendment. I have voted with the gentleman from Pennsylvania on 90 percent of his amendments. But in this case, this is an important issue. It is important that we understand these issues and problems so that we can intelligently develop solutions to them.

So I will support the Hughes amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania and ask my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAXTON. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether the gentleman saw this current edition of U.S. News & World Report. It is titled "The Rape of the Oceans. The Growing Threat to the Nation's Last Frontier," a major cover story.

□ 1520

And that probably says it better than anything. We are spending $24 million, as the gentleman very eloquently has indicated, less than 1 percent basically of what we are spending in exploring space and trying to understand space, and yet we have serious problems with the oceans.

We always thought we could do anything to the oceans and it would not come back to haunt us, but it has, and this is a modest effort to try to deal with the rape of the oceans.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, first of all, to again clarify the space issue, when we brought the NASA bill, primarily because of my insistence in committee, we brought the NASA bill to the floor at a freeze level. Now, knowing that not only did we do that, but then when we came to the floor, I offered an amendment where we cut $500 million out of the program here on the floor.

This amendment cuts $86 million out.

So, I mean, I am taking the same action here that I did on others, because I think that we have got to get responsible about some of these programs.

Now, let me tell you what the committee parades here as responsibility. I said before that they had a 260-percent increase. They do not like the figure. They argue about it. It is, in fact, the figure. This one is 180-percent increase. They have gone from 260- to 180-percent increase over the 5-year period.

It is interesting what they have done is eliminate the 1992 authorization figure in the bill, and then they have added in a 1997 authorization, and so they really, with this amendment, they have added $31.4 million that was not in the original bill, by taking out the 97, and so when you put the whole thing together, they are calling for an increase in spending of 180 percent over the 5-year period. That does not strike me as being the responsible action that they have talked about.

The difference between my amendment and this amendment is about $50 million. If you adopt this substitute, what you will do is eliminate the chance to do something about $50 million in spending.

I would simply suggest that if you want to get serious about spending, let us start by freezing some of these budgets. Here is one where we can freeze it. I would hope that we might. It certainly is in line with our responsibility.

Obviously, it is something where we ought to do the research. This gentleman has not argued against doing the research. All I am arguing is at some point we have got to get a grip on what we are doing.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, is the gentleman calculating, and I am trying to understand the gentleman's figures, is the gentleman calculating on the basis of the $17 million appropriation?

Mr. WALKER. Yes, that is what we are now spending.

Mr. HUGHES. Yes, but we are talking about authorization.

Mr. WALKER. I realize that. One of the things the American people find a little confusing is we have money we actually spend, and then we have money we think we would like to spend. All I am saying is that the difference between what we are spending now and what we think we would like to spend is 180 percent.

Mr. HUGHES. If the gentleman will yield further, the gentleman is speaking about bananas and oranges. If you talk in terms of the $24 million authorization, you do not get anywhere near those figures. We accept the $24 million authorization for 1992. 1993, under my amendment, is $23 million. The authorization for 1994 is $25.1 million. The authorization for 1995 is $27.2 million. They are modest increases. Each and every year they are modest increases.

If the gentleman wants to compare that to what is appropriated at $17 million, you are not being fair.

Mr. WALKER. I am being fair, because if we talk about freezing, what we are really talking about is what we are actually spending.

You know, if we passed authorizations, why do we not pass an authorization for $200 million here, and then freeze it at that level? And somehow we can go back to the public and say we are freezing.

We have got to take what we are spending and decide whether or not that is an appropriate amount of money to spend, and then look at our increases beyond that, and that is all this gentleman is doing. I am saying we are spending $17 million. That is where we freeze.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is not incorrect in his basic facts as he lays them out there. But what happens is the way the gentleman manipulates those facts, he ends up distorting the picture. I know the gentleman does not want to do that.

Mr. WALKER. I am not manipulating any facts. I am simply taking the spending that we are doing this year and I am looking at the add-ons that the committee wants to bring about.

Mr. GEJDENSON. However, if the gentleman wanted to take this argument before the Congressional Reform Committee, which the House has passed, and argue that in the future authorizations should simply be authorizations without dollar figures, and then Appropriations would set the spending limits, that might be a valuable argument and statement.

Mr. WALKER. That would be a ridiculous argument, if I may reclaim my time.

Mr. GEJDENSON. There are a lot of options you could look at.

Mr. WALKER. I will be happy to yield, but let me reclaim my time, and then I will be happy to yield back to the gentleman.

The idea behind the authorization is we set ceilings on spending over which the appropriators are not supposed to go. This is the responsibility of controlling spending. If what we do is artificially push authorizations up with the idea that somehow the responsibility will come in the appropriations process——

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. PASTOR). The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] has expired.

(At the request of Mr. HUGHES and by unanimous consent, Mr. WALKER was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I think you have got to get control both places. You should begin to get some control here simply by freezing the spending at this year's spending level. We certainly can do that.

Mr. HUGHES. If the gentleman will yield further, is the gentleman saying that if in fact we have not embarked on any research programs, what we should fund is zero? Frankly, this is the gentleman's argument.

Mr. WALKER. No.

Mr. HUGHES. Frankly, I think the only way we are going to work ourselves out of the dilemma we are in is to start to fund research programs that will have a payback for us.

Mr. WALKER. I am all for research programs, but we need to fund research programs within the context of a $4 trillion debt.

Mr. HUGHES. If the gentleman will yield further, what the gentleman is saying though is that if we have not funded programs in the past, then we should not fund any of them.

Mr. WALKER. No. What this gentleman would tell you is that if we have not funded programs in the past and they are needed, let us find some other cuts then. Let us find some places where we can cut spending in order to fund research. That is what we have been unwilling to do as a Congress. Congress has been unwilling to make real priority decisions. Here is a chance to do that. That is all I am saying.

Mr. HUGHES. If the gentleman will yield further, the gentleman is shifting on me now. Frankly, what we are saying is here is an area, ocean policy, that has been neglected. Here is an opportunity to increase modestly a research program, a research program.

Mr. WALKER. Here is a program, I say to the gentleman, that started off as a $3 million effort in 1980. We have already pumped it up to $17.2 million. That is over 500 percent in a 12-year period. That is a pretty healthy growth rate. All this gentleman is saying, fine, you have had a healthy increase; now is the good time to freeze it. And let us see whether or not we cannot live with that.

This is not a program that has been starved. This is a program that has increased much faster than, for instance, the space program has. This is a program that has increased enormously in the decade of the 1980's.

Mr. HUGHES. If the gentleman will yield further, the gentleman is in a position all of a sudden of being the expert on ocean policy here. We have a committee that spent a lot of time trying to develop legislation that would provide for basic research and develop rational ocean policy, forward-looking ocean policy. It came out of committee on a very strong bipartisan vote.

Mr. WALKER. And it was defeated on the floor.

Mr. HUGHES. It was defeated for any number of reasons, not the least of which there were a lot of Members here in the Congress on the day.

Mr. WALKER. The fact is what happened was that there were enough votes against it to sustain a veto, and so if the administration is bound to veto this program anyhow, you are going to lose it even so. Why not accept the responsible amendment to freeze it?

Mr. HUGHES. It received 255 votes on the floor, as I recall, 255 votes.

Mr. WALKER. Yes. That is not enough to override a veto.

Mr. HUGHES. It was noncontroversial, on the noncontroversial Suspension Calendar, but it did not receive a two-thirds vote, and that is why we are back here, but it enjoys bipartisan, widespread support in the Congress.

Mr. WALKER. Sure it does. But we have enough to sustain a veto, and you do not have enough to override. Why not do what the administration has been asking the Congress to do? And why not do what we said we were going to do here on the floor when we were debating things like the balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution? Why not get responsible now? Why not just adopt a freeze level?

I would agree that there are probably wonderful things that could be done if we could do that, but my guess is that we will figure out ways to do good research within a $17 million budget. That is all I am asking that we do.

Oppose the substitute.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Hughes amendment.

I think it is important for our colleagues to recognize that this is the first authorization bill for this critically important area, and to somehow pick an arbitrary freeze that will affect us 5 years out just does not answer the critical questions that are affecting our oceans and waters in general.

It seems to me that the Hertel amendment is a responsible step in lowering the ceiling, but at the same time giving us an opportunity to meet the challenges that are before us.

There are places to freeze and cut spending. This Congress is arguing over whether we should spend $17 million or $23 million on science research in 1993.

We are going to spend $28 billion subsidizing the defense of Western Europe in just the bases, the operation and maintenance of bases.

We will spend another $80 billion, roughly $70 to $80 billion housing our troops and paying for our troops that are defending Western Europe from what was the Soviet Union, but when it comes time to take a look at some basic science, some of the things that will help us save the sounds and the waters off our Nation, guarantee that we have some rational policies that will not damage the oceans and our children and their children, suddenly that is the one place that we have got to lower the boom.

It seems to me that the committee is recognizing the fiscal crisis this country is in. There are places we ought to be cutting. We ought to bring those troops home. We ought to spend the $28 billion reducing the deficit and dealing with the issues that are before this country, but not take a small program like this and cripple it so that we can appear to be having some grant impact on the deficit.

We are going to have a water amendment back on this floor that can save tens of millions of dollars going to farmers who are selling surplus crops already.

Let us have the gentleman support us there. Let us not devastate this project.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEJDENSON. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me, and I take this time just to ask my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey, a question. The gentleman serves on the committee. Am I not correct that where the Walker amendment would take us, those proposals for additional undersea research, deep water research in the gulf, in the Pacific in particular would be cut, and that is where the under service programs would be cut in all probability.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEJDENSON. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, that is right. The gentleman from New Jersey has a good point.

What we are looking at here are some of the programs that affect us coastwise all around the United States. We are looking at issues that have to do with perhaps Outer Continental Shelf issues off the west coast and in the Gulf of Mexico that have to do with oil exploration in those areas, issues that are very important to the ecology and the environment of all those coastal areas.

Mr. HUGHES. But if the gentleman will yield further, Mr. Chairman, the areas that are under serviced that would be hurt by the Walker proposal would be the gulf and the Pacific.

Mr. SAXTON. That is correct.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, we are talking about billions of dollars of economic activity from recreational uses, to the food that we eat, and it seems to me to be incredibly shortsighted to shackle that terrible important program.

What I would hope is that we would accept the Hertel amendment that would have some reductions and then hope we can get our friends to join us in closing those bases in Europe and bring that almost $30 billion home, rather than attacking this well-needed program.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time and hope my colleagues will support the Hertel amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. PASTOR). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

The question was taken; and the Chairman pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote, and pending that, I make the point of order that a quorum is not a present.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Pursuant to the provisions of clause 2, rule XXIII, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the pending question following the quorum call. Members will record their presence by electronic device.

The call was taken by electronic device.

☐ 1605

Mr. GOODLING changed his vote from "aye" to "nay."

Mr. PAXON and Mrs. ROUKEMA changed their vote from "nay" to "aye."

So the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], as amended.

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

□ 1623

So the amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there other amendments to the bill? If not, the question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. MCNULTY) having assumed the chair, Mr. PENNY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3247) to establish a National Undersea Research Program within the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, pursuant to House Resolution 487, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole? If not, the question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 265, nays 86, not voting 83, as follows:

□ 1644

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Mineta for, with Mr. Thomas of California against.

Mr. CONDIT changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 3247, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCNULTY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, during rollcall vote Nos. 237, a quorum call, 238, 239, and 240 on H.R. 3247 I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present I would have voted "aye."

REPORT ON H.R. 5503, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1993

Mr. YATES, from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102-626) on the bill (H.R. 5503) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed.

Mr. REGULA reserved all points of order on the bill.

REPORT ON H.R. 5504, DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1993

Mr. MURTHA, from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102-627) on the bill (H.R. 5504) making appropriations for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed.

Mr. McDADE reserved all points of order on the bill.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 5260, UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION AMENDMENTS OF 1992

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5260) to extend the emergency unemployment compensation program, to revise the trigger provisions contained in the extended unemployment compensation program, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to a conference requested by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

MOTION TO INSTRUCT OFFERED BY MR. ARCHER

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ARCHER moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H.R. 5260) be instructed not to agree to include section 601 of the House bill in the Conference Agreement. The managers are further instructed to agree to no provisions exempting H.R. 5260 from the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER.]

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, for well over a year now, Congress has been considering and reconsidering legislation to extend unemployment compensation benefits.

The principal reason we keep coming back has been Congress' insistence that we pass legislation which is unacceptable to the President. Not surprisingly, he has vetoed or has not let go into effect, some of our earlier efforts. Regardless of what Members think of the President's position on unemployment legislation, it serves nothing but petty political interests to send to the President legislation that is clearly unacceptable to him.

We must have a compromise with the President or no unemployment legislation will become law. The Democrat leadership has decided, however, to seek confrontation, not compromise, once again. I would remind my colleagues that the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Program expires this weekend, and extending this program is the principal intention of H.R. 5260. It surely does not serve the interests of the unemployed if we send to the President a bill we know he will not sign.

In 1990, the President and the Congress made an agreement intended to bring some form of control to our budget process and reduce the deficit. The Budget Enforcement Act of 1990 was passed as part of that agreement. It required that any new legislation proposing to increase entitlement spending must be paid for by entitlement reductions or revenue increases that fully cover the increased spending in each year through 1996.

The President has consistently objected to any legislation breaching this agreement because it is the only restraint we have right now against expanding the Federal deficit.

His principal reason for vetoing unemployment legislation in the past is that it blithely violated the pay-as-you-go requirements of the Budget Act. I am certain this bill will be unacceptable if it does not meet with demands of that budget agreement.

Neither the House nor Senate versions of H.R. 5260 meet the pay-as-you-go requirements. In addition, the House-passed version specifically exempts the legislation from the pay-as-you-go requirements of the Budget Act. This will clearly be unacceptable to the President, and should be unacceptable to the people of this country.

My motion is a simple one. It instructs conferees to recede from the House position on whether any budget authority, outlays or receipts from the provisions of this bill should be considered for the purpose of complying with the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985.

In layman's terms that simply means the bill would not be exempt from the pay-as-you-go provisions of the budget law.

I urge my colleagues to support this motion to instruct conferees. Show that you care about fiscal discipline. More importantly, show that you care about the Nation's unemployed by insisting that conferees bring back a bill the President can sign into law.

☐ 1650

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I think it would probably be more truth in labeling if we called this a motion to obstruct conferees, as opposed to instructing them. The sordid history of the minority involvement on unemployment is quite clear. They have been historically opposed to every single effort that we have made to try to extend benefits to the unemployed. The President has vetoed one bill, not signed another. They have been lax in every attempt to offer serious alternatives, and now on the eve of attempting to get an agreement with the other body they offer this motion that would require year by year compliance with the Budget Act.

The simple problem with that is that during a period of recession or downturn in an economy, it is inimicable to the interests of recovery to raise taxes or to try to do anything that would dampen aggregate demand, if that is what they propose.

For people who did not agree there was a recession, it is probably not too far a cry to expect them to want to raise revenue in the middle of a recession or in the early stages of a recovery.

I would hope that our colleagues would understand that over the 5-year period of time the permanent changes in the unemployment law are fully paid for and that the extension of benefits is as well fully paid for in the later years which is when it would be appropriate to pay for them, not during this early and delicate stage of recovery.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge a strong no vote on this motion to obstruct.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It is interesting, the terminology the gentleman uses, because it is by creating a bill that does not comply with the Budget Enforcement Act that the gentleman himself is obstructing the ability of the unemployed to get unemployment compensation. There is no question about it. It is an irresponsible act on the past of this Congress to once again launch into a spend and borrow program that is in clear violation of the Budget Act, and that is the point that the conferees should be instructed on. It is the point we must insist on and it is the point that the President must have if he is to sign this bill into law.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to instruct.

The was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 180, nays 170, not voting 84, as follows:

□ 1715

Messrs. MILLER of Ohio, ROTH, HAYES of Louisiana, NEAL of North Carolina, SISISKY, OLIN, and PICKETT changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the motion to instruct was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Speaker will appoint conferees upon his return to the chair.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent from the House Chamber during rollcall votes Nos. 238 through 241.

If I were present during rollcall No. 238, I would have voted "nay."

If I were present for the rollcall No. 239, I would have voted "yea."

If I were present for rollcall No. 240, the final passage of the National Underseas Research Program Act of 1991, I would have voted "nay."

Had I been present for rollcall No. 241, the appointment of conferees on H.R. 5260, Unemployment Compensation Amendments of 1992, I would have voted "yea."

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION INDEPENDENCE ACT OF 1992

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). The pending business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 5429, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5429, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 350, nays 8, not voting 76, as follows:

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained in my district. Had I been present, however, I would have voted "no" on rollcall vote 238, "yes" on rollcall vote 239, "no" on rollcall vote 240, "yes" on rollcall vote 241, and "yes" on rollcall vote 242.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, official business required me to be in Arkansas for the investiture of Judge Morris "Buzz" Arnold to the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Since he was my nominee to the President, I felt it incumbent that I be present on that auspicious occasion.

Therefore, I missed several votes, including rollcall vote No. 237, a quorum call. Had I been here I would have voted the following: rollcall vote No. 238, I would have voted "no"; on rollcall vote No. 239, I would have voted "aye"; on rollcall vote No. 240, I would have voted "no"; and on rollcall vote No. 241, I would have voted "aye."

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. ZELIFF. Mr. Speaker, I was absent from the session due to important legislative business in my district. I request unanimous consent that I be granted a leave of absence for the day.

As a result of my absence I missed the rollcalls 238 through 242. If I had been present for those rollcalls I would have voted "no" on rollcalls 238 and 240 and "yes" on rollcalls 239, 241, and 242.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained during House proceedings. Had I been present, I would have voted "present" on rollcall vote No. 237, and "yea" on rollcalls 238, 239, and 240.

On rollcall No. 241, I would have voted "nay."

On rollcall No. 242 on H.R. 5429, to establish the Social Security Administration as an independent agency, I would have voted "yea." This legislation is a positive step in elevating the Social Security Administration above the political pressures which currently hamper its effectiveness. Most significantly, passage of H.R. 5429 will help eliminate the current backlog of claims and thus make the agency more responsive to our constituents.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. TORRES. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent on official business for rollcall vote Nos. 238 through 242. Had I been present on the House floor I would have cast my votes as follows:

Rollcall No. 238—"Aye" on Mr. HUGHES' amendment to Mr. WALKER'S amendment to H.R. 3247, the National Undersea Research Program Act.

Rollcall No. 239—"Aye" on Mr. WALKER'S amendment as amended to H.R. 3247, the National Undersea Research Program Act.

Rollcall No. 240—"Yea" on H.R. 3247, the National Undersea Research Program Act.

Rollcall No. 241—"No" on Mr. ARCHER'S motion to instruct House conferees on H.R. 5260, the Unemployment Compensation Amendments of 1992.

Rollcall No. 242—"Yea" on suspending the rules and passing H.R. 5429, the Social Security Administration Independence Act of 1992.

PERMISSION TO FILE CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 1150, HIGHER EDUCATION AMENDMENTS OF 1992

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the managers may have until midnight tonight, June 29, 1992, to file the conference report on the Senate bill (S. 1150) to reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCNULTY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING ON TOMORROW

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

PROVIDING FOR JOINT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE ON INAUGURAL CEREMONIES

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 102) to provide for a Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the Senate concurrent resolution.

The Clerk read the Senate concurrent resolution as follows:

S. CON. RES. 102

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That a Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies consisting of three Senators and three Representatives, to be appointed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, respectively, is authorized to make the necessary arrangements for the inauguration of the President-elect and Vice President-elect of the United States on the 20th day of January 1993.

The Senate concurrent resolution was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING USE OF CAPITOL ROTUNDA FOR PROCEEDINGS AND CEREMONIES FOR INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT-ELECT AND VICE PRESIDENT-ELECT OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 103) authorizing the rotunda of the U.S. Capitol to be used on January 20, 1993, in connection with the proceedings and ceremonies for the inauguration of the President-elect and the Vice President-elect of the United States, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the Senate concurrent resolution.

The Clerk read the Senate concurrent resolution as follows:

S. CON. RES. 103

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the rotunda of the United States Capitol is hereby authorized to be used on January 20, 1993, by the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies in connection with the proceedings and ceremonies conducted for the inauguration of the President-elect and the Vice President-elect of the United States. Such Committee is authorized to utilize appropriate equipment and the services of appropriate personnel of departments and agencies of the Federal Government, under arrangements between such Committee and the heads of such departments and agencies, in connection with such proceedings and ceremonies.

The Senate concurrent resolution was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONTINUED DISCRIMINATION AGAINST WOMEN ATHLETES AT AMERICAN COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. COLLINS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, this month, as many of us observe the 20th anniversary of title IX of the Education Amendment of 1972, I am sad to report that this landmark law intended to assure equal athletic opportunities for girls and women, has not been enforced to the extent that Congress intended.

Twenty years after passage of title IX, women are still playing on an unlevel field. Inadequate enforcement of title IX by the Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights has resulted in continued discrimination against women athletes at our colleges and universities.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association, the largest governing body regulating intercollegiate athletics, recently published a gender-equity survey of its member institutions. The findings can only be described as dismal.

According to the NCAA, for every $1 spent on operating woman's programs, an average of $2.75 is spent to operate men's programs. For every $1 allocated to recruit female basketball players, an average of $3.21 is spent to recruit men. As a result, men's participation in intercollegiate sports exceeds women's participation by a 2-to-1 ratio.

Unfortunately, the disparity in spending exists not just in the major revenue sports like basketball, but in other sports. NCAA member institutions spend twice as much on men's lacrosse as women's lacrosse; 50 percent more on men's fencing then on women's fencing; and 20 percent more on men's indoor/outdoor track. I find this totally unacceptable.

Women are not just shortchanged on the playing field. Coaches in the men's programs typically earn over 80 percent more than coaches in the women's programs. While 40 percent of the coaches in the women's programs are men, there are virtually no women coaches in the men's programs. The percentage of women coaching women's programs dropped from 90 percent in 1972 to 48 percent in 1992.

In spite of the facts I have just cited, Mr. Speaker, some progress is being made, and women again are beginning to make some inroads. Women's sports continues to gain in popularity. Last year, nearly 400,000 sports fans paid to see 7,756 women student-athletes on 1,120 teams participate in 33 championships.

While we observe the 20th anniversary of title IX, Mr. Speaker, I will continue to talk about the problems of equal opportunities for girls and women in sports.

THE HEALTH CARE COST CONTAINMENT AND REFORM ACT OF 1992

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. STARK] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, today I am pleased to join the majority leader, Mr. GEPHARDT, and Mr. DONNELLY, Mr. COYNE, Mr. LEVIN of Michigan, and Mr. CARDIN, in introducing H.R. 5502, the Health Care Cost Containment and Reform Act of 1992.

H.R. 5502 addresses the three critical issues in health care today. It controls skyrocketing health care costs, reforms the health care system, and provides health coverage to millions of uninsured Americans.

The bill would achieve these three objectives with no new taxes. Savings achieved from cost containment would be used to expand health insurance coverage and benefits.

I must say that I would prefer to move forward with a comprehensive health plan. For many years, I have been an advocate of Medicare-for-all, as outlined in my bill, H.R. 650, the MediPlan Act of 1991. Unfortunately, a comprehensive plan like MediPlan cannot be enacted without effective leadership from the White House.

While the Health Care Cost Containment and Reform Act of 1992 does not provide universal coverage, it does provide effective cost containment, meaningful reform of the health care system, and a substantial increase in health insurance coverage.

H.R. 5502 establishes a framework for universal health insurance coverage. It is an important first step. It does not prejudice future comprehensive reform plans such as a Canadian-style single payer system, Medicare-for-all, a pay-or-play plan, or other proposals that are currently being discussed.

COST CONTAINMENT

The centerpiece of this plan is cost containment.

The rising cost of health care has become the No. 1 health concern of the American people. In town meeting after town meeting, our constituents have expressed their fears about the ever higher cost of medical care.

Health care costs are out of control, increasing at more than 6 percent a year higher than the rate of general inflation.

Increasing costs are driving up health insurance premiums by more than 15 percent each year. At the current rate of increase, health insurance premiums will double every 4 years.

This rate of increase has taken its toll on middle class families, and it is robbing our economy of resources that could be used to expand our productive capacity and ultimately to improve the standard of living of American workers.

American workers feel that cutbacks in their health benefits will limit protection for their families. All too frequently, workers are told that productivity gains must be spent on maintaining their health benefits, and not on increasing take-home pay. Health care costs and coverage have become the No. 1 factor leading to strikes.

Ever-increasing costs are the No. 1 reason small businesses are not providing health insurance to their employees.

Large employers also feel the effects of rising health costs. Employers now pay as much as $4,800 per year per employee for health insurance benefits. For every car sold by General Motors, more than $1,000 goes toward health coverage for employees.

Rising costs affect our ability to compete in international markets. The United States spends more on health care as a percent of its gross domestic product [GDP] than any of our major trading partners.

The United States spends 13 percent of our GDP for health, whereas Canada is at 9 percent, Germany is at 8 percent, and Japan is at 6 percent. While health as a portion of the GDP remains relatively constant for many countries, in the United States health is expected to continue to grow to 18 percent of the GDP by the end of the decade.

H.R. 5502 places effective limits on rising health care costs. It is not a blue-smoke-and-mirrors strategy. The cost containment in the bill is based on proven approaches which have been shown to work. Other approaches have been tried in the past, but they simply do not work.

A national health budget would be set for 1994, to reflect current spending plus 1 percent less than the projected increase. The annual increase would phase down over 5 years to equal the increase in the nominal GDP.

Total payments to hospitals and physicians would not be reduced. Under the limits on growth proposed in this bill, hospital and physician payments would grow at the rate of increase of the economy as a whole, about 6 percent a year.

The annual increase in national health spending would be held to preset levels through a three-part system of State programs, qualified HMO's, and national maximum payment rates.

Under this bill, States establish their own payment programs for hospital and/or physician services. The total cost of services covered by a State program could not exceed the projected total costs for such services under the national rates.

It is anticipated that over several years, most States would establish State payment programs. The national payment rates would not apply to providers in States with approved programs.

Qualified HMO plans would be free to negotiate rates with hospitals and physicians, as they would be exempt from all of the provisions of the national payment rates program.

National maximum payment rates for hospitals, physicians, and other health services would be set annually following Medicare methods. The rates would be the maximum which providers could charge for services payable by insurers or individuals. Insurers and employer plans, including PPO's and other managed care plans, would be free to negotiate lower rates from hospitals, physicians, and other providers.

The maximum rates would not apply in States with State payment programs or to qualified HMO's.

HEALTH SYSTEM REFORMS

The second area addressed by H.R. 5502 is health system reforms.

H.R. 5502 would provide for significant reforms of the private health insurance system, bringing fairness and reliability to the private market. It would greatly simplify the administration of the health care system, saving tens of billions of dollars in paperwork costs each year. It would set up tough Federal standards to combat fraud and abuse in the private sector.

Health insurance reform: It is not surprising that Americans are demanding a response to the problem of health insurance coverage. Our constituencies are worried that they will lose their health insurance when they need it most, or that their insurance will not be adequate to cover their medical expenses.

There is great fear about job lock, not being able to change jobs because preexisting condition exclusions at a new employer will curtail coverage for an existing illness.

The health insurance reforms of this proposal provide for real, comprehensive reform of the health insurance system. The reforms will apply to all insurers, not just those in the small group market.

The plan would impose non-discrimination requirements for all employer groups, including self-insured groups. Discrimination based upon health status or medical condition would be prohibited.

Health insurers, other than self-insured employer groups, would be required to provide year-round open enrollment for groups and individuals within a geographical area. Premiums would be based on community rates phased in over 3 years. Renewals of policies would be guaranteed.

Under the proposal, workers would be protected from job lock. Preexisting condition exclusions would be limited to the first six months a worker is employed. Any worker changing jobs with less than a 3-month break in employment-based health insurance coverage, including coverage under COBRA, could not have a new exclusion period applied. Preexisting exclusions would otherwise be limited to a 6-month period.

Administrative simplification: The United States health care system is severely crippled by unnecessary paperwork. Billions of dollars are spent complying with multiple layers of rules imposed by 1,500 health insurance companies and by thousands of self-insured plans.

The administrative simplification proposed in this bill would virtually eliminate costly paperwork. Under the proposal, there would be uniform, electronic billing for all health insurance claims. Electronic billing will save doctors, hospitals, and payers billions of dollars in claims processing costs.

A national system for processing claims would assure that all claims are processed exactly the same way. Uniformity in processing will allow doctors and hospitals to reduce their current staff assigned to billing by more than 60 percent. This would also have the benefit of assisting providers in meeting the cost containment targets of the bill.

The plan calls for universal health insurance identification cards. Coupled with computerized verification of eligibility and benefits, this reform will allow doctors and hospitals to know up front who to bill for services.

Fraud and abuse: In addition to insurance reform and administrative simplification, the plan would impose tough Federal standards to squeeze fraud and abuse from the health care system.

Currently, only Medicare and Medicaid fraud are subject to Federal prosecution. The U.S. General Accounting Office recently found that up to $100 billion each year is lost to fraud and abuse by payers others than Medicare and Medicaid. The report found there to be a general failure on the part of private payers to develop effective systems to control fraud.

The plan would establish a coordinated program to combat health care fraud and abuse, and it would apply Medicare's proven, effective fraud and abuse policies to all purchasers of health care.

EXPANSION OF BENEFITS

Coverage for the uninsured: In my view, comprehensive health care is a basic right of all Americans. It is a national disgrace that we continue to tolerate a system in which over 35 million of our fellow Americans are without health insurance.

This bill is a significant downpayment on universal coverage.

I would, of course, prefer that the bill go further in this area. Unfortunately, as I noted earlier, we are working in the shadows of the "read-my-lips-no-new-taxes" President. This bill package is designed to maximize benefits with the on-budget savings achieved from cost containment.

H.R. 5502 provides health insurance coverage to millions of low-income Americans under an improved Medicaid Program. The plan would provide Medicaid coverage for more than half of the uninsured within the decade.

Under the plan, all pregnant women and children to age 6 with income up to 200 percent of the Federal poverty line would be covered by 1998. Children to age 19 up to 200 percent poverty would be covered by 1999. All low-income adults below 100 percent poverty would be covered by the year 2000, and adults up to 133 percent poverty would be covered by the year 2002.

The new benefits provided by this plan would be fully funded with Federal dollars, preventing further burdens on State budgets.

All of the Medicaid provisions of the bill are, or course, under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and would be considered by that committee.

Federal health insurance program for children: H.R. 5502 would establish a new, voluntary health insurance program for children to age 19. Parents would be able to buy into the public plan in order to purchase reasonably priced health insurance for their children.

The plan would provide coverage for newborn, well-baby, and well-child care without copayments or deductibles. In addition, it would cover the usual Medicare-type services.

Medicare coverage of prescription drugs: A second benefit funded with savings achieved from cost containment would be prescription drugs for the elderly.

H.R. 5502 would restore what many considered to be the single most important benefit included in the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988. It would provide enormous assistance to millions of Medicare beneficiaries.

Unlike most other health expenses, prescription drugs are neither covered by Medicare nor by most private Medicare supplemental insurance—Medigap—policies. Many seniors require multiple prescriptions each year in order to manage chronic conditions and to treat numerous acute health problems. Without adequate insurance, seniors are forced to pay substantial sums out-of-pocket to buy the medications they need to survive.

Under this bill, coverage for outpatient prescription drugs would become a Part B benefit. It would be subject to a deductible—$800 in 1996—and would be funded with the usual 25 percent premium.

In addition, the plan would establish special coverage for low-income senior citizens. Beneficiaries with income below 100 percent poverty, known as Qualified Medicare Beneficiaries, would be entitled to prescription drug benefits under the State Medicaid Program, and would not be subject to the Medicare prescription drug copayments.

Medicare prevention benefits: Health professionals have recognized the value of prevention services for many years. Some prevention services, such as vaccinations, prevent the occurrence of diseases.

Others, such as mammography screening enacted in 1990, allow early detection and treatment of serious illness. For diseases like cancer, early detection and treatment may offer the best chance of preventing mortality and reducing the duration of illness.

The bill would improve Medicare coverage of essential preventive health services. It would provide Medicare coverage under Part B for annual mammography screening, colorectal cancer screening, and annual influenza and tetanus vaccinations.

Health insurance deduction for the self-employed: Unlike employers that provide health insurance to Americans under group health plans, self-employed individuals are unable to deduct the full cost of health insurance benefits.

This plan would help self-employed farmers and others who purchase health insurance on their own. It would allow such individuals to deduct up to 100 percent of their health insurance expenses effective January 1, 1993.

CONCLUSION

H.R. 5502 will control the growth in the health care costs, greatly simplify the health care system, and provide coverage to more than half of the uninsured Americans.

Health care costs in the U.S. must be limited someday. We cannot afford to spend 18 percent of our economy for health care in the year 2000—or 30 percent by 2020—when our major trading partners like Canada spend 9 percent or, in the case of Japan, only 6 percent.

The costs to our society and to our economy as a whole of spending hundreds of billions of additional dollars on health care are too high.

Every dollar that is spent on health care cannot be spent on education, or highways and bridges, or industrial research and development. Dollars spent by employers for health benefits cannot be paid to employees as cash wages.

How long will we let our health care system continue to siphon funds from the remainder of the economy at the rate of one-half of a percent of GNP each year? When will costs be contained?

I believe that now is the time, and H.R. 5502 is the answer. Fifteen percent of the economy for health is enough.

I urge all my colleagues to join the support for the Health Care Cost Containment and Reform Act of 1992.

PLANNED PARENTHOOD VERSUS CASEY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. LOWEY] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, today, the Reagan-Bush Supreme Court sent the clock turning backward toward the days of back-alley abortions. It threatens to make women second-class citizens. In spite of the rhetoric of the majority opinion, this decision continues to destroy the right to choose.

Their strategy is clear. It is to chip away at Roe versus Wade bit by bit and restriction by restriction, until abortion services are unavailable, and the Government controls this most personal of decisions.

Make no mistake about it. This decision sounds the death snell for abortion rights in America. Let me remind you of some of the barriers to choice upheld by the Court today:

A forced 24 hour waiting period after a woman visits her doctors and makes the decision to have an abortion;

A mandate on physicians to counsel women seeking abortions with biased information developed by the State;

Written parental consent for minors;

No confidentiality in the medical files of women who have obtained abortion services—such files would be open to public scrutiny.

Although the impulse of right-wing justices to overturn Roe outright was held in check, the long-term implications of this decision are just as fearsome and far-reaching.

Women's fundamental rights are being eroded, their lives are being endangered by a Supreme Court that is radically out of touch with the American people.

But American women are not going to stand idly by as the Reagan-Bush court pursues this reckless and regressive course.

Rather, today will mark the beginning of a nationwide uprising, from the grassroots, to the statehouse, to the Congress.

The pro-choice movement is a majority movement, a large majority—and a powerful majority. We are going to hold leaders responsible on this issue, including ringleader of the anti-abortion forces, George Bush.

Tonight, in my district, a massive pro-choice march is taking place in White Plains, NY. The participants in this march and many others will go the distance to protect the right to choose. They will not be alone. I am sure that, in the days ahead, pro-choice voters around the Nation will rally in anger to speak out against this decision. More importantly, in the months ahead, pro-choice Americans will join together to organize a strong coalition to go to the ballot box this fall to make sure that elected officials at every level understand that this fundamental right will be crucial to their votes.

But those of us who are committed to protecting the right to choose will not wait. Tomorrow, the Judiciary Committee will act on the Freedom of Choice Act—to reverse the damage of today's ruling and to reaffirm the fundamental principles of Roe versus Wade . . . to protect the Constitution of this Nation legislatively where the Supreme Court refused to do so.

This legislation will be approved by Congress and sent to the President for his signature. And then George Bush will have to face the question. Will he continue pandering, or will he join with the majority in this country in affirming the fundamental constitutional rights that Roe protects?

I would say to the President, beware. You can cling to the dangerous policies of the past and turn the clocks backward, but history is on our side. The historical expansion of justice and personal liberties cannot be stopped.

And in the end, respect for the Constitution and respect for the fundamental rights of women in this Nation will prevail.

CALLING FOR A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO ABOLISH THE DEATH PENALTY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I am here today to introduce a resolution, House Joint Resolution 518, proposing a constitutional amendment to prohibit capital punishment within the United States. I believe that the death penalty is an act of vengeance veiled as an instrument of justice. Not only do I believe that there are independently sufficient moral objections to the principle of capital punishment to warrant its abolition, but I also know that the death penalty is meted out to the poor, to a disproportionate number of minorities, and does not either deter crime or advance justice.

Violent crimes have unfortunately become a constant in our society. Every day people are robbed, raped, and murdered. We are surrounded by crime and yet feel helpless in our attempt to deter, to control, and to punish. The sight of any brutal homicide excites a passion within us that demands retributive justice. We have difficulty comprehending that which cannot be understood. Mr. Speaker, we who dedicate our lives to creating a better and safer nation will never comprehend the rationale of violent crime. But the atrocity of the crime must not cloud our judgment, and we must not let our righteous anger undermine the wisdom of our rationality. We cannot allow ourselves to punish an irrational action with an equally irrational retaliation—murder is wrong, whether it is committed by an individual or by the State.

The U.N. Universal Declaration of Human Rights states that "No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment." The death penalty is torture, and numerous examples exist emphasizing the cruelty of the execution. Witness Jimmy Lee Gray, who was executed in 1983 in the Mississippi gas chamber. During his execution he struck his head repeatedly on a pole behind him and had convulsions for 8 minutes. The modernization to lethal injection serves only as an attempt to conceal the reality of cruel punishment. Witness the execution by lethal injection of James Autry in 1984. He took 10 minutes to die, and during much of that period he was conscious and complaining of pain.

Despite the obvious mental and physical trauma resulting from the imposition and execution of the death penalty, proponents insist that it fulfills some social need. This simply is not true. Studies fail to establish that the death penalty either has a unique value as a deterrent or is a more effective deterrent than life imprisonment. We assume that perpetrators will give greater consideration to the consequences of their actions if the penalty is death, but the problem is that we are not always dealing with rational actions. Those who commit violent crimes often do so in moments of passion, rage, and fear—times where irrationality reigns.

Rather than act as a deterrent, some studies suggest that the death penalty may even have a brutalizing effect on society. For example, Florida and Georgia, two of the States with the most executions since 1979, had an increase in homicides following the resumption of capital punishment. In 1984 in Georgia, the year after executions resumed, the homicide rate increased by 20 percent in a year when the national rate decreased by 5 percent. There can be no disputing the other evidence—murders have skyrocketed in recent years, as have State executions. The Government cannot effectively preach against violence when we practice violence.

The empty echo of the death penalty asks for simple retribution. Proponents advocate that some crimes simply deserve death. This argument is ludicrous. If a murderer deserves death, I ask you why then do we not burn the arsonist or rape the rapist? Our justice system does not provide for such punishments because society comprehends that it must be founded on principles different from those it condemns. How can we condemn killing while condoning execution?

In practice, capital punishment has become a kind of grotesque lottery. It is more likely to be carried out in some States than others—in recent years more than half of the Nation's executions have occurred in two States—Texas and Florida. It is far more likely to be imposed against blacks than whites—the U.S. Supreme Court has assumed the validity of evidence that in Georgia those who murder whites were 11 times more likely to receive the death sentence than those who kill blacks, and that blacks who kill whites were almost 3 times as likely to be executed as whites who kill whites. It is most likely to be imposed upon the poor and uneducated—60 percent of death row inmates never finished high school. And even among those who have been sentenced to die, executions appear randomly imposed—in the decade since executions resumed in this country, well under 5 percent of the more than 2,500 death row inmates have in fact been put to death.

It cannot be disputed that most death row inmates came from poverty and that there is a definite racial and ethnic bias to the imposition of the death penalty. The statistics are clear, as 92 percent of those executed in this country since 1976 killed white victims, although almost half of all homicide victims during that period were black; further, black defendants are many times more likely to receive the death sentence than are white defendants. A 1990 report of the General Accounting Office found that there exists "a pattern of evidence indicating racial disparities in the charging, sentencing, and imposition of the death penalty. * * * In 82 percent of the studies, race of victim was found to influence the likelihood of being charged with capital murder or receiving the death penalty." Similar statistics can be found in my area of the country with regard to individuals of Mexican-American descent; in fact, similar practices once prevailed with regard to women. The practice was to tell the murderer to leave town if he killed a Mexican-American or a woman, as the feeling was that the murder must have been justified. We may have moved beyond that point, but not by much. It is as much a bias in favor of the haves and at the expense of the have-nots as anything else.

Racial and ethnic bias is a part of our Nation's history, but so is bias against the poor. Clearly, the ability to secure legal assistance and to avail oneself of the best that the legal system has to offer is based on one's financial status. The National Law Journal stated in 1990, "Indigent defendants on trial for their lives are being frequently represented by ill-trained, unprepared court-appointed lawyers so grossly underpaid they literally cannot afford to do the job they know needs to be done." The American Bar Association has admitted as much.

The legal process has historically been replete with bias, as well. We have a history of exclusion of jurors based on their race; now, the Supreme Court has sanctioned the exclusion of multilingual jurors if witnesses' testimony will be translated—this is particularly significant in my area of the country, in San Antonio. Further, we have executed juveniles—children, actually, as well as those with limited intelligence. Only five countries besides the United States are known to have executed juvenile offenders in the past decade: Bangladesh, Barbados, Pakistan, Iraq, and Iran. That is some company to be in, particularly in light of the billions of dollars we just spent to stop brutalization by the leader of Iraq.

There are moves on in Congress to speed up the execution process by limiting and streamlining the appeals process. But when the statistics show how arbitrarily the death penalty is applied, how can we make any changes without first assuring fairness? If the death penalty is a fair means of exacting retribution and punishment, then is fairness not a necessary element of the imposition of capital punishment? There are no do-overs in this business when mistakes are made.

The imposition of the death sentence in such an uneven way is a powerful argument against it. The punishment is so random, so disproportionately applied in a few States, that it represents occasional retribution, not swift or sure justice. My colleagues, I implore you to correct this national disgrace. Nearly all other Western democracies have abolished the death penalty without any ill effects; let us not be left behind. Let us release ourselves from the limitations of a barbaric tradition that serves only to undermine the very human rights which we seek to uphold.

Can we continue to condone the sad part of our Nation's history that has been replete with injustice based on the color of one's skin, the accent in one's speech, or the amount of money in one's pocket? Regardless of one's view in favor or against imposition of the death penalty, we must all reaffirm our commitment to the fair and equal treatment of all men and women under the laws of this Nation. It is time that the words of the Declaration of Independence be words of action, not of mere rhetoric. "We hold these Truths to be self evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness."

THE SITUATION IN SARAJEVO

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, there is finally a light at the end of the tunnel regarding the opening of the airport in Sarajevo to relief flights.

According to Reuters this afternoon,

> The United Nations took control of Sarajevo airport Monday after Serbian forces lifted a two-month siege, and within hours a French military plane laden with relief supplies landed.
> The blue-and-white U.N. flag was raised over the airport with the agreement of the opposing sides in a war that has left more than 7,000 dead across the republic and another 300,000 in Sarajevo on the verge of starvation.

In New York this afternoon, the U.N. Security Council gave authorization for a battalion of 1,000 Canadian soldiers to be sent to Sarajevo to help in opening the airport.

This battalion is on standby in Daruvar, Croatia, and should be enroute by midnight Sarajevo time this evening.

According to Reuters, the Security Council, "also threatened further unspecified actions if combatants did not cooperate fully with the U.N. Protection Force in its efforts to deliver humanitarian assistance."

The threat of disruption of the vital and important effort to open Sarajevo airport is very real. But this time, the heavy burden has been placed on the Government of Bosnia-Hercegovina and its forces, who stand as the biggest threat to current efforts in securing the airport.

Bosnian Government forces fired on a U.N. convoy on Friday, and also were condemned by U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali on Saturday for violating the latest U.N. cease-fire.

On Saturday, U.N. Secretary Boutros Boutros-Ghali, in an official statement on the situation in Bosnia-Hercegovina commented on efforts to open Sarajevo airport for humanitarian aid, "While the Serb side, in response to appeals of UNPROFOR, exercised self restraint in refraining from retaliation, the persistence of military attacks by the Territorial Defense forces of the government risks renewed destruction and suffering for the people of Sarajevo."

On Sunday, French President Francois Mitterand's entourage was fired upon by Moslem-Croat forces at Sarajevo airport. President Mitterand was forced to don a flak-jacket and take cover in the terminal.

Regardless of the actions of the various players in the Bosnian situation, one thing is clear: humanitarian aid must reach the embattled city of Sarajevo, a goal which a number of us are striving to achieve.

At the request of the State Department today, I have been involved with Milan Panic, a Serbian-American who has been nominated as a possible candidate for Prime Minister of Yugoslavia, in trying to open up the road from Split to Sarajevo and other highways to Sarajevo to allow convoys of humanitarian aid to reach that city. In a letter received this afternoon we received a guarantee of safe passage for U.N. convoys from Radovan Karadzic, head of the Serbs in Bosnia-Hercegovina.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier today, let's not be so quick to point the finger at just one group as the root of this problem. It is obvious from these reports that all groups are contributing to the current hostilities.

And while all of this had been happening in Sarajevo, a lot of other things have been happening in other areas of Bosnia, and in Croatia, that have not been receiving much attention.

Over the past month, Croatian forces have been on the offensive in western Hercegovina, and have recaptured the town of Mostar. According to AP reporter Tony Smith on Saturday, in rural Bosnia, "reports of mass killings and retaliations against Serbs have surfaced."

Along the Adriatic coast, retreating Serbian forces have been subject to attack by Croatian forces, and have responded in kind with shelling of their own.

In the Republic of Croatia, U.N. protection zones have been subject to attack by Croatian forces. According to the AP today, Knin, an area currently under U.N. protection in Croatia, "was shelled June 21, during a Croatian advance from the Adriatic coast that derailed a U.N. demilitarization program."

According to the same article, "Commander of the U.N. peacekeeping force, Brig Gen. J.K. arap Rob of Kenya, said the Croatians blatantly violated the cease-fire agreement, capturing a large area near the Serb town of Drnis, about 12 miles from Knin."

Mr. Speaker, all this has been happening in conjunction with the situation in Sarajevo. If anything is clear, it is that all sides—Moslems, Croats, Serbs—are guilty in fomenting the ongoing violence in former Yugoslavia.

And it is also clear that the fighting must stop. Thousands have been killed, and thousands more will be without an end to the hostilities. The threat of the current fighting expanding to encompass the whole of the Balkans is very real.

But, Mr. Speaker, let us at least draw some optimism from the current efforts of the United Nations to open Sarajevo airport, a hopeful first step on the road to peace and stability in former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Speaker, I include in the RECORD two Reuters articles with my remarks, as follows:

U.N. FLAG FLIES OVER SARAJEVO AIRPORT

(By Bojan Stojanovic)

SARAJEVO, BOSNIA-HERZEGOVINA, Reuter.—the United Nations flag was raised over Sarajevo airport Monday after Serbian forces ended their two-month siege, the U.N. chief negotiator in the Bosnian capital said.

Gen. Lewis MacKenzie told Reuters his forces had assumed control of the airport with agreement from both sides in the conflict to respect the U.N. command, backed at present by a force of only 34 men.

He said it would be at least two more days before the airport was opened for relief supplies to the city's 300,000 civilians.

The Serb forces, who have been besieging Sarajevo and battling mainly Moslem and Croat units in resistance to Bosnia-Herzegovina's newly won independence from Yugoslavia, agreed three days ago to leave the airport.

In New York the U.N. Security Council Monday authorized a battalion of Canadian soldiers to be sent to Sarajevo to help reopen the airport.

The council also threatened further unspecified actions if combatants did not cooperate fully with the U.N. Protection Force in its efforts to deliver humanitarian assistance.

MacKenzie has said the extra troops, on 24-hour standby in neighboring Croatia, must be in place to ensure military control of the airport before airlifts can be authorized.

Capt. Douglas Martin, spokesman for the Canadian troops, said they would leave the Croatian town of Daruvar Tuesday night.

"We'll start lining up at 10 p.m and the first vehicle will start moving at the stroke of midnight," he said. "The mood is very positive. I can't say we are excited, but we are very happy not to be waiting anymore."

Serb paramilitary forces seized Butmir airfield on the outskirts of Sarajevo almost three months ago in fighting that has killed more than 7,400 people across the republic.

The airport is considered crucial to their campaign to take the city and military experts say losing it is a big blow.

Trapped civilians with little food, water, medicine or electricity have pinned their hopes on the U.N. peacekeeping forces opening the airstrip for humanitarian aid.

A tense cease-fire held in Sarajevo for most of Monday, but heavy artillery fire erupted shortly before the Serb paramilitary forces began their withdrawal.

"There is heavy shooting in the old town. There are hundreds of mortar blasts," Sarajevo radio editor Zoran Pirolic said.

He said the city streets had emptied as fighting worsened.

Sarajevo radio said 38 people had been killed and 150 wounded in Bosnia in the last 24 hours. Four of those were killed and 32 wounded in Sarajevo.

The 12-nation European Community said over the week end it would support the use of force by the United Nations if necessary to get humanitarian aid through to the city.

President Bush also said he could not rule out the use of force.

But MacKenzie said the U.N. peace troops could not use force to open the airport unless their mandate was changed.

"We are armed for self-defense and we are certainly not going to take anything on by force, nor would anyone expect us to do so," he said.

The United Nations has imposed trade sanctions on Serb-led Yugoslavia and increased pressure on Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, but he has ignored all demands to quit.

U.N. TAKES CONTROL OF SARAJEVO AIRPORT AS SERBS LIFT SIEGE

(By Bojan Stojanovic)

SARAJEVO, BOSNIA-HERZEGOVINA, Reuter.—The United Nations took control of Sarajevo airport Monday after Serbian forces lifted a two-month siege, and within hours a French military plane laden with relief supplies landed.

The blue-and-white U.N. flag was raised over the airport with the agreement of the opposing sides in a war that has left more than 7,000 dead across the republic and another 300,000 in Sarajevo on the verge of starvation.

A token 34-man U.N. force escorted Serb armored cars along the runway and back to their barracks southwest of the Bosnian capital and began monitoring Serb gun emplacements surrounding the airport to ensure the weapons were not turned on it again.

Gen. Lewis MacKenzie, the U.N. chief negotiator in Sarajevo, said the airport was not technically open and that establishing full military control would take a little longer.

But the French, who had stationed two air force Transall cargo planes on the tarmac at the Adriatic port of Split only 100 miles away, decided to risk sending in the first flight before the logistics were arranged.

French President Francois Mitterrand made a dramatic visit to Sarajevo Sunday. Each Transall carriers 6.5 tons of food or medicine, but once the airport is secured, the trickle of relief should rapidly become a flood.

Radan Karadzic, leader of the Bosnian Serbs who had besieged the airport for the past two months, warned on Belgrade radio that his troops would not permit planes to land if there were any sign that the opposing Moslem and Croat forces were trying to take back control.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council authorized a battalion of Canadian soldiers to be sent to Sarajevo to help reopen the airport.

The council also threatened further unspecified actions if combatants did not cooperate fully with the U.N. Protection Force in its efforts to deliver humanitarian assistance.

The Canadians at first said they would start moving Tuesday night, but later advanced their plans by 24 hours and were getting ready to move out of their base in the Croatian town of Daruvar at midnight Monday.

A U.N. spokeswoman said a huge convoy stretching some 30 miles would head down to Sarajevo with 80 armored personnel carriers, 1,000 troops and large quantities of equipment.

But she said it might take as long as 48 hours to arrive.

Serb paramilitary forces seized Butmir airfield on the outskirts of Sarajevo in April in fighting that has killed more than 7,400 people across the republic.

Heavy artillery fire erupted in Sarajevo Monday shortly before the Serb paramilitary forces begin their withdrawal.

But the guns later fell silent, and Envera Selimovic, an editor at Sarajevo radio, told Reuters by telephone the city center was completely peaceful.

She said the people in the city were relieved to hear of the airport agreement but were not yet confident that relief supplies would be pouring in.

"The humanitarian aid will stay blocked at the airport unless the U.N. takes control of the whole town," she said.

"If not, the people here will see water, water everywhere, and not a drop to drink."

The 12-nation European Community said over the weekend it would support the use of force by the United Nations if necessary to get humanitarian aid through to the city.

President Bush also said he could not rule out the use of force.

But MacKenzie said the U.N. peace troops could not use force to open the airport unless their mandate was changed.

"We are armed for self-defense and we are certainly not going to take anything on by force, nor would anyone expect us to do so," he said.

The United Nations has imposed trade sanctions on Serb-led Yugoslavia and increased pressure on Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, but he has ignored all demands to quit.

TRIBUTE TO THE CITIZENS OF BROWNWOOD, TX

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. EDWARDS] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. EDWARDS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, last Friday, a group of hoodlums hiding under the sheets of the Ku Klux Klan chose a kind and good community in my district, Brownwood, TX, in which to hold a Klan rally.

On the other side of our community were people of all backgrounds and all ages and all races, together exercising their rights and their beliefs in an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally.

So I come today to the House of Representatives, Mr. Speaker, to speak out in tribute to those good citizens of Brownwood who stood up to the hoodlums under the sheets of the Ku Klux Klan. The anti-Klan rally was a very special occasion, not only for what they were rallying against, but for what these good people stood for. They were celebrating the brotherhood of all people. They were celebrating the true strength of America, people of good will of all races, colors, and creeds coming together as neighbors and friends. They were celebrating our commitment to that high ideal expressed so eloquently in Gettysburg 130 years ago that we are a new nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

On this occasion, the people of Brownwood were celebrating the universal truth expressed by John Donne some 300 years ago that no man is an island unto himself. We are all a piece of the continent of mankind.

It is for these positive reasons that I pay tribute to the citizens of Brownwood.

I have very little to say about the Ku Klux Klan. Their own actions say more about themselves than anything that I could ever say. They are nothing more than a sad, pitiful bunch of bigots, mired in the prejudices of the past. They are not to be feared; rather, they are simply a small nuisance, little more than a tiny ant at a family picnic. I do not hate the Ku Klux Klan, Mr. Speaker. I simply feel sorry for their sad existence, having to hide their bigotry behind the white sheets like cowards in the night.

When we think of Gen. Colin Powell, who has brilliantly, brilliantly led American armed forces to defend our liberty, America knows who is a hero and who is a coward. When I drive by the rolling hills of Arlington National Cemetery and see thousands of crosses marking the grave sites of Americans from all races and all colors who gave their lives for our country, I realize that America knows who is a hero and who is a coward.

As President John F. Kennedy once said, "No one has been barred on account of his race from fighting or dying for America. There are no white or colored signs on the foxholes or graveyards of battle."

Because of the bravery of all citizens, black, brown, and white, people of may colors and backgrounds, we are blessed today to live in a Nation with the sacred freedoms of speech and religion and association, and, yes, in America you even have the right to be stupid, and last Friday, my friends, the Ku Klux Klan clearly exercised that right in Brownwood, TX.

Mr. Speaker, I will not condemn the Ku Klux Klan today I will pray for them, because in my family a cross is to be revered and not burned.

So how do we respond as Americans to the Klan? Listen with me to the wonderful words of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.:

> When evil men plot, good men must plan. When evil men burn and bomb, good men must build and bind. When evil men shout ugly words of hatred, good men must commit themselves to the glories of love. Where evil men would seek to perpetuate an unjust status quo, good men must seek to bring into being a real order of justice. Hatred and bitterness can never cure the disease of fear," he said. "Only love can do that. Hatred paralyzes life. Love releases it. Hatred confuses life. Love harmonizes it. Hatred darkens life, and love illuminates it.

Mr. Speaker, all Americans should speak out against the Ku Klux Klan and everything that they stand for. We should speak out not as an expression of hatred but as a commitment to plan to build and to bind our communities and our country with bonds of justice.

With love in our hearts as our moral compass, we shall overcome.

WAIVING CERTAIN POINTS OF ORDER DURING CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 5488, TREASURY DEPARTMENT, U.S. POSTAL SERVICE, THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, AND CERTAIN INDEPENDENT AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT 1993

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102–629) on the resolution (H. TITLE I—PARTNERSHIPS FOR EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE

SEC. 101. REVISION OF TITLE I.

Title I of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE I—PARTNERSHIPS FOR EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE

"PART A—SCHOOL, COLLEGE, AND UNIVERSITY PARTNERSHIPS

"SEC. 101. PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this part to encourage partnerships between institutions of higher education or State higher education agencies and secondary schools serving low-income and disadvantaged students, to support programs that—

"(1) improve the retention and graduation rates at such secondary schools;

"(2) improve the academic skills of public and private nonprofit secondary school students;

"(3) increase such students' opportunities to continue a program of education after secondary school; and

"(4) improve such students' prospects for employment after secondary school.

"SEC. 102. AGREEMENT.

"(a) AGREEMENT.—To be eligible for a grant under this part, an institution of higher education, a State higher education agency, or a consortium consisting of any of the preceding entities thereof shall enter into a written partnership agreement with a local educational agency. Such partnership may include businesses, labor organizations, professional associations, community-based organizations, public television stations or other telecommunications entities, or other public or private agencies or organizations. Each entity participating in the partnership shall sign the agreement.

"(b) CONTENTS OF AGREEMENT.—The agreement shall include—

"(1) a listing of all participants in the partnership, including a designation of the official representatives of each entity participating in the partnership;

"(2) a description of the responsibilities of each participant in the partnership; and

"(3) a listing of the resources to be contributed by each participant in the partnership.

"SEC. 103. GRANTS.

"(a) DIVISION BETWEEN SCHOOL-YEAR AND SUMMER PROGRAMS.—From the funds appropriated to carry out this part pursuant to section 106, the Secretary shall reserve 65 percent of such funds to carry out programs operating during the regular school year and 35 percent of such funds to carry out programs operating during the summer.

"(b) AMOUNT AND USE OF GRANTS.—

"(1) AMOUNT.—The Secretary shall make grants under this part in amounts which are not less than $250,000 and not more than $1,000,000.

"(2) PERMITTED USES OF FUNDS.—Grants under this part may be used by the partnership for programs that—

"(A) use college students to tutor secondary school students and improve their basic academic skills or to involve secondary school students in community service-learning projects;

"(B) are designed to improve the basic academic skills of secondary school students;

"(C) are designed to increase the understanding of specific subjects of secondary school students;

"(D) are designed to improve the opportunity to continue a program of education after graduation for secondary school students; and

"(E) are designed to increase the prospects for employment after graduation of secondary school students.

"(c) PREFERENCES.—In making grants under this part, the Secretary shall give a preference to—

"(1) programs which will serve predominantly low-income communities;

"(2) partnerships which will run programs during the regular school year and summer;

"(3) programs which will serve educationally disadvantaged students; students with disabilities; potential dropouts; pregnant adolescents and teenage parents; children of migratory agricultural workers or of migratory fishermen; or students whose native language is other than English; and

"(4) programs designed to encourage women and minorities who are underrepresented in the fields of science and mathematics to pursue these fields.

"(d) DURATION.—Each grant awarded under this part may be awarded for a period not to exceed 5 years.

"(e) EQUITABLE GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—The Secretary shall award grants under this part in a manner that achieves an equitable geographic distribution of such grants.

"SEC. 104. GRANT APPLICATION.

"(a) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—A partnership desiring to receive a grant under this part shall submit an application to the Secretary, in such form and providing such information as the Secretary, by regulation, shall require.

"(b) CONTENTS OF APPLICATION.—The application shall include—

"(1) the partnership agreement described in section 102;

"(2) a listing of the public and private nonprofit secondary school or schools to be involved in the program;

"(3) a description of the activities and services for which assistance is sought;

"(4) a description of the programs to be developed and operated by the partnership; and

"(5) assurances to the Secretary that—

"(A) the partnership will establish a governing body including one representative of each participant in the partnership;

"(B) Federal funds will provide no more than 70 percent of the cost of the project in the first year, 60 percent of such costs in the second year, and 50 percent of such costs in the third year and any subsequent year;

"(C) a local educational agency or institution of higher education receiving funds under this subpart shall not reduce its combined fiscal effort per student or its aggregate expenditure on education;

"(D) a local educational agency or institution of higher education participating in this partnership shall utilize any Federal funds it shall receive from a grant under this part to supplement, and, to the extent practicable, increase the resources that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available from non-Federal sources for the education of students described in this part; and

"(E) in no case shall funds under such a grant be used to supplant non-Federal funds already available.

"(c) SPECIAL RULE.—The non-Federal share of grants awarded under this part may be in cash or in kind fairly evaluated, including services, supplies or equipment.

"(d) WAIVER.—The Secretary may waive the matching requirement described in paragraph (5)(B) for any eligible partnership that demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary a unique hardship that prevents compliance with such matching requirement.

"SEC. 105. PEER REVIEW.

"The Secretary shall designate a peer review panel to review applications submitted under this part and make recommendations for funding to the Secretary. In selecting the peer review panel, the Secretary shall consult with officials of the other Federal agencies and with non-Federal organizations to ensure that the panel membership shall be geographically balanced and be composed of representatives from public and private institutions of elementary, secondary, and higher education, labor, business, and State and local governments, who have expertise in community service or in education.

"SEC. 106. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this part.

"PART B—ARTICULATION AGREEMENTS

"SEC. 121. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

"(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

"(1) because more than one-half of all first-time first-year students attending postsecondary institutions attend community or junior colleges, and because almost one-half of minority students enrolled in higher education attend 2-year institutions, community and junior colleges represent a substantial and an important educational resource;

"(2) declining participation rates for low-income students and minorities at institutions of higher education is of growing concern to the higher education community and Congress; and

"(3) there is growing awareness of the need to assist low-income, minority and other nontraditional students in bridging the gap between 2-year to 4-year institutions, enabling such students to reach their individual potential, as well as contribute to the larger society.

"(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to improve the educational opportunities of this Nation's postsecondary students by creating comprehensive articulation agreements and planning between partnerships of 2-year and 4-year institutions of higher education.

"SEC. 122. AUTHORIZATION OF GRANTS.

"(a) ASSISTANCE FOR ARTICULATION PARTNERSHIPS.—From amounts appropriated for this part, the Secretary shall make grants to States to enable States to make awards, either on a competitive basis or on the basis of a formula determined by the State, to articulation partnerships between—

"(1) a qualified 2-year institution; and

"(2) a qualified 4-year institution.

"(b) QUALIFIED INSTITUTIONS.—For purposes of this part—

"(1) a qualified 2-year institution is an institution of higher education (as determined under section 481(a)) that is an eligible institution under section 435(a) and that—

"(A) is a nonprofit institution that offers a 2-year associate degree or a 2-year certificate program; or

"(B) is a proprietary institution that offers a 2-year associate degree program; and

"(2) a qualified 4-year institution is an institution of higher education (as determined under section 481(a)) that is an eligible institution under section 435(a) and that offers a baccalaureate degree program.

"(c) ALLOCATION AND STATE GRANTS.—

"(1) FORMULA ALLOCATION.—In any fiscal year for which the amount made available under section 129 to carry out the provisions of this part equals or exceeds $50,000,000, the Secretary shall allot an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount appropriated under section 129 for such fiscal year as the total amount received under title IV by students attending institutions of higher education in that State for such fiscal year bears to the total amount received under title IV by all students for such fiscal year, based on the most recent year for which such data are available.

"(2) COMPETITIVE GRANTS.—In any fiscal year for which the amount made available under section 129 to carry out the provisions of this part do not equal or exceed $50,000,000, the Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this part, to make grants to States to carry out articulation agreements under sections 124 and 125.

"SEC. 123. STATE APPLICATION.

"Each State that desires to receive a grant under this part shall submit an application to the Secretary in such form and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may require. Such application shall—

"(1) after consultation with the State agencies responsible for supervision of community colleges, technical institutes, or other 2-year postsecondary institutions, designate a sole State agency as the State agency responsible for the administration and supervision of activities carried out with assistance under this part;

"(2) describe how funds will be allocated in a manner consistent with section 124;

"(3) contain assurances that the State will comply with the requirements of this part;

"(4) provide for an annual submission of data concerning the use of funds and students served with assistance under this part; and

"(5) provide that the State will keep such records and provide such information to the Secretary as may be required for purposes of financial audits and program evaluation.

"SEC. 124. LOCAL APPLICATIONS.

"Any articulation partnership comprised of qualified institutions that desires to receive a grant from a State under this part shall submit an application to the State in such form and containing or accompanied by such information as the State may require and shall—

"(1) include in the articulation agreement—

"(A) assurances that academic credit earned at the qualified institution described in section 122(b)(1) will be transferable to the qualified institution or institutions as described in section 122(b)(2);

"(B) development of articulation agreement programs and services appropriate to the needs of the partnership participants;

"(C) activities that facilitate the development of programs and services appropriate to the needs of the students attending courses covered by the articulation agreement;

"(D) inservice training for faculty designed to implement effective articulation agreements;

"(E) counseling services; and

"(F) information concerning programs contained in the articulation agreement;

"(2) include assurances that the articulation partnership has the qualified personnel required—

"(A) to develop, administer, and implement the program required by this part; and

"(B) to provide special training necessary to prepare staff for the program; and

"(3) include a plan of operation for the program which includes a description of—

"(A) the program goals;

"(B) the uses of funds as required by paragraph (2);

"(C) the activities and services which will be provided under the program (including training and preparation of staff); and

"(D) the subject areas to be included in the articulation agreement.

"SEC. 125. ARTICULATION AGREEMENT.

"(a) LENGTH OF GRANT.—Each recipient of a grant from a State shall use the amounts provided under the grant to develop and operate articulation agreements for 6 years.

"(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Funds provided to an articulation partnership under this part may be used—

"(1) to perform any activity or program required by section 124;

"(2) as part of the program's planning activities, to acquire technical assistance from Federal, State, or local entities that have successfully designed, established, and operated articulation programs;

"(3) to provide workshops with students and teachers, counseling for students to continue their education to a bachelors degree, orientation visits at institutions participating in the partnerships;

"(4) to develop agreements with local educational agencies for vocational course equivalency approval procedures for purposes of satisfying entrance requirements to qualified institutions; and

"(5) to provide outreach to potential students.

"SEC. 126. STATE ADMINISTRATION.

"A State may reserve not more than 3 percent of the amounts available under this part for any fiscal year for State administrative costs including monitoring and technical assistance.

"SEC. 127. PRIORITY.

"The State shall give priority to grant applications for programs which—

"(1) encourage teacher education;

"(2) have, as one of the partners participating in an articulation agreement, an entity participating in an articulation agreement described in section 344(b)(1) of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act.

"(3) contribute their own institutional resources;

"(4) are not subject to a default reduction agreement under section 428F;

"(5) encourage technology education; or

"(6) encourage articulation in subject areas of national importance as determined by the Secretary.

"SEC. 128. REPORTS.

"(a) STATE REPORTS.—Each State shall submit to the Secretary an annual report on the operation of the program under this part in such State during the preceding year. Such report shall include such information as the Secretary may require by regulation.

"(b) EVALUATION AND DISSEMINATION.—

"(1) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall, on the basis of the reports submitted under subsection (a), evaluate all or a sample of the programs conducted under this part for the purposes of—

"(A) determining the success or failure of such programs in increasing access and entry of students from 2-year institutions to 4-year institutions; and

"(B) identifying the most successful programs under this part and the causes for such success.

"(2) DISSEMINATION.—The Secretary shall, not later than January 31, 1996, submit a report to the Congress on the results of the evaluation described in paragraph (1). The Secretary shall disseminate the findings made pursuant to subparagraph (B) through appropriate agencies and organizations.

"(3) RESERVATION.—The Secretary may reserve up to 3 percent of the amount appropriated under section 129 to carry out this subsection.

"SEC. 129. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part, $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"PART C—ACCESS AND EQUITY TO EDUCATION FOR ALL AMERICANS THROUGH TELECOMMUNICATIONS

"SEC. 131. PROGRAM ESTABLISHED; AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS; ELIGIBILITY.

"(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible partnerships to enable such partnerships to pay the Federal share of the cost of the activities described in the application submitted pursuant to section 132.

"(b) AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(2) AVAILABILITY.—Funds appropriated pursuant to the authority of paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.

"(c) ELIGIBLE PARTNERSHIP.—For the purpose of this part the term 'eligible partnership' means a partnership which—

"(1) shall consist of—

"(A) a public broadcasting entity or a consortium thereof; and

"(B) an institution of higher education or a consortium thereof; and

"(2) may also include a State, a unit of local government, or a public or private nonprofit organization.

"(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share shall be 50 percent.

"SEC. 132. APPLICATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Each eligible partnership desiring to receive a grant under this part shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(b) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) shall—

"(1) describe the education telecommunications activities or services to be assisted;

"(2) describe the administrative and management structure supporting such activities or services;

"(3) provide assurances that the financial interests of the United States in the telecommunications equipment, software and other facilities shall be protected for the useful life of such equipment, software or facilities;

"(4) describe the manner in which nontraditional postsecondary education students will benefit from the activities and services supported;

"(5) describe the manner in which special services, including captioned films, television, descriptive video and education media for individuals with disabilities, shall be supported; and

"(6) provide assurances that the eligible partnership will provide the non-Federal share of assistance under this part.

"(c) APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall, in approving applications under this part, give priority to applications which describe programs that—

"(A) include support for services to make captioned films, descriptive video and educational media available to individuals with disabilities who otherwise lack access to such educational materials;

"(B) will provide, directly or indirectly, activities or services to a significant number of postsecondary institutions;

"(C) improve access to accredited telecommunications coursework for individuals with disabilities otherwise denied such access;

"(D) will be available in a multistate area;

"(E) include evidence of significant support for the program from the business community; or

"(F) provide matching funds, in an amount which exceeds the required non-Federal share.

"(2) EQUITABLE GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE.—In approving applications under this part the Secretary shall ensure the equitable geographic distribution of grants awarded under this part.

"SEC. 133. AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.

"Grants awarded under this part shall be used for one or more of the following activities:

"(1) The acquisition of site equipment to provide the technical ability to receive diverse education services at schools, campuses, and work site locations.

"(2) Satellite, fiber optic and other distribution systems, and for local broadcast or other local distribution capability.

"(3) Pre-service or in-service education and training for kindergarten through 12th grade teachers through interactive television conferencing.

"(4) Preparation of telecommunications programs and software that support national, regional or statewide efforts to provide teaching and learning materials not otherwise available for local use.

"(5) A loan service of captioned films, descriptive video and educational media in order to make such materials available, in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary, in the United States for nonprofit purposes to individuals with disabilities, parents of individuals with disabilities, and other individuals directly involved in activities for the advancement of individuals with disabilities, including addressing problems of illiteracy among individuals with disabilities.

"SEC. 134. DEFINITION.

"For the purpose of this part, the term 'public broadcasting entity' has the same meaning given to such term by section 397(11) of the Communications Act of 1934.

"SEC. 135. REPORT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Each recipient of a grant under this part shall submit a report to the Secretary not later than 30 days after the conclusion of the grant period.

"(b) CONTENTS.—Each report described in subsection (a) shall include—

"(1) a description of activities and services assisted under this part;

"(2) a description of the population served by the program; and

"(3) an assessment of the ability of private sector entities participating in the eligible partnership to continue the support of the activities and services in the absence of Federal funding.

"(c) DISSEMINATION.—The Secretary shall select reports received under this subsection that are appropriate for dissemination to the education community and shall make such reports available through the National Diffusion Network.".

TITLE II—ACADEMIC LIBRARY AND INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ENHANCEMENT

SEC. 201. REVISION OF TITLE II.

Title II of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1021 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE II—ACADEMIC LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION SERVICES

"SEC. 201. PURPOSE; AUTHORIZATION.

"(a) PURPOSE.—The Secretary shall carry out a program to assist—

"(1) college and university libraries in acquiring technological equipment and in conducting research in information technology in accordance with part A;

"(2) in the education and training of persons in library and information science and to encourage research and development relating to improvement of libraries (including the promotion of economical and effective information delivery, cooperative efforts, and developmental projects) in accordance with part B;

"(3) the Nation's major research libraries, in maintaining and strengthening their collections, and in making information resources available to other libraries whose users have need for research materials in accordance with part C; and

"(4) historically black colleges and universities and other minority-serving institutions with programs in library and information sciences to train and educate African-Americans and other underrepresented racial, national origin, and ethnic minorities in such programs in accordance with part D.

"(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(1) PART A.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part A $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(3) PART C.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part C $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(4) PART D.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part D $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"SEC. 202. NOTIFICATION OF STATE AGENCY.

"Each institution of higher education which receives a grant under this title shall annually inform the State agency designated pursuant to section 1203 of its activities under this title.

"SEC. 203. LIBRARY EXPERTS.

"The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure that programs under this title are administered by appropriate library experts.

"PART A—COLLEGE LIBRARY TECHNOLOGY AND COOPERATION GRANTS

"SEC. 211. COLLEGE LIBRARY TECHNOLOGY AND COOPERATION GRANTS.

"(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants for technological equipment, networking, and other special purposes to—

"(1) institutions of higher education which demonstrate a need for special assistance for the planning, development, acquisition, maintenance, or upgrading of technological equipment necessary to organize, access or utilize material in electronic formats and to participate in networks for the accessing and sharing of library and information resources;

"(2) combinations of institutions of higher education which demonstrate a need for special assistance in establishing and strengthening joint-use library facilities, resources, or equipment for the accessing and sharing of library and information resources;

"(3) other public and private nonprofit organizations which provide library and information services to institutions of higher education on a formal, cooperative basis for the purpose of establishing, developing, or expanding programs or projects that improve the services provided by such organizations to institutions of higher education; and

"(4) institutions of higher education conducting research or demonstration projects that improve information services to meet special national or regional needs by utilizing technology to enhance library or information services such as through the National Research and Education Network.

"(b) AWARDS REQUIREMENTS.—From funds appropriated for this part, the Secretary shall make competitive awards to institutions, combinations of institutions, or organizations in each of the categories described in paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection (a).

"(c) AMOUNT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall award grants under this section in an amount which is not less than $25,000.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The Secretary shall award grants pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a) in an amount which is not more than $50,000 for each institution of higher education.

"(d) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a), the Secretary shall give priority to institutions of higher education seeking assistance for projects which assist developing institutions of higher education in linking one or more institutions of higher education to resource sharing networks.

"(e) DURATION.—The Secretary shall award grants under this section for a period not to exceed 3 years.

"(f) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each institution of higher education or combination thereof desiring a grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) CONTENT.—Each application submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) describe the activities and services for which assistance is sought; and

"(B) contain assurances that the applicant will expend during the period for which the grant is sought (from funds other than funds received under this title), for the same purpose as such grant, an amount from such other sources equal to not less than one-third of such grant.

"(3) CRITERIA.—The Secretary shall prescribe by regulation criteria for the approval of applications submitted under this section.

"PART B—LIBRARY EDUCATION, RESEARCH, AND DEVELOPMENT

"SEC. 221. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

"(a) GRANTS.—From the amounts appropriated for this part for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall make grants in accordance with sections 222 and 223.

"(b) RESERVATION.—Of the amount appropriated for this part for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall make available two-thirds of such amount for the purpose of section 222 and one-third of such amount for the purpose of section 223.

"SEC. 222. LIBRARY EDUCATION AND HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT.

"(a) PURPOSE AND GRANT CRITERIA.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to, and enter into contracts with, institutions of higher education and library organizations or agencies to assist such institutions, library organizations, or agencies in educating and training persons in library and information science, particularly in areas of critical needs, such as recruitment and retention of minorities. Such grants or contracts may be used by such institutions, library organizations, or agencies to—

"(1) assist in covering the cost of courses of study or staff development (including short term or regular session institutes),

"(2) establish and maintain fellowships or traineeships with stipends (including allowances for travel, subsistence, and other expenses) for fellows who demonstrate need and who are working toward a graduate degree (and their dependents), not in excess of such maximum amounts as may be determined by the Secretary, and

"(3) establish, develop, or expand programs of library and information science, including new techniques of information transfer and communication technology.

"(b) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—Not less than 50 percent of the grants made under this section shall be for the purpose of establishing and maintaining fellowships or traineeships under subsection (a)(2).

"SEC. 223. RESEARCH AND DEMONSTRATION.

"The Secretary is authorized to make grants to, and enter into contracts with, institutions of higher education and other public and private agencies, institutions, and organizations for research and development projects related to the improvement of libraries, education in library and information science, the enhancement of library services through effective and efficient use of new technologies, and for the dissemination of information derived from such projects.

"SEC. 224. CONSULTATION REQUIREMENTS.

"The Secretary shall consult with the appropriate library and information science professional bodies in the determination of critical needs under section 222 and in the determination of priorities under section 223.

"PART C—IMPROVING ACCESS TO RESEARCH LIBRARY RESOURCES

"SEC. 231. RESEARCH LIBRARY RESOURCES.

"(a) GRANTS.—

"(1) General authority.—From the amount appropriated for this part, the Secretary shall make grants to institutions with major research libraries.

"(2) Major research library.—For the purposes of this part, the term 'major research library' means a public or private nonprofit institution (including the library resources of an institution of higher education), an independent research library, or a State or other public library, having a library collection which is available to qualified users and which—

"(A) makes a significant contribution to higher education and research;

"(B) is broadly based and is recognized as having national or international significance for scholarly research;

"(C) is of a unique nature, and contains material not widely available; and

"(D) is in substantial demand by researchers and scholars not connected with that institution.

"(b) Eligibility.—In determining eligibility for assistance under this part, the Secretary shall permit institutions that do not otherwise qualify to provide additional information or documents to demonstrate the national or international significance for scholarly research of the particular collection described in the grant proposal.

"SEC. 232. GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION OF GRANTS.

"In making grants under this part, the Secretary shall endeavor to achieve broad and equitable geographical distribution throughout the Nation.

"PART D—STRENGTHENING LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE PROGRAMS AND LIBRARIES IN HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES AND OTHER MINORITY-SERVING INSTITUTIONS

"SEC. 241. STRENGTHENING LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE PROGRAMS AND LIBRARIES IN HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES AND OTHER MINORITY-SERVING INSTITUTIONS.

"(a) Eligible Institutions.—For the purposes of this section, the term 'eligible institution' means—

"(1) an historically black college or university; or

"(2) an institution of higher education which—

"(A) serves a large number or high percentage of minority students; and

"(B) enrolls and graduates minority students in library and information service programs.

"(b) General Authority.—

"(1) Authority of Secretary.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to, and enter into contracts with—

"(A) eligible institutions to assist such institutions in strengthening their library and information science programs and library resources; and

"(B) eligible institutions, and library organizations or agencies which have nationally approved programs in library and information science, to assist such institutions and organizations in the education and training of African Americans and other underrepresented racial, national origin, and ethnic minorities, particularly in areas of critical needs of library and information science.

"(2) Use of funds.—Such grants or contracts may be used by such institutions, library organizations, or agencies to—

"(A) establish, develop, or strengthen libraries and library and information science programs, including new techniques of information transfer and communication technology;

"(B) assist in covering the cost of courses of study or staff development (including short-term or regular session institutes); and

"(C) establish and maintain fellowships or traineeships with stipends (including allowances for travel, subsistence, and other expenses) for fellows who demonstrate need and who are working toward a graduate degree (and their dependents), not in excess of such maximum amounts as may be determined by the Secretary.

"(c) Traineeships.—Not less than 50 percent of the grants made under this section shall be for the purpose of establishing and maintaining fellowships or traineeships under subsection (a)(2).

"(d) Funding Prohibition.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part for any fiscal year unless the amount appropriated to carry out each of parts A, B, and C for such fiscal year equals or exceeds the amount appropriated for such parts, respectively, for fiscal year 1992.".

TITLE III—INSTITUTIONAL AID

SEC. 301. FINDINGS.

Section 301(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1051(a)) is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"(1) there are a significant number of institutions of higher education serving high percentages of minority students and students from low-income backgrounds, that face problems that threaten their ability to survive;".

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "recruitment activities,"; and

(3) by amending paragraph (5) to read as follows:

"(5) providing assistance to eligible institutions will enhance the role of such institutions in providing access and quality education to low-income and minority students;".

SEC. 302. AMENDMENTS TO PART A.

(a) Eligible Institutions.—Section 312(b) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1058(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by inserting "and" after the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (D):

(B) by striking subparagraph (E);

(C) by redesignating subparagraph (F) as subparagraph (E); and

(D) by inserting "and" after the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (E) (as redesignated in subparagraph (C));

(2) by striking the semicolon at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting a period; and

(3) by striking paragraphs (3), (4), and (5).

(b) Enrollment of Needy Students.—Section 312(c)(2) of the Act is amended by striking "second preceding fiscal year" and inserting "second fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made".

(c) Award Limitations.—Subsections (a) and (b) of section 313 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1059(a) and (b)) are amended to read as follows:

"(a) Award Period.—The Secretary may award a grant to an eligible institution under this part for 5 years.

"(b) Limitations.—In awarding grants under this part the Secretary shall give priority to applicants who are not already receiving a grant under this part.".

(d) Program Goals and Hispanic-Serving Institutions Program.—

(1) In general.—Part A of title III of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1057 et seq.) is further amended by inserting after section 314 the following new sections:

"SEC. 315. GOALS FOR FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT AND ACADEMIC PROGRAM.

"(a) Goals.—Any application for a grant under this part shall describe measurable goals for the institution's financial management and academic programs, and include a plan of how the applicant intends to achieve those goals.

"(b) Continuation Requirements.—Any continuation application shall demonstrate the progress made toward achievement of the goals described pursuant to subsection (a).

"SEC. 316. HISPANIC-SERVING INSTITUTIONS.

"(a) Program Authorized.—The Secretary shall provide grants and related assistance to Hispanic-serving institutions to enable such institutions to improve and expand their capacity to serve Hispanic and other low-income students.

"(b) Definitions.—For the purpose of this section—

"(1) the term 'Hispanic-serving institution' means an institution of higher education which—

"(A) is an eligible institution under section 312(b);

"(B) at the time of application, has an enrollment of undergraduate full-time equivalent students that is at least 25 percent Hispanic students;

"(C) provides assurances that—

"(i) not less than 50 percent of its Hispanic students are low-income individuals who are first generation college students; and

"(ii) another 25 percent of its Hispanic students are either low-income individuals or first generation college students;

"(2) the term 'first generation college student' means—

"(A) an individual both of whose parents did not complete a baccalaureate degree; or

"(B) in the case of any individual who regularly resided with and received support from only one parent, an individual whose only such parent did not complete a baccalaureate degree; and

"(3) the term 'low-income individual' means an individual from a family whose taxable income for the preceding year did not exceed 150 percent of an amount equal to the poverty level determined by using criteria of poverty established by the Bureau of the Census.

"(c) Authorized Activities.—

"(1) Types of activities authorized.—Grants awarded under this section shall be used by Hispanic-serving institutions of higher education to assist such institutions to plan, develop, undertake, and carry out programs. Such programs may include—

"(A) purchase, rental, or lease of scientific or laboratory equipment for educational purposes, including instructional and research purposes;

"(B) renovation and improvement in classroom, library, laboratory, and other instructional facilities;

"(C) support of faculty exchanges, and faculty development and faculty fellowships to assist in attaining advanced degrees in their field of instruction;

"(D) curriculum development and academic instruction;

"(E) purchase of library books, periodicals, microfilm, and other educational materials;

"(F) funds and administrative management, and acquisition of equipment for use in strengthening funds management;

"(G) joint use of facilities such as laboratories and libraries; and

"(H) academic tutoring and counseling programs and student support services.

"(d) Application Process.—

"(1) Institutional eligibility.—Each Hispanic-serving institution desiring to receive assistance under this Act shall submit to the Secretary such enrollment data as may be necessary to demonstrate that it is a Hispanic-serving institution as defined in paragraph (1) of subsection (b), along with such other information and data as the Secretary may by regulation require.

"(2) Applications.—Any institution which is determined by the Secretary to be a Hispanic-serving institution (on the basis of the information and data submitted under paragraph (1)) may submit an application for assistance under this section to the Secretary. Such application shall include—

"(A) a 5-year plan for improving the assistance provided by the Hispanic-serving institution to Hispanic and other low-income students; and

"(B) such other information and assurance as the Secretary may require.

"(3) PRIORITY.— The Secretary shall give priority to applications that contain satisfactory evidence that such institution has entered into or will enter into a collaborative arrangement with at least one local educational agency to provide such agency with assistance (from funds other than funds provided under this part) in reducing Hispanic dropout rates, improving Hispanic rates of academic achievement, and increasing the rates at which Hispanic high school graduates enroll in higher education.

"(e) SPECIAL RULE.—For the purposes of this section, no Hispanic-serving college or university which is eligible for and receives funds under this section may concurrently receive other funds under this part or part B.".

SEC. 303. AMENDMENTS TO PART B.

(a) USES OF FUNDS.—Section 323(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1062(a)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by inserting ", including purchase or rental of telecommunications technology equipment or services" after "facilities";

(2) in paragraph (5), by inserting ", including telecommunications program materials" after "materials"; and

(3) by inserting at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(9) Establishing or improving a development office to strengthen or improve contributions from alumni and the private sector.

"(10) Establishing or enhancing a program of teacher education designed to qualify students to teach in a public elementary or secondary school in the State that shall include, as part of such program, preparation for teacher certification.

"(11) Establishing community outreach programs which will encourage elementary and secondary students to develop the academic skills and the interest to pursue postsecondary education.

"(12) Other activities proposed in the application submitted pursuant to section 325 that—

"(A) contribute to carrying out the purposes of this part; and

"(B) are approved by the Secretary as part of the review and acceptance of such application.".

(b) LIMITATIONS.—Section 323(b) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1062(b)) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) The Secretary shall not award a grant under this part for telecommunications technology equipment, facilities or services, if such equipment, facilities or services are available pursuant to section 396(k) of the Communications Act of 1934.".

(c) ALLOTMENT.—Section 324(c) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1063(c)) is amended by inserting ", within 5 years of graduation with a baccalaureate degree," after "who are admitted to and in attendance at".

(d) MINIMUM ALLOTMENTS.—Section 324(d) of the Act is amended by striking "$350,000" and inserting "$500,000".

(e) GOALS FOR FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT AND ACADEMIC PROGRAMS.—Section 325 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1063a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) GOALS FOR FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT AND ACADEMIC PROGRAMS.—Any application for a grant under this part shall describe measurable goals for the institution's financial management and academic programs and include a plan of how the applicant intends to achieve those goals.".

(f) PROFESSIONAL OR GRADUATE INSTITUTIONS.

(1) ELIGIBLE INSTITUTIONS.—Section 326(e) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1063b(e)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) QUALIFIED GRADUATE PROGRAM.—For the purposes of this section, the term 'qualified graduate program' means a graduate or professional program that—

"(A) provides a program of instruction in the physical or natural sciences, engineering, mathematics, or other scientific discipline in which African Americans are underrepresented;

"(B) has been accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association or has been approved by a nationally recognized approving agency; and

"(C) has students enrolled in such program at the time of application for a grant under this section.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE.—Graduate institutions that were awarded grants under this section prior to October 1, 1992 shall continue to receive such grant payments, regardless of the eligibility of the graduate institutions described in subparagraphs (F) through (P), until such grant period has expired or September 30, 1993, whichever is later.

"(4) ONE GRANT PER INSTITUTION.—The Secretary shall not award more than 1 grant under this section in any fiscal year to any institution of higher education or university system.".

(g) FUNDING RULES FOR GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL INSTITUTIONS.—Section 326 of the Act is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) FUNDING RULE.—Of the amount appropriated to carry out this section for any fiscal year—

"(1) the first $12,000,000 (or any lesser amount appropriated) shall be available only for the purposes of making grants to institutions or programs described in subparagraphs (A) through (E) of subsection (e)(1);

"(2) any amount appropriated in excess of $12,000,000 shall be available—

"(A) for the purposes of making grants, in equal amounts not to exceed $500,000, to institutions or programs described in subparagraphs (F) through (P) of subsection (e)(1); and

"(B) secondly, for the purposes of making grants to institutions or programs described in subparagraphs (A) through (P) of subsection (e)(1).".

SEC. 304. AMENDMENTS TO PART C.

(a) PROGRAM CONSOLIDATION.—Part C of title III of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1064 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by amending the heading of such part to read as follows:

"PART C—ENDOWMENT CHALLENGE GRANTS FOR INSTITUTIONS ELIGIBLE FOR ASSISTANCE UNDER PART A OR PART B";

(2) by striking section 331; and

(3) by redesignating section 332 as section 331.

(b) ENDOWMENT CHALLENGE GRANTS.—Section 331 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1065) (as redesignated in subsection (a)(3)) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking "of higher education"; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by inserting at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D)(i) The term 'eligible institution' means an institution that is an—

"(I) eligible institution under part A or would be considered to be such an institution if section 312(b)(1)(C) referred to a postgraduate degree rather than a bachelor's degree;

"(II) institution eligible for assistance under part B or would be considered to be such an institution if section 324 referred to a postgraduate degree rather than a baccalaureate degree; or

"(III) institution of higher education that makes a substantial contribution to postgraduate medical educational opportunities for minorities and the economically disadvantaged.

"(ii) The Secretary may waive the requirements of subclauses (I) and (II) of clause (i) with respect to a postgraduate degree in the case of any institution otherwise eligible under clause (i) for an endowment challenge grant upon determining that the institution makes a substantial contribution to medical education opportunities for minorities and the economically disadvantaged.";

(2) in subsection (b)(1)—

(A) by inserting "endowment" before "challenge grants"; and

(B) by striking "of higher education"; and

(3) in subsection (b)(2), by amending subparagraphs (B) and (C) to read as follows:

"(B) The Secretary may make a grant under this part to an eligible institution under the following circumstances:

"(i) In any fiscal year in which the amount appropriated to carry out this part is less than $15,000,000, the institution—

"(I) may apply for a grant in an amount not exceeding $500,000; and

"(II) shall have deposited in its endowment fund established under this section an amount which is equal to one-half of the amount of such grant.

"(ii) In any fiscal year in which the amount appropriated to carry out this part is equal to or greater than $15,000,000 but less than $25,000,000, the institution—

"(I) may apply for a grant in an amount not exceeding $1,000,000; and

"(II) shall have deposited in its endowment fund established under this section an amount which is equal to one-half of the amount of such grant.

"(iii) In any fiscal year in which the amount appropriated to carry out this part is equal to or greater than $25,000,000, the institution may apply for a grant in an amount not to exceed $1,500,000 if such institution has deposited in its endowment fund established under this section an amount which is equal to one-half of the amount of such grant.

"(C)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), if the appropriation for this part in a fiscal year is $20,000,000 or less, an eligible institution of higher education that is awarded a grant under subsection (b)(2)(B) of this section shall not be eligible to reapply for a grant under subsection (b)(2)(B) of this section during the 10 years immediately following the period that such institution received such a grant.

"(ii) If the appropriation for this part in any fiscal year is greater than $20,000,000, an eligible institution of higher education that is awarded a grant under subsection (b)(2)(B) of this section shall not be eligible to reapply for a grant under subsection (b)(2)(B) of this section during the 5 years immediately following the period that such institution received such a grant. This provision shall apply for the fiscal year in which the appropriation is greater than $20,000,000 and subsequent fiscal years, regardless of the appropriation in those fiscal years.";

(4) in subsection (b)(4)(A), by striking "section 331(a)(1)" and inserting "subsection (a)(2)(D) of this section";

(5) in subsection (b)(4)(B), by striking "a challenge grant under this section" and inserting "an endowment challenge grant under this section";

(6) by amending paragraph (5) of subsection (b) to read as follows:

"(5) an endowment challenge grant awarded under this section to an eligible institution shall be in an amount which is not less than $50,000 in any fiscal year.".

(7) by amending paragraph (1) of subsection (f) to read as follows:

"(1) give priority to an applicant that is receiving assistance under part A or part B or has received a grant under part A or part B of this title within the 5 fiscal years preceding the fiscal year in which the applicant is applying for a grant under this section;"; and

(8) in subsection (g), by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence the following: ", including a description of the long- and short-term plans for raising and using the funds under this part".

SEC. 305. AMENDMENTS TO PART D.

(a) Contents of Applications.—Section 351(b)(7) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1066(b)(7)) is amended—

(1) by striking subparagraph (D); and

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (E) and (F) as subparagraphs (D) and (E), respectively.

(b) Waiver Authority.—Section 352(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1067(a)) is amended in the matter preceding paragraph (1) by striking "shall" and inserting "may".

(c) Repealers.—Sections 355 and 359 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1069a and 1069e) are each repealed.

(d) Assistance to Institutions Under Other Programs.—Section 356(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1069b(a)) is amended by striking "shall" and inserting "may".

(e) Authorizations.—Section 360(a) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 360. (a) Authorizations.—

"(1) Part A.—(A) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part A, $135,000,000 (other than section 316) for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(B)(i) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out section 316, $45,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(ii) No funds are authorized to be appropriated pursuant to clause (i) for any fiscal year unless the amount appropriated pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) for such fiscal year equals or exceeds $80,000,000.

"(2) Part B.—(A) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part B (other than section 326), $135,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(B) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out section 326, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(3) Part C.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out part C, $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

(f) Reservations.—Section 360(c) of the Act is amended by striking "1986—" and paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting the following: "1986, the Secretary shall, for such fiscal year—

"(1) allocate 25 percent of the excess (above the amount appropriated for part A for fiscal year 1986) among eligible institutions at which at least 60 percent of the students are African Americans, Hispanic Americans, Native Americans, Asian Americans, Native Hawaiians, or Pacific Islanders, or any combination thereof; and

"(2) allocate 75 percent of such excess among other eligible institutions.".

(g) Additional Reservation.—Section 360 is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) Additional Reservation.—In any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1992, the Secretary shall award at least 25 percent of the amount appropriated pursuant to the authority of paragraph (3) of subsection (a) in each fiscal year to historically black colleges and universities that meet the requirements of part C, unless there are an insufficient number of quality applications or an insufficient number of applications due to the provisions in subsection (b)(2)(C) or subsection (b)(4)(B) of section 331.".

TITLE IV—STUDENT ASSISTANCE

PART A—GRANTS TO STUDENTS IN ATTENDANCE AT INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION

SEC. 401. FEDERAL PELL GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) Authorization.—Section 411(a)(1) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1070a(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking "September 30, 1992," and inserting "September 30, 1998,"; and

(2) by striking "paragraph (2)" and inserting "subsection (b)".

(b) Name of Program.—Section 411(a)(3) of the Act is amended by striking "as 'Pell Grants' " and inserting "as 'Federal Pell Grants' ".

(c) Proportion of Cost.—Section 411(b)(1) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking "(A) as determined" and all that follows through "and (B)";

(2) by striking "parental or independent student" and inserting "family and student";

(3) by striking "subparts 2 and 3" and inserting "subparts 3 and 4"; and

(4) by striking "will meet 75 percent" and inserting "will meet at least 75 percent".

(d) Grant Amounts.—

(1) Maximum grant amounts.—Section 411(b)(2)(A) of the Act is amended by striking clauses (i) through (v) and inserting the following:

"(i) $3,700 for academic year 1993–1994,

"(ii) $3,900 for academic year 1994–1995,

"(iii) $4,100 for academic year 1995–1996,

"(iv) $4,300 for academic year 1996–1997, and

"(v) $4,500 for academic year 1997–1998,".

(2) Grant amounts for less-than-half-time students.—Section 411(b)(2)(B) of the Act is amended in the first sentence therein—

(A) by inserting immediately after "full-time basis" the following: "(including a student who attends an institution of higher education on less than a half-time basis)"; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: ", computed in accordance with this subpart".

(3) Determination of grant amounts based on need.—Section 411(b)(3) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(3)(A) For any academic year for which an appropriation Act provides a maximum basic grant in an amount in excess of $2,400, the amount of a student's basic grant shall equal $2,400 plus—

"(i) one-half of the amount by which such maximum basic grant exceeds $2,400; plus

"(ii) the lesser of—

"(I) the remaining one-half of such excess; or

"(II) the sum of the student's tuition and the student's allowance determined under subparagraph (B), if applicable.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii)(II), a student's allowance is $750 if the student has dependent care expenses (as defined in section 472(8)) or disability related expenses (as defined in section 472(9)).".

(4) Conforming amendment.—Section 411(b)(4) of the Act is amended by striking "411F" and inserting "472".

(5) Minimum grant amounts.—Section 411(b)(5) of the Act is amended by striking "$200" and inserting "$400, except that a student who is eligible for a basic grant that is equal to or greater than $200 but less than $400 shall be awarded a basic grant of $400".

(6) Exception to maximum Pell grant award; study abroad; incarcerated students.—Section 411(b) of the Act is further amended by striking paragraphs (6) and (7) and inserting the following:

"(6) The Secretary may allow, on a case-by-case basis, a student to receive 2 Pell grants during a single 12-month period, if—

"(A) the student is enrolled full-time in a baccalaureate degree program of study that is 2 years or longer at an eligible institution that is computed in credit hours; and

"(B) the student completes course work toward completion of a bachelor's degree that exceeds the requirements for a full academic year as defined by the institution.

"(7) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subpart, the Secretary shall allow the amount of the basic grant to be exceeded for students participating in a program of study abroad approved for credit by the institution at which the student is enrolled when the reasonable costs of such program are greater than the cost of attendance at the student's home institution, except that the amount of such basic grant in any fiscal year shall not exceed the grant level specified in the appropriate Appropriation Act for this subpart for such year. If the preceding sentence applies, the financial aid administrator at the home institution may use the cost of the study abroad program, rather than the home institution's cost, to determine the cost of attendance of the student.

"(8)(A) No basic grant shall be awarded to an incarcerated student under this subpart that exceeds the sum of the amount of tuition and fees normally assessed by the institution of higher education for the course of study such student is pursuing plus an allowance (determined in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary) for books and supplies associated with such course of study, except that no basic grant shall be awarded to any incarcerated student serving under sentence of death or any life sentence without eligibility for parole or release.

"(B) Basic grants under this subpart shall only be awarded to incarcerated individuals in a State if such grants are used to supplement and not supplant the level of postsecondary education assistance provided by such State to incarcerated individuals in fiscal year 1988.".

(e) Period of Eligibility.—

(1) Removal of academic year limitations.—Section 411(c)(1) is amended by striking everything following "except that" and inserting "any period during which the student is enrolled in a noncredit or remedial course of study as defined in paragraph (2) shall not be counted for the purpose of this paragraph.".

(2) Clarification of eligibility for study abroad.—Section 411(c)(2) of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Nothing in this section shall exclude from eligibility programs of study abroad that are approved for credit by the home institution at which the student is enrolled.".

(f) CALCULATION OF ELIGIBILITY.—Section 411(f) of the Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by striking "an estimate of the eligibility index" and inserting ", as a part of its regular output document, the expected family contribution";

(B) in subparagraph (A) by striking "eligibility index" and inserting "expected family contribution";

(C) in subparagraph (B), by striking "eligibility index" and inserting "expected family contribution"; and

(D) in subparagraph (D), by striking "eligibility index" and inserting "expected family contribution"; and

(2) in paragraph (3), by striking "eligibility index" and inserting "expected family contribution";

(g) INSUFFICIENT APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 411(g) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(g) INSUFFICIENT APPROPRIATIONS.—If, for any fiscal year, the funds appropriated for payments under this subpart are insufficient to satisfy fully all entitlements, as calculated under subsection (b) (but at the maximum grant level specified in such apprpriation), the Secretary shall promptly transmit a notice of such insufficiency to each House of the Congress, and identify in such notice the additional amount that would be required to be appropriated to satisfy fully all entitlements (as so calculated at such maximum grant level).".

(h) TREATMENT OF RECIPIENTS.—Section 411(i) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking "NONCONTRACTOR STATUS OF INSTITUTIONS" and inserting "TREATMENT OF INSTITUTIONS AND STUDENTS UNDER OTHER LAWS"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Recipients of Pell Grants shall not be considered to be individual grantees for purposes of part D of title V of Public Law 100–690.".

(i) UNIFICATION OF NEEDS ANALYSIS SYSTEMS.—Subpart 1 of part A of title IV of the Act is amended by striking sections 411A through 411F (20 U.S.C. 1070a–1 through 1070a–6).

SEC. 402. FEDERAL EARLY OUTREACH AND STUDENT SERVICES PROGRAMS.

(a) AMENDMENTS.—Part A of title IV of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1070 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by repealing subpart 4;

(2) by redesignating subparts 2 and 3 as subparts 3 and 4, respectively;

(3) by redesignating sections 401 and 411 as sections 400 and 401, respectively; and

(4) by inserting after section 401 (as redesignated by paragraph (3)) the following new subpart:

"Subpart 2—Federal Early Outreach and Student Services Programs

"CHAPTER 1—FEDERAL TRIO PROGRAMS

"SEC. 402A. PROGRAM AUTHORITY; AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) GRANTS AND CONTRACTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary shall, in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, carry out a program of making grants and contracts designed to identify qualified individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds, to prepare them for a program of postsecondary education, to provide support services for such students who are pursuing programs of postsecondary education, to motivate and prepare students for doctoral programs, and to train individuals serving or preparing for service in programs and projects so designed.

"(b) RECIPIENTS, DURATION, AND SIZE.—

"(1) RECIPIENTS.—For the purposes described in subsection (a), the Secretary is authorized, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5), to make grants to, and contracts with, institutions of higher education, public and private agencies and organizations, combinations of such institutions, agencies and organizations, and in exceptional circumstances, secondary schools, for planning, developing, or carrying out one or more of the services assisted under this chapter.

"(2) DURATION.—Grants or contracts made under this chapter shall be awarded for a period of 4 years, except that the Secretary shall award such grants or contracts for 5 years to applicants whose peer review scores were in the highest 10 percent of scores of all applicants receiving grants or contracts in each program competition for the same award year.

"(3) MINIMUM GRANT LEVEL.—In any year in which the appropriations authorized under this chapter exceed the prior year appropriation as adjusted for inflation, the Secretary shall use 80 percent of the amount appropriated above the current services level to bring each award up to the minimum grant level or the amount requested by the institution or agency, whichever is less. The minimum grant level (A) for programs authorized under section 402D or 402G, shall not be less than $170,000 for fiscal year 1993; (B) for programs authorized under section 402B or 402F shall not be less than $180,000 for fiscal year 1994; and (C) for programs authorized under section 402C or 402E shall not be less than $190,000 for fiscal year 1995.

"(c) PROCEDURES FOR AWARDING GRANTS AND CONTRACTS.—

"(1) PRIOR EXPERIENCE.—In making grants and contracts under this chapter, the Secretary shall consider the prior experience of service delivery under the particular program for which funds are sought by each applicant. For fiscal years after 1985, the level of consideration given to prior experience shall not vary from the level of consideration given this factor for fiscal year 1985.

"(2) ORDER OF AWARDS; PROGRAM FRAUD.—(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall award grants and contracts under this chapter in the order of the scores received by the application for such grant or contract in the peer review process required under section 1210 and adjusted for prior experience in accordance with paragraph (1).

"(B) The Secretary is not required to provide assistance to a program otherwise eligible for assistance under this chapter, if the Secretary has determined that such program has involved the fraudulent use of funds under this chapter.

"(3) PEER REVIEW PROCESS.—(A) The Secretary shall assure that, to the extent practicable, members of groups underrepresented in higher education, including African Americans, Hispanics, Native Americans, Alaska Natives, Asian Americans, Native American Pacific Islanders (including Native Hawaiians), are represented as readers of applications submitted under this chapter. The Secretary shall also assure that persons from urban and rural backgrounds are represented as readers.

"(B) The Secretary shall ensure that each application submitted under this chapter is read by at least 3 readers who are not employees of the Federal Government (other than as readers of applications).

"(4) APPLICATION STATUS.—The Secretary shall inform each entity operating programs under this chapter regarding the status of their application for continued funding at least 8 months prior to the expiration of the grant or contract. The Secretary, in the case of an entity that is continuing to operate a successful program under this chapter, shall ensure that the start-up date for a new grant or contract for such program immediately follows the termination of preceding grant or contract so that no interruption of funding occurs for such successful reapplicants. The Secretary shall inform each entity requesting assistance under this subpart for a new program regarding the status of their application at least 8 months prior to the proposed startup date of such program.

"(5) NUMBER OF APPLICATIONS FOR GRANTS AND CONTRACTS.—The Secretary shall not limit the number of applications submitted by an entity under any program authorized under this chapter if the additional applications describe programs serving different populations or campuses.

"(6) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PROGRAMS FOR DISADVANTAGED STUDENTS.—The Secretary shall encourage coordination of programs assisted under this chapter with other programs for disadvantaged students operated by the sponsoring institution or agency, regardless of the funding source of such programs. The Secretary shall not limit an entity's eligibility to receive funds under this chapter because such entity sponsors a program similar to the program to be assisted under this chapter, regardless of the funding source of such program. The Secretary shall not require a separate Director to administer a program funded under this chapter if the imposition of such requirement will hinder coordination among programs funded under this chapter or between programs funded under this subpart and similar programs funded through other sources.

"(d) OUTREACH.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct outreach activities to ensure that entities eligible for assistance under this chapter submit applications proposing programs that serve geographic areas and eligible populations which have been underserved by the programs assisted under this chapter.

"(2) NOTICE.—In carrying out the provisions of paragraph (1), the Secretary shall notify the entities described in subsection (b) of the availability of assistance under this subsection not less than 120 days prior to the deadline for submission of applications under this chapter and shall consult national, State, and regional organizations about candidates for notification.

"(3) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall provide technical training to applicants for projects and programs authorized under this chapter. The Secretary shall give priority to serving programs and projects that serve geographic areas and eligible populations which have been underserved by the programs assisted under this chapter. Technical training activities shall include the provision of information on authorizing legislation, goals and objectives of the program, required activities, eligibility requirements, the application process and application deadlines, and assistance in the development of program proposals and the completion of program applications. Such training shall be furnished at conferences, seminars, and workshops to be conducted at not less than 10 sites throughout the United States to ensure that all areas of the United States with large concentrations of eligible participants are served.

"(4) SPECIAL RULE.—The Secretary may contract with eligible entities to conduct the outreach activities described in this subsection.

"(e) DOCUMENTATION OF STATUS AS A LOW-INCOME INDIVIDUAL.—Documentation of an individual's status pursuant to subsection (g)(2) shall be made—

"(1) in the case of an individual who is eighteen years of age or younger or a dependent student by providing the Secretary with a signed statement from the parent or legal guardian, verification from another governmental source, a signed financial aid application, or a signed United States or Puerto Rican income tax return; and

"(2) in the case of an individual who is age 18 or older or who is an independent student, by providing the Secretary with a signed statement from the individual, verification from another governmental source, a signed financial aid form, or a signed United States or Puerto Rican income tax return.

"(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of making grants and contracts under this chapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $650,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years. Of the amount appropriated under this chapter, the Secretary may use no more than ½ of 1 percent of such amount to obtain additional qualified readers and additional staff to review applications, to increase the level of oversight monitoring, to support impact studies, program assessments and reviews, and to provide technical assistance to potential applicants and current grantees. In expending these funds, the Secretary shall give priority to the additional administrative requirements provided in the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, to outreach activities, and to obtaining additional readers. The Secretary shall report to Congress by October 1, 1994, on the use of these funds.

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this chapter:

"(1) FIRST GENERATION COLLEGE STUDENT.—The term 'first generation college student' means—

"(A) an individual both of whose parents did not complete a baccalaureate degree; or

"(B) in the case of any individual who regularly resided with and received support from only one parent, an individual whose only such parent did not complete a baccalaureate degree.

"(2) LOW-INCOME INDIVIDUAL.—The term 'low-income individual' means an individual from a family whose taxable income for the preceding year did not exceed 150 percent of an amount equal to the poverty level determined by using criteria of poverty established by the Bureau of the Census.

"(3) VETERAN ELIGIBILITY.—No veteran shall be deemed ineligible to participate in any program under this chapter by reason of such individual's age who—

"(A) served on active duty for a period of more than 180 days, any part of which occurred after January 31, 1955, and was discharged or released therefrom under conditions other than dishonorable; or

"(B) served on active duty after January 31, 1955, and was discharged or released therefrom because of a service connected disability.

"SEC. 402B. TALENT SEARCH.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall carry out a program to be known as talent search which shall be designed—

"(1) to identify qualified youths with potential for education at the postsecondary level and to encourage such youths to complete secondary school and to undertake a program of postsecondary education;

"(2) to publicize the availability of student financial assistance available to persons who pursue a program of postsecondary education; and

"(3) to encourage persons who have not completed programs of education at the secondary or postsecondary level, but who have the ability to complete such programs, to reenter such programs.

"(b) PERMISSIBLE SERVICES.—Any talent search project assisted under this chapter may provide services such as—

"(1) academic advice and assistance in secondary school and college course selection;

"(2) assistance in completing college admission and financial aid applications;

"(3) assistance in preparing for college entrance examinations;

"(4) guidance on secondary school reentry or entry to general educational development (GED) programs or other alternative education programs for secondary school dropouts;

"(5) personal and career counseling;

"(6) tutorial services;

"(7) exposure to college campuses as well as cultural events, academic programs and other sites or activities not usually available to disadvantaged youth;

"(8) workshops and counseling for parents of students served;

"(9) mentoring programs involving elementary or secondary school teachers, faculty members at institutions of higher education, students, or any combination of such persons; and

"(10) programs and activities as described in paragraphs (1) through (9) which are specially designed for students of limited English proficiency.

"(c) REQUIREMENTS FOR APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS.—In approving applications for talent search projects under this chapter for any fiscal year the Secretary shall—

"(1) require an assurance that not less than two-thirds of the individuals participating in the project proposed to be carried out under any application be low-income individuals who are first generation college students;

"(2) require that such participants be persons who either have completed 5 years of elementary education or are at least 11 years of age but not more than 27 years of age, unless the imposition of any such limitation with respect to any person would defeat the purposes of this section or the purposes of section 402F;

"(3) require an assurance that individuals participating in the project proposed in the application do not have access to services from another project funded under this section or under section 402F; and

"(4) require an assurance that the project will be located in a setting accessible to the persons proposed to be served by the project.

"SEC. 402C. UPWARD BOUND.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall carry out a program to be known as upward bound which shall be designed to generate skills and motivation necessary for success in education beyond secondary school.

"(b) PERMISSIBLE SERVICES.—Any upward bound project assisted under this chapter may provide services such as—

"(1) instruction in reading, writing, study skills, mathematics, and other subjects necessary for success beyond secondary school;

"(2) personal counseling;

"(3) academic advice and assistance in secondary school course selection;

"(4) tutorial services;

"(5) exposure to cultural events, academic programs, and other activities not usually available to disadvantaged youth;

"(6) activities designed to acquaint youths participating in the project with the range of career options available to them;

"(7) instruction designed to prepare youths participating in the project for careers in which persons from disadvantaged backgrounds are particularly underrepresented;

"(8) on-campus residential programs;

"(9) mentoring programs involving elementary or secondary school teachers, faculty members at institutions of higher education, students, or any combination of such persons; and

"(10) programs and activities as described in paragraphs (1) through (9) which are specially designed for students of limited English proficiency.

"(c) REQUIRED SERVICES.—Any upward bound project assisted under this chapter which has received funding for two or more years shall include, as part of the core curriculum in the next and succeeding years, instruction in mathematics through precalculus, laboratory science, and foreign language, composition, and literature.

"(d) REQUIREMENTS FOR APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS.—In approving applications for upward bound projects under this chapter for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall—

"(1) require an assurance that not less than two-thirds of the youths participating in the project proposed to be carried out under any application be low-income individuals who are first generation college students;

"(2) require an assurance that the remaining youths participating in the project proposed to be carried out under any application be either low-income individuals or first generation college students;

"(3) require that there be a determination by the institution, with respect to each participant in such project that the participant has a need for academic support in order to pursue successfully a program of education beyond secondary school; and

"(4) require that such participants be persons who have completed 8 years of elementary education and are at least 13 years of age but not more than 19 years of age, unless the imposition of any such limitation would defeat the purposes of this section.

"(e) MAXIMUM STIPENDS.—Youths participating in a project proposed to be carried out under any application may be paid stipends not in excess of $60 per month during June, July, and August, and not in excess of $40 per month during the remaining period of the year.

"SEC. 402D. STUDENT SUPPORT SERVICES.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall carry out a program to be known as student support services which shall be designed—

"(1) to increase college retention and graduation rates for eligible students;

"(2) to increase the transfer rates of eligible students from 2-year to 4-year institutions; and

"(3) to foster an institutional climate supportive of the success of low-income and first generation college students and individuals with disabilities.

"(b) PERMISSIBLE SERVICES.—A student support services project assisted under this chapter may provide services such as—

"(1) instruction in reading, writing, study skills, mathematics, and other subjects necessary for success beyond secondary school;

"(2) personal counseling;

"(3) academic advice and assistance in course selection;

"(4) tutorial services and counseling and peer counseling;

"(5) exposure to cultural events and academic programs not usually available to disadvantaged students;

"(6) activities designed to acquaint students participating in the project with the range of career options available to them;

"(7) activities designed to assist students participating in the project in securing admission and financial assistance for enrollment in graduate and professional programs;

"(8) activities designed to assist students currently enrolled in 2-year institutions in securing admission and financial assistance for enrollment in a four-year program of postsecondary education;

"(9) mentoring programs involving faculty or upper class students, or a combination thereof; and

"(10) programs and activities as described in paragraphs (1) through (9) which are specially designed for students of limited English proficiency.

"(c) REQUIREMENTS FOR APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS.—In approving applications for student support services projects under this chapter for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall—

"(1) require an assurance that not less than two-thirds of the persons participating in the project proposed to be carried out under any application—

"(A) be individuals with disabilities; or

"(B) be low-income individuals who are first generation college students;

"(2) require an assurance that the remaining students participating in the project proposed to be carried out under any application either be low-income individuals, first generation college students, or individuals with disabilities;

"(3) require an assurance that not less than one-third of the individuals with disabilities participating in the project be low-income individuals;

"(4) require that there be a determination by the institution, with respect to each participant in such project, that the participant has a need for academic support in order to pursue successfully a program of education beyond secondary school;

"(5) require that such participants be enrolled or accepted for enrollment at the institution which is the recipient of the grant or contract; and

"(6) require an assurance from the institution which is the recipient of the grant or contract that each student enrolled in the project will be offered sufficient financial assistance to meet that student's full financial need.

"SEC. 402E. POSTBACCALAUREATE ACHIEVEMENT PROGRAM AUTHORITY.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall carry out a program to be known as the 'Ronald E. McNair Postbaccalaureate Achievement Program' that shall be designed to provide disadvantaged college students with effective preparation for doctoral study.

"(b) SERVICES.—A postbaccalaureate achievement project assisted under this section may provide services such as—

"(1) opportunities for research or other scholarly activities at the institution or at graduate centers designed to provide students with effective preparation for doctoral study;

"(2) summer internships;

"(3) seminars and other educational activities designed to prepare students for doctoral study;

"(4) tutoring;

"(5) academic counseling;

"(6) activities designed to assist students participating in the project in securing admission to and financial assistance for enrollment in graduate programs;

"(7) mentoring programs involving faculty members at institutions of higher education, students, or any combination of such persons; and

"(8) exposure to cultural events and academic programs not usually available to disadvantaged students.

"(c) REQUIREMENTS.—In approving applications for postbaccalaureate achievement projects assisted under this section for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall require—

"(1) an assurance that not less than two-thirds of the individuals participating in the project proposed to be carried out under any application be low-income individuals who are first generation college students;

"(2) an assurance that the remaining persons participating in the project proposed to be carried out be from a group that is underrepresented in graduate education;

"(3) an assurance that participants be enrolled in a degree program at an eligible institution having an agreement with the Secretary in accordance with the provisions of section 487; and

"(4) an assurance that participants in summer research internships have completed their sophomore year in postsecondary education.

"(d) AWARD CONSIDERATIONS.—In addition to such other selection criteria as may be prescribed by regulations, the Secretary shall consider in making awards to institutions under this section—

"(1) the quality of research and other scholarly activities in which students will be involved;

"(2) the level of faculty involvement in the project and the description of the research in which students will be involved; and

"(3) the institution's plan for identifying and recruiting participants including students enrolled in projects authorized under this section.

"(e) MAXIMUM STIPENDS.—Students participating in research under a postbaccalaureate achievement project may receive an award that—

"(1) shall include a stipend not to exceed $2,400 per annum; and

"(2) may include, in addition, the costs of summer tuition, summer room and board, and transportation to summer programs.

"(f) FUNDING.—From amounts appropriated pursuant to the authority of section 402A(f), the Secretary shall, to the extent practicable, allocate funds for projects authorized by this section in an amount which is not less than $11,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1997.

"SEC. 402F. EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY CENTERS.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY; SERVICES PROVIDED.—The Secretary shall carry out a program to be known as educational opportunity centers which shall be designed—

"(1) to provide information with respect to financial and academic assistance available for individuals desiring to pursue a program of postsecondary education; and

"(2) to provide assistance to such persons in applying for admission to institutions at which a program of postsecondary education is offered, including preparing necessary applications for use by admissions and financial aid officers.

"(b) PERMISSIBLE SERVICES.—An educational opportunity center assisted under this section may provide services such as—

"(1) public information campaigns designed to inform the community regarding opportunities for postsecondary education and training;

"(2) academic advice and assistance in course selection;

"(3) assistance in completing college admission and financial aid applications;

"(4) assistance in preparing for college entrance examinations;

"(5) guidance on secondary school reentry or entry to a general educational development (GED) program or other alternative education programs for secondary school dropouts;

"(6) personal counseling;

"(7) tutorial services;

"(8) career workshops and counseling;

"(9) mentoring programs involving elementary or secondary school teachers, faculty members at institutions of higher education, students, or any combination of such persons; and

"(10) programs and activities as described in paragraphs (1) through (9) which are specially designed for students of limited English proficiency.

"(c) REQUIREMENTS FOR APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS.—In approving applications for educational opportunity centers under this section for any fiscal year the Secretary shall—

"(1) require an assurance that not less than two-thirds of the persons participating in the project proposed to be carried out under any application be low-income individuals who are first generation college students;

"(2) require that such participants be persons who are at least nineteen years of age, unless the imposition of such limitation with respect to any person would defeat the purposes of this section or the purposes of section 402B; and

"(3) require an assurance that individuals participating in the project proposed in the application do not have access to services from another project funded under this section or under section 402B.

"SEC. 402G. STAFF DEVELOPMENT ACTIVITIES.

"(a) SECRETARY'S AUTHORITY.—For the purpose of improving the operation of the programs and projects authorized by this chapter, the Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education and other public and private nonprofit institutions and organizations to provide training for staff and leadership personnel employed in, or preparing for employment in, such programs and projects.

"(b) CONTENTS OF TRAINING PROGRAMS.—Such training shall include conferences, internships, seminars, workshops, and the publication of manuals designed to improve the operation of such programs and projects and shall be carried out in the various regions of the Nation in order to ensure that the training opportunities are appropriate to meet the needs in the local areas being served by such programs and projects. Such training shall be offered annually for new directors of projects funded under this chapter as well as annually on the following topics and other topics chosen by the Secretary:

"(1) Legislative and regulatory requirements for the operation of programs funded under this chapter.

"(2) Assisting students in receiving adequate financial aid from programs assisted under this title and other programs.

"(3) The design and operation of model programs for projects funded under this chapter.

"(c) CONSULTATION.— Grants for the purposes of this section shall be made only after consultation with regional and State professional associations of persons having special knowledge with respect to the needs and problems of such programs and projects.

"SEC. 402H. EVALUATION FOR PROJECT IMPROVEMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For the purpose of improving the operation of the programs and projects assisted under this chapter, the Secretary is authorized to make grants to and enter into contracts with institutions of higher education and other public and private institutions and organizations to evaluate the effectiveness of the various programs assisted under this subpart in meeting the purposes described in this chapter.

"(b) CONTENT.—The evaluations described in subsection (a) shall identify institutional, community and program practices particularly effective in increasing the access of low-income individuals and first-generation college students to postsecondary education, the preparation of such individuals and students for postsecondary education, and such individuals' and students' success in postsecondary education.

"(c) RESULTS.—In order to improve program effectiveness, the results of the ongoing evaluations described in subsection (a) shall be disseminated by the Secretary to similar programs assisted under this chapter as well as other individuals concerned with the postsecondary access and retention of low-income individuals and first-generation college students.".

"CHAPTER 2—NATIONAL EARLY INTERVENTION SCHOLARSHIP AND PARTNERSHIP PROGRAM

"SEC. 404A. EARLY INTERVENTION PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

"The Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the requirements of this chapter, to establish a program that—

"(1) encourages States to provide or maintain a guarantee to eligible low-income students who obtain a high-school diploma (or its equivalent), of the financial assistance necessary to permit them to attend an institution of higher education; and

"(2) provides incentives to States, in cooperation with local educational agencies, institutions of higher education, community organizations and business, to provide—

"(A) additional counseling, mentoring, academic support, outreach, and supportive services to elementary, middle, and secondary school students who are at risk of dropping out of school; and

"(B) information to students and their parents about the advantages of obtaining a postsecondary education and their college financing options;

"SEC. 404B. STATE ELIGIBILITY AND STATE PLAN.

"(a) Plan Required for Eligibility.—(1) In order for a State to qualify for a grant under this chapter, the State shall submit to the Secretary a plan for carrying out the program under this chapter. Such plan shall provide for the conduct, under the State program, of both a scholarship component in accordance with section 403C and an early intervention component in accordance with section 403D.

"(2) Each State plan submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) be in such form, contain or be accompanied by such information or assurances, and be submitted at such time as the Secretary may require by regulation and shall—

"(A) describe the activities for which assistance under this section is sought; and

"(B) provide such additional assurances as the Secretary determines necessary to ensure compliance with the requirements of this section.

"(b) Matching Requirement.—The Secretary shall not approve a plan submitted under subsection (a) unless such plan—

"(1) provides that the State will provide, from State, local, or private funds, not less than one-half the cost of the program;

"(2) specifies the methods by which such share of the costs will be paid; and

"(3) includes provisions designed to assure that funds provided under this chapter shall supplement and not supplant funds expended for existing State and local programs.

"(c) Methods for Complying With Matching Requirement.—A State may count toward the contribution required by subsection (b)(1)—

"(1) the amount of the grants paid to students from State, local, or private funds under this chapter;

"(2) the amount of tuition, fees, room or board waived or reduced for recipients of grants under this chapter; and

"(3) the amount expended on documented, targeted, long-term mentoring and counseling provided by volunteers or paid staff of nonschool organizations, including businesses, religious organizations, community groups, postsecondary educational institutions, nonprofit and philanthropic organizations, and other organizations.

"(d) Payment Requirements.—Upon submission by a State of such documents as the Secretary may, by regulation, require for demonstrating the total amount expended by the State in accordance with this chapter for a fiscal year, the Secretary shall, from such State's allotment under section 404E for such fiscal year, pay to such State an amount equal to not more than one-half of the total amount so expended.

"SEC. 404C. EARLY INTERVENTION.

"(a) In General.—In order to receive payments under section 404B(d), a State shall demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the State will provide comprehensive mentoring, counseling, outreach, and supportive services to students participating in programs under this chapter who are enrolled in preschool through grade 12. Such counseling shall include financial aid counseling that provides information on the opportunities for financial assistance under this title. The State shall demonstrate, pursuant to regulations of the Secretary, the methods by which the State will target services on priority students.

"(b) Uses of Funds.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, establish criteria for determining whether comprehensive mentoring, counseling, outreach, and supportive services programs may be used to meet the requirements of subsection (a).

"(2) Allowable providers.—The activities required by subsection (a) may be provided by service providers such as community-based organizations, schools, institutions of higher education, public and private agencies, nonprofit and philanthropic organizations, businesses, institutions and agencies sponsoring programs authorized under subpart 4 of this part, and other organizations the Secretary deems appropriate.

"(3) Permissible activities.—Examples of acceptable activities to meet the requirements of subsection (a) include the following:

"(A) Providing eligible students in preschool through grades 12 with a continuing system of mentoring and advising that—

"(i) is coordinated with the Federal and State community service initiatives; and

"(ii) may include such support services as after school and summer tutoring, assistance in obtaining summer jobs, career mentoring and academic counseling.

"(B) Requiring each student to enter into an agreement under which the student agrees to achieve certain academic milestones, such as completing a prescribed set of courses and maintaining satisfactory academic progress as described in section 484(c), in exchange for receiving tuition assistance for a period of time to be established by each State.

"(C) Activities designed to ensure high school completion and college enrollment of at-risk children, including identification of at-risk children, after school and summer tutoring, assistance in obtaining summer jobs, academic counseling, volunteer and parent involvement and former or current scholarship recipients as mentor or peer counselors, skills assessment, personal counseling, family counseling and home visits, and staff development, and programs and activities as described in this subparagraph which are specially designed for students of limited English proficiency.

"(D) Prefreshman summer programs that—

"(i) are at institutions of higher education that also have programs of academic year supportive services for disadvantaged students through projects authorized under section 401D of this subpart or through comparable projects funded by the State or other sources;

"(ii) assure the participation of students who qualify as disadvantaged under the provisions of section 401D of this part or who are eligible for comparable programs funded by the State;

"(iii)(I) provide summer instruction in remedial, developmental or supportive courses; (II) provide such summer services as counseling, tutoring, or orientation; and (III) provide grant aid to students to cover prefreshman summer costs for books, supplies, living costs and personal expenses; and

"(iv) assure that participating students will receive financial aid during each academic year they are enrolled at the participating institution after the prefreshman summer.

"(E) Requiring eligible students to meet other standards or requirements as the State determines necessary to meet the purposes of this section.

"(c) Priority Students.—In administering the early intervention component, the State shall treat as priority students any student in preschool through grade 12 who is eligible—

"(1) to be counted under section 1005(c) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965;

"(2) for free or reduced price meals pursuant to the National School Lunch Act; or

"(3) for assistance pursuant to part A of title IV of the Social Security Act (Aid to Families with Dependent Children).

"SEC. 404D. SCHOLARSHIP COMPONENT.

"(a) In General.—In order to receive payments under section 404B(d), a State shall establish or maintain a financial assistance program that awards grants to students in accordance with the requirements of this section. The Secretary shall encourage the State to ensure that the tuition assistance provided pursuant to this section is available to an eligible student for use at any eligible institution.

"(b) Grant Amounts.—The maximum amount of the grant that an eligible student in any participating State shall be eligible to receive under this section shall be established by the State. The minimum amount of the grant for each fiscal year shall not be less than the lesser of—

"(1) 75 percent of the average cost of attendance for an in-State student, in a 4-year program of instruction, at public institutions of higher education in such State, as determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary; or

"(2) the maximum grant funded under section 401 for such fiscal year.

"(c) Relation to Other Assistance.—Tuition assistance provided under this chapter shall not be considered for the purpose of awarding Federal grant assistance under this title, except that in no case shall the total amount of student financial assistance awarded to a student under this title exceed such student's total cost of attendance.

"(d) Eligible Students.—A student eligible for assistance under this chapter is a student who—

"(1) is less than 22 years old at time of first grant award;

"(2) receives a high school diploma or a certificate of high school equivalence on or after January 1, 1993;

"(3) is enrolled or accepted for enrollment in a program of instruction at an institution of higher education that is located within the State's boundaries; except that, as a State option, a State may offer grant program portability for recipients who attend institutions of higher education outside such State; and

"(4) who the participated in the State early intervention component required under section 404C.

"(e) Priority; Waiver.—(1) The Secretary shall ensure that each State place a priority on awarding scholarships to students who will receive a Pell Grant for the academic year for which the award is being made under this chapter.

"(2) A State may consider students who have successfully participated in programs funded under chapter 1 of this subpart to have met the requirements of subsection (d)(4).

"SEC. 404E. DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.

"(a) Competitive Awards.—If the amount appropriated to carry out this chapter for a fiscal year is less than $50,000,000, then the Secretary shall award grants under this chapter on a competitive basis to States to carry out a program described in section 404A.

"(b) Allotment Based on Title I ESEA Allocations.—If the amount appropriated to carry out this chapter for a fiscal year is $50,000,000 or more, then the Secretary shall allot to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to such sums as—

"(1) the amount allocated under section 1005 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to the local education agencies in the State, bears to—

"(2) the total amount allocated under such section to all such agencies in all States.

"(c) Limit on Use.—No State may use less than 25 percent or more than 50 percent of its allotment for the early intervention component of the State program, except that the Secretary may waive the 50 percent limitation if the State demonstrates that the State has another means of providing the student's tuition assistance that is described in the State plan.

"(d) REALLOTMENT.—The amount of any State's allotment under subsection (b) for any fiscal year which the Secretary determines will not be required for such fiscal year for the program of that State shall be available for reallotment from time to time, on such dates during such year as the Secretary may fix, to other States in proportion to the original allotments to such States for such year, but with such proportionate amount for any of such States being reduced to the extent it exceeds the sum the Secretary estimates such State needs and will be able to use for such year for carrying out such programs. The total of such reductions shall be similarly reallotted among the States whose proportionate amounts were not so reduced. A State shall match, in accordance with section 404B(b) any reallocated funds it receives under this subsection.

"(e) ALLOTMENT SUBJECT TO CONTINUING COMPLIANCE.—The Secretary shall make payments for programs only to States which continue to meet the requirements of the State plan pursuant to section 404B.

"SEC. 404F. EVALUATION AND REPORT.

"(a) EVALUATION.—Each State receiving an allotment under this section shall biannually evaluate the early intervention program assisted under this chapter in accordance with the standards described in subsection (b) and shall submit to the Secretary a copy of such evaluation. The evaluation component shall permit service providers to track eligible student progress during the period such students are participating in the program assisted under this section and must be consistent with the standards developed by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (b).

"(b) EVALUATION STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall prescribe standards for the evaluation described in subsection (a). Such standards shall—

"(1) provide for input from States and service providers; and

"(2) ensure that data protocols and procedures are consistent and uniform.

"(c) REPORT.—The Secretary shall biannually report to the Congress on the activities assisted under this chapter and the evaluations conducted pursuant to subsection (a).

"SEC. 404G. APPROPRIATIONS.

"There is authorized an appropriation to make grants under this chapter $200,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the four succeeding fiscal years. No amount may be expended to carry out the provisions of this chapter unless the amount appropriated for such fiscal year to carry out subpart 4 of part A of this title exceeds $60,000,000.

"CHAPTER 3—PRESIDENTIAL ACCESS SCHOLARSHIPS

"SEC. 406A. SCHOLARSHIPS AUTHORIZED.

"The Secretary is authorized in accordance with this chapter to award Presidential Access Scholarships to students who—

"(1) are eligible to receive a Pell Grant for the year in which the scholarship is awarded;

"(2) have participated in a preparatory program for postsecondary education; and

"(3) demonstrate academic achievement.

"SEC. 406B. SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) AMOUNT OF AWARD.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amount of a scholarship awarded under this chapter for any academic year shall be equal to 25 percent of the Pell Grant that the recipient is awarded for that year or $400, whichever is greater.

"(2) ADJUSTMENT FOR INSUFFICIENT APPROPRIATIONS.—If, after the Secretary determines the total number of eligible applicants for an academic year in accordance with section 406C, funds available in a fiscal year are insufficient to fully fund all awards for that academic year under this chapter, the amount paid to each student shall be reduced proportionately.

"(b) PERIOD OF AWARD.—Scholarships under this chapter shall be awarded for a period of not more than four academic years, or in the case of a student who is enrolled in an undergraduate course of study that requires attendance for the full-time equivalent of five academic years, five academic years.

"(c) USE AT ANY INSTITUTION PERMITTED.—An eligible student awarded a scholarship under this chapter may use such scholarship stipend to attend any institution of higher education.

"(d) ASSISTANCE NOT TO EXCEED COST OF ATTENDANCE.—A scholarship awarded under this chapter to any student, in combination with the Pell Grant and other student financial assistance available to such student, may not exceed the student's cost of attendance (as defined in section 472).

"(e) PRESIDENTIAL ACCESS SCHOLARS.—Students awarded scholarships under this chapter shall be known as 'Presidential Access Scholars'.

"SEC. 406C. ELIGIBILITY OF SCHOLARS.

"(a) REQUIREMENTS FOR STUDENTS IN FIRST YEAR OF POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION.—In order for a student who will be attending the student's first year of postsecondary education to be eligible to receive a scholarship under this chapter for that academic year, the student shall—

"(1) be enrolled or accepted for enrollment in a degree or certificate program of at least 2 years in length;

"(2) have demonstrated academic achievement and preparation for postsecondary education by taking college preparatory level coursework in the following areas while in secondary school or the equivalent:

"(A) 4 years of English;

"(B) 3 years of science;

"(C) 3 years of mathematics;

"(D) either—

"(i) 3 years of history; or

"(ii) 2 years of history and 1 year of social studies; and

"(E) either—

"(i) 2 years of a foreign language; or

"(ii) 1 year of computer science and 1 year of a foreign language.

"(3) earn a grade point average of 2.5 or higher, on a scale of 4.0, in the final 2 years of high school; and

"(4) either—

"(A) have participated, for a minimum period of 36 months, in an early intervention program that meets the requirements of section 406D; or

"(B) rank, or have ranked, in the top 10 percent, by grade point average, of the student's secondary school graduating class.

"(b) REQUIREMENTS FOR ALL STUDENTS.—

"(1) Each eligible student desiring a scholarship under this chapter shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) In order for a student who will be attending a year of postsecondary education, other than the student's first year, to continue to be eligible to receive a scholarship under this chapter for that academic year the eligible student shall maintain eligibility to receive a Pell Grant, including fulfilling the requirements for satisfactory academic progress as described in section 484(c).

"SEC. 406D. ELIGIBLE EARLY INTERVENTION PROGRAMS.

"(a) PARTICIPATION IN TRIO PROGRAMS AND NATIONAL EARLY INTERVENTION SCHOLARSHIP AND PARTNERSHIP PROGRAMS.—Participation in a program authorized under section 402B, 402C, or 402F, or chapter 2 of subpart 2 of this part for a 36-month period shall meet the requirement of section 406C(a)(4)(A).

"(b) OTHER ELIGIBLE EARLY INTERVENTION PROGRAM.—Participation in another early intervention program, regardless of sponsorship, for a 36-month period, shall meet the requirements of section 406C(a)(4)(A) if the program—

"(1) meets the requirements established by the Secretary; and

"(2) is certified by the Governor as an honors scholars program.

"SEC. 406E. STUDENT ELIGIBILITY.

"(a) STUDENT ELIGIBILITY.—For the purpose of this chapter, the term 'eligible student' means an individual who—

"(1) is a graduate of a public or private secondary school or has the equivalent certificate of graduation as recognized by the State in which the eligible student resides;

"(2) not later than 3 years after such individual graduates or obtains an equivalent certificate, has been admitted for enrollment or is enrolled at an institution of higher education; and

"(3) is eligible to receive a Pell Grant for the year in which the scholarship is awarded.

"(b) LIMITATION.—For the purpose of this chapter, the term 'eligible student' does not include an individual who has been awarded a baccalaureate degree.

"(c) WAIVERS.—

"(1) EARLY INTERVENTION PROGRAM PARTICIPATION.—The Secretary may waive the requirement described in section 406C(a)(4) for any student who was unable to participate in an early intervention program assisted under this part because such program was not available in the area in which such student resides or the student was unable to participate in an early intervention program where the student resides.

"(2) LIMITED-ENGLISH PROFICIENT STUDENTS.—The Secretary may waive the requirement described in section 406C(a)(2)(E) for any limited-English proficient student who is fluent in a language other than English and is participating in a program to teach such student the English language or for any English speaking student fluent in a second language.

"SEC. 406F. EARLY INTERVENTION SCHOLARSHIP AGREEMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In order for a student to receive a scholarship under this chapter, the State educational agency serving the State in which such child resides shall have entered into an agreement with the Secretary.

"(b) CONTENTS.—Each agreement described in subsection (a) shall include provisions designed to ensure that—

"(1) all secondary school students in the State have equal and easy access to the coursework described in section 406C(a)(2);

"(2) the State educational agency has procedures in place to verify to the Secretary that students receiving scholarships under this chapter have taken such coursework and that such coursework has been of a college preparatory level, including a requirement that all secondary schools in the State issue a certificate to each eligible student certifying that such student has completed the necessary coursework to qualify for a scholarship under this chapter;

"(3) the State educational agency has procedures in place to notify institutions of higher education of the availability of scholarships under this chapter, so that such institutions may award additional scholarships in concert with the scholarships received under this chapter; and

"(4) the State educational agency has procedures in place to inform junior high school students and their families about the value of postsecondary education, the availability of student aid to meet college expenses, and the availability of scholarships under this chapter for students who take demanding courses, with particular emphasis on activities designed to ensure that students from low- and moderate-income families have access to such information.

"(c) SPECIAL RULE.—The Secretary may allow a State to receive assistance under this chapter for students whose secondary schools do not offer the necessary coursework if such students take the required courses at another local secondary school or community college.

"SEC. 406G. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $200,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this chapter. No amount may be expended to carry out the provisions of this chapter in any fiscal year unless the amount appropriated for such fiscal year to carry out subpart 1 of part A of this title exceeds the amount appropriated to carry out such subpart in the preceding fiscal year.

"CHAPTER 4—MODEL PROGRAM COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIP AND COUNSELING GRANTS

"SEC. 408A. MODEL PROGRAM GRANTS.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—From the amounts appropriated under section 408C, the Secretary shall award grants to develop model programs—

"(1) to counsel students, at an early age, about college opportunities, precollege requirements, the college admissions procedure, financial aid opportunities, and student support services that are specially designed or customized for use in specific geographic, social, and cultural environments; or

"(2) which stimulate community partnerships with schools by providing tutoring, mentoring, work experiences, and other services which support making postsecondary education a realistic goal for all students.

"(b) PRIORITIES IN SELECTION.—The Secretary shall give priority to those model programs which are directed at areas which have a high proportion of minority, limited English proficiency, economically disadvantaged, disabled, nontraditional, or at-risk students and those model programs which serve these students from rural or urban environments.

"(c) PROPOSAL REQUIREMENTS.

"(1) TAILORING.—To receive a grant under subsection (a)(1), the proposal submitted to the Secretary shall demonstrate that the counseling on college opportunities, precollege requirements, the college admissions procedure, and financial aid opportunities (including early intervention counseling), is tailored to a specific geographic, social or cultural environment.

"(2) COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIPS.—To receive a grant under subsection (a)(2), the proposal submitted to the Secretary shall demonstrate the active involvement of a local educational agency and at least one of the following:

"(A) Local businesses.

"(B) Labor organizations.

"(C) Community groups.

"(3) GOALS AND OUTCOMES.—To receive a grant under this section, each proposal shall contain a statement of specific, measurable goals and methods for obtaining statistics on the number of participants who continue on to postsecondary education.

"SEC. 408B. DIFFUSION ACTIVITIES.

"(a) COLLECTION OF INFORMATION.—The Secretary shall collect information concerning—

"(1) programs supported under section 408A and programs of demonstrated effectiveness which counsel students about college opportunities, precollege requirements, the college admissions procedure, and financial aid opportunities;

"(2) early intervention programs of demonstrated effectiveness which set students on the path toward staying in school and pursuing a postsecondary education;

"(3) model programs which counsel students in specific environments, such as urban, rural, and suburban; and

"(4) model programs which develop school/community partnerships to provide mentoring, tutoring, work experiences and other services which support making postsecondary education a realistic goal for all students.

"(b) DISSEMINATION.—The Secretary shall ensure that the information collected under subsection (a) is disseminated.

"SEC. 408C. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $35,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this chapter.

"CHAPTER 5—PUBLIC INFORMATION

"SEC. 409A. DATABASE AND INFORMATION LINE.

"From the funds available under section 409C, the Secretary shall award a contract to establish and maintain—

"(1) a computerized database of all public and private financial assistance programs, to be accessible to schools and libraries through either modems or toll-free telephone lines; and

"(2) a toll-free information line, including access by telecommunications devices for the deaf ('TDD's'), to provide individualized financial assistance information to parents, students, and other individuals, including individuals with disabilities, and to refer students with disabilities and their families to the postsecondary clearinghouse that is authorized under section 633(c) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

"SEC. 409B. EARLY AWARENESS INFORMATION PROGRAM.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts with appropriate public agencies, nonprofit private organizations, and institutions of higher education to conduct an information program designed—

"(1) to broaden the early awareness of postsecondary educational opportunities by secondary school students and their parents; and

"(2) to encourage economically disadvantaged, minority, or at-risk individuals to seek higher education, and to seek higher education and financial assistance counseling at public schools and libraries.

"(b) CONTENTS OF MESSAGES.—Announcements and messages supported under this section—

"(1) may be specially designed for students of limited English proficiency,

"(2) shall publicize—

"(A) the availability of Federal student assistance under this Act;

"(B) the importance of postsecondary education in long-term career planning; and

"(C) the need and necessity to complete a secondary education program successfully in order to meet the requirements for college.

"(c) INFORMING CONGRESS.— The Secretary shall keep the appropriate committees of the Congress informed with respect to the efforts made pursuant to this section and shall recommend any additional legislative authority that will serve the purposes of this section.

"SEC. 409C. DATABASE AND INFORMATION LINE.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this chapter.

"CHAPTER 6—NATIONAL STUDENT SAVINGS DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM

"SEC. 410A. NATIONAL STUDENT SAVINGS DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.

"(a) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to—

"(1) create a demonstration program to test the feasibility of establishing a national student savings program to encourage families to save for their children's college education and thereby reduce the loan indebtedness of college students; and

"(2) help determine the most effective means of achieving the activities described in paragraph (1).

"(b) DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to award a demonstration grant to not more than 5 States to enable each such State to conduct a student savings program in accordance with this section.

"(2) AMOUNT OF GRANT.—The amount of each grant awarded pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be computed on the basis of—

"(A) a Federal match in an amount equal to the initial State deposit into each account established pursuant to subsection (c)(2)(B), except that such Federal match shall not exceed $50 per child; multiplied by

"(B) the number of children participating in the program assisted under this part.

"(3) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section the Secretary shall give priority to States proposing programs that establish accounts for a child prior to the age of compulsory school attendance in the State in which such child resides.

"(4) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.—In awarding grants under this section the Secretary shall give special consideration to States—

"(A) that permit employers to use pretax income in making contributions to a child's account; and

"(B) that provide assurances that interest earned in accounts shall be exempt from State taxes.

"(c) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each State desiring a grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) describe the student savings program to be established and the number of children to be served;

"(B) contain assurances that an account shall be established for each child participating in the program assisted under this section and set forth the initial amount to be deposited into each such account by the State;

"(C) contain assurances that deposits into such account shall be invested in a responsible manner that provides a reasonable rate of return;

"(D) contain assurances that funds in the account shall only be used to pay the cost of attendance (as such term is defined in section 472) at any eligible institution (as such term is defined in section 481);

"(E) describe the amount of the Federal contribution requested for starting each child's account, which shall not exceed $50 per child participating in the program;

"(F) describe the age at which children in the State may establish such accounts;

"(G) indicate whether the program will be open to all children, regardless of family income, or only to disadvantaged children;

"(H) describe how additional deposits into each account from the State or other resources will be earned by a child for performance of community service, academic performance, or other activities or achievements;

"(I) contain assurances that contributions in an account shall be refundable to the contributor without interest if the child is unable to attend college;

"(J) contain assurances that the State shall encourage individuals and organizations to make contributions to a child's account;

"(K) contain assurances that the State shall provide incentives to employers to make contributions to a child's account and participate in the program assisted under this section; and

"(L) contain assurances that if a child leaves the State in which such child has an account, then such child shall retain the right to make contributions to the account, except that the State shall not be required to make any additional deposits other than interest.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this section.

"CHAPTER 7—PREELIGIBILITY FORM

"SEC. 410B. INFORMATION ON ELIGIBILITY FOR ASSISTANCE.

To help ensure access to postsecondary education by providing early notice to students of their potential eligibility for financial aid, the Secretary, as part of the contracts developed pursuant to section 483, may—

"(1) develop and process a common preeligibility Federal financial aid form,

"(2) distribute and process such form on a year-round basis free of charge to students and parents, and

"(3) issue, on the basis of information reported by the student on such form, a preeligibility expected family contribution figure and estimate of the amount of Federal (and, if feasible, non-Federal) funds for which the student might qualify in later completing and submitting the application form called for under section 483.

The Secretary shall widely disseminate the preeligibility form through post offices and other appropriate Federal installations, schools, institutions of higher education, libraries, and community-based agencies, including projects assisted under subparts 2 and 5 of this part.

"CHAPTER 8—TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE FOR TEACHERS AND COUNSELORS

"SEC. 410C. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—From the amounts appropriated under subsection (f), the Secretary shall award grants to local educational agencies to use for the purpose of obtaining specialized training for guidance counselors, teachers, and principals to counsel students about college opportunities, precollege requirements, the college admissions procedure, and financial aid opportunities.

"(b) SELECTION OF GRANT RECIPIENTS.—

"(1) PRIORITY.—In making grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to those local educational agencies serving school districts (A) from which the proportion of students who continue on to higher education is significantly below the national average, and (B) in which the proportion of students who are educationally disadvantaged is significantly above the national average.

"(2) SELECTION PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall develop a formal procedure for the submission of proposals and publish in the Federal Register an announcement with respect to that procedure and the availability of funds.

"(c) LOCAL PLAN.—To receive a grant under this section, a local educational agency shall submit to the Secretary a plan that—

"(1) specifies the methods to be used for outreach, implementation, and follow-up with those students most in need and at-risk for dropping out or failing to pursue postsecondary education;

"(2) demonstrates the methods by which the agency will target funds to those schools within the district that have the lowest rate of students who continue on to higher education;

"(3) utilizes early intervention programs for counseling minority, economically disadvantaged, disabled, and at-risk students about postsecondary education;

"(4) includes a strategy for keeping the guidance counselors, teachers (including elementary, secondary, vocational, and special education teachers), and principals who have been trained up-to-date on financial aid information;

"(5) contains a statement of specific goals and methods for obtaining statistics on the number of participants who continue on to postsecondary education; and

"(6) contains a description of the costs of the training and other activities to be undertaken.

"(d) DURATION OF GRANTS.—Grants under this section shall be available for 2 years.

"(e) EVALUATION.—

"(1) CONDUCT OF EVALUATIONS.—The Secretary shall reserve not more than 2 percent of any amount appropriated under subsection (f) for the purpose of carrying out an independent evaluation of the effectiveness of the training programs assisted under this section in—

"(A) increasing the number of personnel in a school who regularly counsel students regarding college opportunities, precollege requirements, the college admission procedure, and financial aid opportunities; and

"(B) increasing the number of students who continue on to postsecondary education from a school which has had personnel trained using monies from this section.

"(2) REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a report which contains the findings of the evaluation required by paragraph (1).

"(f) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this section.".

(b) REFERENCE.—Reference in any provision of law (other than the Act) to subpart 2, 3, or 4 of part A of title IV of the Act shall, after the date of enactment of this Act, be deemed to refer to subpart 3, 4, or 2 of such part, respectively.

SEC. 403. FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY GRANTS.

(a) TITLE OF PROGRAM.—The heading of subpart 3 of part A of title IV of the Act (as redesignated in section 402(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"SUBPART 3—FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY GRANTS".

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 413A(b) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1076b(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) For the purpose of enabling the Secretary to make payments to institutions of higher education which have made agreements with the Secretary in accordance with section 413C(a), for use by such institutions for payments to undergraduate students of supplemental grants awarded to them under this subpart, there are authorized to be appropriated $675,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(2) Sums appropriated pursuant to this subsection for any fiscal year shall be available for payments to institutions until the end of the second fiscal year succeeding the fiscal year for which such sums were appropriated.".

(c) ELIGIBILITY FOR STUDY ABROAD.—Section 413B(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1070b–1(a)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking "From" and inserting "Except as provided in paragraph (3), from"; and

(B) in subparagraph (A), by inserting "or in a program of study abroad that is approved for credit by the institution at which the student is enrolled" after "course of study at the institution"; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) For students participating in study abroad programs, the institution shall consider all reasonable costs associated with such study abroad when determining student eligibility. The amount of grant to be awarded in such cases may exceed the maximum amount of $4,000 by as much as $400 if reasonable study abroad costs exceed the cost of attendance at the home institution.".

(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—Section 413C(a)(2) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2) agrees that the Federal share of awards under this subpart will not exceed 75 percent of such awards, except that the Federal share may be exceeded if the Secretary determines, pursuant to regulations establishing objective criteria for such determinations, that a larger Federal share is required to further the purpose of this subpart; and".

(e) USE OF FUNDS TO NONTRADITIONAL STUDENTS.—Section 413C(d) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1070b–2(d)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "who are independent students or" after "demonstrated by students"; and

(2) by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: ", except that if the total financial need of all such students attending the institution exceeds 5 percent of the need of all students attending such institution, then at least 5 percent of such allotment shall be made available to such students".

(f) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—Section 413C(e) of the Act is amended by striking ", and may transfer such funds in accordance with the provisions of section 488".

(g) ALLOCATION OF FUNDS.—Section 413D(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1070b–3(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Secretary may allocate an amount equal to not more than 10 percent of the amount by which the amount appropriated in any fiscal year to carry out this part exceeds $700,000,000 among eligible institutions described in subparagraph (B).

"(B) In order to receive an allocation pursuant to subparagraph (A) an institution shall be an eligible institution from which 50 percent or more of the Pell Grant recipients attending such eligible institution graduate from or transfer to a 4-year institution of higher education.".

(h) CONSEQUENCES OF FAILURE TO AWARD.—Section 413D(e) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1070b–3(e)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after the subsection heading; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) If under paragraph (1) of this subsection an institution returns more than 10 percent of its allocation, the institution's allocation for the next fiscal year shall be reduced by the amount returned. The Secretary may waive this paragraph for a specific institution if the Secretary finds that enforcing this paragraph would be contrary to the interest of the program.".

SEC. 404. STATE STUDENT INCENTIVE GRANTS.

(a) PURPOSES OF SUBPART.—Section 415A of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1070c) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) PURPOSE OF SUBPART.—It is the purpose of this subpart to make incentive grants available to States to assist States in providing grants to—

"(1) eligible students attending institutions of higher education or participating in programs of study abroad that are approved for credit by institutions of higher education at which such students are enrolled; and

"(A) is made without security and without endorsement;".

(b) INSURED LOAN DEFERMENTS.—Section 427(a)(2)(C) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(C) provides that periodic installments of principal need not be paid, but interest shall accrue and be paid, during any period—

"(i) during which the borrower—

"(I) is pursuing at least a half-time course of study as determined by an eligible institution; or

"(II) is pursuing a course of study pursuant to a graduate fellowship program approved by the Secretary, or pursuant to a rehabilitation training program for individuals with disabilities approved by the Secretary, except that no borrower shall be eligible for a deferment under this clause, or a loan made under this part (other than a loan made under 428B or 428C), while serving in a medical internship or residency program;

"(ii) not in excess of 3 years during which the borrower is seeking and unable to find full-time employment; or

"(iii) not in excess of 3 years for any reason which the lender determines, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary under section 435(o), has caused or will cause the borrower to have an economic hardship;

and provides that any such period shall not be included in determining the 10-year period described in subparagraph (B);".

(c) GRADUATED REPAYMENT.—Section 427 of the Act is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(2)—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (G);

(B) by redesignating subparagraph (H) as subparagraph (I); and

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (G) the following:

"(H) provides that, no more than 6 months prior to the date on which the borrower's first payment on a loan is due, the lender shall offer the borrower the option of repaying the loan in accordance with a graduated or income-sensitive repayment schedule established by the lender and in accordance with the regulations of the Secretary; and"; and

(2) in subsection (c), by striking "MINIMUM REPAYMENT RATE.—The total of the payments" and inserting "SPECIAL REPAYMENT RULES.—Except as provided in subsection (a)(2)(H), the total of the payments".

(d) STUDY ABROAD.—Section 427(a)(3) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(3) the funds borrowed by a student are disbursed to the institution by check or other means that is payable to and requires the endorsement or other certification by such student, except—

"(A) that nothing in this title shall be interpreted—

"(i) to allow the Secretary to require checks to be made copayable to the institution and the borrower; or

"(ii) to prohibit the disbursement of loan proceeds by means other than by check; and

"(B) in the case of any student who is studying outside the United States in a program of study abroad that is approved for credit by the home institution at which such student is enrolled, the funds shall, at the request of the borrower, be delivered directly to the student and the checks may be endorsed, and fund transfers authorized, pursuant to an authorized power-of-attorney; and".

(e) MINIMUM PAYMENT FOR MARRIED COUPLES; MINIMUM PAYMENT OF INTEREST.—Section 427(c) of the Act is further amended by striking ", except that in the case of a husband and wife" and all that follows through "whichever is less" and inserting "(but in no instance less than the amount of interest due and payable)".

SEC. 415. APPLICABLE INTEREST RATES.

(a) PLUS AND SLS LOAN INTEREST RATE.—Section 427A(c)(4) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1077a(c)(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A)—

"(i) for any loan made pursuant to section 428A for which the first disbursement is made on or after October 1, 1992—

"(I) subparagraph (B) shall be applied by substituting '3.1' for '3.25'; and

"(II) the interest rate shall not exceed 11 percent; and

"(ii) for any loan made pursuant to section 428B for which the first disbursement is made on or after October 1, 1992—

"(I) subparagraph (B) shall be applied by substituting '3.1' for '3.25'; and

"(II) the interest rate shall not exceed 10 percent.".

(b) EXCESS INTEREST PAYMENTS.—Section 427A(e) of the Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking "IN GENERAL" and inserting "EXCESS INTEREST ON 10 PERCENT LOANS";

(B) by striking "paragraph (3)" and inserting "paragraph (5)";

(2) in paragraph (2), by inserting "FOR 10 PERCENT LOANS" after "(2) AMOUNT OF ADJUSTMENT";

(3) by striking paragraph (5);

(4) by redesignating paragraphs (3) and (4) as paragraphs (5) and (6), respectively;

(5) by inserting the following new paragraphs after paragraph (2):

"(3) EXCESS INTEREST ON LOANS AFTER 1992 AMENDMENTS, TO BORROWERS WITH OUTSTANDING BALANCES.—If, with respect to a loan made on or after the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 to a borrower, who on the date of entering into the note or other written evidence of the loan, has an outstanding balance of principal or interest on any other loan made, insured, or guaranteed under this part, the sum of the average of the bond equivalent rates of 91-day Treasury bills auctioned for that quarter and 3.1 percent is less than the applicable interest rate, then an adjustment shall be made—

"(A) by calculating excess interest in the amount computed under paragraph (4) of this subsection; and

"(B)(i) during any period in which a student is eligible to have interest payments paid on his or her behalf by the Government pursuant to section 428(a), by crediting the excess interest to the Government; or

"(ii) during any other period, by crediting such excess interest to the reduction of principal to the extent provided in paragraph (5) of this subsection.

"(4) AMOUNT OF ADJUSTMENT.—The amount of any adjustment of interest on a loan to be made under this subsection for any quarter shall be equal to—

"(A) the applicable interest rate minus the sum of (i) the average of the bond equivalent rates of 91-day Treasury bills auctioned for such calendar quarter, and (ii) 3.1 percent; multiplied by

"(B) the outstanding principal balance of the loan (not including unearned interest added to principal) at the end of such calendar quarter; divided by

"(C) four."; and

(6) in paragraph (5), as redesignated—

(A) by striking "or by reducing the number of payments" and inserting "by reducing the number of payments"; and

(B) by striking the period at the end and inserting ", or by reducing the amount of the final payment of the loan. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to require the lender to make additional disclosures pursuant to section 433(b).".

(c) INTEREST RATE FOR NEW BORROWERS.—Section 427A of the Act is further amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (e), (f) and (g) as subsections (f), (g) and (h), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) INTEREST RATES FOR NEW BORROWERS AFTER OCTOBER 1, 1992.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding subsections (a), (b), and (d) of this section, with respect to any loan (other than a loan made pursuant to sections 428A, 428B and 428C) for which the first disbursement is made on or after October 1, 1992, to any borrower who, on the date of entering into the note or other written evidence of the loan, has no outstanding balance of principal or interest on any loan made, insured, or guaranteed under this part, the applicable rate of interest shall, during any 12-month period beginning on July 1 and ending on June 30, be determined on the preceding June 1 and be equal to—

"(A) the bond equivalent rate of 91-day Treasury bills auctioned at the final auction held prior to such June 1; plus except that such rate shall not exceed 9 percent.

"(B) 3.10 percent,

"(2) CONSULTATION.—The Secretary shall determine the applicable rate of interest under paragraph (1) after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and shall publish such rate in the Federal Register as soon as practicable after the date of determination.".

SEC. 416. AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 428.

(a) FEDERAL INTEREST SUBSIDIES.—

(1) REQUIREMENTS TO RECEIVE SUBSIDY.—Section 428(a)(2)(C) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1078(a)(2)(C)) is amended—

(A) by amending clause (i) to read as follows:

"(i) a student's estimated financial assistance means, for the period for which the loan is sought, the amount of assistance such student will receive under subpart 1 of part A (as determined in accordance with section 484(b)), subpart 3 of part A, and parts C and E of this title, and any veterans' education benefits paid because of enrollment in a postsecondary education institution, including veterans' education benefits (as defined in section 480(c)), plus other scholarship, grant, or loan assistance."; and

(B) by amending clause (ii) to read as follows:

"(ii) the determination of need and of the amount of a loan by an eligible institution under subparagraph (B) with respect to a student shall be calculated in accordance with part F.".

(2) LIMITATION ON INTEREST PRIOR TO FIRST DISBURSEMENT.—Section 428(a)(3)(A) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(v) A lender may not receive interest on a loan for any period that precedes the date that is—

"(I) in the case of a loan disbursed by check, 10 days before the first disbursement of the loan; or

"(II) in the case of a loan disbursed by electronic funds transfer, 3 days before the first disbursement of the loan.".

(3) LOANS THAT HAVE NOT BEEN CONSUMMATED.—Section 428(a) of the Act is amended by inserting after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph:

"(7) LOANS THAT HAVE NOT BEEN CONSUMMATED.—Lenders may not charge interest or receive interest subsidies or special allowance payments for loans for which the disbursement checks have not been cashed or for which electronic funds transfers have not been completed.".

(b) LOAN AMOUNTS.—

(1) ANNUAL LIMITS.—Section 428(b)(1)(A) of the Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "or in a program of study abroad approved for credit by the eligible home institution at which such student is enrolled" after "at an eligible institution"; and

(B) by striking clauses (i) through (iii) and inserting the following:

"(i) in the case of a student at an eligible institution who has not successfully completed the first year of a program of undergraduate education—

"(I) $2,625, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is at least one academic year in length (as determined under section 481);

"(II) $1,750, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than one academic year, but at least ⅔ of such an academic year; and

"(III) $875, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than ⅔, but at least ⅓, of such an academic year;

"(ii) in the case of a student who has successfully completed such first year but has not successfully completed the remainder of a program of undergraduate study—

"(I) $3,500, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is at least one academic year in length (as determined under section 481);

"(II) $2,325, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than one academic year, but at least ⅔ of such academic year; and

"(III) $1,175, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than ⅔, but at least ⅓, of such academic year;

"(iii) in the case of a student at an eligible institution who has successfully completed such first and second year but has not successfully completed the remainder of a program of undergraduate study—

"(I) $5,500, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is at least one academic year in length (as determined under section 481);

"(II) $3,675, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than one academic year, but at least ⅔ of such an academic year; and

"(III) $1,825, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than ⅔, but at least ⅓, of such an academic year; and

"(iv) in the case of a graduate or professional student (as defined in regulations of the Secretary) at an eligible institution, $8,500;".

(2) AGGREGATE LIMITS.—Section 428(b)(1)(B) of the Act is amended by striking clauses (i) and (ii) and inserting the following:

"(i) $23,000, in the case of any student who has not successfully completed a program of undergraduate education, excluding loans made under section 428A or 428B; and

"(ii) $65,500, in the case of any graduate or professional student (as defined by regulations of the Secretary), and (I) including any loans which are insured by the Secretary under this section, or by a guaranty agency, made to such student before the student became a graduate or professional student, but (II) excluding loans made under section 428A or 428B, except that the Secretary may increase the limit applicable to students who are pursuing programs which the Secretary determines are exceptionally expensive.".

(c) REPAYMENT PERIOD CALCULATIONS; INCOME SENSITIVE REPAYMENT.—

(1) AMENDMENT.—Subparagraphs (D) and (E) of section 428(b)(1) of the Act are amended to read as follows:

"(D) provides that (i) the student borrower shall be entitled to accelerate without penalty the whole or any part of an insured loan, (ii) the repayment period of any insured loan may not exceed 10 years, and (iii) the note, or other written evidence of any loan, may contain such reasonable provisions relating to repayment in the event of default by the borrower as may be authorized by regulations of the Secretary in effect at the time such note or written evidence was executed, and shall contain a notice that repayment may, following a default by the borrower, be subject to repayment in accordance with the regulations required by subsection (m) if the Secretary has published the finding required by paragraph (2) of such subsection;

"(E) subject to subparagraphs (D) and (L), and except as provided by subparagraph (M), provides that—

"(i) not more than 6 months prior to the date on which the borrower's first payment is due, the lender shall offer the borrower of a loan made, insured, or guaranteed under this section or section 428A, the option of repaying the loan in accordance with a graduated or income-sensitive repayment schedule established by the lender and in accordance with regulations of the Secretary; and

"(ii) repayment of loans shall be in installments over a period of not less than 5 years (unless the student, during the 6 months immediately preceding the start of the repayment period, specifically requests that repayment be made over a shorter period) nor more than 10 years commencing at the beginning of the repayment period determined under paragraph (7) of this subsection;".

(2) DEFINITION OF REPAYMENT PERIOD.—Section 428(b) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7) REPAYMENT PERIOD.—(A) In the case of a loan made under section 427 or 428, the repayment period shall begin on the day immediately following the expiration of the 6-month period after the student ceases to carry at least one-half the normal full-time academic workload as determined by the institution, unless the borrower requests and is granted a repayment schedule that provides for repayment to commence at an earlier point in time, and shall exclude any period of authorized deferment or forbearance.

"(B) In the case of a loan made under section 428A or 428H, the repayment period shall begin on the day the loan is disbursed, or, if the loan is disbursed in multiple installments, on the day of the last such disbursement, and shall exclude any period of authorized deferment or forbearance.

"(C) In the case of a loan made under section 428B or 428C, the repayment period shall begin on the day the loan is disbursed, and shall exclude any period of authorized deferment or forbearance.".

(d) MINIMUM PAYMENT FOR MARRIED COUPLES; MINIMUM PAYMENT OF INTEREST.—Section 428(b)(1)(L)(i) of the Act is amended by striking ", except that, in the case of a husband and wife" and all that follows through "whichever is less" and inserting "(but in no instance less than the amount of interest due and payable)".

(e) DEFERMENTS.—

(1) AMENDMENT.—Section 428(b)(1)(M) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(M) provides that periodic installments of principal need not be paid, but interest shall accrue and be paid by the Secretary, during any period—

"(i) during which the borrower—

"(I) is pursuing at least a half-time course of study as determined by an eligible institution; or

"(II) is pursuing a course of study pursuant to a graduate fellowship program approved by the Secretary, or pursuant to a rehabilitation training program for disabled individuals approved by the Secretary, except that no borrower shall be eligible for a deferment under this clause, or loan made under this part (other than a loan made under 428B or 428C), while serving in a medical internship or residency program;

"(ii) not in excess of 3 years during which the borrower is seeking and unable to find full-time employment; or

"(iii) not in excess of 3 years for any reason which the lender determines, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary under section 435(o), has caused or will cause the borrower to have an economic hardship;".

(2) DEFINITION OF ECONOMIC HARDSHIP.—Section 435 of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(o) ECONOMIC HARDSHIP.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this part and part E, a borrower shall be considered to have an economic hardship if—

"(A) such borrower is working full-time and is earning an amount which does not exceed the greater of—

"(i) the minimum wage rate described in section 6 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938; or

"(ii) an amount equal to 100 percent of the poverty line for a family of 2 as determined in accordance with section 673(2) of the Community Service Block Grant Act; or

"(B) such borrower meets such other criteria as are established by the Secretary by regulation in accordance with paragraph (2).

"(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—In establishing criteria for purposes of paragraph (1)(B), the Secretary shall consider the borrower's income and debt-to-income ratio as primary factors.".

(f) DISBURSEMENT.—Section 428(b)(1)(N) of the Act is amended by striking "except in the case of attendance at an institution outside the United States, the funds shall be delivered directly to the student;" and inserting "except in the case of students who are studying outside the United States in a program of study abroad that is approved for credit by the home institution at which the student is enrolled, the funds shall, at the request of the borrower, be delivered directly to the student and the checks may be endorsed, and fund transfers authorized, pursuant to an authorized power-of-attorney;".

(g) CONSEQUENCES OF LS&T ACTIONS.—Section 428(b)(1)(T) is amended to read as follows:

"(T) authorizes (i) the limitation of the total number of loans or volume of loans, made under this part to students attending a particular eligible institution during any academic year; and (ii) the limitation, suspension, or termination of the eligibility of an eligible institution if—

"(I) such institution is ineligible for the emergency action, limitation, suspension, or termination of eligible institutions under regulations issued by the Secretary or is ineligible pursuant to criteria, rules, or regulations issued under the student loan insurance program which are substantially the same as regulations with respect to emergency action, limitation, suspension, or termination of such eligibility issued by the Secretary;

"(II) there is a State constitutional prohibition affecting the eligibility of such an institution;

"(III) such institution fails to make timely refunds to students as required by regulations issued by the Secretary or has not satisfied within 30 days of issuance a final judgment obtained by a student seeking such a refund;

"(IV) such institution or an owner, director, or officer of such institution is found guilty in any criminal, civil, or administrative proceeding, or such institution or an owner, director, or officer of such institution is found liable in any civil or administrative proceeding, regarding the obtaining, maintenance, or disbursement of State or Federal grant, loan, or work assistance funds; or

"(V) such institution or an owner, director, or officer of such institution has unpaid financial liabilities involving the improper acquisition, expenditure, or refund of State or Federal financial assistance funds; except that, if a guaranty agency limits, suspends, or terminates the participation of an eligible institution, the Secretary shall apply that limitation, suspension, or termination to all locations of such institution, unless the Secretary finds, within 30 days of notification of the action by the guaranty agency, that the guaranty agency's action did not comply with the requirements of this section;".

(h) AUDITS OF LENDERS.—Section 428(b)(1)(U) of the Act is amended—

(1) in clause (i), by striking "and" at the end thereof;

(2) by inserting before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: ", and (iii) for (I) a compliance audit of each lender at least once a year and covering the period since the most recent audit, conducted by a qualified, independent organization or person in accordance with standards established by the Comptroller General for the audit of governmental organizations, programs, and functions, and as prescribed in regulations of the Secretary, the results of which shall be submitted to the Secretary, or (II) with regard to a lender that is audited under chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code, such audit shall be deemed to satisfy the requirements of subclause (I) for the period covered by such audit, except that the Secretary may waive the requirements of this clause (iii) if the lender submits to the Secretary the results of an audit conducted for other purposes that the Secretary determines provides the same information as the audits required by this clause;".

(i) FORBEARANCE.—Section 428(b)(1)(V) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (i);

(2) in clause (ii), by inserting "or (ii)" after "clause (i)" each place such term appears;

(3) by striking the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting a semicolon; and

(4) by redesignating clause (ii) as clause (iv); and

(5) by inserting after clause (i) the following new clauses:

"(ii) provides that, if the borrower's debt burden under this title equals or exceeds 20 percent of gross income and the borrower submits a written request, a lender shall grant the borrower forbearance of principal and interest (or principal only at the option of the borrower), and shall renew such forbearance at 12-month intervals for a period not to exceed 3 years, on such terms as are otherwise consistent with the regulations of the Secretary and set forth in writing by the parties to the loan;

"(iii) provides that the form of forbearance granted by the lender for purposes of this subparagraph shall be the temporary cessation of payments, unless the borrower selects forbearance in the form of an extension of time for making payments, or smaller payments than were previously scheduled; and".

(j) ADDITIONAL GUARANTY AGREEMENT REQUIREMENTS.—Section 428(b)(1) of the Act is amended by striking subparagraphs (W) and (X) and inserting the following:

"(W) provides authority for the guaranty agency to require a participation agreement between the guaranty agency and each eligible institution within the State in which it is designated, as a condition for guaranteeing loans made on behalf of students attending the institution;

"(X) provides assurances that the agency will implement all requirements of the Secretary for uniform claims and procedures pursuant to section 432(l); and

"(Y) provides information to the Secretary in accordance with section 428(c)(10) and maintains reserve funds determined by the Secretary to be sufficient in relation to such agency's guarantee obligations.".

(k) CONTENTS OF INSURANCE PROGRAM AGREEMENTS.—Section 428(b)(2) of the Act is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (C), by striking ", as the Secretary may reasonably require to carry out the Secretary's functions under this part," and inserting ", including financial information, as the Secretary may reasonably require to carry out the Secretary's functions under this part and protect the financial interest of the United States,";

(2) in subparagraph (D)—

(A) by striking "at least once every 2 years" in clause (i) and inserting "on at least an annual basis";

(B) by striking "and" at the end of clause (ii);

(3) in subparagraph (E)—

(A) by inserting "(i)" after the subparagraph designation;

(B) by striking the period at the end thereof and inserting a semicolon and "and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(ii) provide that the lender (or the holder of the loan) shall, not later than 120 days after the borrower has left the eligible institution, notify the borrower of the date on which the repayment period begins; and"; and

(4) inserting at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(F) provide that, if the sale, other transfer, or assignment of a loan made under this part to another holder will result in a change in the identity of the party to whom the borrower must send subsequent payments or direct any communications concerning the loans, then—

"(i) the transferor and the transferee will be required, not later than 45 days from the date the transferee acquires a legally enforceable right to receive payment from the borrower on such loan, each to provide a separate notice to the borrower of—

"(I) the sale or other transfer;

"(II) the identity of the transferee;

"(III) the name and address of the party to whom subsequent payments or communications must be sent; and

"(IV) the telephone numbers of both the transferor and the transferee; and

"(ii) the transferor will be required to notify the guaranty agency, and, upon the request of an institution of higher education, the guaranty agency shall notify the last such institution the student attended prior to the beginning of the repayment period of any loan made under this part, of—

"(I) any sale or other transfer of the loan to another holder; and

"(II) the address and telephone number by which contact may be made with such other holder concerning repayment of the loan, except that this subparagraph (F) shall only apply if the borrower is in the grace period described in section 427(a)(2)(B) or 428(b)(7) or is in repayment status.".

(l) GUARANTY AGENCY INCENTIVE PAYMENTS.—Section 428(b)(3) of the Act is amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraphs (B) and (C) as subparagraphs (C) and (D), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

"(B) offer, directly or indirectly, any premium, incentive payment, or other inducement to any lender, or any agent, employee, or independent contractor of any lender or guaranty agency, in order to administer or market loans made under this part (other than a loan made under section 428H or a loan made as part of a guaranty agency's lender-of-last-resort program) for the purpose of securing the designation of that guaranty agency as the insurer of such loans;".

(m) ELIMINATION OF TEACHER DEFERMENT.—Section 428(b) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (4); and

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (5) and (6) as paragraphs (4) and (5), respectively.

(n) PROCEDURES FOR DEFERMENTS.—Section 428(b)(4) of the Act (as redesignated in subsection (m)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Requests for deferment of repayment of loans under this part by students engaged in graduate or postgraduate fellowship-supported study (such as pursuant to a Fulbright grant) outside the United States shall be approved until completion of the period of the fellowship.".

(o) INFORMATION FROM STATE LICENSING BOARDS.—Section 428(b) of the Act is further amended by inserting after paragraph (5) (as redesignated in subsection (m)) the following new paragraph:

"(6) STATE GUARANTY AGENCY INFORMATION REQUEST OF STATE LICENSING BOARDS.—Each guaranty agency is authorized to enter into agreements with each appropriate State licensing board under which the State licensing board, upon request, will furnish the guaranty agency with the address of a student borrower in any case in which the location of the student borrower is unknown or unavailable to the guaranty agency.".

(p) GUARANTY AGENCY AGREEMENTS.—

(1) AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO AGREEMENTS.—Section 428(c)(1)(A) of the Act is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting a comma and "or later than 45 days after the guaranty agency discharges its insurance obligation on the loan.".

(2) ADDITIONAL REVIEW OF EXCEPTIONAL PERFORMANCE PROHIBITED.—Section 428(c)(1) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) Reimbursements of losses made by the Secretary on loans submitted for claim by an eligible lender, servicer, or guaranty agency designated for exceptional performance under section 428I shall not be subject to additional review by the Secretary or repurchase by the guaranty agency for any reason other than a determination by the Secretary that the eligible lender, servicer, or guaranty agency engaged in fraud or other purposeful misconduct in obtaining designation for exceptional performance.".

(3) CONTENTS OF GUARANTY AGREEMENTS.—Section 428(c)(2) of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (F);

(B) by redesignating subparagraph (G) as subparagraph (I); and

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (F) the following new subparagraphs:

"(G) shall prohibit the Secretary from making any reimbursement under this subsection to a guaranty agency when a default claim is based on an inability to locate the borrower, unless the guaranty agency, at the time of filing for reimbursement, demonstrates to the Secretary that diligent attempts have been made to locate the borrower through the use of reasonable skiptracing techniques in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary; and

"(H) set forth assurances that—

"(i) upon the request of an eligible institution, the guaranty agency shall, subject to clauses (ii) and (iii), furnish to the institution information with respect to students (including the names and addresses of such students) who received loans made, insured, or guaranteed under this part for attendance at the eligible institution and for whom preclaims assistance activities have been requested under subsection (l);

"(ii) the guaranty agency may require the payment by the institution of a reasonable fee (as determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary) for such information; and

"(iii) the guaranty agency will require the institution to use such information only to assist the institution in reminding students of their obligation to repay student loans and shall prohibit the institution from disseminating the information for any other purpose.".

(4) FORBEARANCE.—Section 428(c)(3) of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (A);

(B) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting "; and";

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) shall contain provisions that specify that the form of forbearance granted by the lender for purposes of this paragraph shall be the temporary cessation of payments, unless the borrower selects forbearance in the form of an extension of time for making payments, or smaller payments than were previously scheduled."; and

(D) by striking the last sentence and inserting the following:

"Guaranty agencies shall not be precluded from permitting the parties to such a loan from entering into a forbearance agreement solely because the loan is in default. The Secretary shall permit lenders to exercise administrative forbearances that do not require the agreement of the borrower, under conditions authorized by the Secretary. Such forbearances shall include (i) forbearances for borrowers who are delinquent at the time of the granting of an authorized period of deferment under section 428(b)(1)(M) or 427(a)(2)(C), and (ii) if the borrower is less than 60 days delinquent on such loans at the time of sale or transfer, forbearances for borrowers on loans which are sold or transferred.".

(5) NEW PROGRAMS' INSURANCE PERCENTAGE.—Section 428(c)(7) of the Act is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A)—

(i) in the matter preceding clause (i), by striking "(1)(B)" and inserting "(1)(C)"; and

(ii) in clause (i), by inserting "and ends before October 1, 1991" before the semicolon;

(B) in subparagraph (B), by inserting "or (B)" after "(A)";

(C) by redesignating subparagraph (B) (as amended) as subparagraph (C); and

(D) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

"(B) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1)(C), the Secretary may pay a guaranty agency 100 percent of the amount expended by such agency in discharge of such agency's insurance obligation for any fiscal year which—

"(i) begins on or after October 1, 1991; and

"(ii) is the fiscal year in which such guaranty agency begins to actively carry on a student loan insurance program which is subject to a guaranty agreement under subsection (b) or is one of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

(6) CONSIDERATIONS IN REQUIRING ASSIGNMENT.—Section 428(c)(8) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new sentences: "Prior to making such determination for any guaranty agency, the Secretary shall, in consultation with the guaranty agency, develop criteria to determine whether such agency has made adequate collections efforts. In determining whether a guaranty agency's collection efforts have met such criteria, the Secretary shall consider the agency's record of success in collecting on defaulted loans, the age of the loans, and the amount of recent payments received on the loans.".

(7) GUARANTY AGENCY RESERVE LEVEL.—Section 428(c) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(10) GUARANTY AGENCY RESERVE LEVEL.—(A) Each guaranty agency which has entered into an agreement with the Secretary pursuant to this subsection shall maintain a current minimum reserve level of at least .5 percent of the total attributable amount of all outstanding loans guaranteed by such agency for the fiscal year of the agency that begins in 1993. For purposes of this paragraph, such total attributable amount does not include amounts of outstanding loans transferred to the guaranty agency from another guaranty agency pursuant to a plan of the Secretary in response to the insolvency of the latter such guaranty agency. The minimum reserve level shall increase to—

"(i) .7 percent of such total attributable amount for the fiscal year of the agency that begins in 1994;

"(ii) .9 percent of such total attributable amount for the fiscal year of the agency that begins in 1995; and

"(iii) 1.1 percent of such total attributable amount for each fiscal year of the agency that begins on or after January 1, 1996.

"(B) The Secretary shall collect, on an annual basis, information from each guaranty agency having an agreement under this subsection to enable the Secretary to evaluate the financial solvency of each such agency. The information collected shall include the level of such agency's current reserves, cash disbursements and accounts receivable.

"(C) If (i) any guaranty agency falls below the required minimum reserve level in any 2 consecutive years, (ii) any guaranty agency's Federal reimbursement payments are reduced to 80 percent pursuant to section 428(c)(1)(B)(ii), or (iii) the Secretary determines that the administrative or financial condition of a guaranty agency jeopardizes such agency's continued ability to perform its responsibilities under its guaranty agreement, then the Secretary shall require the guaranty agency to submit and implement a management plan acceptable to the Secretary within 30 working days of any such event.

"(D) Each management plan described in subparagraph (C) shall include the means by which the guaranty agency will improve its financial and administrative condition to the required level within 18 months.

"(E) The Secretary may terminate a guaranty agency's agreement in accordance with subparagraph (F) if—

"(i) a guaranty agency required to submit a management plan under this paragraph fails to submit a plan that is acceptable to the Secretary;

"(ii) the Secretary determines that a guaranty agency has failed to improve substantially its administrative and financial condition; or

"(iii) the Secretary determines that the guaranty agency is in danger of financial collapse.

"(F) Except as provided in subparagraph (G), if a guaranty agency's agreement under this subsection is terminated pursuant to subparagraph (E), then the Secretary shall assume responsibility for all functions of the guaranty agency under the loan insurance program of such agency. In performing such functions the Secretary is authorized to—

"(i) permit the transfer of guarantees to another guaranty agency;

"(ii) revoke the reinsurance agreement of the guaranty agency at a specified date, so as to require the merger, consolidation, or termination of the guaranty agency;

"(iii) transfer guarantees to the Department of Education for the purpose of payment of such claims and process such claims using the claims standards of the guaranty agency, if such standards are determined by the Secretary to be in compliance with this Act;

"(iv) design and implement a plan to restore the guaranty agency's viability;

"(v) provide the guaranty agency with additional advance funds in accordance with section 422(c)(7) in order to meet immediate cash needs of the guaranty agency and ensure the uninterrupted payment of claims, with such restrictions on the use of such funds, as determined appropriate by the Secretary; or

"(vi) take any other action the Secretary determines necessary to ensure the continued availability of loans made under this part to residents of the State or States in which the guaranty agency did business, the full honoring of all guarantees issued by the guaranty agency prior to the Secretary's assumption of the functions of such agency, and the proper servicing of loans guaranteed by the guaranty agency prior to the Secretary's assumption of the functions of such agency, and to avoid disruption of the student loan program.

"(G) The Secretary may not take any action under subparagraph (E) or (F) against any guaranty agency that is backed by the full faith and credit of the State where such guaranty agency is the primary guarantor.

"(H) The Secretary shall not take any action under subparagraph (E) or (F) without giving the guaranty agency notice and the opportunity for a hearing.

"(I) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the information transmitted to the Secretary pursuant to this paragraph shall be confidential and exempt from disclosure under section 552 of title 5, United State Code, relating to freedom of information, or any other Federal law.

"(J) The Secretary, within 3 months after the end of each fiscal year, shall submit to the House Committee on Education and Labor and the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources a report specifying the Secretary's assessment of the fiscal soundness of the guaranty agency system, together with recommendations for legislative changes, if necessary, for the maintenance of a strong guaranty agency system.".

(8) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 422(c) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1072(c))is amended—

(A) in paragraph (5), by striking "Advances pursuant to this subsection" in paragraph (5) and inserting "Except as provided in paragraph (7), advances pursuant to this subsection"; and

(B) by inserting, after paragraph (6), the following new paragraph:

"(7) EMERGENCY ADVANCES.—The Secretary is authorized to make advances, on terms and conditions satisfactory to the Secretary, to a guaranty agency in accordance with section 428(c)(10)(F)(v) in order to assist the agency in meeting its immediate cash needs and ensure the uninterrupted payment of default claims by lenders.".

(q) ADMINISTRATIVE COST ALLOWANCES.—Section 428(f)(1) of the Act is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)(i), by striking "commercial lender" and inserting "eligible lender"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) No payment may be made under this paragraph for loans for which the disbursement checks have not been cashed or for which electronic funds transfers have not been completed.".

(r) LENDERS-OF-LAST-RESORT.—Subsection (j) of section 428 of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking "(j) LENDERS-OF-LAST-RESORT.—" and inserting the following:

"(j) LENDERS-OF-LAST-RESORT.—

"(1) GENERAL REQUIREMENT.—";

(2) by indenting the margin of the text of such subsection by 2 em spaces; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) RULES AND OPERATING PROCEDURES.—The guaranty agency shall develop rules and operating procedures for the lender of last resort program designed to ensure that—

"(A) the program establishes operating hours and methods of application designed to facilitate application by students;

"(B) information about the availability of loans under the program is made available to institutions of higher education in the State;

"(C) appropriate steps are taken to ensure that borrowers receiving loans under the program are appropriately counseled on their loan obligation; and

"(D) the guaranty agency notifies the Secretary when the guaranty agency believes or has reason to believe that the Secretary may need to exercise the Secretary's authority under section 439(q).

"(3) LIMITATION ON LENDER-OF-LAST-RESORT PROGRAM.—(A) Subject to the provisions of subparagraphs (B) and (C), a guaranty agency or eligible lender is not required to make loans described in this section for attendance at an institution which—

"(i) has a cohort default rate, as defined in section 435(m), which exceeds 25 percent for the most recent year for which a rate has been calculated by the Secretary;

"(ii) has not been eligible for, and has not participated in, the loan program under this part during the most recent 18 consecutive months; or

"(iii) is currently subject to an emergency action or limitation, suspension, or termination proceeding of any guaranty agency or the Secretary.

"(B) Until July 1, 1994, this paragraph shall not apply to any institution that is—

"(i) a part B institution within the meaning of section 322(2) of this Act;

"(ii) a tribally controlled community college within the meaning of section 2(a)(4) of the Tribally Controlled Community College Assistance Act of 1978; or

"(iii) a Navajo Community College under the Navajo Community College Act.

"(C) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (A), the Secretary may require a guaranty agency or other eligible lender to make loans described in this section for attendance at an institution if there are, in the judgment of the Secretary, exceptional mitigating circumstances that would make the application of this paragraph inequitable.".

(s) INFORMATION ON DEFAULTS.—Section 428(k) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) BORROWER LOCATION INFORMATION.—Any information provided by the institution relating to borrower location shall be used by the guaranty agency in conducting required skip-tracing activities.".

(t) INCOME CONTINGENT REPAYMENT.—Section 428 of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(m) INCOME CONTINGENT REPAYMENT.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may establish by regulation terms and conditions requiring the income contingent repayment of loans that are required to be repaid under this subsection. Such regulations shall specify the schedules under which the borrower's income will be assessed for repayment of loans, shall permit the discharge of remaining obligation on the loan not later than 25 years after the commencement of income contingent repayment, and may provide for the potential collection of amounts in excess of the principal and interest owed on the original loan or loans.

"(2) COLLECTION MECHANISM.—The Secretary shall, to the extent funds are available therefor, enter into one or more contracts or other agreements with private firms or other agencies of the Government as necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection. The regulations required by paragraph (1) shall not be effective unless the Secretary publishes a finding that—

"(A) the Secretary has, pursuant to this paragraph, established a collection mechanism that will provide a high degree of certainty that collections will be made in accordance with the repayment option established under paragraph (1); and

"(B) the use of such repayment option and collection mechanism will result in an increase in the net amount the Government will collect.

"(3) LOANS FOR WHICH INCOME CONTINGENT REPAYMENT IS REQUIRED.—A loan made under this part (other than under section 428B) is required to be repaid under this section if—

"(A) the note or other evidence of the loan contains a notice that it is subject to repayment under this subsection;

"(B) the note or other evidence of the loan has been assigned to the Secretary for collection pursuant to subsection (c)(8); and

"(C) the Secretary has published the finding required by paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(4) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection and to protect the Federal fiscal interest.".

SEC. 417. SUPPLEMENTAL LOAN PROGRAM.

(a) NAME OF THE PROGRAM.—Section 428A of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1078–1) is amended by striking the heading of such section and inserting the following:

"FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL LOANS FOR STUDENTS".

(b) LOAN LIMITS.—Section 428A(b) of the Act is amended by striking paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting the following:

"(1) ANNUAL LIMIT.—Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), the maximum amount a student may borrow in any academic year or its equivalent or in any period of 7 consecutive months, whichever is longer, is:

"(A) In the case of a student at an eligible institution who has not successfully completed the first and second year of a program of undergraduate education—

"(i) $4,000, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is at least one academic year in length (as determined under section 481);

"(ii) $2,500, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than one academic year, but at least ⅔ of such an academic year; and

"(iii) $1,500, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than ⅔, but at least ⅓, of such an academic year.

"(B) In the case of a student at an eligible institution who has successfully completed such first and second year but has not successfully completed the remainder of a program of undergraduate study—

"(i) $5,000, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is at least one academic year in length (as determined under section 481);

"(ii) $3,325, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than one academic year, but at least ⅔ of such an academic year; and

"(iii) $1,675, if such student is enrolled in a program whose length is less than ⅔, but at least ⅓, of such an academic year.

"(C) In the case of a graduate or professional student (as defined in regulations of the Secretary) at an eligible institution, $10,000.

"(2) AGGREGATE LIMIT.—The aggregate insured principal amount of insured loans made to any student under this section, minus any interest capitalized under subsection (c), shall not exceed—

"(A) $23,000, in the case of any student who has not successfully completed a program of undergraduate education; and

"(B) $73,000, in the case of any graduate or professional student, as such terms are defined by regulations issued by the Secretary, including any loans which are insured by the Secretary under this section, or by a guaranty agency, made to such student before the student became a graduate or professional student.".

(c) COORDINATION OF STAFFORD AND SLS REPAYMENT.—Section 428A(c)(1) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new sentences: "In the case of a borrower under this section who is also a borrower under a program of student loan insurance covered by an agreement under sections 427 or 428(b), the lender shall notify the borrower of the option to defer the commencement of the repayment for six months after the student ceases to carry at an eligible institution at least one-half the normal full-time academic workload, as determined by the institution, except that interest shall begin to accrue, and shall be paid in accordance with paragraph (2), notwithstanding such delay in the commencement of repayment. The lender shall also notify the borrower of the borrower's option to commence repayment earlier than the beginning of such repayment period and the difference in total cost to the borrower.".

(d) CAPITALIZATION OF INTEREST.—Section 428A(c)(2) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2) CAPITALIZATION OF INTEREST.—(A) Interest on loans made under this section—

"(i) which are disbursed in installments,

"(ii) for which payments of principal are deferred under sections 427(a)(2)(C)(i) and 428(b)(1)(M)(i), or

"(iii) for which the commencement of the repayment period is delayed in accordance with paragraph (1) to coincide with the commencement of the repayment period of a loan made under section 427 or 428, shall, if agreed upon by the borrower and the lender—

"(I) be paid monthly or quarterly, or

"(II) be added to the principal amount of the loan not more frequently than quarterly by the lender.

"(B) Such capitalization of interest shall not be deemed to exceed the annual insurable limit on account of the student.".

(e) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 428A(c) of the Act is further amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) REPAYMENT PERIOD.—For purposes of calculating the 10-year repayment period under section 428(b)(1)(D), such period shall commence at the time the first payment of principal is due from the borrower.".

SEC. 418. PLUS LOANS.

(a) NAME OF THE PROGRAM.—Section 428B of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1078–2) is amended by striking the heading of such section and inserting the following:

"FEDERAL PLUS LOANS".

(b) CHECKS COPAYABLE.—Section 428B of the Act is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking "subsections (c) and (d)" and inserting "subsections (c), (d), and (e)"; and

(B) by inserting after "Parents of a dependent student" the following: ", who do not have an adverse credit history as determined pursuant to regulations of the Secretary,"; and

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) by striking the subsection designation and heading and paragraphs (1) and (2); and

(B) by redesignating paragraph (3) as subsection (b);

(3) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (d) and (e), respectively; and

(4) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) PLUS LOAN DISBURSEMENT.—All loans made under this section shall be disbursed by—

"(1) an electronic transfer of funds from the lender to the eligible institution; or

"(2) a check copayable to the eligible institution and the parent borrower.".

(c) LIMITATION OF DEFERRAL.—Section 428B(d)(1) of the Act (as redesignated in paragraph (3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) COMMENCEMENT OF REPAYMENT.—Repayment of principal on loans made under this section shall commence not later than 60 days after the date such loan is disbursed by the lender, subject to deferral during any period during which the parent meets the conditions required for a deferral under section 427(a)(2)(C) or 428(b)(1)(M).".

(d) CAPITALIZATION OF INTEREST.—Section 428B(d)(2) of the Act (as redesignated in paragraph (3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) CAPITALIZATION OF INTEREST.—Interest on loans made under this section for which payments of principal are deferred pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection shall, if agreed upon by the borrower and the lender (A) be paid monthly or quarterly, or (B) be added to the principal amount of the loan not more frequently than quarterly by the lender. Such capitalization of interest shall not be deemed to exceed the annual insurable limit on account of the borrower.".

SEC. 419. CONSOLIDATION LOANS.

(a) NAME OF THE PROGRAM.—Section 428C of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1078–3) is amended by striking the heading of such section and inserting the following:

"FEDERAL CONSOLIDATION LOANS".

(b) USE OF CONSOLIDATION TO AVOID DEFAULT.—

(1) ELIGIBLE BORROWER.—(A) Section 428C(a)(3)(A)(i) is amended by striking "$5,000" and inserting "$7,500".

(B) Section 428C(a)(3)(A)(ii) is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) is in repayment status, or in a grace period preceding repayment, or is a delinquent or defaulted borrower who will reenter repayment through loan consolidation.".

(2) ELIGIBLE LOANS.—Section 428C(a)(4)(A) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(A) made, insured, or guaranteed under this part, including loans on which the borrower has defaulted (but has made arrangements to repay the obligation on the defaulted loans satisfactory to the Secretary or guaranty agency, whichever insured the loans), except for loans made to parent borrowers under section 428B as in effect prior to the enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1986;".

(c) EXTENSION OF CONSOLIDATION ELIGIBILITY PERIOD.—Section 428C(a)(3)(B) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(B)(i) An individual's status as an eligible borrower under this section terminates upon receipt of a consolidation loan under this section, except—

"(I) with respect to eligible student loans received after the date of receipt of the consolidation loan; and

"(II) that loans received prior to the date of the consolidation loan may be added to the consolidation loan during the 180-day period following the making of the consolidation loan.

"(ii) Loans made under this section shall, to the extent used to discharge loans made under this title, be counted against applicable limitations on aggregate indebtedness contained in sections 425(a)(2), 428(b)(1)(B), 428A(b)(2), and 464(a)(2). Nothing in this section shall be interpreted to authorize the Secretary to require lenders, holders, or guarantors of consolidated loans to receive, to maintain, or to make reports with respect to preexisting records relating to any eligible student loan (as defined under paragraph (4)) discharged by a borrower in receiving a consolidation loan.".

(d) CONSOLIDATION OF LOANS OF MARRIED BORROWERS.—Section 428C(a)(3) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C)(i) A married couple, each of whom has eligible student loans, may be treated as if such couple were an individual borrowing under subparagraphs (A) and (B) if such couple agrees to be held jointly and severally liable for the repayment of a consolidation loan, without regard to the amounts of the respective loan obligations that are to be consolidated, and without regard to any subsequent change that may occur in such couple's marital status.

"(ii) Only one spouse in a married couple applying for a consolidation loan under this subparagraph need meet any of the requirements of subsection (b) of this section, except that each spouse shall—

"(I) individually make the initial certification that no other application is pending in accordance with subsection (b)(1)(A); and

"(II) agree to notify the holder concerning any change of address in accordance with subsection (b)(4).".

(e) INTEREST DURING DEFERRAL.—Section 428C(b)(4)(C) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(C) provides that periodic installments of principal need not be paid, but interest shall accrue and be paid by the Secretary, during any period for which the borrower would be eligible for a deferral under section 428(b)(1)(M), and that any such period shall not be included in determining the repayment period pursuant to subsection (c)(2) of this section;".

(f) REPAYMENT SCHEDULES.—Section 428C(c)(2) of the Act is amended by—

(1) in the first sentence, by striking "may" and inserting "shall"; and

(2) by striking the second sentence and inserting the following: "Such repayment terms shall require that if the sum of the consolidation loan and the amount outstanding on other student loans to the individual—

"(i) is equal to or greater than $7,500 but less than $10,000, then such consolidation loan shall be repaid in not more than 12 years;

"(ii) is equal to or greater than $10,000 but less than $20,000, then such consolidation loan shall be repaid in not more than 15 years;

"(iii) is equal to or greater than $20,000 but less than $40,000, then such consolidation loan shall be repaid in not more than 20 years;

"(iv) is equal to or greater than $40,000 but less than $60,000, then such consolidation loan shall be repaid in not more than 25 years; or

"(v) is equal to or greater than $60,000, then such consolidation loan shall be repaid in not more than 30 years.".

(g) EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY.—Section 428C(d) of the Act is amended by striking "September 30, 1992" and inserting "September 30, 1998".

SEC. 420. DEFAULT REDUCTION PROGRAMS.

Section 428F of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1078–6) is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (a);

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (1)(A)—

(i) by striking "Upon" and inserting "Each guaranty agency shall enter into an agreement with the Secretary which shall provide that upon"; and

(ii) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Neither the guaranty agency nor the Secretary shall demand from a borrower as monthly payment amounts referred to in this paragraph more than is reasonable and affordable based upon the borrower's total financial circumstances."; and

(B) in paragraph (3), by inserting "or grants" after "loans";

(3) by redesignating subsection (b) (as amended in paragraph (2)) as subsection (a); and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(b) SPECIAL RULE.—Each guaranty agency shall establish a program which allows a borrower with a defaulted loan or loans to renew eligibility for all title IV student financial assistance (regardless of whether the defaulted loan has been sold to an eligible lender) upon the borrower's payment of 6 consecutive monthly payments. The guaranty agency shall not demand from a borrower as a monthly payment amount under this subsection more than is reasonable and affordable based upon the borrower's total financial circumstances.".

SEC. 421. DISBURSEMENT RULES.

(a) MONTHLY OR WEEKLY DISBURSEMENT.—Section 428G(c) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1078–7) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) notwithstanding subsection (a)(2), may, with the permission of the borrower, be disbursed on a weekly or monthly basis, provided that the proceeds of the loan are disbursed in substantially equal weekly or monthly installments, as the case may be, over the period of enrollment for which the loan is made.".

(b) OVERAWARD ADJUSTMENTS.—Section 428G(d)(2) of the Act is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence the following: ", except that overawards permitted pursuant to section 443(b)(4) of the Act shall not be construed to be overawards for purposes of this paragraph".

(c) SALES PRIOR TO DISBURSEMENT PROHIBITED.—Section 428G of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) SALES PRIOR TO DISBURSEMENT PROHIBITED.—An eligible lender shall not sell or transfer a promissory note for any loan made, insured, or guaranteed under this part until the final disbursement of such loan has been made, except that the prohibition of this subsection shall not apply if—

"(1) the sale of the loan does not result in a change in the identity of the party to whom payments will be made for the loan; and

"(2) the first disbursement of such loan has been made.".

SEC. 422. UNSUBSIDIZED LOANS; PERFORMANCE AGREEMENTS; LOAN FORGIVENESS.

Part B of title IV of the Act is amended by inserting after section 428G the following new sections:

"UNSUBSIDIZED STAFFORD LOANS FOR MIDDLE-INCOME BORROWERS

"SEC. 428H. (a) IN GENERAL.—It is the purpose of this section to authorize insured loans under this part for borrowers who do not qualify for Federal interest subsidy payments under section 428 of this Act. Except as provided in this section, all terms and conditions for Federal Stafford loans established under section 428 shall apply to loans made pursuant to this section.

"(b) ELIGIBLE BORROWERS.—Any student meeting the requirements for student eligibility under section 484 shall be entitled to borrow an unsubsidized Stafford loan. Such student shall provide to the lender a statement from the eligible institution at which the student has been accepted for enrollment, or at which the student is in attendance, which—

"(1) sets forth such student's estimated cost of attendance (as determined under section 472);

"(2) sets forth such student's estimated financial assistance, including a loan which qualifies for subsidy payments under section 428; and

"(3) certifies the eligibility of the student to receive a loan under this section and the amount of the loan for which such student is eligible, in accordance with subsection (c).

"(c) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT OF LOAN.—The determination of the amount of a loan by an eligible institution under subsection (b) shall be calculated by subtracting from the estimated cost of attendance at the eligible institution any estimated financial assistance reasonably available to such student. An eligible institution may not, in carrying out the provisions of subsection (b) of this section, provide a statement which certifies the eligibility of any student to receive any loan under this section in excess of the amount calculated under the preceding sentence.

"(d) LOAN LIMITS.—The annual and aggregate limits for loans under this section shall be the same as those established under section 428(b)(1), less any amount received by such student pursuant to the subsidized loan program established under section 428.

"(e) PAYMENT OF PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST.—

"(1) COMMENCEMENT OF REPAYMENT.—Repayment of principal on loans made under this section shall commence 6 months after the month in which the student ceases to carry at least one-half the normal full-time workload as determined by the institution.

"(2) CAPITALIZATION OF INTEREST.—Interest on loans made under this section for which payments of principal are not required during the in-school and grace periods or for which payments are deferred under sections 427(a)(2)(C) and 428(b)(1)(M) shall, if agreed upon by the borrower and the lender (A) be paid monthly or quarterly, or (B) be added to the principal amount of the loan not more frequently than quarterly by the lender. Such capitalization of interest shall not be deemed to exceed the annual insurable limit on account of the student.

"(3) SUBSIDIES PROHIBITED.—No payments to reduce interest costs shall be paid pursuant to section 428(a) of this part on loans made pursuant to this section.

"(4) APPLICABLE RATES OF INTEREST.—Interest on loans made pursuant to this section shall be at the applicable rate of interest provided in section 427A(e).

"(f) INSURANCE PREMIUM.—

"(1) AMOUNT OF ORIGINATION FEE/INSURANCE PREMIUM.—The lender shall charge the borrower a combined origination fee and insurance premium in the amount of 6.5 percent of the principal amount of the loan, to be deducted proportionately from each installment payment of the proceeds of the loan prior to payment to the borrower. A guaranty agency may not charge an insurance premium on any loan made under this section.

"(2) RELATION TO APPLICABLE INTEREST.—Such combined fee and premium shall not be taken into account for purposes of determining compliance with section 427A.

"(3) DISCLOSURE REQUIRED.—The lender shall disclose to the borrower the amount and method of calculating the combined origination fee and insurance premium.

"(4) USE OF INSURANCE PREMIUM TO OFFSET DEFAULT COSTS.—Each lender making loans under this section shall transmit all combined origination fee and insurance premiums authorized to be collected from borrowers to the Secretary, who shall use such fees and premiums to pay the Federal costs of default claims paid for loans under this section and to reduce the cost of special allowances paid thereon, if any, under section 438(b).

"(5) Review of Insurance Premium.—In fiscal year 1995, the Secretary is directed to analyze the risk rates of borrowers who have participated in this program in the 2 previous fiscal years. If the Secretary finds, that as a result of this review, the projected defaults and special allowance costs of the unsubsidized program do not exceed the 6.5 percent insurance premium, the Secretary is directed to lower the insurance premium accordingly.

"(g) Single Application Form and Loan Repayment Schedule.—A guaranty agency shall use a single application form and a single repayment schedule for subsidized Federal Stafford loans made pursuant to section 428 and for unsubsidized Federal Stafford loans made pursuant to this section.

"SPECIAL INSURANCE AND REINSURANCE RULES

"Sec. 428I. (a) Designation of Lenders, Servicers, and Guaranty Agencies.—

"(1) Authority.—Whenever the Secretary determines that an eligible lender, servicer, or guaranty agency has a compliance performance rating that equals or exceeds 97 percent, the Secretary shall designate the eligible lender, servicer, or guaranty agency, as the case may be, for exceptional performance. The Secretary shall notify each appropriate guaranty agency of the eligible lenders and servicers designated under this section.

"(2) Compliance Performance Rating.—For purposes of paragraph (1), a compliance performance rating is determined with respect to compliance with due diligence in the collection of loans under this part for each year for which the determination is made. Such rating is equal to the percent of all due diligence requirements applicable to each loan, on average, as established by the Secretary by regulation, with respect to—

"(A) loans serviced during the period by the eligible lender or servicer; or

"(B) loans on which loan collection was attempted by the guaranty agency.

"(b) Payment to Lenders and Servicers.—

"(1) 100 percent payment rule.—Each guaranty agency shall pay each eligible lender or servicer (as agent for an eligible lender) designated under subsection (a) 100 percent of the unpaid principal and interest of all loans for which claims are submitted for payment by that eligible lender or servicer for the one-year period following the receipt by the guaranty agency of the notification of designation under this section or until the guaranty agency receives notice from the Secretary that the designation of the lender or servicer under subsection (a) has been revoked.

"(2) Revocation authority.—The Secretary shall, revoke the designation of a lender or servicer under subsection (a) if any quarterly audit required under subsection (c)(5) is not received by the Secretary by the date established by the Secretary or if the audit indicates the lender or servicer failed to maintain 97 percent or higher compliance with program regulations, as reflected in the performance of not less than 97 percent of all due diligence requirements applicable to each loan, on average, as established by the Secretary for the purpose of this section, for 2 consecutive months or 90 percent for 1 month.

"(3) Documentation.—Nothing in this section shall restrict or limit the authority of guaranty agencies to require the submission of claims documentation evidencing servicing performed on loans, except that the guaranty agency may not require greater documentation than that required for lenders and servicers not designated under subsection (a).

"(4) Payments to guaranty agencies.—The Secretary shall pay to each guaranty agency designated under subsection (a) the appropriate percentage under this subsection for the 1-year period following the receipt by the guaranty agency of the notification of designation under subsection (a).

"(c) Supervision of Designated Lenders and Servicers.—

"(1) Audits for lenders and servicers.—Each eligible lender or servicer desiring a designation under subsection (a) shall have a financial and compliance audit of the loan portfolio of such eligible lender or servicer conducted annually by a qualified independent organization from a list of qualified organizations promulgated by the Secretary in accordance with standards established by the Comptroller General and the Secretary. The standards shall measure the lender's or servicer's compliance with the due diligence standards and shall include a defined statistical sampling technique designed to measure the performance rating of the eligible lender or servicer for the purpose of this section. Each eligible lender or servicer shall submit the audit required by this section to the Secretary and to each appropriate guaranty agency.

"(2) Additional information on lenders and servicers.—Each appropriate guaranty agency shall provide the Secretary with such other information in its possession regarding an eligible lender or servicer desiring designation as may relate to the Secretary's determination under subsection (a), including but not limited to any information suggesting that the application of a lender or servicer for designation under subsection (a) should not be approved.

"(3) Secretary's determinations.—The Secretary shall make the determination under subsection (a) based upon the audits submitted under this section, such other information as provided by any guaranty agency under paragraph (2), and any information in the possession of the Secretary or submitted by any other agency or office of the Federal Government. If the results of the audit are not persuasively rebutted by such other information, the Secretary shall inform the eligible lender or servicer and the appropriate guaranty agency that its application for designation as an exceptional lender or servicer has been approved.

"(4) Cost of audit.—Each eligible lender or servicer shall pay for all the costs of the audits required under this section.

"(5) Compliance audit.—In order to maintain its status as an exceptional eligible lender or servicer, the lender or servicer shall undergo a quarterly compliance audit at the end of each quarter (other than the quarter in which status as an exceptional lender or servicer is established through a financial and compliance audit, as described in subsection (c)(1)), and submit the results of such audit to the Secretary and such appropriate guaranty agency. The compliance audit will review compliance with due diligence requirements for the period since the last audit.

"(6) Loss of designation.—If the audit performed pursuant to paragraph (5) fails to meet the standards for designation as an exceptional lender or servicer under subsection (a)(1), the lender or servicer shall lose its designation as an exceptional lender or servicer. A lender or servicer receiving a compliance audit not meeting the standard for designation as an exceptional lender or servicer may reapply for designation under subsection (a) at any time.

"(7) Due diligence standards.—Due diligence standards used for determining compliance under paragraph (5) shall be promulgated by the Secretary after consultation with lenders, guaranty agencies and servicers and shall consist of a list of specific elements for the Federal regulations selected to provide an indication of systems degradation.

"(8) Additional revocation authority.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, designation under subsection (a) may be revoked at any time by the Secretary if the Secretary determines that the eligible lender or servicer has failed to maintain an overall level of regulatory compliance consistent with the audit submitted by the eligible lender or servicer under this section or if the Secretary believes the lender or servicer may have engaged in fraud in securing designation under subsection (a) or is failing to service loans in accordance with program regulations.

"(d) Supervision of Designated Guaranty Agencies.—

"(1) Audit of guaranty agencies.—Each guaranty agency desiring a designation under subsection (a) shall have a financial and compliance audit of the defaulted loan portfolio of such guaranty agency conducted annually by a qualified independent organization or person from a list of qualified organizations or persons promulgated by the Secretary in accordance with standards established by the Comptroller General and the Secretary. The standards shall include defined statistical sampling techniques designed to measure the performance rating of the guaranty agency for the purpose of this section. Each guaranty agency shall submit the audit required by this paragraph to the Secretary.

"(2) Quarterly sample audits.—The Secretary may require quarterly sample audits as a means of determining continued qualification of the guaranty agency for designation as an exceptional guaranty agency.

"(3) Secretary's determinations.—The Secretary shall make the determination under subsection (a) based upon the audits submitted under this section and other information in his possession. If the results of the audit are not persuasively rebutted by such other information, the Secretary shall inform the guaranty agency that its application for designation as an exceptional guaranty agency has been approved.

"(4) Costs of audits.—Each guaranty agency shall pay for all of the costs of the audits regulated by this section.

"(5) Revocation for fraud.—The Secretary may revoke the designation of a guaranty agency under subsection (a) at any time if the Secretary has reason to believe the guaranty agency secured its designation under subsection (a) through fraud or fails to comply with applicable regulations.

"(6) Revocation based on performance.—Designation as an exceptional guaranty agency may be revoked at any time by the Secretary upon 30 days notice and an opportunity for a hearing before the Secretary upon a finding by the Secretary that the guaranty agency has failed to maintain an acceptable overall level of regulatory compliance.

"(e) Special Rule.—Reimbursements made by the Secretary on loans submitted for claim by an eligible lender or loan servicer designated for exceptional performance under this section shall not be subject to additional review by the Secretary or repurchase by the guaranty agency for any reason other than a determination by the Secretary that the eligible lender, loan servicer, or guaranty agency engaged in fraud or other purposeful misconduct in obtaining designation for exceptional performance.

"(f) Limitation.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the processing of claims on student loans of eligible lenders not subject to this paragraph.

"(g) Claims.—A lender, servicer, or guaranty agency designated under subsection (a) failing to service loans or otherwise comply with applicable program regulations shall be considered in violation of the Federal False Claims Act.

"(h) EVALUATION.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee and the House Committee on Education and Labor, an evaluation of the provisions of this section including, but not limited to, the following:

"(1) The effectiveness of due diligence performed by lenders and servicers receiving designation as exceptional lenders or servicers from the perspective of securing maximum collections from borrowers.

"(2) A quantification of the dollar volume of claims that were paid to exceptional lenders and servicers that would not have been paid under applicable program provisions prior to the enactment of this section.

"(3) An assessment of the impact of this section on the financial condition of guaranty agencies.

"(4) An assessment of the savings to lenders, servicers, and guaranty agencies resulting from designation as exceptional performance.

"(5) An identification of specific administration steps that lenders, servicers, and guaranty agencies do not have to perform as a result of designation as exceptional lenders, servicers, or guaranty agencies.

"(6) A recommendation for program modifications applicable to all program participants based on the findings of the evaluation.

"(7) A recommendation for modifications to this section and whether the program should be continued.

"(i) TERMINATION.—After receipt of the study authorized in subsection (h), the Secretary may terminate such program if he determines such termination to be in the fiscal interest of the United States.

"(j) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this section—

"(1) the term 'due diligence requirements' means the activities required to be performed by lenders on delinquent loans pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary;

"(2) the term 'eligible loan' means a loan made, insured or guaranteed under part B of title IV;

"(3) the term 'servicer' means an entity servicing and collecting student loans which—

"(A) has substantial experience in servicing and collecting consumer loans or student loans;

"(B) has an independent financial audit annually which is furnished to the Secretary and any other parties designated by the Secretary;

"(C) has business systems which are capable of meeting the requirements of part B of title IV;

"(D) has adequate personnel who are knowledgeable about the student loan programs authorized by part B of title IV; and

"(E) does not have any owner, majority shareholder, director, or officer of the entity who has been convicted of a felony.

"LOAN FORGIVENESS FOR TEACHERS, INDIVIDUALS PERFORMING NATIONAL COMMUNITY SERVICE AND NURSES

"SEC. 428J. (a) STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to encourage individuals to—

"(1) enter the teaching and nursing profession; and

"(2) perform national and community service.

"(b) DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, is authorized to carry out a demonstration program of assuming the obligation to repay a loan made, insured or guaranteed under this part (excluding loans made under sections 428A, 428B, or 428C) for any new borrower after October 1, 1992, who—

"(A) is employed as a full-time teacher—

"(i) in a school which qualifies under section 465(a)(2)(A) for loan cancellation for Perkins loan recipients who teach in such schools; and

"(ii) of mathematics, science, foreign languages, special education, bilingual education, or any other field of expertise where the State educational agency determines there is a shortage of qualified teachers;

"(B) agrees in writing to volunteer for service under the Peace Corps Act or under the Domestic Volunteer Service Act of 1973, or to perform comparable service as a full-time employee of an organization which is exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, if the borrower does not receive compensation which exceeds the greater of—

"(i) the minimum wage rate described in section 6 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938; or

"(ii) an amount equal to 100 percent of the poverty line for a family of two (as defined in section 673(2) of the Community Services Block Grant Act); or

"(C) is employed full-time as a nurse in a public hospital, a rural health clinic, a migrant health center, an Indian Health Service, an Indian health center, a Native Hawaiian health center or in an acute care or long-term care facility.

"(2) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary is authorized to issue such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(c) LOAN REPAYMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall assume the obligation to repay—

"(A) 15 percent of the total amount of Stafford loans incurred by the student borrower during such borrower's last 2 years of undergraduate education for the first or second academic year in which such borrower meets the requirements described in subsection (a);

"(B) 20 percent of such total amount for such third or fourth academic year; and

"(C) 30 percent of such total amount for such fifth academic year.

"(2) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to authorize the refunding of any repayment of a Stafford loan.

"(3) INTEREST.—If a portion of a loan is repaid by the Secretary under this section for any year, the proportionate amount of interest on such loan which accrues for such year shall be repaid by the Secretary.

"(4) SPECIAL RULE.—In the case where a student borrower who is not participating in loan repayment pursuant to this section returns to an institution of higher education after graduation from an institution of higher education for the purpose of obtaining a teaching certificate, the Secretary is authorized to assume the obligation to repay the total amount of Stafford loans incurred for a maximum of 2 academic years in returning to an institution of higher education for the purpose of obtaining a teaching certificate or additional certification. Such Stafford loans shall only be repaid for borrowers who qualify for loan repayment pursuant to the provisions of this section, and shall be repaid in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (1).

"(d) REPAYMENT OF ELIGIBILITY LENDERS.—The Secretary shall pay to each eligible lender or holder for each fiscal year an amount equal to the aggregate amount of Stafford loans which are subject to repayment pursuant to this section for such year.

"(e) APPLICATION FOR REPAYMENT.—Each eligible individual desiring loan repayment under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this section the term 'eligible lender' has the same meaning given such term in section 435(d).

"(g) EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct, by grant or contract, an independent national evaluation of the impact of the program assisted under this part on the fields of teaching, nursing, and community service.

"(2) COMPETITIVE BASIS.—The grant or contract described in paragraph (1) shall be awarded on a competitive basis.

"(3) CONTENTS.—The evaluation described in this section shall—

"(A) assess whether the program assisted under this section has brought into teaching, nursing, and community service a significant number of highly capable individuals who otherwise would not have entered such fields;

"(B) assess whether a significant number of students perform the service described in subsection (b) or opt to repay the loans instead of remaining in the career for which such student received loan repayment under this section;

"(C) identify the barriers to the effectiveness of the program assisted under this section;

"(D) assess the cost-effectiveness of such program in improving teacher, nursing, and community service worker quality and quantity and the ways to improve the cost-effectiveness of such program;

"(E) identify the reasons for which participants in the program have chosen to take part in such program; and

"(F) identify other areas of community service or employment which may serve as appropriate methods of loan repayment.

"(4) INTERIM EVALUATION REPORTS.—The Secretary shall prepare and submit to the President and the Congress such interim reports on the evaluation described in this section as the Secretary deems appropriate, and shall submit such a final report by January 1, 1997.

"(5) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

SEC. 423. DEFAULT RATES.

Section 430 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1080) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) DEFAULT RATE OF LENDERS, HOLDERS, AND GUARANTY AGENCIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall annually publish a list indicating the cohort default rate (determined in accordance with section 435(m)) for each originating lender, subsequent holder, and guaranty agency participating in the program assisted under this part and an average cohort default rate for all institutions of higher education within each State.

"(2) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations designed to prevent an institution from evading the application to that institution of a cohort default rate through the use of such measures as branching, consolidation, change of ownership or control, or any similar device.

"(3) RATE ESTABLISHMENT AND CORRECTION.—The Secretary shall establish a cohort default rate for lenders, holders, and guaranty agencies (determined consistent with section 435(m)), except that the rate for lenders, holders, and guaranty agencies shall not reflect any loans issued in accordance with section 428(j). The Secretary shall allow institutions, lenders, holders, and guaranty agencies the opportunity to correct such cohort default rate information.

SEC. 424. REPORTS TO CREDIT BUREAUS AND INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION.

Section 430A(f) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1080a(f)) is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of paragraph (1);

(2) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) 7 years from the date the Secretary, guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder first reported the account to the consumer reporting agency; or

"(3) in the case of a borrower who reenters repayment after defaulting on a loan and subsequently goes into default on such loan, 7 years from the date the loan entered default such subsequent time.".

SEC. 425. ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

(a) AUTHORITY TO REGULATE SERVICERS.—Section 432(a)(1) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1082) is amended by inserting before the semicolon the following: ", including regulations applicable to third party servicers (including regulations concerning financial responsibility standards for, and the assessment of liabilities for program violations against, such servicers) to establish minimum standards with respect to sound management and accountability of programs under this part, except that in no case shall damages be assessed against the United States for the actions or inactions of such servicers".

(b) AGENCY PROCEDURE.—Section 432 of the Act is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(3), by striking "on the record";

(2) in subsection (g)(1), by striking "on the record";

(3) in subsection (h)(2)(A), by striking out "shall, in accordance with sections 556 and 557 of title 5, United States Code," in the first sentence and inserting "shall"; and

(4) in subsection (h)(3)(A), by striking out "shall, in accordance with sections 556 and 557 of title 5, United States Code," in the first sentence and inserting "shall".

(c) CIVIL PENALTIES.—Section 432(g) of the Act is further amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) LIMITATIONS.—No civil penalty may be imposed under paragraph (1) of this subsection unless the Secretary determines that—

"(A) the violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation referred to in that paragraph resulted from a violation, failure, or misrepresentation that is material; and

"(B) the lender or guaranty agency knew or should have known that its actions violated or failed to carry out the provisions of this part or the regulations thereunder.";

(2) in paragraph (3), by striking "the institution of an action under that paragraph" and inserting "notification by the Secretary under that paragraph"; and

(3) in paragraph (4)—

(A) by inserting ", and occurring prior to notification by the Secretary under that paragraph," after "guaranty agency"; and

(B) by striking "or both, and the" and inserting "or both. The".

(d) LS&T AUTHORITY.—Section 432(h) of the Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)(A), by striking "The Secretary" and all that follows through "disqualification—" in the second sentence and inserting the following: "The Secretary shall uphold the imposition of such limitation, suspension, or termination in the student loan insurance program of each of the guaranty agencies under this part, and shall notify such guaranty agencies of such sanction—";

(2) in paragraph (2)(B), by striking "disqualification" each place it appears and inserting "sanction"; and

(3) by redesignating subparagraph (B) of paragraph (2) as subparagraph (C), and by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

"(B) The Secretary's review under this paragraph of the limitation, suspension, or termination imposed by a guaranty agency pursuant to section 428(b)(1)(U) shall be limited to—

"(i) a review of the written record of the proceedings in which the guaranty agency imposed such sanctions; and

"(ii) a determination as to whether the guaranty agency complied with section 428(b)(1)(U) and any notice and hearing requirements prescribed in regulations of the Secretary under this part.";

(4) in paragraph (3)(A), by striking out "The Secretary" and all that follows through "disqualification—" in the second sentence and inserting the following: "The Secretary shall uphold the imposition of such limitation, suspension, or termination in the student loan insurance program of each of the guaranty agencies under this part, and shall notify such guaranty agencies of such sanctions—";

(5) in subsection (h)(3)(B), by striking "disqualification" each place such term appears and inserting "sanction"; and

(6) by redesignating subparagraph (B) of subsection (h)(3) as subparagraph (C) of such subsection, and by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

"(B) The Secretary's review under this paragraph of the limitation, suspension, or termination imposed by a guaranty agency pursuant to section 428(b)(1)(T) shall be limited to—

"(i) a review of the written record of the proceedings in which the guaranty agency imposed such sanctions; and

"(ii) a determination as to whether the guaranty agency complied with section 428(b)(1)(T) and any notice and hearing requirements prescribed in regulations of the Secretary under this part.".

(e) ADDITIONAL LEGAL POWERS AND RESPONSIBILITIES.—Section 432 of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(k) PROGRAM OF ASSISTANCE FOR BORROWERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall undertake a program to encourage corporations and other private and public employers, including the Federal Government, to assist borrowers in repaying loans received under this title, including providing employers with options for payroll deduction of loan payments and offering loan repayment matching provisions as part of employee benefit packages.

"(2) PUBLICATION.—The Secretary shall publicize models for providing the repayment assistance described in paragraph (1) and each year select entities that deserve recognition, through means devised by the Secretary, for the development of innovative plans for providing such assistance to employees.

"(3) RECOMMENDATION.—Within 1 year after the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, the Secretary shall recommend to the appropriate committees in the Senate and House of Representatives changes to statutes that could be made in order to further encourage such efforts.

"(l) UNIFORM ADMINISTRATIVE AND CLAIMS PROCEDURES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall, by regulation developed in consultation with guaranty agencies, lenders, institutions of higher education, secondary markets, students, third party servicers and other organizations involved in providing loans under this part, prescribe standardized forms and procedures regarding—

"(A) origination of loans;

"(B) electronic funds transfer;

"(C) guaranty of loans;

"(D) deferments;

"(E) forbearance;

"(F) servicing;

"(G) claims filing;

"(H) borrower status change; and

"(I) cures.

"(2) SPECIAL RULES.—(A) The forms and procedures described in paragraph (1) shall include all aspects of the loan process as such process involves eligible lenders and guaranty agencies and shall be designed to minimize administrative costs and burdens (other than the costs and burdens involved in the transition to new forms and procedures) involved in exchanges of data to and from borrowers, schools, lenders, secondary markets, and the Department.

"(B) Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to limit the development of electronic forms and procedures.

"(3) SIMPLIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.—Such regulations shall include—

"(A) standardization of computer formats, forms design, and guaranty agency procedures relating to the origination, servicing, and collection of loans made under this part;

"(B) authorization of alternate means of document retention, including the use of microfilm, microfiche, laser disc, compact disc, and other methods allowing the production of a facsimile of the original documents;

"(C) authorization of the use of computer or similar electronic methods of maintaining records relating to the performance of servicing, collection, and other regulatory requirements under this Act; and

"(D) authorization and implementation of electronic data linkages for the exchange of information to and from lenders, guarantors, institutions of higher education, third party servicers, and the Department of Education for student status confirmation reports, claim filing, interest and special allowance billing, deferment processing, and all other administrative steps relating to loans made pursuant to this part where using electronic data linkage is feasible.

"(4) ADDITIONAL RECOMMENDATIONS.—The Secretary shall review regulations prescribed pursuant to paragraph (1) and seek additional recommendations from guaranty agencies, lenders, institutions of higher education, students, secondary markets, third party servicers and other organizations involved in providing loans under this part, not less frequently than annually, for additional methods of simplifying and standardizing the administration of the programs authorized by this part.

"(m) COMMON FORMS AND FORMATS.—

"(1) COMMON GUARANTEED STUDENT LOAN APPLICATION FORM AND PROMISSORY NOTE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in cooperation with representatives of guaranty agencies, eligible lenders, and organizations involved in student financial assistance, shall prescribe a common application form and promissory note to be used for applying for loans under part B of this title.

"(B) REQUIREMENTS.—The form prescribed by the Secretary shall—

"(i) use clear, concise, and simple language to facilitate understanding of loan terms and conditions by applicants;

"(ii) be formatted to require the applicant to clearly indicate a choice of lender; and

"(iii) permit, to the maximum extent practicable, application for any loan under part B.

"(C) APPROVAL OF FORM.—The Secretary shall approve a form for use not later than 360 days after the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992.

"(D) SPECIAL RULE.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the development of electronic forms and procedures.

"(2) COMMON DEFERMENT FORM.—The Secretary, in cooperation with representatives of guaranty agencies, institutions of higher education, and lenders involved in loans made under part B of this title, shall prescribe a common deferment reporting form to be used for the processing of deferments of loans made under this title.

"(3) COMMON REPORTING FORMATS.—The Secretary shall promulgate standards including necessary rules, regulations (including the definitions of all relevant terms), and procedures so as to require all lenders and guaranty agencies to report information on all aspects of loans made under this part in uniform formats, so as to permit the direct comparison of data submitted by individual lenders, servicers, or guaranty agencies.

"(n) DEFAULT REDUCTION MANAGEMENT.—

"(1) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and each of the four succeeding fiscal years, for the Secretary to expend for default reduction management activities for the purposes of establishing a performance measure that will reduce defaults by 5 percent relative to the prior fiscal year. Such funds shall be in addition to, and not in lieu of, other appropriations made for such purposes.

"(2) ALLOWABLE ACTIVITIES.—Allowable activities for which such funds shall be expended by the Secretary shall include the following: (A) program reviews; (B) audits; (C) debt management programs; (D) training activities; and (E) such other management improvement activities approved by the Secretary.

"(3) PLAN FOR USE REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall submit a plan, for inclusion in the materials accompanying the President's budget each fiscal year, detailing the expenditure of funds authorized by this section to accomplish the 5 percent reduction in defaults. At the conclusion of the fiscal year, the Secretary shall report the Secretary's findings and activities concerning the expenditure of funds and whether the performance measure was met. If the performance measure was not met, the Secretary shall report the following:

"(A) why the goal was not met, including an indication of any managerial deficiencies or of any legal obstacles;

"(B) plans and a schedule for achieving the established performance goal;

"(C) recommended legislative or regulatory changes necessary to achieve the goal; and

"(D) if the performance standard or goal is impractical or infeasible, why that is the case and what action is recommended, including whether the goal should be changed or the program altered or eliminated.

This report shall be submitted to the Appropriations Committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate and to the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate.

"(o) CONSEQUENCES OF GUARANTY AGENCY INSOLVENCY.—In the event that the Secretary has determined that a guaranty agency is unable to meet its insurance obligations under this part, the holder of loans insured by the guaranty agency may submit insurance claims directly to the Secretary and the Secretary shall pay to the holder the full insurance obligation of the guaranty agency, in accordance with insurance requirements no more stringent than those of the guaranty agency. Such arrangements shall continue until the Secretary is satisfied that the insurance obligations have been transferred to another guarantor who can meet those obligations or a successor will assume the outstanding insurance obligations.

"(p) REPORTING REQUIREMENT.—All officers and directors, and those employees and paid consultants of eligible institutions, eligible lenders, guaranty agencies, loan servicing agencies, accrediting agencies or associations, State licensing agencies or boards, State postsecondary reviewing entities designated under subpart 1 of part H, and entities acting as secondary markets (including the Student Loan Marketing Association), who are engaged in making decisions as to the administration of any program or funds under this title or as to the eligibility of any entity or individual to participate under this title, shall report to the Secretary, in such manner and at such time as the Secretary shall require, on any financial interest which such individual may hold in any other entity participating in any program assisted under this title.".

SEC. 426. STUDENT LOAN INFORMATION BY ELIGIBLE LENDERS.

(a) REQUIRED DISCLOSURE BEFORE DISBURSEMENT.—Section 433(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1083) is amended

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (13) as paragraphs (2) through (14), respectively; and

(2) by inserting before paragraph (2) (as redesignated in subparagraph (A)) the following new paragraph:

"(1) a statement prominently and clearly displayed and in bold print that the borrower is receiving a loan that must be repaid;".

(b) REQUIRED DISCLOSURE BEFORE REPAYMENT.—Section 433(b) of the Act is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking the second sentence and inserting the following: "For any loan made, insured, or guaranteed under this part, other than a loan made under section 428B or 428C, such disclosure required by this subsection shall be made not less than 60 days nor more than 240 days before the first payment on the loan is due from the borrower."; and

(2) in paragraph (8), by inserting "except as provided in subsection (e)," before "the projected".

(c) SPECIAL RULES.—Section 433 of the Act is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(e) SPECIAL DISCLOSURE RULES ON SLS LOANS AND PLUS LOANS AND UNSUBSIDIZED LOANS.—Loans made under section 428A, 428B, and 428H shall not be subject to the disclosure of projected monthly payment amounts required under subsection (b)(8) if the lender, in lieu of such disclosure, provides the borrower with sample projections of monthly repayment amounts assuming different levels of borrowing and interest accruals resulting from capitalization of interest while the borrower is in school. Such sample projections shall disclose the cost to the student of capitalizing—

"(1) principal and interest; and

"(2) interest only.".

SEC. 427. DEFINITIONS FOR STUDENT LOAN INSURANCE PROGRAM.

(a) ELIGIBLE INSTITUTION.—Section 435(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1085) is amended—

(1) by striking paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting the following:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the term 'eligible institution' means an institution of higher education, as defined in section 481, except that, for the purposes of sections 427(a)(2)(C)(i) and 428(b)(1)(M)(i), an eligible institution includes any institution that is within this definition without regard to whether such institution is participating in any program under this title and includes any institution ineligible for participation in any program under this part pursuant to paragraph (2) of this subsection.";

(2) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (2);

(3) in paragraph (2)(B) (as redesignated)—

(A) in clause (i), by striking "and" at the end thereof;

(B) in clause (ii), by striking "any succeeding fiscal year." and inserting "fiscal year 1993; and"; and

(C) by inserting at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) 25 percent for any succeeding fiscal year.".

(b) REPEAL OF SEPARATE DEFINITION OF INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION.—

(1) AMENDMENT.—Subsection (b) of section 435 of the Act is repealed.

(2) REFERENCE.—With respect to reference in any other provision of law to the definition of institution of higher education contained in section 435(b) of the Act, such provision shall be deemed to refer to section 481(a) of the Act.

(c) REPEAL OF DEFINITION OF VOCATIONAL SCHOOL.—Subsection (c) of section 435 of the Act is repealed.

(d) ELIGIBLE LENDER.—Section 435(d) of the Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(A)—

(A) in the matter preceding clause (i), by striking "a trust company,"; and

(B) in clause (ii)—

(i) by inserting at the end of subclause (I) the following: "or a bank which is subject to examination and supervision by an agency of the United States, makes student loans as a trustee pursuant to an express trust, operated as a lender under this part prior to January 1, 1975, and which meets the requirements of this provision prior to the enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, or"; and

(ii) by striking ", or (III)" and all that follows through "January 1, 1981;" and inserting a semicolon; and

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) in subparagraph (C), by striking "institutions; and" and inserting "institution;";

(B) by inserting "and" after the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (D); and

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (D) the following new subparagraphs:

"(E) shall not have a cohort default rate (as defined in section 435(m)) greater than 15 percent; and

"(F) shall use the proceeds from special allowance payments and interest payments from borrowers for need-based grant programs, except for reasonable reimbursement for direct administrative expenses;".

(e) DUE DILIGENCE.—Section 435(f) of the Act is amended by inserting "servicing and" before "collection practices".

(f) REPEAL OF ADDITIONAL DEFINITIONS.—Section 435 of the Act is further amended by striking subsections (g), (h), and (n).

(g) DEFINITION OF COHORT DEFAULT RATE.—Section 435(m) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(m) COHORT DEFAULT RATE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—(A) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the term 'cohort default rate' means, for any fiscal year in which 30 or more current and former students at the institution enter repayment on loans under section 428 or 428A received for attendance at the institution, the percentage of those current and former students who enter repayment on such loans received for attendance at that institution in that fiscal year who default before the end of the following fiscal year.

"(B) In determining the number of students who default before the end of such fiscal year, the Secretary shall include only loans for which the Secretary or a guaranty agency has paid claims for insurance, and, in calculating the cohort default rate, exclude any loans which, due to improper servicing or collection, would result in an inaccurate or incomplete calculation of the cohort default rate.

"(C) For any fiscal year in which fewer than 30 of the institution's current and former students enter repayment, the term 'cohort default rate' means the percentage of such current and former students who entered repayment on such loans in any of the three most recent fiscal years, who default before the end of the fiscal year immediately following the year in which they entered repayment.

"(2) SPECIAL RULES.—(A) In the case of a student who has attended and borrowed at more than one school, the student (and such student's subsequent repayment or default) is attributed to each school for attendance at which the student received a loan that entered repayment in the fiscal year.

"(B) A loan on which a payment is made by the school, such school's owner, agent, contractor, employee, or any other entity or individual affiliated with such school, in order to avoid default by the borrower, is considered as in default for purposes of this subsection.

"(C) Any loan which has been rehabilitated before the end of such following fiscal year is not considered as in default for the purposes of this subsection.

"(D) For the purposes of this subsection, a loan made in accordance with section 428A shall not be considered to enter repayment until after the borrower has ceased to be enrolled in a course of study leading to a degree or certificate at an eligible institution on at least a half-time basis (as determined by the institution) and ceased to be in a period of forbearance based on such enrollment. Each eligible lender of a loan made under section 428A shall provide the guaranty agency with the information necessary to determine when the loan entered repayment for purposes of this subsection, and the guaranty agency shall provide such information to the Secretary.

"(3) REGULATIONS TO PREVENT EVASIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations designed to prevent an institution from evading the application to that institution of a default rate determination under this subsection through the use of such measures as branching, consolidation, change of ownership or control, or any similar device.".

SEC. 428. REPAYMENTS BY SECRETARY.

Section 437 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1087) is amended to read as follows:

"REPAYMENT BY THE SECRETARY OF LOANS OF BANKRUPT, DECEASED, OR DISABLED BORROWERS; TREATMENT OF BORROWERS ATTENDING CLOSED SCHOOLS OR FALSELY CERTIFIED AS ELIGIBLE TO BORROW

"SEC. 437. (a) REPAYMENT IN FULL FOR DEATH AND DISABILITY.—If a student borrower who has received a loan described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 428(a)(1) dies or becomes permanently and totally disabled (as determined in accordance with regulations of the Secretary), then the Secretary shall discharge the borrower's liability on the loan by repaying the amount owed on the loan.

"(b) REPAYMENT OF AMOUNT SUBJECT TO BANKRUPTCY ACTION.—If the collection of a loan described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 428(a)(1) or sections 428A, 428B, 428C, or 428H is stayed in any action under title 11, United States Code, the Secretary shall repay the unpaid balance of principal and interest owed on the loan.

"(c) DISCHARGE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If a student borrower who received, on or after January 1, 1986, a loan made, insured, or guaranteed under this part is unable to complete the program in which the borrower is enrolled due to the closure of the institution or if such student's eligibility to borrow under this part was falsely certified by the eligible institution, then the Secretary shall discharge the borrower's liability on the loan (including interest and collection fees) by repaying the amount owed on the loan and shall subsequently pursue any claim available to such borrower against the institution and its affiliates and principals or settle the loan obligation pursuant to the financial responsibility authority under subpart 3 of part H.

"(2) ASSIGNMENT.—A borrower whose loan has been discharged pursuant to this subsection shall be deemed to have assigned to the United States the right to a loan refund up to the amount discharged against the institution and its affiliates and principals.

"(3) ELIGIBILITY FOR ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE.—The period of a student's attendance at an institution at which the student was unable to complete a course of study due to the closing of the institution shall not be considered for purposes of calculating the student's period of eligibility for additional assistance under this title.

"(4) SPECIAL RULE.—A borrower whose loan has been discharged pursuant to this subsection shall not be precluded from receiving additional grants, loans, or work assistance under this title for which the borrower would be otherwise eligible (but for the default on such discharged loan).

"(5) REPORTING.—The Secretary shall report to credit bureaus with respect to loans which have been discharged pursuant to this subsection.

"(d) REPAYMENT OF LOANS TO PARENTS.—If a student on whose behalf a parent has received a loan described in section 428B dies, then the Secretary shall discharge the borrower's liability on the loan by repaying the amount owed on the loan.".

SEC. 429. DEBT MANAGEMENT OPTIONS.

Part B of title IV of the Act is amended by inserting after section 437 the following new section:

"DEBT MANAGEMENT OPTIONS

"SEC. 437A. (a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—For the purpose of offering additional debt management options, the Secretary is authorized, to the extent of funds appropriated under subsection (d)—

"(1) to acquire from eligible holders the notes of borrowers under this part (other than section 428B) who are considered to be at high risk of default and who submit a request to the Secretary for an alternative repayment option;

"(2) to offer such borrowers one or more alternative repayment options, which may include graduated or extended repayment and which shall, subject to subsection (b)(2), include an income contingent repayment option established in accordance with subsection (b); and

"(3) to enter into contracts or other agreements with private firms or other agencies of the Government as necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(b) INCOME CONTINGENT REPAYMENT OPTION.—

"(1) REGULATIONS.—For the purposes of subsection (a)(2), the Secretary shall, by regulation, establish the terms and conditions for an income contingent repayment option. Such regulations shall specify the schedules under which income will be assessed for repayment of loans, shall permit the discharge of the remaining obligation on the loan not later than 25 years after the commencement of income contingent repayment, and may provide for the potential collection of amounts in excess of the principal and interest owed on the original loan or loans.

"(2) COLLECTION MECHANISM DETERMINATION REQUIRED.—Such regulations shall not be effective unless the Secretary publishes a finding that—

"(A) the Secretary has, pursuant to subsection (a)(3), established a collection mechanism that will provide a high degree of certainty that collections will be made in accordance with the repayment option established under paragraph (1); and

"(B) the use of such repayment option and collection mechanism will result in an increase in the net amount the Government will collect.

"(c) DETERMINATIONS OF HIGH RISK OF DEFAULT.—In making determinations under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary shall—

"(1) consider the ratio of part B debt repayment to income; or

"(2) establish, by regulation, such other indicators of high risk as the Secretary considers appropriate

"(d) LOAN LIMITATION.—Not more than $200,000,000 may be used to acquire loans under this section in any fiscal year.

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1994 and for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

SEC. 430. SPECIAL ALLOWANCES.

(a) SPECIAL ALLOWANCE.—Section 438(b)(2) of the Act is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)(iii), by striking "3.25" and inserting "3.10";

(2) by adding at the end of subparagraph (A) the following new sentence: "If such computation produces a number less than zero, such loans shall be subject to section 427A(e).";

(3) in subparagraph (B)(i), by striking "3.25" and inserting "3.10"; and

(4) by striking division (ii) of subparagraph (B) and inserting the following:

"(ii) The quarterly rate of the special allowance set under division (i) of this subparagraph shall not be less than 9.5 percent minus the applicable interest rate on such loans, divided by 4.";

(5) in subparagraph (C)—

(A) by inserting "before October 1, 1992," after "made";

(B) by inserting "(i)" before "In"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(ii) In the case of loans disbursed on or after October 1, 1992, pursuant to section 428A or 428B for which the interest rate is determined under section 427A(c)(4), a special allowance shall not be paid unless the rate determined for any 12-month period under section 427A(c)(4)(B) exceeds—

"(I) 11 percent in the case of a loan under section 428A; or

"(II) 10 percent in the case of a loan under section 428B.";

(6) in subparagraph (D)(i), by striking "3.25" and inserting "3.10".

(b) SPECIAL ALLOWANCE PERMITTED ON UNSUBSIDIZED LOANS.—Section 438(b)(5)(A)(ii) of the Act is amended by inserting "428H," after "428C,".

(c) SPECIAL RULE.—Section 438(b)(5) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following flush sentence:

"As used in this section, the term 'eligible loan' includes all loans subject to section 428I.".

(d) ORIGINATION FEES.—Section 438(c) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking "With" and inserting "Subject to paragraph (6) of this subsection, with"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(6) SLS AND PLUS LOANS.—With respect to any loans made under section 428A or 428B on or after October 1, 1992, each eligible lender under this part shall charge the borrower an origination fee of 5 percent of the principal amount of the loan, to be deducted proportionately from each installment payment of the proceeds of the loan prior to payments to the borrower.

"(7) DISTRIBUTION OF ORIGINATION FEES.—All origination fees collected pursuant to this section on loans authorized under section 428A or 428B shall be paid to the Secretary by the lender and deposited in the fund authorized under section 431 of this part.".

(e) DISCOUNTING.—Section 438(d)(2)(C) of the Act is amended by striking "or discount".

SEC. 431. STUDENT LOAN MARKETING ASSOCIATION.

(a) BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—Subsection (c) of section 439 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1087–2(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—

"(1) COMPOSITION OF BOARD; CHAIRMAN.—(A) The Association shall have a Board of Directors which shall consist of 21 persons, 7 of whom shall be appointed by the President and shall be representative of the general public. The remaining 14 directors shall be elected by the common stockholders of the Association entitled to vote pursuant to subsection (f). Commencing with the annual shareholders meeting to be held in 1993—

"(i) 7 of the elected directors shall be affiliated with an eligible institution; and

"(ii) 7 of the elected directors shall be affiliated with an eligible lender.

"(B) The President shall designate 1 of the directors to serve as Chairman.

"(2) TERMS OF APPOINTED AND ELECTED MEMBERS.—The directors appointed by the President shall serve at the pleasure of the President and until their successors have been appointed and have qualified. The remaining directors shall each be elected for a term ending on the date of the next annual meeting of the common stockholders of the Association, and shall serve until their successors have been elected and have qualified. Any appointive seat on the Board which becomes vacant shall be filled by appointment of the President. Any elective seat on the Board which becomes vacant after the annual election of the directors shall be filled by the Board, but only for the unexpired portion of the term.

"(3) AFFILIATED MEMBERS.—For the purpose of this subsection, the references to a director 'affiliated with the eligible institution' or a director 'affiliated with an eligible lender' means an individual who is, or within 5 years of election to the Board has been, an employee, officer, director, or similar official of—

"(A) an eligible institution or an eligible lender;

"(B) an association whose members consist primarily of eligible institutions or eligible lenders; or

"(C) a State agency, authority, instrumentality, commission, or similar institution, the primary purpose of which relates to educational matters or banking matters.

"(4) MEETINGS AND FUNCTIONS OF THE BOARD.—The Board of Directors shall meet at the call of its Chairman, but at least semiannually. The Board shall determine the general policies which shall govern the operations of the Association. The Chairman of the Board shall, with the approval of the Board, select, appoint, and compensate qualified persons to fill the offices as may be provided for in the bylaws, with such functions, powers, and duties as may be prescribed by the bylaws or by the Board of Directors, and such persons shall be the officers of the Association and shall discharge all such functions, powers, and duties.".

(b) AUTHORITY OF ASSOCIATION.—Subparagraph (C) of section 439(d)(1) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(C) to buy, sell, hold, insure, underwrite, and otherwise deal in obligations issued for the purpose of financing or refinancing the construction, reconstruction, renovation, improvement, or purchase at institutions of higher education of any of the following facilities (including the underlying property) and materials at an eligible institution of higher education:

"(i) educational and training facilities;

"(ii) housing for students and faculties;

"(iii) library facilities, including the acquisition of library materials at institutions of higher education; and

"(iv) related equipment, instrumentation, and furnishings for facilities and materials described in clause (i) or (iii); except that not more than 15 percent of the value of transactions entered into under this subparagraph shall involve transactions of the type described in clause (ii);".

(c) RESTRICTIONS ON ACTIVITIES.—Section 439(d)(5) of the Act is amended by striking "third highest rating" and inserting "second highest rating".

(d) STOCK OF ASSOCIATION.—Subsection (f) of section 439 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(f) STOCK OF THE ASSOCIATION.—

"(1) VOTING COMMON STOCK.—The Association shall have voting common stock having such par value as may be fixed by its Board of Directors from time to time. Each share of voting common stock shall be entitled to one vote with rights of cumulative voting at all elections of directors.

"(2) NUMBER OF SHARES; TRANSFERABILITY.—The maximum number of shares of voting common stock that the Association may issue and have outstanding at any one time shall be fixed by the Board of Directors from time to time. Any voting common stock issued shall be fully transferable, except that, as to the Association, it shall be transferred only on the books of the Association.

"(3) DIVIDENDS.—To the extent that net income is earned and realized, subject to subsection (g)(2), dividends may be declared on voting common stock by the Board of Directors. Such dividends as may be declared by the Board of Directors shall be paid to the holders of outstanding shares of voting common stock, except that no such dividends shall be payable with respect to any share which has been called for redemption past the effective date of such call.

"(4) SINGLE CLASS OF VOTING COMMON STOCK.—As of the effective date of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, all of the previously authorized shares of voting common stock and nonvoting common stock of the Association shall be converted to shares of a single class of voting common stock on a share-for-share basis, without any further action on the part of the Association or any holder. Each outstanding certificate for voting or nonvoting common stock shall evidence ownership of the same number of shares of voting stock into which it is converted. All preexisting rights and obligations with respect to any class of common stock of the Association shall be deemed to be rights and obligations with respect to such converted shares.".

(e) SAFETY AND SOUNDNESS OF ASSOCIATION.—Section 439 of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(r) SAFETY AND SOUNDNESS OF ASSOCIATION.—

"(1) REPORTS BY THE ASSOCIATION.—The Association shall promptly furnish to the Secretary of Education and Secretary of the Treasury copies of all—

"(A) periodic financial reports publicly distributed by the Association; and

"(B) reports concerning the Association that are received by the Association and prepared by nationally recognized statistical rating organizations.

"(2) AUDIT BY SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.—(A) The Secretary of the Treasury may—

"(i) appoint auditors to conduct audits of the Association from time to time to determine the condition of the Association for the purpose of assessing its financial safety and soundness; and

"(ii) enter into contracts to obtain the services of such technical experts as the Secretary of the Treasury determines necessary and appropriate to provide technical assistance to any auditor appointed under this paragraph.

"(B) Each auditor appointed under this paragraph shall conduct an audit of the Association to the extent requested by the Secretary of the Treasury and shall prepare and submit a report to the Secretary of the Treasury concerning the results of such audit. A copy of such report shall be furnished to the Association and the Secretary of Education on the date on which it is delivered to the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(C) The Association shall provide full and prompt access to the Secretary of the Treasury to its books and records and other information requested by the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(3) MONITORING OF SAFETY AND SOUNDNESS.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall conduct such studies as may be necessary to monitor the financial safety and soundness of the Association. In the event that the Secretary of the Treasury determines that the financial safety and soundness of the Association is at risk, the Secretary of the Treasury shall inform the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives, and the Secretary of Education of such determination and identify any corrective actions that should be taken to ensure the safety and soundness of the Association.

"(4) CAPITAL STANDARD.—If the capital ratio is less than 2 percent and is greater than or equal to 1.75 percent at the end of the Association's most recent calendar quarter the Association shall, within 60 days of such occurrence, submit to the Secretary of the Treasury a capital restoration plan, in reasonable detail, that the Association believes is adequate to cause the capital ratio to equal or exceed 2 percent within 36 months.

"(5) CAPITAL RESTORATION PLAN.—

"(A) SUBMISSION, APPROVAL, AND IMPLEMENTATION.—The Secretary of the Treasury and the Association shall consult with respect to any capital restoration plan submitted pursuant to paragraph (4) and the Secretary of the Treasury shall approve such plan (or a modification thereof accepted by the Association) or disapprove such plan within 30 days after such plan is first submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury by the Association, unless the Association and Secretary of the Treasury mutually agree to a longer consideration period. If the Secretary of the Treasury approves a capital restoration plan (including a modification of a plan accepted by the Association), the Association shall forthwith proceed with diligence to implement such plan to the best of its ability.

"(B) DISAPPROVAL.—If the Secretary of the Treasury does not approve a capital restoration plan as provided in subparagraph (A), then not later than the earlier of the date the Secretary of the Treasury disapproves of such plan by written notice to the Association or the expiration of the 30-day consideration period referred to in subparagraph (A) (as such period may have been extended by mutual agreement), the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit the Association's capital restoration plan, in the form most recently proposed to the Secretary of the Treasury by the Association, together with a report on the Secretary of the Treasury's reasons for disapproval of such plan and an alternative capital restoration plan, to the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources and to the Chairman and ranking minority member of the House Committee on Education and Labor. A copy of such submission simultaneously shall be sent to the Association and the Secretary of Education by the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(C) ASSOCIATION IMPLEMENTATION AND RESPONSE.—Upon receipt of the submission by the Association, the Association shall forthwith proceed with diligence to implement the most recently proposed capital restoration plan of the Association. The Association, within 30 days after receipt from the Secretary of the Treasury of such submission, shall submit to such Chairmen and ranking minority members a written response to such submission, setting out fully the nature and extent of the Association's agreement or the disagreement with the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to the capital restoration plan submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury and any findings of the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(6) SUBSTANTIAL CAPITAL RATIO REDUCTION.—

"(A) ADDITIONAL PLAN REQUIRED.—If the capital ratio is less than 1.75 percent and is greater than or equal to 1 percent at the end of the Association's most recent calendar quarter, the Association shall submit to the Secretary of the Treasury within 60 days after such occurrence a capital restoration plan (or an appropriate modification of any plan previously submitted or approved under paragraph (4)) to increase promptly its capital ratio to equal or exceed 1.75 percent. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Association shall consult with respect to any plan or modified plan submitted pursuant to this paragraph. The Secretary of the Treasury shall approve such plan or modified plan (or a modification thereof accepted by the Association) or disapprove such plan or modified plan within 30 days after such plan or modified plan is first submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury by the Association, unless the Association and Secretary of the Treasury mutually agree to a longer consideration period. If the Secretary of the Treasury approves a plan or modified plan (including a modification of a plan accepted by the Association), the Association shall forthwith proceed with diligence to implement such plan or modified plan to the best of the Association's ability.

"(B) DISAPPROVAL.—If the Secretary of the Treasury disapproves a capital restoration plan or modified plan submitted pursuant to subparagraph (A), then, not later than the earlier of the date the Secretary of the Treasury disapproves of such plan or modified plan (by written notice to the Association) or the expiration of the 30-day consideration period described in subparagraph (A) (as such period may have been extended by mutual agreement), the Secretary of the Treasury shall prepare and submit an alternative capital restoration plan, together with a report on his reasons for disapproval of the Association's plan or modified plan, to the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate and to the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives. A copy of such submission simultaneously shall be sent to the Association and the Secretary of Education by the Secretary of the Treasury. The Association, within 5 days after receipt from the Secretary of the Treasury of such submission, shall submit to the Chairmen and ranking minority members of such Committees, and the Secretary of the Treasury, a written response to such submission, setting out fully the nature and extent of the Association's agreement or disagreement with the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to the disapproved plan and the alternative plan of the Secretary of the Treasury and any findings of the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(C) REVIEW BY CONGRESS; ASSOCIATION IMPLEMENTATION.—Congress shall have 60 legislative days after the date on which Congress receives the alternative plan under subparagraph (B) from the Secretary of the Treasury to review such plan. If Congress does not take statutory action with respect to any such plan within such 60-day period, the Association shall immediately proceed with diligence to implement the alternative capital restoration plan of the Secretary of the Treasury under subparagraph (B). If Congress is out of session when any such alternative plan is received, such 60-day period shall begin on the first day of the next session of Congress.

"(7) ACTIONS BY SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.—If the capital ratio of the Association does not equal or exceed 1.75 percent at the end of the Association's most recent calendar quarter, the Secretary of the Treasury may, until the capital ratio equals or exceeds 1.75 percent, take any one or more of the following actions:

"(A) LIMIT INCREASE IN LIABILITIES.—Limit any increase in, or order the reduction of, any liabilities of the Association, except as necessary to fund student loan purchases and warehousing advances.

"(B) RESTRICT GROWTH.—Restrict or eliminate growth of the Association's assets, other than student loans purchases and warehousing advances.

"(C) RESTRICT DISTRIBUTIONS.—Restrict the Association from making any capital distribution.

"(D) REQUIRE ISSUANCE OF NEW CAPITAL.—Require the Association to issue new capital in any form and in any amount sufficient to restore at least a 1.75 percent capital ratio.

"(E) LIMIT EXECUTIVE COMPENSATION.—Prohibit the Association from increasing for any executive officer any compensation including bonuses at a rate exceeding that officer's average rate of compensation during the previous 12 calendar months and prohibiting the Board from adopting any new employment severance contracts.

"(8) CRITICAL CAPITAL STANDARD.—(A) If the capital ratio is less than 1 percent at the end of the Association's most recent calendar quarter and the Association has already submitted a capital restoration plan to the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to paragraph (4) or (6)(A), the Association shall forthwith proceed with diligence to implement the most recently proposed plan with such modifications as the Secretary of the Treasury determines are necessary to cause the capital ratio to equal or exceed 2 percent within 60 months.

"(B) If the capital ratio is less than 1 percent at the end of the Association's most recent calendar quarter and the Association has not submitted a capital restoration plan to the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to paragraph (4) or (6)(A), the Association shall—

"(i) within 14 days of such occurrence submit a capital restoration plan to the Secretary of the Treasury which the Association believes is adequate to cause the capital ratio to equal or exceed 2 percent within 60 months; and

"(ii) forthwith proceed with diligence to implement such plan with such modifications as the Secretary of the Treasury determines are necessary to cause the capital ratio to equal or exceed 2 percent within 60 months.

"(C) Immediately upon a determination under subparagraph (A) or (B) to implement a capital restoration plan, the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit the capital restoration plan to be implemented to the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives, and the Secretary of Education.

"(9) ADDITIONAL REPORTS TO COMMITTEES.—The Association shall submit a copy of its capital restoration plan, modifications proposed to the Secretary of the Treasury, and proposed modifications received from the Secretary of the Treasury to the Congressional Budget Office and General Accounting Office upon their submission to the Secretary of the Treasury or receipt from the Secretary of the Treasury. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Congressional Budget Office and General Accounting Office shall maintain the confidentiality of information received pursuant to the previous sentence. In the event that the Secretary of the Treasury does not approve a capital restoration plan as provided in paragraph (5)(A) or (6)(A), or in the event that a capital restoration plan is modified by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to paragraph (6)(B) or (8), the Congressional Budget Office and General Accounting Office shall each submit a report within 30 days of the Secretary of the Treasury's submission to the Chairmen and ranking minority members as required in paragraphs (5)(B), (6)(B), and (8)(C) to such Chairmen and ranking members—

"(A) analyzing the financial condition of the Association;

"(B) analyzing the capital restoration plan and reasons for disapproval of the plan contained in the Secretary of the Treasury's submission made pursuant to paragraph (5)(B), or the capital restoration plan proposed by the Association and the modifications made by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to paragraph (6)(B) or (8);

"(C) analyzing the impact of the capital restoration plan and reasons for disapproval of the plan contained in the Secretary of the Treasury's submission made pursuant to paragraph (5)(B), or the impact of the capital restoration plan proposed by the Association and the modifications made by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to paragraph (6)(B) or (8), and analyzing the impact of the recommendations made pursuant to subparagraph (D) of this paragraph, on—

"(i) the ability of the Association to fulfill its purpose and authorized activities as provided in this section, and

"(ii) the operation of the student loan programs; and

"(D) recommending steps which the Association should take to increase its capital ratio without impairing its ability to perform its purpose and authorized activities as provided in this section.

"(10) REVIEW BY SECRETARY OF EDUCATION.—The Secretary of Education shall review the Secretary of the Treasury's submission required pursuant to paragraph (5)(B), (6)(B), or (8) and shall submit a report within 30 days to the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources and to the Chairman and ranking minority member of the House Committee on Education and Labor—

"(A) describing any administrative or legislative provisions governing the student loan programs which contributed to the decline in the Association's capital ratio; and

"(B) recommending administrative and legislative changes in the student loan programs to maintain the orderly operation of such programs and to enable the Association to fulfill its purpose and authorized activities consistent with the capital ratio specified in paragraph (4).

"(11) SAFE HARBOR.—The Association shall be deemed in compliance with the capital ratios described in paragraphs (4) and (6)(A) if the Association is rated in 1 of the 2 highest full rating categories (such categories to be determined without regard to designations within categories) by 2 nationally recognized statistical rating organizations, determined without regard to the Association's status as a federally chartered corporation.

"(12) TREATMENT OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Education, the Congressional Budget Office, and the General Accounting Office shall not disclose any information treated as confidential by the Association and obtained pursuant to this subsection. Nothing in this paragraph shall authorize the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Education, the Congressional Budget Office, and the General Accounting Office to withhold information from Congress, or prevent the Secretary of Education, the Congressional Budget Office, and the General Accounting Office from complying with a request for information from any other Federal department or agency requesting the information for purposes within the scope of its jurisdiction, or complying with an order of a court of the United States in an action brought by the United States. For purposes of section 522 of title 5, United States Code, this paragraph shall be considered a statute described in subsection (b)(3) of such section 552.

"(13) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this subsection:

"(A) The term 'nationally recognized statistical rating organization' means any entity recognized as such by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"(B) The term 'capital ratio' means the ratio of total stockholders' equity, as shown on the Association's most recent quarterly consolidated balance sheet prepared in the ordinary course of its business, to the sum of—

"(i) the total assets of the Association, as shown on the balance sheet prepared in the ordinary course of its business; and

"(ii) 50 percent of the credit equivalent amount of the following off-balance sheet items of the Association as of the date of such balance sheet—

"(I) all financial standby letters of credit and other irrevocable guarantees of the repayment of financial obligations of others; and

"(II) all interest rate contracts and exchange rate contracts, including interest exchange agreements, floor, cap, and collar agreements and similar arrangements.

For purposes of this subparagraph, the calculation of the credit equivalent amount of the items set forth in clause (ii) of this subparagraph, the netting of such items and eliminations for the purpose of avoidance of double-counting of such items shall be made in accordance with the measures for computing credit conversion factors for off-balance sheet items for capital maintenance purposes established for commercial banks from time to time by the Federal Reserve Board, but without regard to any risk weighting provisions in such measures.

"(C) The term 'legislative days' means only days on which either House of Congress is in session.".

(14) that the changes in section 439(d)(1), relating to facilities loans, shall apply with respect to applications received on or after July 1, 1992; and

(15) that the changes in the designation or names of loans or programs under part B is effective with respect to applications or other documents (used in making such loans) that are printed after the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) NEW BORROWERS.—For purposes of the section, the term "new borrower" means, with respect to any date, an individual who on that date has no outstanding balance of principal or interest owing on any loan made, insured, or guaranteed under part B of title IV of the Act.

PART C—FEDERAL WORK-STUDY PROGRAMS

SEC. 441. DESIGNATION, PURPOSE, AND APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) PROGRAM TITLE.—

(1) AMENDMENT.—The heading of part C of title IV of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"PART C—FEDERAL WORK-STUDY PROGRAMS".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The heading of section 443 is amended by inserting "FEDERAL" before "WORK-STUDY".

(b) PURPOSE.—Section 441(a) of the Act is amended by inserting ", and to encourage students receiving Federal student financial assistance to participate in community service activities that will benefit the Nation and engender in the students a sense of social responsibility and commitment to the community" before the period at the end thereof.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 441(b) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part, $800,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

(d) DEFINITION OF COMMUNITY SERVICE.—Section 441 of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) COMMUNITY SERVICES.—For purposes of this part, the term 'community services' means services which are identified by an institution of higher education, through formal or informal consultation with local nonprofit, governmental, and community-based organizations, as designed to improve the quality of life for community residents, particularly low-income individuals, or to solve particular problems related to their needs, including—

"(1) such fields as health care, child care, literacy training, education (including tutorial services), welfare, social services, transportation, housing and neighborhood improvement, public safety, crime prevention and control, recreation, rural development, and community improvement;

"(2) work in service opportunities or youth corps as defined in section 101 of the National and Community Service Act of 1990, and service in the agencies, institutions and activities designated in section 124(a) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990;

"(3) support services to students with disabilities; and

"(4) activities in which a student serves as a mentor for such purposes as—

"(A) tutoring;

"(B) supporting educational and recreational activities; and

"(C) counseling, including career counseling.".

SEC. 442. ALLOCATION OF FUNDS.

(a) GRANTS TO SCHOOLS WITH HIGH CONCENTRATIONS OF PELL GRANT RECIPIENTS.—Section 442(a) of the Act (42 U.S.C. 2752(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Secretary may allocate an amount equal to not more than 10 percent of the amount by which the amount appropriated in any fiscal year to carry out this part exceeds $700,000,000 among eligible institutions described in subparagraph (B).

"(B) In order to receive an allocation pursuant to subparagraph (A) an institution shall be an eligible institution from which 50 percent or more of the Pell Grant recipients attending such eligible institution graduate or transfer to a 4-year institution of higher education.".

(b) CONSEQUENCES OF FAILURE TO AWARD.—Section 442(e) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(e) REALLOCATION OF EXCESS ALLOCATIONS.—If institutions return to the Secretary any portion of the sums allocated to such institutions under this section for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall reallot such excess to eligible institutions which used at least 10 percent of the total amount of funds granted to such institution under this section to compensate students employed in community service in the preceding fiscal year. Such excess funds shall be reallotted to institutions which qualify under this subsection on the same basis as excess eligible amounts are allocated to institutions pursuant to subsection (c). Funds received by institutions pursuant to this subsection shall be used to compensate students employed in community service.".

SEC. 443. GRANTS FOR WORK-STUDY PROGRAMS.

(a) CONTENTS OF AGREEMENTS.—Section 443(b)(1) of the Act (42 U.S.C. 2753) is amended, in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by inserting "; work in community service" after "itself".

(b) USE FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE.—Section 443(b)(2)(A) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(A) in fiscal year 1994 and succeeding fiscal years, an institution shall use at least 5 percent of the total amount of funds granted to such institution under this section in any fiscal year to compensate students employed in community service, except that the Secretary may waive this subparagraph if the Secretary determines that enforcing it would cause hardship for students at an institution;".

(c) ALLOCATION.—Section 443(b)(3) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(3) provide that in the selection of students for employment under such work-study program, only students, who demonstrate financial need in accordance with part F of this title, and who meet the requirements of section 484 will be assisted, except that—

"(A) if the institution's grant under this part is directly or indirectly based in part on the financial need demonstrated by students who are (i) attending the institution less than full time, or (ii) independent students; and

"(B) if the total financial need of all such less than full-time and independent students at the institution exceeds 5 percent of the total financial need of all students at such institution, then at least 5 percent of the grant shall be made available to such less than full-time and independent students;".

(d) OVERAWARD INCOME LIMIT.—Section 443(b)(4) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(4) provide that for a student employed in a work-study program under this part, at the time income derived from any need-based employment is in excess of the determination of the amount of such student's need by more than $300, continued employment shall not be subsidized with funds appropriated under this part;".

(e) FEDERAL SHARE.—Section 443(b)(5) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) provide that the Federal share of the compensation of students employed in the work-study program in accordance with the agreement shall not exceed 75 percent for academic year 1993–1994 and succeeding academic years, except that—

"(A) the Federal share may exceed such amounts of such compensation if the Secretary determines, pursuant to regulations promulgated by the Secretary establishing objective criteria for such determinations, that a Federal share in excess of such amounts is required in furtherance of the purpose of this part; and

"(B) when a student engaged in work in community service performs such work for a private nonprofit organization other than the eligible institution, the contribution of such agency or organization shall not exceed 40 percent of the institution's share of the compensation of the student, and the eligible institution in its discretion may count such contribution toward satisfaction of the non-Federal share of the compensation of the student;".

(f) PROPRIETARY SCHOOLS.—Section 443(b)(8) of the Act is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by inserting ", except as required in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2)" before the semicolon at the end thereof; and

(2) in subparagraph (C), by inserting "that are directly related to the student's education" after "student services".

(g) INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES.—Section 443(b) of the Act is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (9) as paragraph (11);

(2) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (8); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (8) the following new paragraphs:

"(9) provide assurances that employment made available from funds under this part may be used to support programs for supportive services to students with disabilities;

"(10) provide assurances that the institution will inform all eligible students of the opportunity to perform community service, and will consult with local nonprofit, governmental, and community-based organizations to identify such opportunities; and".

SEC. 444. CARRY-BACK AUTHORITY.

Section 445(b) of the Act is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after the subsection heading; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) An eligible institution may make payments to students of wages earned after the end of the academic year, but prior to the beginning of the succeeding fiscal year, from such succeeding fiscal year's appropriations.".

SEC. 445. JOB LOCATION AND DEVELOPMENT.

Section 446 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"JOB LOCATION AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

"SEC. 446. (a) AGREEMENTS REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary is authorized to enter into agreements with eligible institutions under which such institution may use not more than 10 percent or $50,000 of its allotment under section 442, whichever is less, to establish or expand a program under which such institution, separately or in combination with other eligible institutions, locates and develops jobs, including community service jobs, for currently enrolled students.

"(2) Jobs located and developed under this section shall be jobs that are suitable to the scheduling and other needs of such students and that, to the maximum extent practicable, complement and reinforce the educational programs or vocational goals of such students.

"(b) CONTENTS OF AGREEMENTS.—Agreements under subsection (a) shall—

"(1) provide that the Federal share of the cost of any program under this section will not exceed 80 percent of such cost;

"(2) provide satisfactory assurance that funds available under this section will not be used to locate or develop jobs at an eligible institution;

"(3) provide satisfactory assurance that funds available under this section will not be used for the location or development of jobs for students to obtain upon graduation, but rather for the location and development of jobs available to students during and between periods of attendance at such institution;

"(4) provide satisfactory assurance that the location or development of jobs pursuant to programs assisted under this section will not result in the displacement of employed workers or impair existing contracts for services;

"(5) provide satisfactory assurance that Federal funds used for the purpose of this section can realistically be expected to help generate student wages exceeding, in the aggregate, the amount of such funds, and that if such funds are used to contract with another organization, appropriate performance standards are part of such contract; and

"(6) provide that the institution will submit to the Secretary an annual report on the uses made of funds provided under this section and an evaluation of the effectiveness of such program in benefiting the students of such institution.".

SEC. 446. ADDITIONAL FUNDS TO CONDUCT COMMUNITY SERVICE WORK-STUDY PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 447 of the Act (42 U.S.C. 2756a) is amended—

(1) by striking subsections (a) and (b); and

(2) in subsection (c)—

(A) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking "funds made available under the last sentence of section 489(a)" and inserting "up to 10 percent of the funds made available under section 489(a) and attributable to the amount of the institution's expenditures under this part";

(B) in paragraph (3), by inserting ", and programs assisted under the National and Community Service Act of 1990" after "nonprofit agencies"; and

(C) by striking "(c) USE OF OTHER FUNDS TO CONDUCT PROGRAM.—".

(b) AMENDMENT TO HEADING.—The heading for section 447 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"ADDITIONAL FUNDS TO CONDUCT COMMUNITY SERVICE WORK-STUDY PROGRAMS".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Subsection (a) of section 489 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1096(a)) is amended—

(1) in the second sentence, by striking "(other than section 447)"; and

(2) by striking the fourth sentence (relating to payments with respect to section 447).

SEC. 447. WORK COLLEGES.

Part C of title IV of the Act (42 U.S.C. 2751 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"WORK COLLEGES

"SEC. 448. (a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to recognize, encourage, and promote the use of comprehensive work-learning programs as a valuable educational approach when it is an integral part of the institution's educational program and a part of a financial plan which decreases reliance on grants and loans.

"(b) SOURCE AND USE FUNDS.—

"(1) SOURCE OF FUNDS.—In addition to the sums appropriated under subsection (f), funds allocated to the institution under part C and part E of this title may be transferred for use under this section to provide flexibility in strengthening the self-help-through-work element in financial aid packaging.

"(2) ACTIVITIES AUTHORIZED.—From the sums appropriated pursuant to subsection (f), and from the funds available under paragraph (1), eligible institutions may, following approval of an application under subsection (c) by the Secretary—

"(A) support the educational costs of qualified students through self-help payments or credits provided under the work-learning program of the institution within the limits of part F of this title;

"(B) promote the work-learning-service experience as a tool of postsecondary education, financial self-help and community service-learning opportunities;

"(C) carry out activities described in section 443 or 446; and

"(D) be used for the administration, development and assessment of comprehensive work-learning programs, including—

"(i) community-based work-learning alternatives that expand opportunities for community service and career-related work; and

"(ii) alternatives that develop sound citizenship, encourage student persistence, and make optimum use of assistance under this part in education and student development.

"(c) APPLICATION.—Each eligible institution may submit an application for funds authorized by subsection (f) to use funds under subsection (b)(1) at such time and in such manner as the Secretary, by regulation, may reasonably require.

"(d) MATCH REQUIRED.—Funds made available to work-colleges pursuant to this section shall be matched on a dollar-for-dollar basis from non-Federal sources.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this section—

"(1) the term 'work-college' means an eligible institution that—

"(A) has been a public or private nonprofit institution with a commitment to community service;

"(B) has operated a comprehensive work-learning program for at least 2 years;

"(C) requires all resident students who reside on campus to participate in a comprehensive work-learning program and the provision of services as an integral part of the institution's educational program and as part of the institution's educational philosophy; and

"(D) provides students participating in the comprehensive work-learning program with the opportunity to contribute to their education and to the welfare of the community as a whole; and

"(2) the term 'comprehensive student work-learning program' means a student work/service program that is an integral and stated part of the institution's educational philosophy and program; requires participation of all resident students for enrollment, participation, and graduation; includes learning objectives, evaluation and a record of work performance as part of the student's college record; provides programmatic leadership by college personnel at levels comparable to traditional academic programs; recognizes the educational role of work-learning supervisors; and includes consequences for nonperformance or failure in the work-learning program similar to the consequences for failure in the regular academic program.

"(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

PART D—FEDERAL DIRECT LOANS

SEC. 451. ESTABLISHMENT OF FEDERAL DIRECT LOAN PROGRAM.

Part D of title IV of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1087a et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART D—FEDERAL DIRECT LOAN DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM

"SEC. 451. PROGRAM AND PAYMENT AUTHORITY.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall, in accordance with the provisions of this part, carry out a loan demonstration program for qualified students and parents at selected institutions of higher education to enable the students to pursue their courses of study at such institutions during the period beginning on July 1, 1994 and ending on June 30, 1998.

"(b) PAYMENT AUTHORITY.—

"(1) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall make payments under this part for any fiscal year to institutions of higher education having an agreement under section 454, on the basis of the estimated needs of students at each institution and parents for student or parent loans, taking into consideration the demand and eligibility of such students and parents for loans under this part.

"(2) ENTITLEMENT PROVISION.—An institution of higher education which has an agreement with the Secretary under section 454 shall be deemed to have a contractual right against the United States to receive payments according to that agreement.

"SEC. 452. PAYMENT RULES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make payments required by section 451 in such installments as the Secretary determines—

"(1) reflect accurately the disbursement of funds for student and parent loans by the institution of higher education, and

"(2) will best carry out the objectives of this part.

"(b) INITIAL PAYMENTS.—The initial payments for any academic year required by section 451 shall be made available to each institution of higher education not later than 10 days prior to the beginning of the academic year at such institution.

"SEC. 453. SELECTION BY THE SECRETARY.

"(a) ENTRY REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall enter into agreements with institutions of higher education, at which the total loan volume under the Federal Stafford Loan program, the Federal Supplemental Loans for Students program, and the Federal PLUS loan program was $500,000,000 in the most recent year for which data is available, to participate in the loan demonstration program to make loans for the period beginning with the academic year beginning on July 1, 1994, and ending with loans made before June 30, 1998. Such agreements shall be concluded not later than January 1, 1994.

"(b) SELECTION CRITERIA.—The Secretary shall enter into agreements with institutions of higher education which represent a cross-section of all institutions of higher education participating in part B of this title in terms of control of the institution, length of academic program, highest degree offered, size of student enrollment, percentage of students borrowing under part B, geographic location, annual loan volume, default experience and composition of the student body.

"(c) PREFERENCE FOR APPLYING INSTITUTIONS.—In constituting the cross-section of institutions of higher education required by the previous subsection, the Secretary shall first enter into agreements, to the maximum extent possible consistent with the requirements of constituting the cross-section, with institutions of higher education which apply to participate in the loan demonstration program. Institutions of higher education desiring to participate in the demonstration shall submit an application containing such information as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.

"(d) DESIGNATION OF ADDITIONAL INSTITUTIONS.—If an insufficient number of institutions of higher education apply and satisfy the conditions provided in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the Secretary shall designate additional institutions of higher education from among those eligible to participate in part B to participate in the loan demonstration program in order to satisfy the conditions provided in subsections (a) and (b) of this section. An institution of higher education designated by the Secretary pursuant to this subsection may decline to participate in the loan demonstration program for good cause pursuant to regulations established by the Secretary.

"(e) LIMITATION.—The Secretary shall ensure that the annual loan volume under the Federal Stafford Loan program, the Federal Supplemental Loans for Students program, and the Federal Plus loan program at the institutions of higher education with which the Secretary enters into agreements under this part, in the most recent fiscal year for which data are available, represents not more than 15 percent of the loan guarantees of any guaranty agency under such programs and the Secretary shall determine that such guaranty agency will remain financially sound.

"(f) SELECTION OF SUBGROUP TO TEST INCOME CONTINGENT REPAYMENT.—

"(1) SELECTION.—Within the institutions of higher education selected or designated to participate in the loan demonstration program under this part, the Secretary shall select 35 percent of such institutions to offer income contingent repayment methods in accordance with section 454(6).

"(2) FINDING REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall not select institutions to offer such repayment methods unless the Secretary publishes a finding that—

"(A) the Secretary has established a collection mechanism that will provide a high degree of certainty that collections will be made in accordance with the repayment option; and

"(B) the use of such repayment option and collection mechanism will result in an increase in the net amount the Government will collect.

"(g) CONSORTIA.—Institutions of higher education may apply to participate in the program pursuant to subsection (c) as consortia. The Secretary shall consider the members of the consortia as individual institutions for the purposes of subsection (b). Institutions of higher education selected by the Secretary to participate in the program may also enter into consortia for the purpose of carrying out the agreement required by section 454.

"SEC. 454. AGREEMENT REQUIRED.

"An agreement with any institution of higher education for participation in the loan demonstration program shall—

"(1) provide for the establishment and maintenance of a loan demonstration program at the institution of higher education under which—

"(A) the institution of higher education will identify eligible students who seek student financial assistance at such institution, in accordance with section 484;

"(B) the institution of higher education will estimate the need of each such student as required by part F;

"(C) the institution of higher education will originate loans to such eligible students and eligible parents in accordance with this part, and will not charge any administrative fees to such students or parents for such origination activities;

"(D) the institution of higher education will provide timely information concerning the status of student and parent borrowers to the contractor or contractors responsible for loan collection pursuant to section 457; and

"(E) the institution of higher education will participate in the loan demonstration program for its duration, subject to procedures for withdrawal established by section 455;

"(2) provide assurances that the institution of higher education will comply with the provisions of section 463A, relating to student loan information, with respect to loans made under this part;

"(3) provide that the note or evidence of obligation on the loan shall be the property of the Secretary and that the institution of higher education will act as the agent of the Secretary for the purpose of making loans under the loan demonstration program;

"(4) provide that the institution of higher education will accept responsibility and liability stemming from its failure to perform its functions pursuant to the agreement;

"(5) provide that students at the institution of higher education and their parents (with respect to such students) will not be eligible to participate in the Federal Stafford Loan program, the Federal Supplemental Loans to Students program, or the Federal Plus loan program for the period during which such institution participates in the loan demonstration program;

"(6) in the case of the institutions selected by the Secretary pursuant to section 453(f), include such terms and conditions as the Secretary may require by regulation for testing income contingent repayment methods, which shall include—

"(A) requiring such institutions to offer the option of income contingent repayment, based on an annual review of the borrowers Federal income tax return, to any student who applies for a loan under this part;

"(B) the additional or different terms and conditions to be included in the notes or other agreements entered into by the borrower, as required by such regulations, including provisions with respect to the disclosure by the borrower of subsequent income;

"(C) providing for the discharge of loans after not more than 25 years of income contingent repayment; and

"(D) such data and reporting requirements and such other provisions as the Secretary considers necessary to carry out the purposes of section 458(d)(2) and to the protection of the Federal fiscal interest; and

"(7) include such other provisions as may be necessary to protect the financial interest of the United States and to promote the purposes of this part.

"SEC. 455. WITHDRAWAL AND TERMINATION PROCEDURES.

"The Secretary shall establish by regulation procedures which enable institutions of higher education who have made agreements with the Secretary pursuant to section 454 to withdraw or to be terminated from the loan demonstration program.

"SEC. 456. TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

"Unless otherwise specified in this part, the loans made under this part shall have the same terms, conditions, and benefits as loans made under sections 428, 428A, and 428B of this title. Any loan made under this part shall be eligible for consolidation under section 428C of part B of this title.

"SEC. 457. LOAN COLLECTION FUNCTIONS UNDER COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT CONTRACTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide, through contracts awarded on a competitive basis, for—

"(1) the collection of principal and interest on loans made under this part by not less than 5 contracts, at least one of which shall be for servicing loans that are subject to income contingent repayment;

"(2) the collection of defaulted loans made under this part;

"(3) the establishment and operation of a central data system for the maintenance of records on all loans made under this part;

"(4) programs for default prevention; and

"(5) such other programs as the Secretary determines are necessary to ensure the success of the loan demonstration program.

"(b) SERVICING FOR INCOME CONTINGENT LOANS.—The Secretary shall, through contract, ensure the availability of servicing of loans made pursuant to section 454(6) at a cost comparable to that available for loans under part B of this title (that are not subject to income contingent repayment).

"(c) INFORMATION ON INCOME CONTINGENT LOANS.—The Secretary shall acquire such information as is necessary regarding the adjusted gross income of borrowers (under this part and under part B) of loans that are subject to income contingent repayment for the purpose of determining the annual repayment obligations of such borrowers. The Secretary, not less often than once per year, shall provide to the servicer, lender, or holder of a loan under this part the Secretary's determination of the borrower's repayment obligation on that loan for such year.

"SEC. 458. REPORTS.

"(a) ANNUAL REPORTS.—The Secretary shall submit to the Congress not later than July 1, 1993, and each July 1 for the 5 succeeding years an annual report describing the progress and status of the loan demonstration program.

"(b) INTERIM FINAL REPORT.—The Comptroller General shall submit to the Congress not later than January 1, 1997, an interim final report evaluating the experience of the Department of Education, the participating institutions of higher education, students, and parents with respect to the loan demonstration program. The report shall include—

"(1) the administrative costs, including costs per loan, incurred by participating institutions of higher education in administering the loan demonstration program;

"(2) the administrative costs, including costs per loan, incurred by the Department of Education and its contractors in carrying out its responsibilities, including the costs of origination, data systems, servicing, and collection;

"(3) an evaluation of the effectiveness of the loan demonstration program in providing services to students and parents, including loan application, loan origination, student financial aid packaging, tracking of student status, responsiveness to student inquiries and processing of deferments, forbearances, and repayments;

"(4) the frequency and cost of borrower delinquency and default under the loan demonstration program and losses incurred by institutions of higher education and servicers, including losses caused by improper origination or servicing of loans;

"(5) the timeliness of capital availability to institutions of higher education and of loans to students and parents and the cost of loan capital;

"(6) an evaluation of the effectiveness of the income contingent repayment option;

"(7) a comparison of the experience of institutions of higher education, students, and parents participating in loan demonstration program with the experience of institutions, students, and parents in the control group described in subsection (d) with respect to the subjects indicated in paragraphs (1) through (6) of this subsection;

"(8) an evaluation of the administrative performance of the Department;

"(9) an analysis of the reasons institutions selected by the Secretary pursuant to section 453(d) chose not to participate and the reasons institutions withdrew or were terminated pursuant to section 455;

"(10) an analysis of the experience of borrowers with loans under both this part and part B and recommendations for the most effective repayment procedures for such borrowers;

"(11) a comparison of the cost of loan capital for loans for the loan demonstration program with the cost of loan capital for the comparable programs in part B of this title;

"(12) an analysis, where practicable, of the experience of institutions which participate as part of a consortia; and

"(13) recommendations for modifications, continuation, expansion, suspension, or termination of the loan demonstration program or replacement of all or some of the programs authorized by part B.

"(c) FINAL REPORT.—The Comptroller General shall submit to the Congress not later than May 1, 1998, a final report evaluating the experience of the Department of Education, the participating institutions of higher education, and students with respect to the loan demonstration program. The report shall include the same matters provided for in subsection (b) of this section.

"(d) CONTROL GROUP.—

"(1) REGULAR REPAYMENT.—To assist the Comptroller General in preparing the reports required by subsections (b)(6) and (c) of this section, the Secretary shall select a control group of institutions of higher education, which represent a cross-section of all institutions of higher education participating in part B of this title and which is comparable to the cross-section of institutions of higher education selected for participation in the loan demonstration program pursuant to section 453. The Secretary shall select the control groups in the same manner, pursuant to section 453, that the institutions of higher education are selected to participate in the demonstration program.

"(2) INCOME CONTINGENT REPAYMENT.—If the Secretary makes a selection of institutions to test income contingent repayment methods in accordance with section 453(f), the Secretary shall, within the control group selected under paragraph (1), identify a group of institutions to serve as a control group for comparison with the institutions offering income contingent loans under this part pursuant to section 454(6). The institutions selected for the control group under this paragraph shall represent a reasonable cross section of the institutions selected under paragraph (1). The Secretary shall publish a list of the institutions that are so selected. Any eligible lender of a loan to a student for attendance at any such institution shall, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, offer such students the option of repaying such loans on an income contingent basis consistent with such regulations.

"(3) INCOME CONTINGENT TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, establish the terms and conditions for loans that are subject to paragraph (2) of this subsection. Such terms and conditions shall, to the extent practicable, be the same as the terms and conditions of loans made pursuant to section 454(6). The Secretary is authorized to enter into such agreements (and amendments to agreements) under part B of this title as may be necessary to carry out paragraph (2) and this paragraph.

"(e) TREATMENT OF COSTS.—In reporting with respect to costs in the reports required by subsections (b) and (c) of this section, the Comptroller General shall report separately the nonrecurrent costs such as start-up costs associated with the loan demonstration program, the administrative costs incurred by institutions of higher education in providing information to enable the Comptroller General to prepare the reports required by subsections (b) and (c) of this section and the normal costs of operating the loan demonstration program.

"SEC. 459. SCHEDULE OF REGULATORY ACTIVITIES BY THE SECRETARY.

"(a) PROPOSED REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register not later than April 1, 1993, all proposed regulations for carrying out the program established by this part, including regulations with respect to—

"(1) payments to institutions of higher education;

"(2) the selection of institutions of higher education to participate in the loan demonstration program;

"(3) application by institutions of higher education to participate in the loan demonstration program;

"(4) agreements between the Secretary and institutions of higher education participating in the loan demonstration program;

"(5) procedures with respect to the withdrawal and termination of institutions of higher education from the loan demonstration program; and

"(6) procedures by which institutions designated by the Secretary pursuant to section 453(d) may decline to participate in the loan demonstration program.

"(b) FINAL REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register not later than July 1, 1993, all final regulations for carrying out the program established by this part, including regulations with respect to the same matters provided for in subsection (a) of this section.

"(c) CLOSING DATE FOR APPLICATIONS FROM INSTITUTIONS.—The Secretary shall establish October 1, 1993, as the closing date for receiving applications from institutions of higher education desiring to participate in the loan demonstration program pursuant to section 453(c).

"(d) PUBLICATION OF LIST OF PARTICIPATING INSTITUTIONS AND CONTROL GROUP.—Not later than January 1, 1994, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a list of the institutions of higher education selected to participate in the loan demonstration program pursuant to section 453 and a list of the institutions of higher education in the control group required by section 458(d).

"(e) PROCUREMENT CONTRACTS.—The Secretary shall award contracts pursuant to section 457 not later than February 1, 1994.

"SEC. 459A. FUNDS FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

"Each fiscal year, there shall be available to the Secretary of Education from funds not otherwise appropriated, funds to be obligated for administrative costs under this part, not to exceed $10,000,000 in fiscal year 1993, $17,000,000 in fiscal year 1994, $37,000,000 in fiscal year 1995, $54,000,000 in fiscal year 1996, and $65,000,000 in fiscal year 1997.".

SEC. 452. INCOME CONTINGENT LOAN DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.

(a) In General.—After September 30, 1992, and not later than March 31, 1992, the capital balance of the student loan fund established under part D of title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (as such Act was in effect on the date of enactment of this Act) shall be distributed by allowing institutions to transfer any remaining funds, including future collections and all other funds at the institution's discretion, to such institution's part E account, part C fund, or subpart 3 of part A fund under the terms and conditions of the appropriate program.

(b) Conversion of Existing Loans.—Institutions may, after July 1, 1992, convert all outstanding loans made under part D of title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (as such Act was in effect on such date) to part E loans, provided that such institution—

(1) notify the borrower of such conversion;

(2) obtain a signed part E promissory note from the borrower for the remaining amount outstanding; and

(3) provide the borrower in writing with a description of all terms and conditions of the new loan.

PART E—FEDERAL PERKINS LOANS

SEC. 461. PROGRAM DESIGNATION; AUTHORIZATION.

(a) Program Title.—

(1) Heading.—The heading of part E of title IV is amended to read as follows:

"Part E—Federal Perkins Loans".

(2) Name of loans.—Section 461(a) of the Act is amended by striking "as 'Perkins Loans'" and inserting "as 'Federal Perkins Loans'".

(b) Eligibility for Study Abroad.—Section 461(a) of the Act is amended by inserting "or while engaged in programs of study abroad approved for credit by such institutions" after "in such institutions".

(c) Authorization of Appropriations.—Section 461(b) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Authorization of Appropriations.—(1) For the purpose of enabling the Secretary to make contributions to student loan funds established under this part, there are authorized to be appropriated $250,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(2) In addition to the funds authorized under paragraph (1), there are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums for fiscal year 1997 and each of the 5 succeeding fiscal years as may be necessary to enable students who have received loans for academic years ending prior to October 1, 1997, to continue or complete courses of study.".

SEC. 462. ALLOCATION OF FUNDS.

(a) Institutional Allocation.—Section 462(a)(1)(A) of the Act is amended by striking "such institution received" and inserting "allocated to such institution".

(b) Appeals Process.—Section 462(e) (20 U.S.C. 1087bb(e)) is amended—

(1) by striking "An" and inserting "(1) An"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) The Secretary shall establish an appeals process by which the anticipated collections required in paragraph (1) may be waived for institutions with low default rates in the program assisted under this part.".

(c) Default Reduction and Default Penalties.—Section 462(f) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(f) Default Reduction and Default Penalties.—(1) For any fiscal year prior to fiscal year 1994, any institution which has a default rate which equals or exceeds 7.5 percent but does not exceed the maximum default rate applicable to the award year under subsection (g), the institution's default penalty is a percentage equal to the complement of such default rate. For any institution which has a default rate that does not exceed 7.5 percent, the institution's default penalty is equal to one.

"(2) For fiscal year 1994 and any succeeding fiscal year, any institution with a cohort default rate (as defined under subsection (h)) which—

"(A) equals or exceeds 15 percent, shall establish a default reduction plan pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary;

"(B) equals or exceeds 20 percent, but is less than 25 percent, shall have a default penalty of 0.9;

"(C) equals or exceeds 25 percent, but is less than 30 percent, shall have a default penalty of 0.7; and

"(D) equals or exceeds 30 percent shall have a default penalty of zero.".

(d) Applicable Maximum Default Rate.—Section 462(g) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(g) Applicable Maximum Default Rate.—(1) For award years 1992 and 1993, the applicable maximum default rate is 15 percent.

"(2) For award year 1994 and subsequent years, the maximum cohort default rate is 30 percent.".

(e) Definitions of Default Rate and Cohort Default Rate.—Section 462(h) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking the title of the subsection and inserting "Definitions of Default Rate and Cohort Default Rate.";

(2) in paragraph (1), by striking "For the purpose of this section," and inserting "For any award year prior to award year 1994, for the purpose of this section,";

(3) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4);

(4) by striking "120" in subparagraph (A) of such paragraph and inserting "240";

(5) by amending subparagraph (B) of such paragraph to read as follows:

"(B) 270 days (in the case of a loan repayable quarterly), after the borrower fails to make an installment payment when due or to comply with other terms of the promissory note,"; and

(6) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3)(A) For award year 1994 and any succeeding year, the term 'cohort default rate' means, for any award year in which 30 or more current and former students at the institution enter repayment on loans under this part (received for attendance at the institution), the percentage of those current and former students who enter repayment on such loans (received for attendance at that institution) in that award year who default before the end of the following award year.

"(B) In determining the number of students who default before the end of such award year, the Secretary shall, in calculating the cohort default rate, exclude any loans which, due to improper servicing or collection, would result in an inaccurate or incomplete calculation of the cohort default rate.

"(C) For any award year in which less than 30 of the institution's current and former students enter repayment, the term 'cohort default rate' means the percentage of such current and former students who entered repayment on such loans in any of the three most recent award years and who default before the end of the award year immediately following the year in which they entered repayment.

"(D) A loan on which a payment is made by the institution of higher education, its owner, agency, contractor, employee, or any other entity or individual affiliated with such institution, in order to avoid default by the borrower, is considered as in default for the purposes of this subsection.

"(E) Any loan that is in default but on which the borrower has made satisfactory arrangements to resume payment or any loan which has been rehabilitated before the end of such following award year is not considered as in default for purposes of this subsection.

"(F) In the case of a student who has attended and borrowed at more than one school, the student (and his or her subsequent repayment or default) is attributed to the school for attendance at which the student received the loan that entered repayment in the award year.

"(G) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations designed to prevent an institution from evading the application to that institution of a default rate determination under this subsection through the use of such measures as branching, consolidation, change of ownership or control or other means as determined by the Secretary.".

(f) Reallocation of Excess Allocations.—Section 462(j) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1087bb(j)) is amended to read as follows:

"(j) Reallocation of Excess Allocations.—

"(1) In general.—(A) If an institution of higher education returns to the Secretary any portion of the sums allocated to such institution under this section for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall reallocate 80 percent of such returned portions to participating institutions in an amount not to exceed such participating institution's excess eligible amounts as determined under paragraph (2).

"(B) For the purpose of this subsection, the term 'participating institution' means an institution of higher education that—"(i) was a participant in the program assisted under this part in fiscal year 1985; and

"(ii) did not receive an allocation under subsection (a) in the fiscal year for which the reallocation determination is made.

"(2) Excess eligible amount.—For any participating institution, the excess eligible amount is the amount, if any, by which—

"(A)(i) that institution's eligible amount (as determined under paragraph (3) of subsection (c)), divided by (ii) the sum of the eligible amounts of all participating institutions (as determined under paragraph (3)), multiplied by (iii) the amount of funds available for reallocation under this subsection; exceeds

"(B) the amount required to be allocated to that institution under subsection (c) of section 462.

"(3) Remainder.—The Secretary shall reallocate the remainder of such returned portions in accordance with regulations of the Secretary.

"(4) Allocation reductions.—If under paragraph (1) of this subsection an institution returns more than 10 percent of its allocation, the institution's allocation for the next fiscal year shall be reduced by the amount returned. The Secretary may waive this paragraph for a specific institution if the Secretary finds that enforcing it is contrary to the interest of the program.".

SEC. 463. AGREEMENTS WITH INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION.

(a) Campus Match.—Section 463(a)(2)(B) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(B) a capital contribution—

"(i) by an institution that—

"(I) is granted permission by the Secretary to participate in an Expanded Lending Option under the program, and

"(II) has a default rate which does not exceed 7.5 percent, in an amount not less than the amount of the Federal capital contributions described in subparagraph (A); or

"(ii) by any other institution, in an amount not less than three-seventeenths of such Federal capital contribution in fiscal year 1993, and one-third of such Federal capital contribution in each of the succeeding fiscal years, of the amount of the Federal capital contributions described in subparagraph (A);".

(b) VERIFICATION.—Section 463(c) of the Act is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (3), by striking ", if that account has not been previously reported by any other holder of the note";

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) Each institution of higher education, after consultation with the Secretary and pursuant to the agreements entered into under paragraph (1), shall disclose to any credit bureau organization with which the Secretary has such an agreement—

"(A) the amount of loans made to any borrower under this part at the time of the disbursement of the loan; and

"(B) the information set forth in section 430A(a).".

(c) ADDITIONAL RULES.—

(1) DEFINITION OF DEFAULT.—Paragraph (11) of section 463A(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1087cc(a)(1)) is amended by striking "including a statement that the default may be" and inserting "together with a statement that the disbursement of, and the default on, a loan under this part, shall be".

(2) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—Section 463A of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d) LIMITATION ON USE OF INTEREST BEARING ACCOUNTS.—In carrying out the provisions of subsection (a)(10), the Secretary may not require that any collection agency, collection attorney, or loan servicer collecting loans made under this part deposit amounts collected on such loans in interest bearing accounts, unless such agency, attorney, or servicer holds such amounts for more than 45 days.

"(e) SPECIAL DUE DILIGENCE RULE.—In carrying out the provisions of subsection (a)(5) relating to due diligence, the Secretary shall make every effort to ensure that institutions of higher education may use Internal Revenue Service skip-tracing collection procedures on loans made under this part.".

SEC. 464. AMOUNTS AND TERMS OF LOANS.

(a) ANNUAL AND AGGREGATE LOAN LIMITS.—Section 464(a)(2) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (4), the total of loans made to a student in any academic year or its equivalent by an institution of higher education from a loan fund established pursuant to an agreement under this part shall not exceed

"(i) for institutions that have an agreement with the Secretary to participate in the Expanded Lending Option under section 463(a)(2)(B)(i)—

"(I) $4,000, in the case of a student who has not successfully completed a program of undergraduate education; or

"(II) $6,000, in the case of a graduate or professional student (as defined in regulations issued by the Secretary).

"(ii) for all other institutions—

"(I) $3,000, in the case of a student who has not successfully completed a program of undergraduate education; or

"(II) $5,000, in the case of a graduate or professional student (as defined in regulations issued by the Secretary).

"(B) Except as provided in paragraph (4), the aggregate of the loans for all years made to a student by institutions of higher education from loan funds established pursuant to agreements under this part may not exceed—

"(i) for institutions that have an agreement with the Secretary to participate in the Expanded Lending Option under section 463(a)(2)(B)(i)—

"(I) $40,000 in the case of any graduate or professional student (as defined by regulations of the Secretary, and including any loans from such funds made to such person before he became a graduate or professional student);

"(II) $20,000 in the case of a student who has successfully completed 2 years of a program of education leading to a bachelor's degree but who has not completed the work necessary for such a degree (determined under regulations of the Secretary, and including any loans from such funds made to such person before he became such a student); and

"(III) $8,000 in the case of any other student; or

"(ii) for all other institutions—

"(I) $15,000, in the case of any student who has not successfully completed a program of undergraduate education; or

"(II) $30,000, in the case of any graduate or professional student (as defined by regulations issued by the Secretary) and including any loans from such funds made to such student before the student became a graduate or professional student.".

(b) STUDY ABROAD LIMITS.—

Section 464(a) of the Act is amended by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) In the case of a program of study abroad that is approved for credit by the home institution at which a student is enrolled and that has reasonable costs in excess of the home institution's budget, the annual and aggregate loan limits for the student may exceed the amounts described in paragraphs (2)(A) and (2)(B) by 20 percent.".

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Section 464(b) of the Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "this title and who meets the requirements of section 484" and inserting "this title, who meets the requirements of section 484, and who provides the institution with the student's drivers license number, if any, at the time of application for the loan"; and

(2) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) If the institution's capital contribution under section 462 is directly or indirectly based in part on the financial need demonstrated by students who are (A) attending the institution less than full time, or (B) independent students, and if the total financial need of all such less than full-time and independent students at the institution exceeds 5 percent of the total financial need of all students at such institution, then at least 5 percent of such loans shall be made available to such less than full-time and independent students.".

(c) MINIMUM MONTHLY PAYMENTS.—Section 464(c)(1)(C) of the Act is amended by striking "$30" each place it appears and inserting "$40".

(d) ELIMINATION OF DEFENSE OF INFANCY.—Section 464(c)(1)(E) of the Act is amended by striking "unless the borrower is a minor and the note or other evidence of obligation executed by him would not, under applicable law, create a binding obligation,".

(e) DEFERMENTS.—Section 464(c)(2)(A) is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) No repayment of principal of, or interest on, any loan from a student loan fund assisted under this part shall be required during any period—

"(i) during which the borrower—

"(I) is pursuing at least a half-time course of study as determined by an eligible institution; or

"(II) is pursuing a course of study pursuant to a graduate fellowship program approved by the Secretary, or pursuant to a rehabilitation training program for disabled individuals approved by the Secretary, except that no borrower shall be eligible for a deferment under this clause, or loan made under this part while serving in a medical internship or residency program;

"(ii) not in excess of 3 years during which the borrower is seeking and unable to find full-time employment;

"(iii) not in excess of 3 years for any reason which the lender determines, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary under section 435(o), has caused or will cause the borrower to have an economic hardship; or

"(iv) during which the borrower is engaged in service described in section 465(a)(2);

and provides that any such period shall not be included in determining the 10-year period described in subparagraph (B).".

(f) REPAYMENT PERIOD.—Section 464(c) of the Act is further amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking subparagraphs (B) and (C) and inserting the following:

"(B) No repayment or principal of, or interest on, any loan for any period described in subparagraph (A) shall begin until 6 months after the completion of such period.".

(2) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5);

(3) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) The repayment period for a loan made under this part shall begin on the day immediately following the expiration of the period, specified in paragraph (1)(A), after the student ceases to carry the required academic workload, unless the borrower requests and is granted a repayment schedule that provides for repayment to commence at an earlier point in time, and shall exclude any period of authorized deferment, forbearance, or cancellation."; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) Requests for deferment of repayment of loans under this part by students engaged in graduate or post-graduate fellowship-supported study (such as pursuant to a Fullbright grant) outside the United States shall be approved until completion of the period of the fellowship.".

(g) FORBEARANCE; SPECIAL REPAYMENT RULE.—Section 464 of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(e) FORBEARANCE.—The Secretary shall ensure that, upon written request, an institution of higher education shall grant a borrower forbearance of principal and interest or principle only, renewable at 12-month intervals for a period not to exceed 3 years, on such terms as are otherwise consistent with the regulations issued by the Secretary and agreed upon in writing by the parties to the loan, if—

"(1) the borrower's debt burden equals or exceeds 20 percent of such borrower's gross income; or

"(2) the institution determines that the borrower should qualify for forbearance for other reasons.

"(f) SPECIAL REPAYMENT RULE AUTHORITY.—(1) Subject to such restrictions as the Secretary may prescribe to protect the interest of the United States, in order to encourage repayment of loans made under this part which are in default, the Secretary may, in the agreement entered into under this part, authorize an institution of higher education to compromise on the repayment of such defaulted loans in accordance with paragraph (2). The Federal share of the compromise repayment shall bear the same relation to the institution's share of such compromise repayment as the Federal capital contribution to the institution's loan fund under this part bears to the institution's capital contribution to such fund.

"(2) No compromise repayment of a defaulted loan as authorized by paragraph (1) may be made unless the student borrower pays—

"(A) 90 percent of the loan under this part;

"(B) the interest due on such loan; and

"(C) any collection fees due on such loan;

in a lump sum payment.".

SEC. 465. CANCELLATION OF LOANS FOR CERTAIN PUBLIC SERVICE.

(a) CANCELLATION FOR TEACHING.—Section 465(a)(2) of the Act is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking "and such determination shall not be made with respect to not more than 50 percent of the total number of schools in the State receiving assistance under such chapter 1";

(2) by amending subparagraph (C) to read as follows:

"(C) as a full-time special education teacher, including teachers of infants, toddlers, children, or youth with disabilities in a public or other nonprofit elementary or secondary school system, or as a full-time qualified professional provider of early intervention services in a public or other nonprofit program under public supervision by the lead agency as authorized in section 676(b)(9) of the Individuals With Disabilities Education Act;";

(3) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (E);

(4) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (F) and inserting "; or"; and

(5) by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(G) as a full-time teacher of mathematics, science, foreign languages, bilingual education, or any other field of expertise where the State educational agency determines there is a shortage of qualified teachers;

"(H) as a full-time nurse or medical technician providing health care services; or

"(I) as a full-time employee of a public or private nonprofit child or family service agency who is providing, or supervising the provision of, services to high-risk children who are from low-income communities and the families of such children.".

(b) RATE OF CANCELLATION.—Section 465(a)(3)(A)(i) of such Act is amended by striking "(A), (C), or (F)" and inserting "(A), (C), (F), (G), (H), or (I)".

(c) SPECIAL RULES.—Section 465 of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) LIST.—If the list of schools in which a teacher may perform service pursuant to subsection (a)(2)(A) is not available before May 1 of any year, the Secretary may use the list for the year preceding the year for which the determination is made to make such service determination.

"(2) CONTINUING ELIGIBILITY.—Any teacher who performs service in a school which—

"(A) meets the requirements of subsection (a)(2)(A) in any year; and

"(B) in a subsequent year fails to meet the requirements of such subsection, may continue to teach in such school and shall be eligible for loan cancellation pursuant to subsection (a)(1) such subsequent years.".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENT: DEFINITIONS; LIMITATIONS.—Part E of title IV is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 469. (a) LOW-INCOME COMMUNITIES.—For the purpose of this part, the term 'low-income communities' means communities in which there is a high concentration of children eligible to be counted under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

"(b) HIGH-RISK CHILDREN.—For the purposes of this part, the term 'high-risk children' means individuals under the age of 21 who are low-income or at risk of abuse or neglect, have been abused or neglected, have serious emotional, mental, or behavioral disturbances, reside in placements outside their homes, or are involved in the juvenile justice system.

"(c) INFANTS, TODDLERS, CHILDREN, AND YOUTH WITH DISABILITIES.—For purposes of this part, the term 'infants, toddlers, children, and youth with disabilities' means children with disabilities and infants and toddlers with disabilities as defined in sections 602(a)(1) and 672(1), respectively, of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, and the term 'qualified professional provider of early intervention services' has the meaning specified in section 672(2) of such Act.".

SEC. 466. DISTRIBUTION OF ASSETS FROM STUDENT LOAN FUNDS.

Section 466 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1087ff) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by striking "1997" and inserting "2005".

(2) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking "Upon" and inserting "(1) Upon";

(B) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) No finding that the liquid assets of a student loan fund established under this part exceed the amount required under paragraph (1) may be made prior to a date which is 2 years after the date on which the institution of higher education received the funds from such institution's allocation under section 462.".

SEC. 467. EXCESS CAPITAL RULE.

(a) RECAPTURE OF CERTAIN LOAN FUNDS.—Section 467 of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) PERKINS LOAN REVOLVING FUND.—(1) There is established a Perkins Loan Revolving Fund which shall be available without fiscal year limitation to the Secretary to make payments under this part, in accordance with paragraph (2) of this subsection. There shall be deposited in the Perkins Revolving Loan Fund—

"(A) all funds collected by the Secretary on any loan referred, transferred, or assigned under paragraph (5)(A), (5)(B)(i), or (6) of section 463(a);

"(B) all funds collected by the Secretary on any loan referred under paragraph (5)(B)(ii) of section 463(a);

"(C) all funds paid to the Secretary under section 466(c)(1)(A);

"(D) all funds from a student loan fund under this part received by the Secretary as the result of the closure of an institution of higher education;

"(E) all funds received by the Secretary as a result of an audit of a student loan fund established under this part; and

"(F) all funds which have been appropriated and which the Secretary determines are not necessary for carrying out section 465, relating to the cancellation of certain loans under this part for qualifying service.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary shall, from the Perkins Loan Revolving Fund established under paragraph (1), pay allocations of additional capital contributions to eligible institutions of higher education in accordance with section 462, except that funds described in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) shall be repaid to the institution of higher education which referred the loan, as specified in section 463(a)(5)(B)(ii). The Secretary shall make the payments required by this paragraph in a manner designed to maximize the availability of capital loan funds under this part.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The heading of section 467 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"COLLECTION OF DEFAULTED LOANS: PERKINS LOAN REVOLVING FUND".

SEC. 468. EFFECTIVE DATES FOR AMENDMENTS TO PART E.

The changes made in part E of title IV of the Act by the amendments made by this part shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act, except that—

(1) the changes in section 463(a)(2)(B), relating to the matching of Federal capital contributions, shall apply to funds provided for such program for the award years beginning on or after July 1, 1993;

(2) the changes made in section 464(c)(1)(C), relating to minimum monthly payments shall apply with respect to loans for which the first disbursement is made on or after October 1, 1992, to an individual who, on the date the loan is made, has no outstanding balance of principal or interest owing on any loan made under part E of title IV of the Act;

(3) the changes made in section 464(c)(2)(A), relating to deferments, shall apply with respect to loans for which the first disbursement is made on or after July 1, 1993; and

(4) the changes made in section 467, relating to the creation of a Perkins Loan Revolving Fund, shall take effect on September 15, 1997.

PART F—NEED ANALYSIS

SEC. 471. REVISION OF PART F.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Part F of title IV of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"PART F—NEED ANALYSIS

"SEC. 471. AMOUNT OF NEED.

"Except as otherwise provided therein, the amount of need of any student for financial assistance under this title (except subparts 1 or 4 of part A) is equal to—

"(1) the cost of attendance of such student, minus

"(2) the expected family contribution for such student, minus

"(3) estimated financial assistance not received under this title (as defined in section 480(j)).

"SEC. 472. COST OF ATTENDANCE.

"For the purpose of this title, the term 'cost of attendance' means—

"(1) tuition and fees normally assessed a student carrying the same academic workload as determined by the institution, and including costs for rental or purchase of any equipment, materials, or supplies required of all students in the same course of study;

"(2) an allowance for books, supplies, transportation, and miscellaneous personal expenses for a student attending the institution on at least a half-time basis, as determined by the institution;

"(3) an allowance (as determined by the institution) for room and board costs incurred by the student which—

"(A) shall be an allowance of not less than $1,500 for a student without dependents residing at home with parents;

"(B) for students without dependents residing in institutionally owned or operated housing, shall be a standard allowance determined by the institution based on the amount normally assessed most of its residents for room and board; and

"(C) for all other students shall be an allowance based on the expenses reasonably incurred by such students for room and board, except that the amount may not be less than $2,500;

"(4) for less than half-time students (as determined by the institution) tuition and fees and an allowance for only books, supplies, and transportation (as determined by the institution) and dependent care expenses (in accordance with paragraph (8));

"(5) for a student engaged in a program of study by correspondence, only tuition and fees and, if required, books and supplies, travel, and room and board costs incurred specifically in fulfilling a required period of residential training;

"(6) for incarcerated students only tuition and fees and, if required, books and supplies;

"(7) for a student enrolled in an academic program in a program of study abroad approved for credit by the student's home institution, reasonable costs associated with such study (as determined by the institution at which such student is enrolled);

"(8) for a student with one or more dependents, an allowance based on the estimated actual expenses incurred for such dependent care, based on the number and age of such dependents, except that—

"(A) such allowance shall not exceed the reasonable cost in the community in which such student resides for the kind of care provided; and

"(B) the period for which dependent care is required includes, but is not limited to, class-time, study-time, field work, internships, and commuting time;

"(9) for a student with a disability, an allowance (as determined by the institution) for those expenses related to the student's disability, including special services, personal assistance, transportation, equipment, and supplies that are reasonably incurred and not provided for by other assisting agencies;

"(10) for a student receiving all or part of the student's instruction by means of telecommunications technology, no distinction shall be made with respect to the mode of instruction in determining costs, but this paragraph shall not be construed to permit including the cost of rental or purchase of equipment; and

"(11) for a student placed in a work experience under a cooperative education program, an allowance for reasonable costs associated with such employment (as determined by the institution).

"SEC. 473. FAMILY CONTRIBUTION.

"For the purpose of this title, except subpart 4 of part A, the term 'family contribution' with respect to any student means the amount which the student and the student's family may be reasonably expected to contribute toward the student's postsecondary education for the academic year for which the determination is made, as determined in accordance with this part.

"SEC. 474. DETERMINATION OF EXPECTED FAMILY CONTRIBUTION; DATA ELEMENTS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE FOR DETERMINATION OF EXPECTED FAMILY CONTRIBUTION.—The expected family contribution—

"(1) for a dependent student shall be determined in accordance with section 475;

"(2) for a single independent student or a married independent student without dependents (other than a spouse) shall be determined in accordance with section 476; and

"(3) for an independent student with dependents other than a spouse shall be determined in accordance with section 477.

"(b) DATA ELEMENTS.—The following data elements are considered in determining the expected family contribution:

"(1) the available income of (A) the student and the student's spouse, or (B) the student and the student's parents, in the case of a dependent student;

"(2) the number of dependents in the family of the student;

"(3) the number of dependents in the family of the student who are enrolled or accepted for enrollment, on at least a half-time basis, in a degree, certificate, or other program leading to a recognized educational credential at an institution of higher education that is an eligible institution in accordance with the provisions of section 487 and for whom the family may reasonably be expected to contribute to their postsecondary education;

"(4) the net assets of (A) the student and the student's spouse, and (B) the student and the student's parents, in the case of a dependent student;

"(5) the marital status of the student;

"(6) the age of the older parent, in the case of a dependent student, and the student; and

"(7) the additional expenses incurred (A) in the case of a dependent student, when both parents of the student are employed or when the family is headed by a single parent who is employed, or (B) in the case of an independent student, when the student is married and the student's spouse is employed, or when the employed student qualifies as a surviving spouse or as a head of a household under section 2 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

"SEC. 475. FAMILY CONTRIBUTION FOR DEPENDENT STUDENTS.

"(a) COMPUTATION OF EXPECTED FAMILY CONTRIBUTION.—For each dependent student, the expected family contribution is equal to the sum of—

"(1) the parents' contribution from adjusted available income (determined in accordance with subsection (b));

"(2) the student contribution from available income (determined in accordance with subsection (g)); and

"(3) the student contribution from assets (determined in accordance with subsection (h)).

"(b) PARENTS' CONTRIBUTION FROM ADJUSTED AVAILABLE INCOME.—The parents' contribution from adjusted available income is equal to the amount determined by—

"(1) computing adjusted available income by adding—

"(A) the parents' available income (determined in accordance with subsection (c)); and

"(B) the parents' contribution from assets (determined in accordance with subsection (d));

"(2) assessing such adjusted available income in accordance with the assessment schedule set forth in subsection (e); and

"(3) dividing the assessment resulting under paragraph (2) by the number of the family members who are enrolled or accepted for enrollment, on at least a half-time basis, in a degree, certificate, or other program leading to a recognized educational credential at an institution of higher education that is an eligible institution in accordance with the provisions of section 487 during the award period for which assistance under this title is requested; except that the amount determined under this subsection shall not be less than zero.

"(c) PARENTS' AVAILABLE INCOME.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The parents' available income is determined by deducting from total income (as defined in section 480)—

"(A) Federal income taxes;

"(B) an allowance for State and other taxes, determined in accordance with paragraph (2);

"(C) an allowance for social security taxes, determined in accordance with paragraph (3);

"(D) an income protection allowance, determined in accordance with paragraph (4); and

"(E) an employment expense allowance, determined in accordance with paragraph (5).

"(2) ALLOWANCE FOR STATE AND OTHER TAXES.—The allowance for State and other taxes is equal to an amount determined by multiplying total income (as defined in section 480) by a percentage determined according to the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"Percentages for Computation of State and Other Tax Allowance

If parents' State or territory of residence is—	And parents' total income is—

For each additional add:	2,520	2,520	2,520	2,520	2,520

"(5) EMPLOYMENT EXPENSE ALLOWANCE.—The employment expense allowance is determined as follows (or using a successor provision prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"(A) If both parents were employed in the year for which their income is reported and both have their incomes reported in determining the expected family contribution, such allowance is equal to the lesser of $2,500 or 35 percent of the earned income of the parent with the lesser earned income.

"(B) If a parent qualifies as a surviving spouse or as a head of household as defined in section 2 of the Internal Revenue Code, such allowance is equal to the lesser of $2,500 or 35 percent of such parent's earned income.

"(d) PARENTS' CONTRIBUTION FROM ASSETS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The parents' contribution from assets is equal to—

"(A) the parental net worth (determined in accordance with paragraph (2)); minus

"(B) the education savings and asset protection allowance (determined in accordance with paragraph (3)); multiplied by

"(C) the asset conversion rate (determined in accordance with paragraph (4)), except that the result shall not be less than zero.

"(2) PARENTAL NET WORTH.—The parental net worth is calculated by adding—

"(A) the current balance of checking and savings accounts and cash on hand;

"(B) the net value of investments and real estate, excluding the net value of the principal place of residence; and

"(C) the adjusted net worth of a business or farm, computed on the basis of the net worth of such business or farm (hereafter in this subsection referred to as 'NW'), determined in accordance with the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478), except as provided under section 480(f):

"Adjusted Net Worth of a Business or Farm

If the net worth of a business or farm is—	Then the adjusted net worth is:

$19,001 or more	$5,140 + 47% of AAI over $19,000

"(f) COMPUTATIONS IN CASE OF SEPARATION, DIVORCE, REMARRIAGE, OR DEATH.—

"(1) DIVORCED OR SEPARATED PARENTS.—Parental income and assets for a student whose parents are divorced or separated is determined under the following procedures:

"(A) Include only the income and assets of the parent with whom the student resided for the greater portion of the 12-month period preceding the date of the application.

"(B) If the preceding criterion does not apply, include only the income and assets of the parent who provided the greater portion of the student's support for the 12-month period preceding the date of application.

"(C) If neither of the preceding criteria apply, include only the income and assets of the parent who provided the greater support during the most recent calendar year for which parental support was provided.

"(2) DEATH OF A PARENT.—Parental income and assets in the case of the death of any parent is determined as follows:

"(A) If either of the parents has died, the student shall include only the income and assets of the surviving parent.

"(B) If both parents have died, the student shall not report any parental income or assets.

"(3) REMARRIED PARENTS.—Income in the case of a parent whose income and assets are taken into account under paragraph (1) of this subsection, or a parent who is a widow or widower and whose income is taken into account under paragraph (2) of this subsection, has remarried, is determined as follows: The income of that parent's spouse shall be included in determining the parent's adjusted available income only if—

"(A) the student's parent and the stepparent are married as of the date of application for the award year concerned; and

"(B) the student is not an independent student.

"(g) STUDENT CONTRIBUTION FROM AVAILABLE INCOME.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The student contribution from available income is equal to—

"(A) the student's total income (determined in accordance with section 480); minus

"(B) the adjustment to student income (determined in accordance with paragraph (2); multiplied by

"(C) the assessment rate as determined in paragraph (5);

except that the amount determined under this subsection shall not be less than zero.

"(2) ADJUSTMENT TO STUDENT INCOME.—The adjustment to student income is equal to the sum of—

"(A) Federal income taxes of the student;

"(B) an allowance for State and other income taxes (determined in accordance with paragraph (3));

"(C) an allowance for social security taxes determined in accordance with paragraph (4); and

"(D) an income protection allowance of $1,750.

"(3) ALLOWANCE FOR STATE AND OTHER INCOME TAXES.—The allowance for State and other income taxes is equal to an amount determined by multiplying total income (as defined in section 480) by a percentage determined according to the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"Percentages for Computation of State and Other Tax Allowance

If the students' State or territory of residence is—	The percentage is—
Alaska, American Samoa, Florida, Guam, Nevada, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Trust Territory, Virgin Islands, Washington, Wyoming	0
Connecticut, Louisiana, Puerto Rico	1
Arizona, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota	2
Alabama, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Jersey, Oklahoma	3
Arkansas, Georgia, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Pennsylvania, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Canada, Mexico	4
California, Idaho, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Carolina	5
Hawaii, Maryland, Michigan, Wisconsin	6
Delaware, District of Columbia, Minnesota, Oregon	7
New York	8

"(4) ALLOWANCE FOR SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES.—The allowance for social security taxes is equal to the amount earned by the student multiplied by the social security withholding rate appropriate to the tax year of the earnings, up to the maximum statutory social security tax withholding amount for that same tax year.

"(5) The student's available income (determined in accordance with paragraph (1) of this subsection) is assessed at 50 percent.

"(h) STUDENT CONTRIBUTION FROM ASSETS.—The student contribution from assets is determined by calculating the net assets of the student and multiplying such amount by 35 percent, except that the result shall not be less than zero.

"(i) ADJUSTMENTS TO PARENTS' CONTRIBUTION FOR ENROLLMENT PERIODS OTHER THAN 9 MONTHS FOR PURPOSES OTHER THAN SUBPART 2 OF PART A OF THIS TITLE.—For periods of enrollment other than 9 months, the parents' contribution from adjusted available income (as determined under subsection (b)) is determined as follows for purposes other than subpart 2 of part A of this title:

"(1) For periods of enrollment less than 9 months, the parents' contribution from adjusted available income is divided by 9 and the result multiplied by the number of months enrolled.

"(2) For periods of enrollment greater than 9 months—

"(A) the parents' adjusted available income (determined in accordance with subsection (b)(1)) is increased by the difference between the income protection allowance (determined in accordance with subsection (c)(4)) for a family of four and a family of five, each with one child in college;

"(B) the resulting revised parents' adjusted available income is assessed according to subsection (e) and adjusted according to subsection (b)(3) to determine a revised parents' contribution from adjusted available income;

"(C) the original parents' contribution from adjusted available income is subtracted from the revised parents' contribution from adjusted available income, and the result is divided by 12 to determine the monthly adjustment amount; and

"(D) the original parents' contribution from adjusted available income is increased by the product of the monthly adjustment amount multiplied by the number of months greater than 9 for which the student will be enrolled.

"SEC. 476. FAMILY CONTRIBUTION FOR INDEPENDENT STUDENTS WITHOUT DEPENDENTS OTHER THAN A SPOUSE.

"(a) COMPUTATION OF EXPECTED FAMILY CONTRIBUTION.—For each independent student without dependents other than a spouse, the expected family contribution is determined by—

"(1) adding—

"(A) the family's contribution from available income (determined in accordance with subsection (b)); and

"(B) the family's contribution from assets (determined in accordance with subsection (c)); and

"(2) dividing the sum resulting under paragraph (1) by the number of students who are enrolled or accepted for enrollment, on at least a half-time basis, in a degree, certificate, or other program leading to a recognized educational credential at an institution of higher education that is an eligible institution in accordance with the provisions of section 487 during the award period for which assistance under this title is requested; except that the amount determined under this subsection shall not be less than zero.

"(b) FAMILY'S CONTRIBUTION FROM AVAILABLE INCOME.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The family's contribution from income is determined by—

"(A) deducting from total income (as defined in section 480)—

"(i) Federal income taxes;

"(ii) an allowance for State and other taxes, determined in accordance with paragraph (2);

"(iii) an allowance for social security taxes, determined in accordance with paragraph (3);

"(iv) an income protection allowance of—

"(I) $3,000 for single students;

"(II) $3,000 for married students where both are enrolled pursuant to subsection (a)(2); and

"(III) $6,000 for married students where one is enrolled pursuant to subsection (a)(2); and

"(v) in the case where a spouse is present, an employment expense allowance, as determined in accordance with paragraph (4); and

"(B) assessing such available income in accordance with paragraph (5).

"(2) ALLOWANCE FOR STATE AND OTHER TAXES.—The allowance for State and other taxes is equal to an amount determined by multiplying total income (as defined in section 480) by a percentage determined according to the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"Percentages for Computation of State and Other Tax Allowance

If the students' State or territory of residence is—	The percentage is—
Alaska, American Samoa, Florida, Guam, Nevada, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Trust Territory, Virgin Islands, Washington, Wyoming	0

Hawaii, Maryland, Michigan, Wisconsin	6
Delaware, District of Columbia, Minnesota, Oregon	7
New York	8
Other	4

"(3) ALLOWANCE FOR SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES.—The allowance for social security taxes is equal to the amount earned by the student (and spouse, if appropriate), multiplied by the social security withholding rate appropriate to the tax year preceding the award year, up to the maximum statutory social security tax withholding amount for that same tax year.

"(4) EMPLOYMENT EXPENSES ALLOWANCE.—The employment expense allowance is determined as follows (or using a successor provision prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"(A) If the student is married and the student's spouse is employed in the year for which income is reported, such allowance is equal to the lesser of $2,500 or 35 percent of the earned income of the student or spouse with the lesser earned income.

"(B) If a student is not married, the employment expense allowance is zero.

"(5) ASSESSMENT OF AVAILABLE INCOME.—The family's available income (determined in accordance with paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection) is assessed at 50 percent.

"(c) FAMILY CONTRIBUTION FROM ASSETS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The family's contribution from assets is equal to—

"(A) the family's net worth (determined in accordance with paragraph (2)); minus

"(B) the asset protection allowance (determined in accordance with paragraph (3)); multiplied by

"(C) the asset conversion rate (determined in accordance with paragraph (4)); except that the family's contribution from assets shall not be less than zero.

"(2) FAMILY'S NET WORTH.—The family's net worth is calculated by adding—

"(A) the current balance of checking and savings accounts and cash on hand;

"(B) the net value of investments and real estate, excluding the net value in the principal place of residence; and

"(C) the adjusted net worth of a business or farm, computed on the basis of the net worth of such business or farm (hereafter referred to as 'NW'), determined in accordance with the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478), except as provided under section 480(f):

"Adjusted Net Worth of a Business or Farm

If the net worth of a business or farm is—	Then the adjusted net worth is—
Less than $1	$0

"SEC. 477. FAMILY CONTRIBUTION FOR INDEPENDENT STUDENTS WITH DEPENDENTS OTHER THAN A SPOUSE.

"(a) COMPUTATION OF EXPECTED FAMILY CONTRIBUTION.—For each independent student with dependents other than a spouse, the expected family contribution is equal to the amount determined by—

"(1) computing adjusted available income by adding—

"(A) the family's available income (determined in accordance with subsection (b)); and

"(B) the family's contribution from assets (determined in accordance with subsection (c));

"(2) assessing such adjusted available income in accordance with an assessment schedule set forth in subsection (d); and

"(3) dividing the assessment resulting under paragraph (2) by the number of family members who are enrolled or accepted for enrollment, on at least a half-time basis, in a degree, certificate, or other program leading to a recognized educational credential at an institution of higher education that is an eligible institution in accordance with the provisions of section 487 during the award period for which assistance under this title is requested; except that the amount determined under this subsection shall not be less than zero.

"(b) FAMILY'S AVAILABLE INCOME.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The family's available income is determined by deducting from total income (as defined in section 480)—

"(A) Federal income taxes;

"(B) an allowance for State and other taxes, determined in accordance with paragraph (2);

"(C) an allowance for social security taxes, determined in accordance with paragraph (3);

"(D) an income protection allowance, determined in accordance with paragraph (4); and

"(E) an employment expense allowance, determined in accordance with paragraph (5).

"(2) ALLOWANCE FOR STATE AND OTHER TAXES.—The allowance for State and other taxes is equal to an amount determined by multiplying total income (as defined in section 480) by a percentage determined according to the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"Percentages for Computation of State and Other Tax Allowance

If student's State or territory of residence is—	And family's total income is—

For each additional add:	2,520	2,520	2,520	2,520	2,520

"(5) EMPLOYMENT EXPENSE ALLOWANCE.—The employment expense allowance is determined as follows (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"(A) If the student is married and the student's spouse is employed in the year for which their income is reported, such allowance is equal to the lesser of $2,500 or 35 percent of the earned income of the student or spouse with the lesser earned income.

"(B) If a student qualifies as a surviving spouse or as a head of household as defined in section 2 of the Internal Revenue Code, such allowance is equal to the lesser of $2,500 or 35 percent of the student's earned income.

"(c) FAMILY'S CONTRIBUTION FROM ASSETS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The family's contribution from assets is equal to—

"(A) the family net worth (determined in accordance with paragraph (2)); minus

"(B) the asset protection allowance (determined in accordance with paragraph (3)); multiplied by

"(C) the asset conversion rate (determined in accordance with paragraph (4)), except that the result shall not be less than zero.

"(2) FAMILY NET WORTH.—The family net worth is calculated by adding—

"(A) the current balance of checking and savings accounts and cash on hand;

"(B) the net value of investments and real estate, excluding the net value in the principal place of residence; and

"(C) the adjusted net worth of a business or farm, computed on the basis of the net worth of such business or farm (hereafter referred to as 'NW'), determined in accordance with the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478), except as provided under section 480(f):

"Adjusted Net Worth of a Business or Farm

If the net worth of a business or farm is—	Then the adjusted net worth is—
Less than $1	$0
$1–$75,000	40 percent of NW
$75,001–$225,000	$30,000 plus 50 percent of NW over $75,000
$225,001–$375,000	$105,000 plus 60 percent of NW over $225,000
$375,001 or more	$195,000 plus 100 percent of NW over $375,000

"(3) ASSET PROTECTION ALLOWANCE.—The asset protection allowance is calculated according to the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"Asset Protection Allowances for Families and Students

If the age of the student is—	And the student is married	single then the allowance is—
25 or less	$ 0	$0

63	62,400	41,500
64	64,600	42,800
65 or more	66,800	44,000

"(4) ASSET CONVERSION RATE.—The asset conversion rate is 12 percent.

"(d) ASSESSMENT SCHEDULE.—The adjusted available income (as determined under subsection (a)(1) and hereafter referred to as 'AAI') is assessed according to the following table (or a successor table prescribed by the Secretary under section 478):

"Assessment From Adjusted Available Income (AAI)

If AAI is—	Then the assessment is—
Less than −$3,409	−$750
−$3,409 to $9,400	22% of AAI
$9,401 to $11,800	$2,068 + 25% of AAI over $9,400
$11,801 to $14,200	$2,668 + 29% of AAI over $11,800
$14,201 to $16,600	$3,364 + 34% of AAI over $14,200
$16,601 to $19,000	$4,180 + 40% of AAI over $16,600
$19,001 or more	$5,140 + 47% of AAI over $19,000

"SEC. 478. REGULATIONS; UPDATED TABLES.

"(a) AUTHORITY TO PRESCRIBE REGULATIONS RESTRICTED.—(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary shall not have the authority to prescribe regulations to carry out this part except—

"(A) to prescribe updated tables in accordance with subsections (b) through (h) of this section; or

"(B) to propose modifications in the need analysis methodology required by this part.

"(2) Any regulation proposed by the Secretary that (A) updates tables in a manner that does not comply with subsections (b) through (h) of this section, or (B) that proposes modifications under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection, shall not be effective unless approved by joint resolution of the Congress by May 1 following the date such regulations are published in the Federal Register in accordance with section 482. If the Congress fails to approve such regulations by such May 1, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register in accordance with section 482 updated tables for the applicable award year that are prescribed in accordance with subsections (b) through (h) of this section.

"(b) INCOME PROTECTION ALLOWANCE.—For each academic year after academic year 1992–1993, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a revised table of income protection allowances for the purpose of sections 475(c)(4) and 477(b)(4). Such revised table shall be developed by increasing each of the dollar amounts contained in the table in each such section by a percentage equal to the estimated percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index (as determined by the Secretary) between December 1992 and the December next preceding the beginning of such academic year, and rounding the result to the nearest $10.

"(c) ADJUSTED NET WORTH OF A FARM OR BUSINESS.—For each award year after award year 1992–1993, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a revised table of adjusted net worth of a farm or business for purposes of sections 475(d)(2)(C), 476(c)(2)(C), and 477(c)(2)(C). Such revised table shall be developed—

"(1) by increasing each dollar amount that refers to net worth of a farm or business by a percentage equal to the estimated percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index (as determined by the Secretary) between 1992 and the December next preceding the beginning of such award year, and rounding the result to the nearest $5,000; and

"(2) by adjusting the dollar amounts '$30,000', '$105,000', and '$195,000' to reflect the changes made pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(d) EDUCATION SAVINGS AND ASSET PROTECTION ALLOWANCE.—For each award year after award year 1992–1993, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a revised table of allowances for the purpose of sections 475(d)(3), 476(c)(3), and 477(c)(3). Such revised table shall be developed by determining the present value cost, rounded to the nearest $100, of an annuity that would provide, for each age cohort of 40 and above, a supplemental income at age 65 (adjusted for inflation) equal to the difference between the moderate family income (as most recently determined by the Bureau of Labor Statistics), and the current average social security retirement benefits. For each age cohort below 40, the allowance shall be computed by decreasing the allowance for age 40, as updated, by one-fifteenth for each year of age below age 40 and rounding the result to the nearest $100. In making such determinations—

"(1) inflation shall be presumed to be 6 percent per year;

"(2) the rate of return of an annuity shall be presumed to be 8 percent; and

"(3) the sales commission on an annuity shall be presumed to be 6 percent.

"(e) ASSESSMENT SCHEDULES AND RATES.—For each award year after award year 1992–1993, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a revised table of assessments from adjusted available income for the purpose of sections 475(e) and 477(d). Such revised table shall be developed—

"(1) by increasing each dollar amount that refers to adjusted available income by a percentage equal to the estimated percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index (as determined by the Secretary) between December 1992 and the December next preceding the beginning of such academic year, rounded to the nearest $100; and

"(2) by adjusting the other dollar amounts to reflect the changes made pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(f) DEFINITION OF CONSUMER PRICE INDEX.—As used in this section, the term 'Consumer Price Index' means the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers published by the Department of Labor. Each annual update of tables to reflect changes in the Consumer Price Index shall be corrected for misestimation of actual changes in such Index in previous years.

"(g) STATE AND OTHER TAX ALLOWANCES.—For each award year after award year 1992–1993, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a revised table of State and other tax allowances for the purpose of sections 475(c)(2), 475(g)(3), 476(b)(2), and 477(b)(2). The Secretary shall develop such revised table after review of the Department of the Treasury's Statistics of Income file and determination of the percentage of income that each State's taxes represent.

"(h) EMPLOYMENT EXPENSE ALLOWANCE.—For each award year after award year 1992–1993, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a revised table of employment expense allowances for the purpose of sections 475(c)(5), 476(b)(4), and 477(b)(5). Such revised table shall be developed by increasing the dollar amount specified in sections 475(c)(5)(A), 475(c)(5)(B), 476(b)(4)(A), 476(b)(4)(B), 477(b)(5)(A), and 477(b)(5)(B) to reflect increases in the amount and percent of the Bureau of Labor Standards budget of the marginal costs for meals away from home, apparel and upkeep, transportation, and housekeeping services for a two-worker versus one-worker family.

"SEC. 479. SIMPLIFIED NEEDS TESTS.

"(a) SIMPLIFIED APPLICATION SECTION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall develop and use an easily identifiable simplified application section as part of the common financial reporting form prescribed under section 483(a) for families described in subsections (b) and (c) this section.

"(2) REDUCED DATA REQUIREMENTS.—The simplified application form shall—

"(A) in the case of a family meeting the requirements of subsection (b)(1), permit such family to submit only the data elements required under subsection (b)(2) for the purposes of establishing eligibility for student financial aid under this part; and

"(B) in the case of a family meeting the requirements of subsection (c), permit such family to be treated as having an expected family contribution equal to zero for purposes of establishing such eligibility and to submit only the data elements required to make a determination under subsection (c).

"(b) SIMPLIFIED NEEDS TEST.—

"(1) ELIGIBILITY.—An applicant is eligible to file a simplified form containing the elements required by paragraph (2) if—

"(A) in the case of an applicant who is a dependent student—

"(i) the student's parents file or are eligible to file a form described in paragraph (3) or certify that they are not required to file an income tax return and the student files or is eligible to file such a form or certifies that the student is not required to file an income tax return; and

"(ii) the total adjusted gross income of the parents (excluding any income of the dependent student) is less than $50,000; or

"(B) in the case of an applicant who is an independent student—

"(i) the student files or is eligible to file a form described in paragraph (3) or certifies that the student is not required to file such an income tax return; and

"(ii) the adjusted gross income of the student (and the student's spouse, if any) is less than $50,000.

"(2) SIMPLIFIED TEST ELEMENTS.—The five elements to be used for the simplified needs analysis are—

"(A) adjusted gross income,

"(B) Federal taxes paid,

"(C) untaxed income and benefits,

"(D) the number of family members,

"(E) the number of family members in postsecondary education; and

"(F) an allowance (A) for State and other taxes, as defined in section 475(c)(2) for dependent students and in section 477(b)(2) for independent students with dependents other than a spouse, or (B) for State and other income taxes, as defined in section 476(b)(2) for independent students without dependents other than a spouse.

"(3) QUALIFYING FORMS.—A student or family files a form described in this paragraph if the student or family, respectively, files—

"(A) a form 1040A or 1040EZ required pursuant to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

"(B) an income tax return required pursuant to the tax code of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, or Palau.

"(c) ZERO EXPECTED FAMILY CONTRIBUTION.—The Secretary shall consider an applicant to have an expected family contribution equal to zero if—

"(1) in the case of a dependent student—

"(A) the student's parents did not file, and were not required to file, a form 1040 required pursuant to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

"(B) the sum of the adjusted gross income of the parents is less than or equal to the maximum amount of income (rounded annually to the nearest thousand dollars) that may be earned in order to claim the maximum Federal earned income credit; or

"(2) in the case of an independent student with dependents other than a spouse—

"(A) the student (and the student's spouse, if any) did not file, and was not required to file, a form 1040 required pursuant to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

"(B) the sum of the adjusted gross income of the student and spouse (if appropriate) is less than or equal to the maximum amount of income (rounded annually to the nearest thousand dollars) that may be earned in order to claim the maximum Federal earned income credit.

An individual is not required to qualify or file for the earned income credit in order to be eligible under this subsection.

"SEC. 479A. DISCRETION OF STUDENT FINANCIAL AID ADMINISTRATORS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this part shall be interpreted as limiting the authority of the financial aid administrator, on the basis of adequate documentation, to make adjustments on a case-by-case basis to the cost of attendance or the values of the data items required to calculate the expected student or parent contribution (or both) to allow for treatment of an individual eligible applicant with special circumstances. However, this authority shall not be construed to permit aid administrators to deviate from the contributions expected in the absence of special circumstances. Special circumstances shall be conditions that differentiate an individual student from a class of students rather than conditions that exist across a class of students. Adequate documentation for such adjustments shall substantiate such special circumstances of individual students. In addition, nothing in this title shall be interpreted as limiting the authority of the student financial aid administrator in such cases to request and use supplementary information about the financial status or personal circumstances of eligible applicants in selecting recipients and determining the amount of awards under this title. No student or parent shall be charged a fee for collecting, processing, or delivering such supplementary information.

"(b) ADJUSTMENTS TO ASSETS TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—A student financial aid administrator shall be considered to be making a necessary adjustment in accordance with subsection (a) if—

"(1) the administrator makes adjustments excluding from family income any proceeds of a sale of farm or business assets of a family if such sale results from a voluntary or involuntary foreclosure, forfeiture, or bankruptcy or an involuntary liquidation; or

"(2) the administrator makes adjustments in the award level of a student with a disability so as to take into consideration the additional costs such student incurs as a result of such student's disability.

"SEC. 479B. DISREGARD OF STUDENT AID IN OTHER FEDERAL PROGRAMS.

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, student financial assistance received under this title, or under Bureau of Indian Affairs student assistance programs, shall not be taken into account in determining the need or eligibility of any person for benefits or assistance, or the amount of such benefits or assistance, under any Federal, State, or local program financed in whole or in part with Federal funds.

"SEC. 479C. NATIVE AMERICAN STUDENTS.

"In determining family contributions for Native American students, computations performed pursuant to this part shall exclude—

"(1) any income and assets of $2,000 or less per individual payment received by the student (and spouse) and student's parents under the Per Capita Act or the Distribution of Judgment Funds Act; and

"(2) any income received by the student (and spouse) and student's parents under the Alaskan Native Claims Settlement Act or the Maine Indian Claims Settlement Act.

"SEC. 480. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part:

"(a) TOTAL INCOME.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the term 'total income' is equal to adjusted gross income plus untaxed income and benefits for the preceding tax year minus excludable income (as defined in subsection (e)).

"(2) No portion of any student financial assistance received from any program by an individual shall be included as income or assets in the computation of expected family contribution for any program funded in whole or in part under this Act.

"(b) UNTAXED INCOME AND BENEFITS.—The term 'untaxed income and benefits' means—

"(1) child support received;

"(2) welfare benefits, including aid to families with dependent children under a State plan approved under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act and aid to dependent children;

"(3) workman's compensation;

"(4) veterans' benefits such as death pension, dependency, and indemnity compensation, but excluding veterans' education benefits as defined in subsection (c);

"(5) interest on tax-free bonds;

"(6) housing, food, and other allowances (excluding rent subsidies for low-income housing) for military, clergy, and others (including cash payments and cash value of benefits);

"(7) cash support or any money paid on the student's behalf, except, for dependent students, funds provided by the student's parents;

"(8) the amount of earned income credit claimed for Federal income tax purposes;

"(9) untaxed portion of pensions;

"(10) credit for Federal tax on special fuels;

"(11) the amount of foreign income excluded for purposes of Federal income taxes;

"(12) untaxed social security benefits;

"(13) payments to individual retirement accounts and Keogh accounts excluded from income for Federal income tax purposes; and

"(14) any other untaxed income and benefits, such as Black Lung Benefits, Refugee Assistance, railroad retirement benefits, or Job Training Partnership Act noneducational benefits.

"(c) VETERAN AND VETERANS' EDUCATION BENEFITS.—(1) The term 'veteran' means any individual who—

"(A) has engaged in the active duty in the United States Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, or Coast Guard; and

"(B) was released under a condition other than dishonorable.

"(2) The term 'veterans' education benefits' means veterans' benefits the student will receive during the award year, including but not limited to the following:

"(A) Title 10, chapter 2: Reserve Officer Training Corps scholarship.

"(B) Title 10, chapter 106: Selective Reserve.

"(C) Title 10, chapter 107: Selective Reserve Educational Assistance Program.

"(D) Title 37, chapter 2: Reserve Officer Training Corps Program.

"(E) Title 38, chapter 30: Montgomery GI Bill—active duty.

"(F) Title 38, chapter 31: vocational rehabilitation.

"(G) Title 38, chapter 32: Post-Vietnam Era Veterans' Educational Assistance Program.

"(H) Title 38, chapter 35: Dependents Educational Assistance Program.

"(I) Public Law 97-376, section 156: Restored Entitlement Program for Survivors (or Quayle benefits).

"(J) Public Law 96-342, section 903: Educational Assistance Pilot Program.

"(d) INDEPENDENT STUDENT.—The term 'independent', when used with respect to a student, means any individual who—

"(1) is 24 years of age or older by December 31 of the award year;

"(2) is an orphan or ward of the court;

"(3) is a veteran of the Armed Forces of the United States (as defined in subsection (c)(1));

"(4) is a graduate or professional student;

"(5) is a married individual;

"(6) has legal dependents other than a spouse; or

"(7) is a student for whom a financial aid administrator makes a documented determination of independence by reason of other unusual circumstances.

"(e) EXCLUDABLE INCOME.—The term 'excludable income' means—

"(1) any student financial assistance awarded based on need as determined in accordance with the provisions of this part, including any income earned from work under part C of this title;

"(2) any living allowance received by a participant in a program established under the National and Community Service Act of 1990;

"(3) child support payments made by the student or parent; and

"(4) payments made and services provided under part E of title IV of the Social Security Act.

"(f) ASSETS.—(1) The term 'assets' means cash on hand, including the amount in checking and savings accounts, time deposits, money market funds, trusts, stocks, bonds, other securities, mutual funds, tax shelters, and the net value of real estate, income producing property, and business and farm assets.

"(2) With respect to determinations of need under this title, other than for subpart 4 of part A, the term 'assets' shall not include the net value of—

"(A) the family's principal place of residence; or

"(B) a family farm on which the family resides.

"(g) NET ASSETS.—The term 'net assets' means the current market value at the time of application of the assets (as defined in subsection (f)), minus the outstanding liabilities or indebtedness against the assets.

"(h) TREATMENT OF INCOME TAXES PAID TO OTHER JURISDICTIONS.—(1) The tax on income paid to the Governments of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, or the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, or Palau under the laws applicable to those jurisdictions, or the comparable tax paid to the central government of a foreign country, shall be treated as Federal income taxes.

"(2) References in this part to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, Federal income tax forms, and the Internal Revenue Service shall, for purposes of the tax described in paragraph (1), be treated as references to the corresponding laws, tax forms, and tax collection agencies of those jurisdictions, respectively, subject to such adjustments as the Secretary may provide by regulation.

"(i) CURRENT BALANCE.—The term 'current balance of checking and savings accounts' does not include any funds over which an individual is barred from exercising discretion and control because of the actions of any State in declaring a bank emergency due to the insolvency of a private deposit insurance fund.

"(j) OTHER FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE; TUITION PREPAYMENT PLANS.—(1) For purposes of determining a student's eligibility for funds under this title, estimated financial assistance not received under this title shall include all scholarships, grants, loans, or other assistance known to the institution at the time the determination of the student's need is made, including veterans' education benefits as defined in subsection (c).

"(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), for purposes of determining a student's eligibility for funds under this title, tuition prepayment plans shall reduce the cost of attendance (as determined under section 472) by the amount of the prepayment, and shall not be considered estimated financial assistance.

"(B) If the institutional expense covered by the prepayment must be part of the student's cost of attendance for accounting purposes, the prepayment shall be considered estimated financial assistance.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE FOR AMENDMENT TO PART F.—The changes made in part F of title IV of the Act by the amendment made by this section shall apply with respect to determinations of need under such part F for award years beginning on or after July 1, 1993.

PART G—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 481. DEFINITIONS.

(a) INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION.—Section 481 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1088(a)) is amended by striking the heading of such section and subsection (a) and inserting the following:

"SEC. 481. DEFINITIONS.

"(a) INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION.—(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) through (4) of this subsection, the term 'institution of higher education' for purposes of this title includes, in addition to the institutions covered by the definition in section 1201(a)—

"(A) a proprietary institution of higher education;

"(B) a postsecondary vocational institution; and

"(C) only for the purposes of part B of this title, an institution outside the United States which is comparable to an institution of higher education as defined in section 1201(a) and which has been approved by the Secretary for the purpose of part B.

"(2)(A) For the purpose of qualifying as an institution under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection, the Secretary shall establish criteria by regulation for the approval of institutions outside the United States and for the determination that such institutions are comparable to an institution of higher education as defined in section 1201(a). In the case of a graduate medical school outside the United States, such criteria shall include a requirement that a student attending a graduate medical school outside the United States is ineligible for loans made, insured, or guaranteed under part B of this title unless—

"(i)(I) at least 60 percent of those enrolled and at least 60 percent of the graduates of the graduate medical school outside the United States were not persons described in section 484(a)(5) in the year preceding the year for which a student is seeking a loan under part B of this title; and

"(II) at least 60 percent of the individuals who were students or graduates of the graduate medical school outside the United States (both nationals of the United States and others) taking the examinations administered by the Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates received a passing score in the year preceding the year for which a student is seeking a loan under part B of this title; or

"(ii) the institution's clinical training program was approved by a State as of January 1, 1992.

"(B) For the purpose of qualifying as an institution under paragraph (1)(C), the Secretary shall establish an advisory panel of medical experts which shall—

"(i) evaluate the standards of accreditation applied to applicant foreign medical schools; and

"(ii) determine the comparability of those standards to standards for accreditation applied to United States medical schools.

If such accreditation standards are determined not to be comparable, the foreign medical school shall be required to meet the requirements of section 1201(a).

"(C) The failure of an institution outside the United States to provide, release, or authorize release to the Secretary of such information as may be required by subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall render such institution ineligible for the purpose of part B of this title.

"(D) The Secretary shall, not later than one year after the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, prepare and submit to the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate a report on the implementation of the regulations required by subparagraph (A) of this paragraph.

"(E) If, pursuant to this paragraph, an institution loses eligibility to participate in the programs under this title, then a student enrolled at such institution may, notwithstanding such loss of eligibility, continue to be eligible to receive a loan under part B while attending such institution for the academic year succeeding the academic year in which such loss of eligibility occurred.

"(3) An institution shall not be considered to meet the definition of an an institution of higher education in paragraph (1), if such institution—

"(A) offers more than 50 percent of such institution's courses by correspondence, unless the institution is an institution that meets the definition in section 521(4)(C) of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act;

"(B) enrolls 50 percent or more of its students in correspondence courses, unless the institution is an institution that meets the definition in such section;

"(C) has a student enrollment in which more than 25 percent of the students are incarcerated, except that the Secretary may waive the prohibition of this subparagraph for a nonprofit institution that provides a 4-year or a 2-year program of instruction (or both) for which it awards a bachelor's or associate's degree, respectively; or

"(D) has a student enrollment in which more than 50 percent of the students are admitted pursuant to section 484(d) and does not provide a 4-year or a 2-year program of instruction (or both) for which it awards a bachelor's or associate's degree, respectively.

"(4) An institution shall not be considered to meet the definition of an institution of higher education in paragraph (1) if—

"(A) such institution has filed for bankruptcy; or

"(B) the institution, its owner, or its chief executive officer has been convicted of, or has pled nolo contendere or guilty to, a crime involving the acquisition, use, or expenditure of funds under this title, or has been judicially determined to have committed fraud involving funds under this title.

"(5) The Secretary shall certify an institution's qualification as an institution of higher education in accordance with the requirements of subpart 3 of part H.

"(6) An institution of higher education shall not be considered to meet the definition of an institution of higher education in paragraph (1) if such institution is removed from eligibility for funds under this title as a result of an action pursuant to part H of this title.".

(b) PROPRIETARY INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION.—Section 481(b) of the Act is amended by—

(1) in clause (1), by striking "not less than a 6-month program" and inserting "an eligible program";

(2) in clause (4)—

(A) by striking "for this purpose" and inserting "pursuant to part H of this title"; and

(B) by striking "and" at the end thereof;

(3) by striking the period at the end of clause (5) and inserting the following: ", and (6) which has at least 15 percent of its revenues from sources that are not derived from funds provided under this title, as determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary."; and

(4) by striking the last sentence.

(c) POSTSECONDARY VOCATIONAL INSTITUTION.—Section 481(c)(1) of the Act is amended by striking "not less than a 6-month program" and inserting "an eligible program".

(d) AWARD YEAR.—Section 481(d) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(d) ACADEMIC AND AWARD YEAR.—(1) For the purpose of any program under this title, the term 'award year' shall be defined as the period beginning July 1 and ending June 30 of the following year.

"(2) For the purpose of any program under this title, the term 'academic year' shall require a minimum of 30 weeks of instructional time in which a full-time student is expected to complete at least 24 semester or trimester hours or 36 quarter hours at an institution which measures program length in credit hours or at least 900 clock hours at an institution which measures program length in clock hours.".

(e) ELIGIBLE PROGRAM.—Section 481(e) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(e) ELIGIBLE PROGRAM.—(1) For purposes of this title, the term 'eligible program' means a program of at least—

"(A) 600 clock hours of instruction, 16 semester hours, or 24 quarter hours, offered during a minimum of 15 weeks, in the case of a program that—

"(i) provides a program of training to prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized profession; and

"(ii) admits students who have not completed the equivalent of an associate degree; or

"(B) 300 clock hours of instruction, 8 semester hours, or 12 hours, offered during a minimum of 10 weeks, in the case of—

"(i) an undergraduate program that requires the equivalent of an associate degree for admissions; or

"(ii) a graduate or professional program.

"(2) The Secretary shall develop regulations to determine the quality of programs of less than 600 clock hours in length. Such regulations shall require, at a minimum, that the programs have a verified rate of completion of at least 70 percent and a verified rate of placement of at least 70 percent. Pursuant to these regulations and notwithstanding paragraph (1), the Secretary shall allow programs of less than 600 clock hours, but greater than 300 clock hours, in length to be eligible to participate in the programs authorized under part B of this title.".

(f) THIRD PARTY SERVICER.—Section 481 of the Act is amended by adding the following new subsection after subsection (e):

"(f) THIRD PARTY SERVICER.—For purposes of this title, the term 'third party servicer' means any State or private, profit or nonprofit organization which enters into a contract with—

"(1) any eligible institution of higher education to administer, through either manual or automated processing, any aspect of such institution's student assistance programs under this title; or

"(2) any guaranty agency, or any eligible lender, to administer, through either manual or automated processing, any aspect of such guaranty agency's or lender's student loan programs under part B of this title, including originating, guaranteeing, monitoring, processing, servicing, or collecting loans.".

SEC. 482. MASTER CALENDAR.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Section 482(c) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1089(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) DELAY OF EFFECTIVE DATE OF LATE PUBLICATIONS.—Any regulatory changes initiated by the Secretary affecting the programs pursuant to this title that have not been published in final form by December 1 prior to the start of the award year shall not become effective until the beginning of the second award year after such December 1 date.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 482(a)(1) of the Act is amended by striking "sections 411E and" each place it appears in subparagraphs (B) and (C) and inserting "section".

(2) Section 482(b) of the Act is amended by striking "subpart 2" and inserting "subpart 3".

SEC. 483. FORMS AND REGULATIONS.

(a) FORMS AND PROCESSING.—Section 483 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1090) is amended by striking subsections (a) and (b) and inserting the following:

"SEC. 483. (a) COMMON FINANCIAL AID FORM AND PROCESSING.—

"(1) SINGLE FORM REQUIRED.—The Secretary, in cooperation with representatives of agencies and organizations involved in student financial assistance, shall produce, distribute, and process free of charge a common financial reporting form to be used to determine the need and eligibility of a student for financial assistance under parts A, C, D, and E of this title (other than under subpart 4 of part A) and to determine the need of a student for the purpose of part B of this title. The Secretary may include on the form developed pursuant to this paragraph not more than eight nonfinancial data items selected in consultation with the States to assist the States in awarding State student financial assistance. Such form shall satisfy the requirements of section 411(d) of this title. For the purpose of collecting eligibility and other data for the purpose of part B, the Secretary shall develop a separate, identifiable loan application document (pursuant to section 432(m)) that applicants or institutions in which the students are enrolled or accepted for enrollment shall submit directly to eligible lenders and on which the applicant shall clearly indicate a choice of a lender.

"(2) CHARGES TO STUDENTS AND PARENTS FOR USE OF FORM PROHIBITED.—The common financial reporting form prescribed by the Secretary under paragraph (1) shall be produced, distributed, and processed by the Secretary and no parent or student shall be charged a fee for the collection, processing, or delivery of financial aid through the use of such form. The need and eligibility of a student for financial assistance under parts A, C, D, and E of this title (other than under subpart 4 of part A) and the need of a student for the purpose of part B of this title, may only be determined by using the form developed by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection. No student may receive assistance under parts A, C, D, and E of this title (other than under subpart 4 of part A) or have the student's need established for the purpose of part B of this title, except by use of the form developed by the Secretary pursuant to this section.

"(3) DISTRIBUTION OF DATA.—Institutions of higher education and States shall receive, without charge, the data collected by the Secretary using the form developed pursuant to this section for the purposes of determining need and eligibility for institutional and State financial aid awards.

"(4) CONTRACTS FOR COLLECTION AND PROCESSING.—(A) The Secretary shall, to the extent practicable, enter into not less than 5 contracts with States, institutions of higher education, or private organizations for the purposes of the timely collection and processing of the form developed pursuant to paragraph (1) and the timely delivery of the data submitted on such form. The Secretary shall use such contracts to assist States and institutions of higher education with the collection of additional data required to award State or institutional financial assistance, except that the Secretary shall not include these additional data items on the common financial reporting form developed pursuant to this section. The Secretary shall include in each such contract a requirement that—

"(i) any charges by the contractor to the student or parent for additional data items required by a State or institution for any purpose (regardless of the method of collection) shall be reasonable and shall not exceed the marginal cost of collecting, processing, and delivering such additional data, taking into account any payment received by the contractor to produce, distribute, and process the common financial reporting form prescribed by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1); and

"(ii) the contractor will require any person or entity to whom the contractor provides such additional data to agree not to collect from any student or parent any charge that would not be permitted under this subparagraph for any such additional data.

"(B) To the extent practicable, the Secretary shall ensure that at least one contractor, or a portion of one contract, under this paragraph will serve graduate and professional students.

"(C) As part of the procurement process for the 1993–1994 award year, and for all procurements thereafter pertaining to the contracts under this paragraph, the Secretary shall require all entities competing for such contracts to comply with all requirements of this subsection and to—

"(i) use the common financial reporting form as prescribed in paragraph (1), which shall be clearly identified as the 'Free Application for Federal Student Aid'; and

"(ii) use a common, simplified reapplication form as the Secretary shall prescribe pursuant to subsection (b), in each award year.

"(D) The Secretary shall reimburse all approved contractors at a reasonable predetermined rate for processing such applications, for issuing eligibility reports, and for carrying out other services or requirements that may be prescribed by the Secretary.

"(E) All approved contractors shall be required to adhere to all editing, processing, and reporting requirements established by the Secretary to ensure consistency.

"(F) No approved contractor shall enter into exclusive arrangements with guarantors, lenders, secondary markets, or institutions of higher education for the purpose of reselling or sharing of data collected for the multiple data entry process. All data collected under a contract issued by the Secretary pursuant to this paragraph for the multiple data entry process is the exclusive property of the Secretary and may not be transferred to a third party by an approved contractor without the Secretary's express written approval.

"(b) STREAMLINED REAPPLICATION PROCESS.—(1) The Secretary shall, within 240 days after the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, develop a streamlined reapplication form and process, including electronic reapplication process, consistent with the requirements of subsection (a), for those recipients who apply for financial aid funds under this title in the next succeeding academic year subsequent to the initial year in which such recipients apply.

"(2) The Secretary shall develop appropriate mechanisms to support reapplication.

"(3) The Secretary shall determine, in cooperation with States, institutions of higher education, agencies and organizations involved in student financial assistance, the data elements that can be updated from the previous academic year's application.

"(4) Nothing in this title shall be interpreted as limiting the authority of the Secretary to reduce the number of data elements required of reapplicants.

"(5) Individuals determined to have a zero family contribution pursuant to section 479 shall not be required to provide any financial data, except that which is necessary to determine eligibility under that section.".

(b) ADDITIONAL AMENDMENTS.—Section 483 is further amended—

(1) by striking subsections (d) and (f);

(2) by amending subsection (e) to read as follows:

"(e) TOLL-FREE INFORMATION.—The Secretary shall contract for, or establish, and publicize a toll-free telephone service to provide timely and accurate information to the general public. The information provided shall include specific instructions on completing the application form for assistance under this title. Such service shall also include a service accessible by telecommunications devices for the deaf (TDD's) and shall, in addition to the services provided for in the previous sentence, refer such students to the national clearinghouse on postsecondary education that is authorized under section 633(c) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act."; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(f) PREPARER.—Any financial aid application required to be made under this title shall include the name, signature, address, social security number, and organizational affiliation of the preparer of such financial aid application.

"(g) SPECIAL RULE.—Nothing in section 1544 of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 shall relieve processors or institutions of higher education of any or all obligations under this section.".

SEC. 484. STUDENT ELIGIBILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 484 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1091) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) of subsection (a), by inserting "(including a program of study abroad approved for credit by the eligible institution at which such student is enrolled)" after "or other program"; and

(2) by striking paragraph (4) of subsection (a) and inserting the following:

"(4) file with the institution of higher education which the student intends to attend, or is attending (or in the case of a loan or loan guarantee with the lender), a document, which need not be notarized, but which shall include—

"(A) a statement of educational purpose stating that the money attributable to such grant, loan, or loan guarantee will be used solely for expenses related to attendance or continued attendance at such institution; and

"(B) such student's social security number;".

(b) EXCEPTIONS TO ELIGIBLE STUDENT DEFINITION.—

(1) AMENDMENTS.—Section 484(b) of the Act is amended—

(A) in paragraph (4) by striking "part B" and inserting "part B, D, or E or work-study assistance under part C"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, no incarcerated student is eligible to receive a loan under this title.".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection shall be effective on and after December 1, 1987.

(c) ABILITY TO BENEFIT.—Section 484(d) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(d) STUDENTS WHO ARE NOT HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES.—In order for a student who does not have a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education, or the recognized equivalent of such certificate, to be eligible for any assistance under subparts 1, 3, and 4 of part A and parts B, C, D, and E of this title, the student shall meet either one of the following standards:

"(1) The student shall take an independently administered examination and shall achieve a score, specified by the Secretary, demonstrating that such student can benefit from the education or training being offered. Such examination shall be approved by the Secretary on the basis of compliance with such standards for development, administration, and scoring as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations.

"(2) The student shall be determined as having the ability to benefit from the education or training in accordance with such process as the State shall prescribe. Any such process described or approved by a State for the purposes of this section shall be effective 6 months after the date of submission to the Secretary unless the Secretary disapproves such process. In determining whether to approve or disapprove such process, the Secretary shall take into account the effectiveness of such process in enabling students without high school diplomas or the equivalent thereof to benefit from the instruction offered by institutions utilizing such process, and shall also take into account the cultural diversity, economic circumstances, and educational preparation of the populations served by the institutions.".

(d) VERIFICATION.—Section 484(f) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Secretary from verifying all applications for aid through the use of any means available, including through the exchange of information with any other Federal agency.".

(e) LOSS OF ELIGIBILITY.—Section 484(g) of the Act is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" before "No student";

(2) by inserting ", part D" after "part B" each place it appears;

(3) by inserting "fraudulently" before "borrowed" each place it appears; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) If the institution determines that the student inadvertently borrowed amounts in excess of such annual or aggregate maximum loan limits, such institution shall allow the student to repay any amount borrowed in excess of such limits prior to certifying the student's eligibility for further assistance under this title.".

(f) VERIFICATION OF IMMIGRANT STATUS.—Section 484(h) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(h) VERIFICATION OF IMMIGRATION STATUS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall implement a system under which the statements and supporting documentation, if required, of an individual declaring that such individual is in compliance with the requirements of subsection (a)(5) shall be verified prior to the individual's receipt of a grant, loan, or work assistance under this title.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The documents collected and maintained by an eligible institution in the admission of a student to the institution may be used by the student in lieu of the documents used to establish both employment authorization and identity under section 274A(b)(1)(B) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1324a) to verify eligibility to participate in work-study programs under part C of this title.

"(3) VERIFICATION MECHANISMS.—The Secretary is authorized to verify such statements and supporting documentation through a data match, using an automated or other system, with other Federal agencies that may be in possession of information relevant to such statements and supporting documentation.

"(4) REVIEW.—In the case of such an individual who is not a citizen or national of the United States, if the statement described in paragraph (1) is submitted but the documentation required under paragraph (2) is not presented or if the documentation required under paragraph (2)(A) is presented but such documentation is not verified under paragraph (3)—

"(A) the institution—

"(i) shall provide a reasonable opportunity to submit to the institution evidence indicating a satisfactory immigration status, and

"(ii) may not delay, deny, reduce, or terminate the individual's eligibility for the grant, loan, or work assistance on the basis of the individual's immigration status until such a reasonable opportunity has been provided; and

"(B) if there are submitted documents which the institution determines constitutes reasonable evidence indicating such status—

"(i) the institution shall transmit to the Immigration and Naturalization Service photostatic or other similar copies of such documents for official verification,

"(ii) pending such verification, the institution may not delay, deny, reduce, or terminate the individual's eligibility for the grant, loan, or work assistance on the basis of the individual's immigration status, and

"(iii) the institution shall not be liable for the consequences of any action, delay, or failure of the Service to conduct such verification.".

(g) ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS.—Section 484 of the Act is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(l) SPECIAL RULE FOR CORRESPONDENCE COURSES.—A student shall not be eligible to receive grant, loan, or work assistance under this title for a correspondence course unless such course is part of a program leading to an associate, bachelor or graduate degree.

"(m) COURSES OFFERED THROUGH TELECOMMUNICATIONS.—

"(1) RELATION TO CORRESPONDENCE COURSES.—A student enrolled in a course of instruction at an eligible institution of higher education (other than an institution that meets the definition in section 521(4)(C) of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act) that is offered in whole or in part through telecommunications and leads to a recognized associate, bachelor, or graduate degree conferred by such institution shall not be considered to be enrolled in correspondence courses unless the total amount of telecommunications and correspondence courses at such institution equals or exceeds 50 percent of such courses.

"(2) RESTRICTION OR REDUCTIONS OF FINANCIAL AID.—A student's eligibility to receive grants, loans, or work assistance under this title shall be reduced if a financial aid officer determines under the discretionary authority provided in section 479A that telecommunications instruction results in a substantially reduced cost of attendance to such student.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE.—For award years prior to the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary shall not take any compliance, disallowance, penalty, or other action against a student or an eligible institution when such action arises out of such institution's prior award of student assistance under this title if the institution demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that its course of instruction would have been in conformance with the requirements of this subsection.

"(4) DEFINITION.—For the purposes of this subsection, the term 'telecommunications' means the use of television, audio, or computer transmission, including open broadcast, closed circuit, cable, microwave, or satellite, audio conferencing, computer conferencing, or video cassettes or discs, except that such term does not include a course that is delivered using video cassette or disc recordings at such institution and that is not delivered in person to other students of that institution.

"(n) STUDENTS WITH A FIRST BACCALAUREATE OR PROFESSIONAL DEGREE.—A student shall not be ineligible for assistance under part B, C, D, and E of this title because such student has previously received a baccalaureate or professional degree.

"(o) Data Base Matching.—To enforce the Selective Service registration provisions of section 1113 of Public Law 97–252, the Secretary shall conduct data base matches with the Selective Service, using common demographic data elements. Appropriate confirmation, through an application output document or through other means, of any person's registration shall fulfill the requirement to file a separate statement of compliance. In the absence of a confirmation from such data matches, an institution may also use data or documents that support either the student's registration, or the absence of a registration requirement for the student, to fulfill the requirement to file a separate statement of compliance. The mechanism for reporting the resolution of nonconfirmed matches shall be prescribed by the Secretary in regulations.

"(p) Study Abroad.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit or otherwise prohibit access to study abroad programs approved by the home institution at which a student is enrolled. An otherwise eligible student who is engaged in a program of study abroad approved for academic credit by the home institution at which the student is enrolled shall be eligible to receive grant, loan, or work assistance under this title, without regard to whether such study abroad program is required as part of the student's degree program.

"(q) Verification of Social Security Number.—The Secretary of Education, in cooperation with the Commissioner of the Social Security Administration, shall verify any social security number provided by a student to an eligible institution under subsection (a)(4) and shall enforce the following conditions:

"(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), an institution shall not deny, reduce, delay, or terminate a student's eligibility for assistance under this part because social security number verification is pending.

"(2) If there is a determination by the Secretary that the social security number provided to an eligible institution by a student is incorrect, the institution shall deny or terminate the student's eligibility for any grant, loan, or work assistance under this title until such time as the student provides a correct social security number.

"(3) If there is a determination by the Secretary that the social security number provided to an eligible institution by a student is incorrect, and a correct social security number cannot be provided by such student, and a loan has been guaranteed for such student under part B of this title, the institution shall notify and instruct the lender and guaranty agency making and guaranteeing the loan, respectively, to cease further disbursements of the loan, but such guaranty shall not be voided or otherwise nullified with respect to such disbursements made before the date that the lender and the guaranty agency receives such notice.

"(4) Nothing in this subsection shall permit the Secretary to take any compliance, disallowance, penalty, or other regulatory action against—

"(A) any institution of higher education with respect to any error in a social security number, unless such error was a result of fraud on the part of the institution; or

"(B) any student with respect to any error in a social security number, unless such error was a result of fraud on the part of the student.".

(h) Clerical Amendment.—Section 801(a) of the National Literacy Act of 1991 is amended by striking "the Act" and inserting "the Higher Education Act of 1965".

SEC. 485. REFUND POLICY.

(a) Refund Policies and Requirements.—Part G of title IV of the Act is further amended by inserting after section 484A the following new section:

"SEC. 484B. INSTITUTIONAL REFUNDS.

"(a) Refund Policy Required.—Each institution of higher education participating in a program under this title shall have in effect a fair and equitable refund policy under which the institution refunds unearned tuition, fees, room and board, and other charges to a student who received grant, loan, or work assistance under this title, or whose parent received a loan made under section 428B on behalf of the student, if the student—

"(1) does not register for the period of attendance for which the assistance was intended; or

"(2) withdraws or otherwise fails to complete the period of enrollment for which the assistance was provided.

"(b) Determinations.—The institution's refund policy shall be considered to be fair and equitable for purposes of this section if that policy provides for a refund in an amount of at least the largest of the amounts provided under—

"(1) the requirements of applicable State law;

"(2) the specific refund requirements established by the institution's nationally recognized accrediting agency and approved by the Secretary; or

"(3) the pro rata refund calculation described in subsection (d), except that this paragraph will not apply to the institution's refund policy for any student whose date of withdrawal from the institution is after the 60 percent point (in time) in the period of enrollment for which the student has been charged.

"(c) Definitions.—(1) As used in this section, the term 'pro rata refund' means a refund by the institution to a student attending such institution for the first time of not less than that portion of the tuition, fees, room and board, and other charges assessed the student by the institution equal to the portion of the period of enrollment for which the student has been charged that remains on the last day of attendance by the student, rounded downward to the nearest 10 percent of that period, less any unpaid charges owed by the student for the period of enrollment for which the student has been charged, and less a reasonable administrative fee not to exceed the lesser of 5 percent of the tuition, fees, room and board, and other charges assessed the student, or $100.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), 'the portion of the period of enrollment for which the student has been charged that remains', shall be determined—

"(A) in the case of a program that is measured in credit hours, by dividing the total number of weeks comprising the period of enrollment for which the student has been charged into the number of weeks remaining in that period as of the last recorded day of attendance by the student;

"(B) in the case of a program that is measured in clock hours, by dividing the total number of clock hours comprising the period of enrollment for which the student has been charged into the number of clock hours remaining to be completed by the student in that period as of the last recorded day of attendance by the student; and

"(C) in the case of a correspondence program, by dividing the total number of lessons comprising the period of enrollment for which the student has been charged into the total number of such lessons not submitted by the student.".

SEC. 486. INFORMATION DISSEMINATION.

(a) Information Dissemination Activities.—Section 485(a)(1) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1092(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (F)—

(A) by inserting ", as determined under section 484B," after "of the institution";

(B) by inserting before the semicolon at the end the following: ", which refunds shall be credited in the following order:

"(i) to outstanding balances on loans under part B of this title,

"(ii) to outstanding balances on loans under part D of this title,

"(iii) to outstanding balances on loans under part E of this title,

"(iv) to awards subpart 1 of part A of this title,

"(v) to awards under subpart 3 of part A of this title,

"(vi) to awards under part C of this title,

"(vii) to other student assistance provided under this title, and

"(viii) to the student.".

(2) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (K);

(3) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (L) (as added by section 1 of Public Law 101–542) and inserting a semicolon;

(4) by redesignating subparagraph (L) (as added by section 201 of Public Law 101–610) as subparagraph (M);

(5) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (M) (as redesignated by paragraph (3)) and inserting a semicolon and "and"; and

(6) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(N) that enrollment in a program of study abroad approved for credit by the home institution may be considered enrollment in the home institution for purposes of applying for Federal student financial assistance.".

(b) Exit Counseling.—Section 485(b) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Exit Counseling for Borrowers.—(1)(A) Each eligible institution shall, through financial aid officers or otherwise, make available counseling to borrowers (individually or in groups) of loans which are made, insured, or guaranteed under part B (other than loans made pursuant to section 428B) of this title or made under parts D or E of this title prior to the completion of the course of study for which the borrower enrolled at the institution or at the time of departure from such institution. The counseling required by this subsection shall include—

"(i) the average anticipated monthly repayments, a review of the repayment options available, and such debt and management strategies as the institution determines are designed to facilitate the repayment of such indebtedness; and

"(ii) the terms and conditions under which the student may obtain partial cancellation or defer repayment of the principal and interest pursuant to sections 428(b), 464(c)(2), and 465.

"(B) In the case of borrower who leaves an institution without the prior knowledge of the institution, the institution shall attempt to provide the information described in subparagraph (A) to the student in writing.

"(2)(A) Each eligible institution shall require that the borrower of a loan made under parts B, D, or E submit to the institution, during the exit interview required by this subsection—

"(i) the borrower's expected permanent address after leaving the institution (regardless of the reason for leaving);

"(ii) the name and address of the borrower's expected employer after leaving the institution;

"(iii) the address of the borrower's next of kin; and

"(iv) any corrections in the institution's records relating the borrower's name, address, social security number, references, and driver's license number.

"(B) The institution shall, within 60 days after the interview, forward any corrected or completed information received from the borrower to the guaranty agency indicated on the borrower's student aid records.''.

(c) CAMPUS SECURITY POLICY.—

(1) STATISTICS.—Section 485(f)(1)(F) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

''(F) Statistics concerning the occurrence on campus, during the most recent calendar year, and during the 2 preceding calendar years for which data are available, of the following criminal offenses reported to campus security authorities or local police agencies—

''(i) murder;

''(ii) sex offenses, forcible or nonforcible;

''(iii) robbery;

''(iv) aggravated assault;

''(v) burglary; and

''(vi) motor vehicle theft.''.

(2) POLICY DEVELOPMENT.—Section 485(f) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(7)(A) Each institution of higher education participating in any program under this title shall develop and distribute as part of the report described in paragraph (1) a statement of policy regarding—

''(i) such institution's campus sexual assault programs, which shall be aimed at prevention of sex offenses; and

''(ii) the procedures followed once a sex offense has occurred.

''(B) The policy described in subparagraph (A) shall address the following areas:

''(i) Education programs to promote the awareness of rape, acquaintance rape, and other sex offenses.

''(ii) Possible sanctions to be imposed following the final determination of an on-campus disciplinary procedure regarding rape, acquaintance rape, or other sex offenses, forcible or nonforcible.

''(iii) Procedures students should follow if a sex offense occurs, including who should be contacted, the importance of preserving evidence as may be necessary to the proof of criminal sexual assault, and to whom the alleged offense should be reported.

''(iv) Procedures for on-campus disciplinary action in cases of alleged sexual assault, which shall include a clear statement that—

''(I) the accuser and the accused are entitled to the same opportunities to have others present during a campus disciplinary proceeding; and

''(II) both the accuser and the accused shall be informed of the outcome of any campus disciplinary proceeding brought alleging a sexual assault.

''(v) Informing students of their options to notify proper law enforcement authorities, including on-campus and local police, and the option to be assisted by campus authorities in notifying such authorities, if the student so chooses.

''(vi) Notification of students of existing counseling, mental health or student services for victims of sexual assault, both on campus and in the community.

''(vii) Notification of students of options for, and available assistance in, changing academic and living situations after an alleged sexual assault incident, if so requested by the victim and if such changes are reasonably available.

''(C) Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to confer a private right of action upon any person to enforce the provisions of this paragraph.''.

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE PROVISION.—The amendment made by this subsection to subparagraph (F)(ii) of section 485(f)(1) of the Act shall be effective with respect to reports made pursuant to such section on or after September 1, 1993. The statistics required by subparagraph (F) of such section shall—

(A) in the report required on September 1, 1992, include statistics concerning the occurrence on campus of offenses during the period from August 1, 1991, to July 31, 1992;

(B) in the report required on September 1, 1993, include statistics concerning the occurrence on campus of offenses during (i) the period from August 1, 1991, to December 31, 1991, and (ii) the calendar year 1992;

(C) in the report required on September 1, 1994, include statistics concerning the occurrence on campus of offenses during (i) the period from August 1, 1991, to December 31, 1991, and (ii) the calendar years 1992 and 1993; and

(D) in the report required on September 1 of 1995 and each succeeding year, include statistics concerning the occurrence on campus of offenses during the three calendar years preceding the year in which the report is made.

SEC. 487. NATIONAL STUDENT LOAN DATA SYSTEM.

(a) SYSTEM DEVELOPMENT.—Section 485B(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1093(a)) is amended in the matter preceding paragraph (1) by striking ''and loans made under part E'' and inserting ''and loans made under part E, and for allowing the electronic exchange of data between program participants and the system. In establishing such data system, the Secretary shall place a priority on providing for the monitoring of enrollment, student status, information about current loan holders and servicers, and internship and residency information. Such data system shall also permit borrowers to use the system to identify the current loan holders and servicers of such borrower's loan.''.

(b) STANDARDIZATION OF DATA REPORTING; USE OF COMMON IDENTIFIERS; INTEGRATION OF SYSTEMS.—Section 485B of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

''(e) STANDARDIZATION OF DATA REPORTING.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall by regulation prescribe standards and procedures (including relevant definitions) that require all lenders and guaranty agencies to report information on all aspects of loans made under this part in uniform formats in order to permit the direct comparison of data submitted by individual lenders, servicers or guaranty agencies.

''(2) ACTIVITIES.—For the purpose of establishing standards under this section, the Secretary shall—

''(A) consult with guaranty agencies, lenders, institutions of higher education, and organizations representing the groups described in paragraph (1);

''(B) develop standards designed to be implemented by all guaranty agencies and lenders with minimum modifications to existing data processing hardware and software; and

''(C) publish the specifications selected to be used to encourage the automation of exchanges of information between all parties involved in loans under this part.

''(f) COMMON IDENTIFIERS.—The Secretary shall, not later than July 1, 1993—

''(1) revise the codes used to identify institutions and students in the student loan data system authorized by this section to make such codes consistent with the codes used in each database used by the Department of Education that contains information of participation in programs under this title; and

''(2) modify the design or operation of the system authorized by this section to ensure that data relating to any institution is readily accessible and can be used in a form compatible with the integrated postsecondary education data system (IPEDS).

''(g) INTEGRATION OF DATABASES.—The Secretary shall integrate the National Student Loan Data System with the Pell Grant applicant and recipient databases as of January 1, 1994, and any other databases containing information on participation in programs under this title.''.

SEC. 488. SIMPLIFICATION OF THE LENDING PROCESS FOR BORROWERS.

Part G of title IV of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1088 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 485B the following new section:

''SEC. 485C. SIMPLIFICATION OF THE LENDING PROCESS FOR BORROWERS.

''(a) ALL LIKE LOANS TREATED AS ONE.—To the extent practicable, and with the cooperation of the borrower, eligible lenders shall treat all loans made to a borrower under the same section of part B as one loan and shall submit one bill to the borrower for the repayment of all such loans for the monthly or other similar period of repayment. Any deferments on one such loan will be considered a deferment on the total amount of all such loans.

''(b) ONE LENDER, ONE GUARANTY AGENCY.—To the extent practicable, and with the cooperation of the borrower, the guaranty agency shall ensure that a borrower only have one lender, one holder, one guaranty agency, and one servicer with which to maintain contact.''.

SEC. 489. TRAINING IN FINANCIAL AID SERVICES.

Section 486 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1093) is amended to read as follows:

''SEC. 486. TRAINING IN FINANCIAL AID SERVICES.

''(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to provide grants to appropriate nonprofit private organizations or combinations of such organizations to provide training for student financial aid administrators and TRIO personnel, at all levels of experience, who provide or are involved in student financial aid services.

''(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Financial assistance under this section may be used for—

''(1) the operation of short-term training institutes and special training programs for student financial aid administrators or TRIO personnel designed to—

''(A) improve the professional management skills of participants in such institutes and programs;

''(B) improve the delivery of student services;

''(C) improve students' or prospective students' information on the availability and operation of student financial assistance programs; and

''(D) improve the understanding and knowledge of the participants concerning the legislative and regulatory requirements of the student financial assistance programs and changes in such requirements; and

''(2) the development of appropriate training materials.

''(c) LIMITATIONS.—Grants authorized under this section—

''(1) shall be limited to not less than $1,000,000 in the case of single-year grants;

''(2) shall be limited to not less than $1,000,000 per year in the case of multiple-year grants;

''(3) shall be limited to a maximum of 3 years in the case of multiple-year grants; and

''(4) may be renewed at the discretion of the Secretary.

''(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS AND USE OF FUNDS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this section.''.

SEC. 490. PROGRAM PARTICIPATION AGREEMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 487(a) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1094(a)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3), by inserting before the period a comma and the following: ''together with assurances that the institution will provide, upon request and in a timely fashion, information relating to the administrative capability and financial responsibility of the institution to—

"(A) the Secretary;

"(B) the appropriate State review entity designated under subpart 1 of part H;

"(C) the appropriate guaranty agency; and

"(D) the appropriate accrediting agency or association";

(2) in paragraph (8)—

(A) by striking "at or before the time of application," and inserting "at or before the time of application (A)"; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", and (B) relevant State licensing requirements of the State in which such institution is located for any job for which the course of instruction is designed to prepare such prospective students"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(13) The institution will not deny any form of Federal financial aid to any student who meets the eligibility requirements of this title on the grounds that the student is participating in a program of study abroad approved for credit by the institution.

"(14)(A) The institution, in order to participate as an eligible institution under part B, will develop a Default Management Plan for approval by the Secretary as part of its initial application for certification as an eligible institution and will implement such Plan for two years thereafter.

"(B) Any institution of higher education which changes ownership and any eligible institution which changes its status as a parent or subordinate institution shall, in order to participate as an eligible institution under part B, develop a Default Management Plan for approval by the Secretary and implement such Plan for two years after its change of ownership or status.

"(15) The institution acknowledges the authority of the Secretary, guaranty agencies, lenders, accrediting agencies, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, and State review entities under subpart 1 of part H to share with each other any information pertaining to the institution's eligibility to participate in programs under this title or any information on fraud and abuse.

"(16)(A) The institution will not knowingly employ an individual in a capacity that involves the administration of programs under this title, or the receipt of program funds under this title, who has been convicted of, or has pled nolo contendere or guilty to, a crime involving the acquisition, use, or expenditure of funds under this title, or has been judicially determined to have committed fraud involving funds under this title or contract with an institution or third party servicer that has been terminated under section 432 involving the acquisition, use, or expenditure of funds under this title, or who has been judicially determined to have committed fraud involving funds under this title.

"(B) The institution will not knowingly contract with or employ any individual, agency, or organization that has been, or whose officers or employees have been—

"(i) convicted of, or pled nolo contendere or guilty to, a crime involving the acquisition, use, or expenditure of funds under this title; or

"(ii) judicially determined to have committed fraud involving funds under this title.

"(17) The institution will complete surveys conducted as a part of the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS) or any other Federal postsecondary institution data collection effort, as designated by the Secretary, in a timely manner and to the satisfaction of the Secretary.

"(18)(A) With respect to any institution that offers athletically related student aid, the institution will—

"(i) cause an annual compilation, independently audited not less often than every 3 years, to be prepared within 6 months after the end of its fiscal year, of—

"(I) the total revenues, and the revenues from football, men's basketball, women's basketball, all other men's sports combined, and all other women's sports combined, derived by the institution from its intercollegiate athletics activities;

"(II) the total expenses, and the expenses attributable to football, men's basketball, women's basketball, all other men's sports combined and all other women's sports combined, made by the institution for its intercollegiate athletics activities; and

"(III) the total revenues and operating expenses of the institution; and

"(ii) make the reports on such compilations and, where allowable by State law, the audits, available for inspection by the Secretary and the public.

"(B) For the purpose of subparagraph (A)—

"(i) revenues from intercollegiate athletics activities allocable to a sport shall include without limitation gate receipts, broadcast revenues, appearance guarantees and options, concessions and advertising, but revenues such as student activities fees or alumni contributions not so allocable shall be included in the calculation of total revenues only; and

"(ii) expenses for intercollegiate athletics activities allocable to a sport shall include without limitation grants-in-aid, salaries, travel, equipment, and supplies, but expenses such as general and administrative overhead not so allocable shall be included in the calculation of total expenses only.

"(19) The institution will not impose any penalty, including the assessment of late fees, the denial of access to classes, libraries, or other institutional facilities, or the requirement that the student borrow additional funds, on any student because of the student's inability to meet his or her financial obligations to the institution as a result of the delayed disbursement of the proceeds of a loan made under this title due to compliance with the provisions of this title, or delays attributable to the institution.

"(20) The institution will not provide any commission, bonus, or other incentive payment based directly or indirectly on success in securing enrollments or financial aid to any persons or entities engaged in any student recruiting or admission activities or in making decisions regarding the award of student financial assistance, except that this paragraph shall not apply to the recruitment of foreign students residing in foreign countries who are not eligible to receive Federal student assistance.

"(21) The institution will meet the requirements established by the Secretary, State postsecondary review entities, and accrediting agencies pursuant to part H of this title.

"(22) The institution will comply with the refund policy established pursuant to section 484B.".

(b) Hearings.—Section 487 of the Act is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(2), by striking out "on the record"; and

(2) in subsection (c)—

(A) in the matter preceding subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1), by striking "is authorized to" and inserting "shall";

(B) in paragraph (1)(D), by striking out "on the record," and inserting in lieu thereof a comma;

(C) in paragraph (1)(F), by striking out "on the record"; and

(D) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking out "on the record," and inserting in lieu thereof a comma; and

(ii) in subparagraph (B)(i), by striking out "on the record," and inserting in lieu thereof a comma.

(c) Audits; Availability of Audit Information.—Section 487(c)(1)(A)(i) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking "a financial and compliance audit of an eligible institution," and inserting "a financial audit of an eligible institution with regard to the financial condition of the institution in its entirety, and a compliance audit of such institution";

(2) by striking "at least once every 2 years" and inserting "on at least an annual basis"; and

(3) by inserting "and shall be available to cognizant guaranty agencies, eligible lenders, State agencies, and the state review entities referred to in subpart 1 of part H" after "submitted to the Secretary".

(d) Information.—Section 487(c) of the Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(B), by inserting ", including any matter the Secretary deems necessary to the sound administration of the financial aid programs, such as the pertinent actions of any owner, shareholder, or person exercising control over an eligible institution" before the semicolon at the end thereof;

(2) in paragraph (1), by redesignating subparagraphs (C) through (G) as subparagraphs (E) through (I), respectively;

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (B) of such paragraph the following new subparagraphs:

"(C)(i) except as provided in clause (ii), a compliance audit of a third party servicer (other than with respect to the servicer's functions as a lender if such functions are otherwise audited under this part and such audits meet the requirements of this clause), with regard to any contract with an eligible institution, guaranty agency, or lender for administering or servicing any aspect of the student assistance programs under this title, at least once every year and covering the period since the most recent audit, conducted by a qualified, independent organization or person in accordance with standards established by the Comptroller General for the audit of governmental organizations, programs, and functions, and as prescribed in regulations of the Secretary, the results of which shall be submitted to the Secretary; or

"(ii) with regard to a third party servicer that is audited under chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code, such audit shall be deemed to satisfy the requirements of clause (i) for the period covered by such audit;

"(D)(i) a compliance audit of a secondary market with regard to its transactions involving, and its servicing and collection of, loans made under this title, at least once a year and covering the period since the most recent audit, conducted by a qualified, independent organization or person in accordance with standards established by the Comptroller General for the audit of governmental organizations, programs, and functions, and as prescribed in regulations of the Secretary, the results of which shall be submitted to the Secretary; or

"(ii) with regard to a secondary market that is audited under chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code, such audit shall be deemed to satisfy the requirements of clause (i) for the period covered by the audit;";

(4) in subparagraph (H) (as redesignated) of such paragraph, by striking out "an individual or an organization" and inserting in lieu thereof "a third party servicer";

(5) in subparagraph (I) (as redesignated) of such paragraph, by striking out "an individual or an organization" and inserting in lieu thereof "a third party servicer";

(6) in paragraph (3), by inserting ", after consultation with each State review entity designated under subpart 1 of part H," after "shall publish";

(7) by redesignating paragraphs (2) and (3) as paragraphs (3) and (4), respectively;

(8) by inserting immediately after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

"(2) If an individual who, or entity that, exercises substantial control, as determined by the Secretary in accordance with the definition of substantial control in subpart 3 of part H, over one or more institutions participating in any program under this title, or, for purposes of paragraphs (1) (H) and (I), over one or more organizations that contract with an institution to administer any aspect of the institution's student assistance program under this title, is determined to have committed one or more violations of the requirements of any program under this title, or has been suspended or debarred in accordance with the regulations of the Secretary, the Secretary may use such determination, suspension, or debarment as the basis for imposing an emergency action on, or limiting, suspending, or terminating, in a single proceeding, the participation of any or all institutions under the substantial control of that individual or entity."; and

(9) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(5) The Secretary shall make readily available to appropriate guaranty agencies, eligible lenders, State review entities designated under subpart 1 of part H, and accrediting agencies or associations the results of the audits of eligible institutions conducted pursuant to paragraph (1)(A).

"(6) The Secretary is authorized to provide any information collected as a result of audits conducted under this section, together with audit information collected by guaranty agencies, to any Federal or State agency having responsibilities with respect to student financial assistance, including those referred to in subsection (a)(15) of this section.".

"(7) Effective with respect to any audit conducted under this subsection after December 31, 1988, if, in the course of conducting any such audit, the personnel of the Department of Education discover, or are informed of, grants or other assistance provided by an institution in accordance with this title for which the institution has not received funds appropriated under this title (in the amount necessary to provide such assistance), including funds for which reimbursement was not requested prior to such discovery or information, such institution shall be permitted to offset that amount against any sums determined to be owed by the institution pursuant to such audit, or to receive reimbursement for that amount (if the institution does not owe any such sums).".

(e) CONSTRUCTION.—Section 487 of the Act, as amended by subsection (a), is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(e) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in the amendments made by the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 shall be construed to prohibit an institution from recording, at the cost of the institution, a hearing referred to in subsection (b)(2), subsection (c)(1)(D), or subparagraph (A) or (B)(i) of subsection (c)(2), of this section to create a record of the hearing, except the unavailability of a recording shall not serve to delay the completion of the proceeding. The Secretary shall allow the institution to use any reasonable means, including stenographers, of recording the hearing.".

(f) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 487 of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking "subpart 3" in subsection (a) and inserting "subpart 4";

(2) by striking "provided for in section 483(e)" in subsection (a)(2); and

(3) by striking "435(a)" in subsection (d) and inserting "481".

SEC. 491. QUALITY ASSURANCE; IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS.

Part G of title IV of the Act is further amended by inserting after section 487 the following new sections:

"SEC. 487A. QUALITY ASSURANCE PROGRAM.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to select institutions for voluntary participation in a Quality Assurance Program that provides participating institutions with an alternative management approach through which individual schools develop and implement their own comprehensive systems to verify student financial aid application data, thereby enhancing program integrity within the student aid delivery system. The Quality Assurance Program authorized by this section shall be based on criteria that include demonstrated institutional performance, as determined by the Secretary, and shall take into consideration current quality assurance goals, as determined by the Secretary.

"(b) EXEMPTION FROM REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary is authorized to exempt any institution participating in the Quality Assurance Program from any reporting or verification requirements in this title, and may substitute such quality assurance reporting as the Secretary deems necessary to ensure accountability and compliance with the purposes of the programs under this title.

"(c) REMOVAL FROM THE PROGRAM.—The Secretary is authorized to determine—

"(1) when an institution that is unable to administer the Quality Assurance Program must be removed from such program, and

"(2) when institutions desiring to cease participation in such program will be required to complete the current award year under the requirements of the Quality Assurance Program.

"(d) EXPERIMENTAL SITES.—(1) The Secretary is authorized to select institutions for voluntary participation as experimental sites to provide recommendations to the Secretary on the impact and effectiveness of proposed regulations or new management initiatives.

"(2) The Secretary is authorized to exempt any institution participating as an experimental site from any requirements in this title, or in regulations prescribed under this title, that would bias experimental results.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, 'current award year' is defined as the award year during which the participating institution indicates its intention to cease participation.

"SEC. 487B. ASSIGNMENT OF IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS.

"The Secretary shall assign to each participant in title IV programs, including institutions, lenders, and guaranty agencies, a single Department of Education identification number to be used to identify its participation in each of the title IV programs.".

SEC. 492. INTER-PROGRAM TRANSFERS.

Section 488 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1095) is amended by striking the first sentence and inserting the following: "In order to offer an arrangement of types of aid, including institutional and State aid which best fits the needs of each individual student, an institution may (1) transfer a total of 25 percent of the institutions allotment under section 462 to the institution's allotment under section 413D or 442 (or both); and (2) transfer 25 percent of the institution's allotment under section 442 to the institution's allotment under section 413D. Funds transferred to an institution's allotment under another section may be used as a part of and for the same purposes as funds allotted under that section.".

SEC. 493. ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

(a) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Section 489(a) of the Act is amended—

(1) in the second sentence, by striking "(other than section 447)";

(2) by striking the fourth sentence (relating to payments with respect to section 447); and

(3) by striking "subpart 2" each place it appears and inserting "subpart 3".

(b) NONTRADITIONAL STUDENTS.—Section 489(b) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1096) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" before "The sums"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) If the institution enrolls a significant number of students who are (A) attending the institution less than full time, or (B) independent students, the institution shall use a reasonable proportion of the funds available under this section for financial aid services during times and in places that will most effectively accommodate the needs of such students.".

SEC. 494. REPEAL.

Section 489A of the Act is repealed.

SEC. 495. CRIMINAL PENALTIES.

Section 490 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1097) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person who knowingly and willfully embezzles, misapplies, steals, obtains by fraud, false statement, or forgery, or fails to refund any funds, assets, or property provided or insured under this title or attempts to so embezzle, misapply, steal, obtain by fraud, false statement or forgery, or fail to refund any funds, assets, or property, shall be fined not more than $20,000 or imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both, except if the amount so embezzled, misapplied, stolen, obtained by fraud, false statement, or forgery, or failed to be refunded does not exceed $200, then the fine shall not be more than $5,000 and imprisonment shall not exceed one year, or both.

"(b) ASSIGNMENT OF LOANS.—Any person who knowingly and willfully makes any false statement, furnishes any false information, or conceals any material information in connection with the assignment of a loan which is made or insured under this title or attempts to so make any false statement, furnish any false information, or conceal any material information in connection with such assignment shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"(c) INDUCEMENTS TO LEND OR ASSIGN.—Any person who knowingly and willfully makes an unlawful payment to an eligible lender under part B or attempts to make such unlawful payment as an inducement to make, or to acquire by assignment, a loan insured under such part shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

"(d) OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE.—Any person who knowingly and willfully destroys or conceals any record relating to the provision of assistance under this title or attempts to so destroy or conceal with intent to defraud the United States or to prevent the United States from enforcing any right obtained by subrogation under this part, shall upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $20,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.".

SEC. 496. ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON STUDENT FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) INDEPENDENT CONTROL.—Section 491(b) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1098) is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "Notwithstanding Department of Education policies and regulations, the Advisory Committee shall exert independent control of its budget allocations and expenditures, personnel decisions and processes, procurements, and other administrative and management functions. The Advisory Committee's administration and management shall be subject to the usual and customary Federal audit procedures.".

(b) FUNCTIONS; MEMBERSHIP.—Section 491(d) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking "and in assessing the impact of legislative and administrative policy proposals" in paragraph (3);

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (4), (5), (6), and (7) as paragraphs (5), (6), (7), and (8), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) assess the impact of legislative and administrative policy proposals;";

(4) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (7) (as redesignated);

(5) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (8) (as redesignated) and inserting a semicolon and "and"; and

(6) by adding at the end the following new paragraph—

"(9) make special efforts to advise Members of Congress and such Members' staff of the findings and recommendations made pursuant to this paragraph.".

(c) EXEMPTION.—Section 491(h)(4) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking "in accordance with" and inserting "without regard to"; and

(2) by inserting "and to set pay in accordance with such section" before the period.

(d) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Section 491(i) of the Act is amended by striking "$500,000" and inserting "$750,000".

(e) ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS.—Section 491 of the Act is amended by striking subsection (j) and inserting in lieu thereof:

"(j) SPECIAL ANALYSES AND ACTIVITIES.—The committee shall—

"(1) monitor and evaluate the program modifications resulting from the enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, especially as such amendments relate to the need analysis;

"(2) monitor and evaluate the implementation, pursuant to section 483, of a Free Application for Federal Student Aid and the process for determining eligibility and awards for programs under this title, including a simplified reapplication process;

"(3) assess the adequacy of current methods for disseminating information about programs under this title and recommend improvements, as appropriate, regarding early needs assessment and information for first-year high school students; and

"(4) assess the adequacy of methods of monitoring student debt burden.

"(k) TERM OF THE COMMITTEE.—Notwithstanding the sunset and charter provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App. I) or any other statute or regulation, the Advisory Committee shall be authorized until October 1, 1998.

"(l) STUDENT LOAN PROGRAM SIMPLIFICATION STUDY.—(1) The Advisory Committee shall conduct a thorough study of means of simplifying all aspects of the loan programs under part B of this title. In carrying out the study, the Advisory Committee shall examine, at a minimum—

"(A) reduction of paperwork burdens experienced by financial aid administrators resulting from the current structure of such loan programs;

"(B) promotion of simplification and standardization of forms, procedures, and all other aspects of guaranty agency operations for the purpose of facilitating data exchanges with such agencies (including the National Student Loan Database) and facilitating Department of Education oversight;

"(C) simplification of the repayment process to minimize borrower confusion, including encouragement of single holder ownership of all of an individual's loans;

"(D) encouragement of efficient utilization of loan programs to minimize multiple program borrowing in postsecondary education; and

"(E) other proposals which are designed to reduce the administrative burdens on, and paperwork required of, students, educational institutions, guaranty agencies, lenders, secondary markets, and the Secretary submitted in response to a general solicitation by the Advisory Committee.

"(2) The Advisory Committee shall consult with the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate in carrying out the study required by this subsection.

"(3) The Advisory Committee shall, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, prepare and submit to the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate a report on the study required by this subsection.".

SEC. 497. REGIONAL MEETINGS; NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING; ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

Part G of title IV of the Act is further amended by adding at the end the following new sections:

"SEC. 492. REGIONAL MEETINGS AND NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING.

"(a) MEETINGS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall convene regional meetings to obtain public involvement in the development of proposed regulations for parts B, G, and H of this title. Such meetings shall include individuals and representatives of the groups involved in student financial assistance programs under this title, such as students, legal assistance organizations that represent students, institutions of higher education, guaranty agencies, lenders, secondary markets, loan servicers, guaranty agency servicers, and collection agencies.

"(2) ISSUES.—During such meetings, the Secretary shall provide for a comprehensive discussion and exchange of information concerning the implementation of parts B, G, and H, as amended by the Higher Education Amendments of 1992. The Secretary shall take into account the information received at such meetings in the development of proposed regulations and shall publish a summary of such information in the Federal Register together with such proposed regulations.

"(b) DRAFT REGULATIONS.—After holding regional meetings and before publishing proposed regulations in the Federal Register, the Secretary shall prepare draft regulations implementing parts B, G, and H of this title as amended by the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 and shall submit such regulations to a negotiated rulemaking process. The Secretary shall follow the guidance provided in sections 305.82–4 and 305.85–5 of chapter 1, Code of Federal Regulations, and any successor recommendation, regulation, or law. Participants in the negotiations process shall be chosen by the Secretary from individuals nominated by groups participating in the regional meetings described in subsection (a)(1), and shall include both representatives of such groups from Washington, D.C., and industry participants. To the extent possible, the Secretary shall select individuals reflecting the diversity in the industry, representing both large and small participants, as well as individuals serving local areas and national markets. The negotiation process shall be conducted in a timely manner in order that the final regulations may be issued by the Secretary within the 240-day period described in section 431(g) of the General Education Provisions Act.

"(c) APPLICABILITY OF FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—The Federal Advisory Committee Act shall not apply to activities carried out under this section.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated in any fiscal year or made available from funds appropriated to carry out this part in any fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section, except that if no funds are appropriated pursuant to this subsection, the Secretary shall make funds available to carry out this section from amounts appropriated for the operations and expenses of the Department of Education.

"SEC. 493. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

"There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1993 and for each succeeding fiscal year thereafter for administrative expenses necessary for carrying out this title, including expenses for staff personnel, program reviews, and compliance activities.".

SEC. 498. EFFECTIVE DATES FOR AMENDMENTS TO PART G.

The changes made in part G of title IV of the Act by the amendments made by this part shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act, except that—

(1) as otherwise provided in such part G;

(2) the changes in section 481(a), relating to the definition of institution of higher education, other than paragraph (4) of such section, shall be effective on and after October 1, 1992;

(3) section 481(e) as added by such amendments, relating to the definition of eligible program, shall be effective on and after July 1, 1993;

(4) section 484(m)(1), relating to proportion of courses permitted to be correspondence courses, as added by such amendments shall be effective on and after October 1, 1992;

(5) the changes in section 485, relating to disclosures, shall be effective with respect to periods of enrollment beginning on or after July 1, 1993;

(6) the changes in section 488, relating to transfers of allotments, shall apply with respect to funds provided for award years beginning on or after July 1, 1993; and

(7) the changes in section 489, relating to payments for administrative expenses, shall apply with respect to funds provided for award years beginning on or after July 1, 1993.

PART H—PROGRAM INTEGRITY

SEC. 499. ESTABLISHMENT OF NEW PART H.

Title IV of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART H—PROGRAM INTEGRITY TRIAD

"Subpart 1—State Postsecondary Review Program

"SEC. 494. STATE POSTSECONDARY REVIEW PROGRAM.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to authorize the Secretary to enter into agreements that—

"(1) designate one State postsecondary review entity in each State to be responsible for the conduct or coordination of the review under section 494C(d) of institutions of higher education, reported to the State by the Secretary pursuant to section 494C(a), for the purposes of determining eligibility under this title; and

"(2) provide Federal funds to each State postsecondary review entity for performing the functions required by such agreements with the Secretary.

"(b) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall, in accordance with the provisions of this subpart, enter into agreements with each of the States to carry out the purposes of this subpart. If any State declines to enter into an agreement with the Secretary for the purposes of this subpart, the provisions of this subpart which refer to the State, with respect to such State, shall refer to the Secretary, who may make appropriate arrangements with agencies or organizations of demonstrated competence in reviewing institutions of higher education.

"(c) Failure To Comply With Agreement.—If a State fails to enter into an agreement under this section or fails to meet the requirements of its agreement with the Secretary under this subpart—

"(1) the Secretary—

"(A) may not designate as eligible for participation in any program under this title any new institution (including new branch campuses) or any institution that has changed ownership, pursuant to section 481 and subpart 3 of this part; and

"(B) may grant only provisional certification for all institutions in the State pursuant to subpart 3 of this part; and

"(2) the State shall be ineligible to receive funds under section 494B of this subpart, subpart 4 of part A of this title, and chapter 2 of subpart 2 of part A of this title.

"SEC. 494A. STATE POSTSECONDARY REVIEW ENTITY AGREEMENTS.

"(a) State Organization Structures.—(1) Each agreement under this subpart shall describe a State organizational structure responsible for carrying out the review under section 494C(d) of institutions reported to the State by the Secretary pursuant to section 494C(a). Each such entity's action in reviewing such institutions shall, for purposes of this subpart, be considered to be the action of the State.

"(2) For the purposes of this subpart, the designation of a State postsecondary review entity for the purpose of entering into an agreement with the Secretary shall be in accordance with the State law of each individual State with respect to the authority to make legal agreements between the State and the Federal Government.

"(3) Except as provided in paragraph (6), nothing in this subpart shall be construed to authorize the Secretary to require any State to adopt, as a condition for entering into an agreement, a specific State organizational structure.

"(4) Except as provided in paragraph (6), nothing in this subpart shall be construed—

"(A) as a limitation on the authority of any State to adopt a State organization structure for postsecondary education agencies, or programs, or institutions of higher education as appropriate to the needs, traditions, and circumstances of that State;

"(B) as a limitation on the authority of a State entering into an agreement pursuant to this subpart to modify the State organizational structure at any time subsequent to entering into such agreement;

"(C) as a limitation on the authority of any State to enter into an agreement for purposes of this subpart as a member of a consortium of States;

"(D) as an authorization for the Secretary to withhold funds from any State or postsecondary institution on the basis of compliance with a State's constitution or laws;

"(E) as an authorization for any State postsecondary review entity to exercise planning, policy, coordinating, supervisory, budgeting, or administrative powers over any postsecondary institution; or

"(F) as a limitation on the use of State audits for the purpose of compliance with applicable standards under section 494C(d).

"(5) Nothing in this subpart shall be construed to limit the authority or activities of any State loan insurance program established under section 428(b) of this title or of any relevant State licensing authority which grants approval for institutions of higher education to operate within a State or their authority to contact the Secretary directly.

"(6) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of this subsection, the Secretary may require each State to designate an entity responsible for the conduct or coordination of the review of institutions under this title.

"(b) Contents of Agreements.—Agreements between each State and the Secretary shall contain the following elements:

"(1) A designation of a single State postsecondary review entity, which represents all entities of that State which are responsible for—

"(A) granting State authorization to each institution of higher education in that State for the purposes of this title, and

"(B) ensuring that each institution of higher education in that State remains in compliance with the standards developed pursuant to section 494C.

"(2) Assurances that the State will review institutions of higher education for the purpose of determining eligibility under this title on a schedule to coincide with the dates set by the Secretary to certify or recertify such institutions of higher education as provided in section 481 and subpart 3 of this part.

"(3) Assurances that the appropriate State postsecondary review entity will perform the functions authorized by this subpart and will keep such records and provide such information to the Secretary as may be requested for financial and compliance audits and program evaluation, consistent with the responsibilities of the Secretary.

"(4) A description of the relationship between the State postsecondary review entity designated for the purposes of this subpart and (A) the agency or agencies designated for the purposes of chapter 36 of title 38 of the United States Code, (B) the loan insurance program established under section 428(b) of this title for that State, and (C) the grant agency established under section 415C of this title.

"(5) A plan for performing the functions described in section 494C of this subpart.

"(c) Federal Responsibility.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no State shall be required to enter into an agreement with the Secretary under this subpart for performing the review functions required by such agreement unless the Congress appropriates funds for this subpart.

"SEC. 494B. FEDERAL REIMBURSEMENT OF STATE POSTSECONDARY REVIEW COSTS.

"(a) Payments.—Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary shall reimburse the States for the costs of performing the functions required by agreements with the Secretary authorized under this subpart. Such costs shall include expenses for providing initial and continuing training to State personnel and other personnel in the State, including personnel at institutions of higher education subject to review, to serve the purposes of this subpart. Reimbursement shall be provided for necessary activities which supplement, but do not supplant, existing licensing or review functions conducted by the State. The Secretary shall also reimburse such entities for work performed by their subcontractors and consultants where such work has a direct relationship to the requirements of agreements with the Secretary under this subpart.

"(b) Authorization of Appropriations.—For the purpose of enabling the Secretary to make payments to States which have made agreements with the Secretary under this subpart, there is authorized to be appropriated $75,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"SEC. 494C. FUNCTIONS OF STATE REVIEW ENTITIES.

"(a) Initial Review.—The Secretary shall review all institutions of higher education in a State which are eligible or which desire to become eligible under this title to determine if such institutions meet any of the criteria provided in subsection (b). With respect to those institutions of higher education that meet one or more of the criteria provided in subsection (b), the Secretary shall inform the State in which such institutions are located that the institutions have met such criteria, and these institutions shall be reviewed by the State pursuant to the standards provided in subsection (d). The Secretary shall supply the State with a copy of the institutional audits, required pursuant to section 487(c), for the institutions which shall be reviewed by the State. In addition to those institutions identified by the Secretary, the State may, subject to approval by the Secretary, review additional institutions which meet one or more of the criteria provided in subsection (b), based on more recent data available to the State, or which the State has reason to believe are engaged in fraudulent practices. If the Secretary fails to approve or disapprove a State request to review additional institutions within 21 days, the State may proceed to review such additional institutions as if approved by the Secretary.

"(b) Review Criteria.—The criteria for the initial review of institutions of higher education are as follows:

"(1) A cohort default rate (as defined in section 435(m)) equal to or greater than 25 percent.

"(2) A cohort default rate (as defined in such section) equal to or greater than 20 percent and either—

"(A) more than two-thirds of the institution's total undergraduates who are enrolled on at least a half-time basis receive assistance under this title (except subparts 4 and 6 of part A); or

"(B) two-thirds or more of the institution's education and general expenditures are derived from funds provided to students enrolled at the institution from the programs established under this title (except subparts 4 and 6 of part A and section 428B).

"(3) Two-thirds or more of the institution's education and general expenditures are derived from funds provided to students enrolled at the institution pursuant to subpart 1 of part A of this title.

"(4) A limitation, suspension, or termination action by the Secretary against the institution pursuant to section 487 during the preceding 5 years.

"(5) An audit finding during the 2 most recent audits of an institution of higher education's conduct of the programs established by this title that resulted in the repayment by the institution of amounts greater than 5 percent of the funds such institution received from the programs assisted under this title for any one year.

"(6) A citation of an institution by the Secretary for failure to submit audits required by this title in a timely fashion.

"(7) A year-to-year fluctuation of more than 25 percent in the amounts received by students enrolled at the institution from either Federal Pell Grant, Federal Stafford Loan, or Federal Supplemental Loans to Student programs, which are not accounted for by changes in these programs.

"(8) Failure to meet financial responsibility standards pursuant to subpart 3 of this part.

"(9) A change of ownership of the institution that results in a change of control which includes (but is not limited to)—

"(A) the sale of the institution or the majority of its assets;

"(B) the division of 1 or more institutions into 2 or more institutions;

"(C) the transfer of the controlling interest in stock of the institution or its parent corporation;

"(D) the transfer of the controlling interest of stock of the institution to its parent corporation; or

"(E) the transfer of the liabilities of the institution to its parent corporation.

"(10) Except with regard to any public institution that is affiliated with a State system of higher education, participation in any of the programs established pursuant to subparts 1 and 3 of part A, part B, part C, and part E of this title for less than 5 years.

"(11) A pattern of student complaints pursuant to subsection (j) related to the management or conduct of the programs established by this title or relating to misleading or inappropriate advertising and promotion of the institution's program, which in the judgment of the Secretary are sufficient to justify review of the institution.

"(c) USE OF RECENT DATA.—The criteria provided for in subsection (b) shall be measured on the basis of the most recent data available to the Secretary. Institutions may request verification of the data used by the Secretary.

"(d) REVIEW STANDARDS.—Institutions which meet 1 or more of the criteria in subsection (b) shall be reviewed by the appropriate State entity in accordance with published State standards that are consistent with the constitution and laws of the State, developed in consultation with the institutions in the State, and subject to disapproval by the Secretary. Such review shall determine the following:

"(1) The availability to students and prospective students of catalogs, admission requirements, course outlines, schedules of tuition and fees, policies regarding course cancellations, and the rules and regulations of the institution relating to students and the accuracy of such catalogs and course outlines in reflecting the courses and programs offered by the institution.

"(2) Assurance that the institution has a method to assess a student's ability to successfully complete the course of study for which he or she has applied.

"(3) Assurance that the institution maintains and enforces standards relating to academic progress and maintains adequate student and other records.

"(4) Compliance by the institution with relevant safety and health standards, such as fire, building, and sanitation codes.

"(5) The financial and administrative capacity of the institution as appropriate to a specified scale of operations and the maintenance of adequate financial and other information necessary to determine the financial and administrative capacity of the institution.

"(6) For institutions financially at risk, the adequacy of provisions to provide for the instruction of students and to provide for the retention and accessibility of academic and financial aid records of students in the event the institution closes.

"(7) If the stated objectives of the courses or programs of the institution are to prepare students for employment, the relationship of the tuition and fees to the renumeration that can be reasonably expected by students who complete the course or program and the relationship of the courses or programs (including the appropriateness of the length of such courses) to providing the student with quality training and useful employment in recognized occupations in the State.

"(8) Availability to students of relevant information by institutions of higher education, including—

"(A) information relating to market and job availability for students in occupational, professional, and vocational programs; and

"(B) information regarding the relationship of courses to specific standards necessary for State licensure in specific occupations.

"(9) The appropriateness of the number of credit or clock hours required for the completion of programs or of the length of 600-hour courses.

"(10) Assessing the actions of any owner, shareholder, or person exercising control over the educational institution which may adversely affect eligibility for programs under this title.

"(11) The adequacy of procedures for investigation and resolution of student complaints.

"(12) The appropriateness of advertising and promotion and student recruitment practices.

"(13) That the institution has a fair and equitable refund policy to protect students.

"(14) The success of the program at the institution, including—

"(A) the rates of the institution's students' program completion and graduation, taking into account the length of the program at the institution and the selectivity of the institution's admissions policies;

"(B) the withdrawal rates of the institution's students;

"(C) with respect to vocational and professional programs, the rates of placement of the institution's graduates in occupations related to their course of study;

"(D) where appropriate, the rate at which the institution's graduates pass licensure examinations; and

"(E) the variety of student completion goals, including transfer to another institution of higher education, full-time employment in the field of study, and military service.

"(15) With respect to an institution which meets 1 or more of the criteria in subsection (b), the State shall contract with the appropriate approved accrediting agency or association (described in subpart 2 of this part) or another peer review system with demonstrated competence in assessing programs (pursuant to the authority contained in subsection (f)) to carry out a review or provide information regarding such agency's or association's assessment of the following: The quality and content of the institution's courses or programs of instruction, training, or study in relation to achieving the stated objectives for which the courses or programs are offered, including the adequacy of the space, equipment, instructional materials, staff, and student support services (including student orientation, counseling, and advisement) for providing education and training that meets such stated objectives.

"(e) SUBSTITUTIONS PROHIBITED.—The appropriate State postsecondary review entity may not substitute either (1) accreditation by a private accrediting agency or body, or (2) compliance audits performed by a State guaranty agency established under section 428(b) of this title, for State review of compliance with the standards in subsection (d).

"(f) STATE CONTRACTS.—If the appropriate State postsecondary review entity contracts with a private agency or body or an accreditation body or peer review system for assistance in performing State postsecondary review entity functions, such contract shall be provided for in the agreement with the Secretary required by section 494A.

"(g) PROHIBITION ON UNRELATED REQUIREMENTS.—Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this subpart, the Secretary shall not require a State to establish standards that are unrelated to ensuring institutional or program integrity or that violate the provisions of a State's constitution or laws.

"(h) INSTITUTIONAL ELIGIBILITY.—A State postsecondary review entity may determine that an institution of higher education shall not be eligible to participate in programs under this title based on its own findings or the findings of a Federal entity in accordance with the following procedures:

"(1) STATE FINDINGS.—If the appropriate State postsecondary review entity finds that an institution of higher education does not meet one or more of the standards in subsection (d) of this section, such State postsecondary review entity shall notify the Secretary of its findings and the actions that such entity is taking, or has taken, in response to such findings within a time period prescribed by the Secretary by regulation. If a State postsecondary review entity determines an institution of higher education shall not be eligible for participation in programs under this title, such State postsecondary review entity shall so notify the Secretary. Upon receipt of such notification of ineligibility, the Secretary shall immediately terminate the participation of such institutions in the programs authorized by this title.

"(2) SECRETARY'S FINDINGS.—If the Secretary or an other Federal entity takes, or plans to take, any action against any institution of higher education (including any actions taken under section 487), the Secretary shall notify the appropriate State postsecondary review entity (or entities, in the case of multi-State institutions) of such action within a time period prescribed in the Secretary's regulations.

"(3) PROCEDURAL PROTECTIONS FOR DISAPPROVAL.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, prescribe minimum procedural standards for the disapproval of institutions of higher education by the appropriate State postsecondary review entity or entities for purposes of this title.

"(i) LIMIT ON STATE POSTSECONDARY REVIEW AGENCY FUNCTIONS.—The functions of State postsecondary review entity shall not include performing financial and compliance audits as may be required under sections 428 or 487 of this Act.

"(j) CONSUMER COMPLAINTS.—A State, in consultation with the institutions of higher education in the State, shall establish and publicize the availability of procedures for receiving and responding to complaints from students, faculty, and others about institutions of higher education and shall keep records of such complaints in order to determine their frequency and nature for specific institutions of higher education.

"(k) ENFORCEMENT MECHANISMS.—Nothing in this subpart shall restrict the authority of the States to establish mechanisms to enforce the standards established under subsection (d) or require the States to establish specific mechanisms recommended by the Secretary.

"Subpart 2—Accrediting Agency Approval

"SEC. 496. APPROVAL OF ACCREDITING AGENCY OR ASSOCIATION.

"(a) STANDARDS REQUIRED.—No accrediting agency or association may be determined by the Secretary to be a reliable authority as to the quality of education or training offered for the purposes of this Act or for other Federal purposes, unless the agency or association meets standards established by the Secretary pursuant to this section. The Secretary shall, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, establish standards for such determinations. Such standards shall include an appropriate measure or measures of student achievement. Such standards shall require that—

"(1) the accrediting agency or association shall be a State, regional, or national agency or association and shall demonstrate the ability and the experience to operate as an accrediting agency or association within the State, region, or nationally, as appropriate;

"(2) such agency or association—

"(A)(i) for the purpose of participation in programs under this Act, has a voluntary membership and has as a principal purpose the accrediting of institutions of higher education; or

"(ii) for the purpose of participation in other programs administered by the Department of Education or other Federal agencies, has a voluntary membership and has as its principal purpose the accrediting of institutions of higher education or programs;

"(B) is a State agency approved by the Secretary for the purpose described in subparagraph (A); or

"(C) is an agency or association that, for the purpose of determining eligibility for student assistance under this title, conducts accreditation through (i) a voluntary membership organization of individuals participating in a profession, or (ii) an agency or association which has as its principal purpose the accreditation of programs within institutions, which institutions are accredited by another agency or association recognized by the Secretary;

"(3) if such agency or association is an agency or association described in—

"(A) subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2), then such agency or association is separate and independent, both administratively and financially of any related, associated, or affiliated trade association or membership organization;

"(B) subparagraph (B) of paragraph (2), then such agency or association has been recognized by the Secretary on or before October 1, 1991; or

"(C) subparagraph (C) of paragraph (2) and such agency or association has been recognized by the Secretary on or before October 1, 1991, then the Secretary may waive the requirement that such agency or association is separate and independent, both administratively and financially of any related, associated, or affiliated trade association or membership organization upon a demonstration that the existing relationship has not served to compromise the independence of its accreditation process;

"(4) such agency or association consistently applies and enforces standards that ensure that the courses or programs of instruction, training, or study at the institution of higher education are of sufficient quality to achieve, for the duration of the accreditation period, the stated objective for which the courses or the programs are offered;

"(5) the standards of accreditation of the agency or association assess the institution's—

"(A) curricula;

"(B) faculty;

"(C) facilities, equipment, and supplies;

"(D) fiscal and administrative capacity as appropriate to the specified scale of operations;

"(E) student support services;

"(F) recruiting and admissions practices, academic calendars, catalogs, publications, grading and advertising;

"(G) program length and tuition and fees in relation to the subject matters taught and the objectives of the degrees or credentials offered;

"(H) measures of program length in clock hours or credit hours;

"(I) success with respect to student achievement in relation to its mission, including, as appropriate, consideration of course completion, State licensing examination, and job placement rates;

"(J) default rates in the student loan programs under title IV of this Act, based on the most recent data provided by the Secretary;

"(K) record of student complaints received by, or available to, the agency or association; and

"(L) compliance with its program responsibilities under title IV of this Act, including any results of financial or compliance audits, program reviews, and such other information as the Secretary may provide to the agency or association.

"(6) such agency or association shall apply procedures throughout the accrediting process, including evaluation and withdrawal proceedings, that comply with due process, including—

"(A) adequate specification of requirements and deficiencies at the institution of higher education or program being examined;

"(B) notice of an opportunity for a hearing by any such institution;

"(C) the right to appeal any adverse action against any such institution; and

"(D) the right to representation by counsel for any such institution;

"(7) such agency or association shall notify the Secretary and the appropriate State postsecondary review entity within 30 days of the accreditation of an institution or any final denial, withdrawal, suspension, or termination of accreditation or placement on probation of an institution, together with any other adverse action taken with respect to an institution; and

"(8) such agency or association shall make available to the public, upon request, and to the Secretary, and the State postsecondary review entity of the State in which the institution of higher education is located a summary of any review resulting in a final accrediting decision involving denial, termination, or suspension of accreditation, together with the comments of the affected institution.

"(b) SEPARATE AND INDEPENDENT DEFINED.—For the purpose of subsection (a)(3), the term 'separate and independent' means that—

"(1) the members of the postsecondary education governing body of the accrediting agency or association are not elected or selected by the board or chief executive officer of any related, associated, or affiliated trade association or membership organization;

"(2) among the membership of the board of the accrediting agency or association there shall be one public member (who is not a member of any related trade or membership organization) for each six members of the board, with a minimum of one such public member, and guidelines are established for such members to avoid conflicts of interest;

"(3) dues to the accrediting agency or association are paid separately from any dues paid to any related, associated, or affiliated trade association or membership organization; and

"(4) the budget of the accrediting agency or association is developed and determined by the accrediting agency or association without review or resort to consultation with any other entity or organization.

"(c) OPERATING PROCEDURES REQUIRED.—No accrediting agency or association may be approved by the Secretary for the purpose of this title, unless the agency or association—

"(1) performs, at regularly established intervals, on-site inspections and reviews of institutions of higher education (at least one of which inspections at each institution that provides vocational education and training shall be unannounced), with particular focus on educational quality and program effectiveness, and ensures that accreditation team members are well-trained and knowledgeable with respect to their responsibilities;

"(2) requires that any institution of higher education subject to its jurisdiction which plans to establish a branch campus submit a business plan, including projected revenues and expenditures, prior to opening the branch campus;

"(3) agrees to conduct, as soon as practicable, but within a period of not more than 6 months of the establishment of a new branch campus or a change of ownership of an institution of higher education, an on-site visit of that branch campus or of the institution after a change of ownership;

"(4) requires that teach-out agreements among institutions are subject to approval by the accrediting agency or association consistent with standards promulgated by such agency or association;

"(5) maintains and makes publicly available written materials regarding standards and procedures for accreditation, appeal procedures, and the accreditation status of each institution subject to its jurisdiction; and

"(6) discloses publicly whenever an institution of higher education subject to its jurisdiction is being considered for accreditation or reaccreditation.

"(d) LENGTH OF APPROVAL.—No accrediting agency or association may be approved by the Secretary for the purpose of this Act for a period of more than 5 years.

"(e) INITIAL ARBITRATION RULE.—The Secretary may not recognize the accreditation of any institution of higher education unless the institution of higher education agrees to submit any dispute involving the final denial, withdrawal, or termination of accreditation to initial arbitration prior to any other legal action.

"(f) JURISDICTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any civil action brought by an institution of higher education seeking accreditation from, or accredited by, an accrediting agency or association approved by the Secretary for the purpose of this title and involving the denial, withdrawal, or termination of accreditation of the institution of higher education, shall be brought in the appropriate United States district court.

"(g) LIMITATION ON SCOPE OF STANDARDS.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to permit the Secretary to establish standards for accrediting agencies or associations that are not required by this section. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit or limit any accrediting agency or association from adopting additional standards not provided for in this section.

"(h) CHANGE OF ACCREDITING AGENCY.—The Secretary shall not recognize the accreditation of any otherwise eligible institution of higher education if the institution of higher education is in the process of changing its accrediting agency or association, unless the eligible institution submits to the Secretary all materials relating to the prior accreditation, including materials demonstrating reasonable cause for changing the accrediting agency or association.

"(i) DUAL ACCREDITATION RULE.—The Secretary shall not recognize the accreditation of any otherwise eligible institution of higher education if the institution of higher education is accredited, as an institution, by more than one accrediting agency or association, unless the institution submits to each such agency and association and to the Secretary the reasons for accreditation by more than one such agency or association and demonstrates to the Secretary reasonable cause for its accreditation by more than one agency or association. If the institution is accredited, as an institution, by more than one accrediting agency or association, the institution shall designate which agency's accreditation shall be utilized in determining the institution's eligibility for programs under this Act.

"(j) IMPACT OF LOSS OF ACCREDITATION.—An institution may not be certified or recertified as an institution of higher education under section 481 and subpart 3 of this part or participate in any of the other programs authorized by this Act if such institution—

"(1) is not currently accredited by any agency or association recognized by the Secretary;

"(2) has had its accreditation withdrawn, revoked, or otherwise terminated for cause during the preceding 24 months, unless such withdrawal, revocation, or termination has been rescinded by the same accrediting agency; or

"(3) has withdrawn from accreditation voluntarily under a show cause or suspension order during the preceding 24 months, unless such order has been rescinded by the same accrediting agency.

"(k) RELIGIOUS INSTITUTION RULE.—Notwithstanding subsection (j), the Secretary shall allow an institution that has had its accreditation withdrawn, revoked, or otherwise terminated, or has voluntarily withdrawn from an accreditation agency, to remain certified as an institution of higher education under section 481 and subpart 3 of this part for a period sufficient to allow such institution to obtain alternative accreditation, if the Secretary determines that the reason for the withdrawal, revocation, or termination—

"(1) is related to the religious mission or affiliation of the institution; and

"(2) is not related to the accreditation standards provided for in this section.

"(l) LIMITATION, SUSPENSION OR TERMINATION OF APPROVAL.—(1) The Secretary shall limit, suspend, or terminate the approval of an accrediting agency or association if the Secretary determines, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, that the accrediting agency or association has failed to apply effectively the standards or operate according to the procedures provided in this section.

"(2) The Secretary may determine that an accrediting agency or association has failed to apply effectively the standards provided in this section if an institutution of higher education seeks and receives accreditation from the accrediting agency or association during any period in which the institution is the subject of any interim action by another accrediting agency or association leading to the suspension, revocation, or termination of accreditation or the institution has been notified of the threatened loss of accreditation, and the due process procedures required by such suspension, revocation, termination, or threatened loss have not been completed.

"(m) LIMITATION ON THE SECRETARY'S AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may only recognize accrediting agencies or associations which accredit institutions of higher education for the purpose of enabling such institutions to establish eligibility to participate in the programs under this Act or which accredit institutions of higher education or higher education programs for the purpose of enabling them to establish eligibility to participate in other programs administered by the Department of Education or other Federal agencies.

"(n) INDEPENDENT EVALUATION.—(1) The Secretary shall conduct a comprehensive review and evaluation of the performance of all accrediting agencies or associations which seek recognition by the Secretary in order to determine whether such accrediting agencies or associations meet the standards established by this section. The Secretary shall conduct an independent evaluation of the information provided by such agency or association. Such evaluation shall include—

"(A) the solicitation of third-party information concerning the performance of the accrediting agency or association; and

"(B) site visits at both the accrediting agency or association and member institutions, including unannounced visits where appropriate.

"(2) The Secretary shall place a priority for review of accrediting agencies or associations on those agencies or associations that accredit institutions of higher education that participate most extensively in the programs authorized by this title and on those agencies or associations which have been the subject of the most complaints or legal actions.

"(3) The Secretary shall consider all available relevant information concerning the compliance of the accrediting agency or association with the standards provided for in this section, including any complaints or legal actions against such agency or association. In cases where deficiencies in the performance of an accreditation agency or association with respect to the requirements of this section are noted, the Secretary shall take these deficiencies into account in the approval process. The Secretary shall not, under any circumstances, base decisions on the approval or disapproval of accreditation agencies or associations on standards other than those contained in this section.

"(4) The Secretary shall maintain sufficient documentation to support the conclusions reached in the approval process, and, upon disapproval of any accreditation agency or association, shall make publicly available the reason for such disapproval, including reference to the specific standards under this section which have not been fulfilled.

"(o) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall by regulation provide procedures for the recognition of accrediting agencies or associations and for the appeal of the Secretary's decisions.

"Subpart 3—Eligibility and Certification Procedures

"SEC. 498. ELIGIBILITY AND CERTIFICATION PROCEDURES.

"(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENT.—For purposes of qualifying institutions of higher education for participation in programs under this title, the Secretary shall determine the legal authority to operate within a State, the accreditation status, and the administrative capability and financial responsibility of an institution of higher education in accordance with the requirements of this section.

"(b) SINGLE APPLICATION FORM.—The Secretary shall prepare and prescribe a single application form which—

"(1) requires sufficient information and documentation to determine that the requirements of eligibility, accreditation, and capability of the institution of higher education are met;

"(2) requires a specific description of the relationship between a main campus of an institution of higher education and all of its branches, including a description of the student aid processing that is performed by the main campus and that which is performed at its branches;

"(3) requires a description of third party servicers of an institution of higher education, together with a copy of any contract with the institution of higher education and a financial aid service provider or loan servicer; and

"(4) requires such other information as the Secretary determines will ensure compliance with the requirements of this title with respect to eligibility, accreditation, administrative capability and financial responsibility.

"(c) FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY STANDARDS.—(1) The Secretary shall determine whether an institution has the financial responsibility required by this title on the basis of whether the institution is able—

"(A) to provide the services described in its official publications and statements;

"(B) to provide the administrative resources necessary to comply with the requirements of this title; and

"(C) to meet all of its financial obligations, including (but not limited to) refunds of institutional charges and repayments to the Secretary for liabilities and debts incurred in programs administered by the Secretary.

"(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), if an institution fails to meet criteria prescribed by the Secretary with respect to operating losses, net worth, asset-to-liabilities ratios, or operating fund deficits then the institution shall provide the Secretary with satisfactory evidence of its financial responsibility in accordance with paragraph (3).

"(3) The Secretary may determine an institution to be financially responsible, notwithstanding the institution's failure to meet the criteria under paragraphs (1) and (2), if—

"(A) such institution submits to the Secretary third-party financial guarantees, such as performance bonds or letters of credit payable to the Secretary, which third-party financial guarantees shall equal not less than one-half of the annual potential liabilities of such institution to the Secretary for funds under this title, including loan obligations discharged pursuant to section 437, and to students for refunds of institutional charges, including funds under this title;

"(B) such institution has its liabilities backed by the full faith and credit of a State, or its equivalent;

"(C) such institution establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary, with the support of a report of an independent certified public accountant prepared under generally accepted accounting principles, that the institution is a going concern capable of meeting all of its financial obligations, including (but not limited to) refunds of institutional charges and repayments to the Secretary for liabilities and debts incurred in programs administered by the Secretary; or

"(D) such institution has met standards of financial responsibility, prescribed by the Secretary by regulation, that indicate a level of financial strength not less than those required in paragraph (2).

"(4) The determination as to whether an institution has met the standards of financial responsibility provided for in paragraphs (2) and (3)(C) shall be based on an audited and certified financial statement of the institution. Such audit shall be conducted by a qualified independent organization or person in accordance with standards established by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. Such statement shall be submitted to the Secretary at the time such institution is considered for certification or recertification under this section. If the institution is permitted to be certified (provisionally or otherwise) and such audit does not establish compliance with paragraph (2), the Secretary may require that additional audits be submitted.

"(5)(A) The Secretary shall establish requirements for the maintenance by an institution of higher education of sufficient cash reserves to ensure repayment of any required refunds.

"(B) The Secretary shall provide for a process under which the Secretary shall exempt an institution of higher education from the requirements described in subparagraph (A) if the Secretary determines that the institution—

"(i) is located in a State that has a tuition recovery fund that ensures that the institution meets the requirements of subparagraph (A);

"(ii) contributes to the fund; and

"(iii) otherwise has legal authority to operate within the State.

"(d) ADMINISTRATIVE CAPACITY STANDARD.—The Secretary is authorized—

"(1) to establish procedures and requirements relating to the administrative capacities of institutions of higher education, including—

"(A) consideration of past performance of institutions or persons in control of such institutions with respect to student aid programs; and

"(B) maintenance of records;

"(2) to establish such other reasonable procedures as the Secretary determines will contribute to ensuring that the institution of higher education will comply with administrative capability required by this title.

"(e) FINANCIAL GUARANTEES FROM OWNERS.—(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may, to the extent necessary to protect the financial interest of the United States, require—

"(A) financial guarantees from an institution participating, or seeking to participate, in a program under this title, or from one or more individuals who the Secretary determines, in accordance with paragraph (2), exercise substantial control over such institution, or both, in an amount determined by the Secretary to be sufficient to satisfy the institution's potential liability to the Federal Government, student assistance recipients, and other program participants for funds under this title; and

"(B) the assumption of personal liability, by one or more individuals who exercise substantial control over such institution, as determined by the Secretary in accordance with paragraph (2), for financial losses to the Federal Government, student assistance recipients, and other program participants for funds under this title, and civil and criminal monetary penalties authorized under this title.

"(2)(A) The Secretary may determine that an individual exercises substantial control over one or more institutions participating in a program under this title if the Secretary determines that—"(i) the individual directly or indirectly controls a substantial ownership interest in the institution;

"(ii) the individual, either alone or together with other individuals, represents, under a voting trust, power of attorney, proxy, or similar agreement, one or more persons who have, individually or in combination with the other persons represented or the individual representing them, a substantial ownership interest in the institution; or

"(iii) the individual is a member of the board of directors, the chief executive officer, or other executive officer of the institution or of an entity that holds a substantial ownership interest in the institution.

"(B) The Secretary may determine that an entity exercises substantial control over one or more institutions participating in a program under this title if the Secretary determines that the entity directly or indirectly holds a substantial ownership interest in the institution.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, an ownership interest is defined as a share of the legal or beneficial ownership or control of, or a right to share in the proceeds of the operation of, an institution or institution's parent corporation. An ownership interest may include, but is not limited to—

"(A) a sole proprietorship;

"(B) an interest as a tenant-in-common, joint tenant, or tenant by the entireties;

"(C) a partnership; or

"(D) an interest in a trust.

"(4) The Secretary shall not impose the requirements described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) on an institution that—

"(A) has not been subjected to a limitation, suspension, or termination action by the Secretary or a guaranty agency within the preceding 5 years;

"(B) has not had, during its 2 most recent audits of the institutions conduct of programs under this title, an audit finding that resulted in the institution being required to repay an amount greater than 5 percent of the funds the institution received from programs under this title for any year;

"(C) meets and has met, for the preceding 5 years, the financial responsibility standards under subsection (c); and

"(D) has not been cited during the preceding 5 years for failure to submit audits required under this title in a timely fashion.

"(5) For purposes of section 487(c)(1)(G), this section shall also apply to individuals or organizations that contract with an institution to administer any aspect of an institution's student assistance program under this title.

"(f) ACTIONS ON APPLICATIONS; SITE VISITS AND FEES.—The Secretary shall ensure that prompt action is taken by the Department on any application required under subsection (b). The personnel of the Department of Education shall conduct a site visit at each institution before certifying or recertifying its eligibility for purposes of any program under this title. The Secretary may charge reasonable fees to cover the expenses of certification and site visits and, to the extent permitted by appropriations Acts, may retain such fees to cover such expenses.

"(g) TIME LIMITATIONS ON, AND RENEWAL OF, ELIGIBILITY.—(1) The eligibility for the purposes of any program authorized under this title of any institution that is participating in any such program on the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 shall expire in accordance with the schedule prescribed by the Secretary in accordance with paragraph (2), but not later than 5 years after such date of enactment.

"(2) The Secretary shall establish a schedule for the expiration of the eligibility for purposes of any such program of all institutions of higher education within the 5-year period specified in paragraph (1). Such schedule shall place a priority for the expiration of the certification of institutions on those that meet the following criteria:

"(A) institutions subject to review by a State postsecondary review entity pursuant to subpart 1 of part H; or

"(B) other categories of institutions which the Secretary deems necessary.

"(3) After the expiration of the certification of any institution under the schedule prescribed under this subsection, or upon request for initial certification from an institution not previously certified, the Secretary may certify the eligibility for the purposes of any program authorized under this title of each such institution for a period not to exceed 4 years.

"(h) PROVISIONAL CERTIFICATION OF INSTITUTIONAL ELIGIBILITY.—(1) Notwithstanding subsections (d) and (g), the Secretary may provisionally certify an institution's eligibility to participate in programs under this title—

"(A) for not more than one complete award year in the case of an institution of higher education seeking an initial certification; and

"(B) for not more than 3 complete award years if—

"(i) the institution's administrative capability and financial responsibility is being determined for the first time;

"(ii) there is a complete or partial change of ownership, as defined under subsection (i), of an eligible institution; or

"(iii) the Secretary determines that the institution is, in the judgment of the Secretary, in an administrative or financial condition that may jeopardize its ability to perform its responsibilities under its program participation agreement.

"(2) Whenever the Secretary withdraws the approval of any accrediting agency, an institution of higher education which meets the requirements of accreditation, eligibility, and certification on the day prior to such withdrawal, the Secretary may, notwithstanding the withdrawal, continue the eligibility of the institution of higher education to participate in the programs authorized by this title for a period not to exceed 18 months from the date of the withdrawal of approval.

"(3) If, prior to the end of a period of provisional certification under this subsection, the Secretary determines that the institution is unable to meet its responsibilities under its program participation agreement, the Secretary may terminate the institution's participation in programs under this title.

"(i) TREATMENT OF CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP.—(1) For the purpose of certifying the eligibility of an institution, an eligible institution of higher education that has a change in ownership resulting in a change in control shall not be considered to be the same institution (except as provided in paragraph (3)) and shall be considered a new institution for the purpose of establishing eligibility, except that such institution shall not be required (under section 481(b)(5) or 481(c)(3)) to be in existence for 2 years prior to seeking such certification unless such institution was in existence as a branch for less than 2 years.

"(2) An action resulting in a change in control may include (but is not limited to)—

"(A) the sale of the institution or the majority of its assets;

"(B) the transfer of the controlling interest of stock of the institution or its parent corporation;

"(C) the merger of two or more eligible institutions;

"(D) the division of one or more institutions into two or more institutions;

"(E) the transfer of the controlling interest of stock of the institutions to its parent corporation; or

"(F) the transfer of the liabilities of the institution to its parent corporation.

"(3) An action that may be treated as not resulting in a change in control includes (but is not limited to)—

"(A) the death of an owner of an institution, when the owner's interest is sold or transferred to either a family member or a current stockholder of the corporation; or

"(B) another action determined by the Secretary to be a routine business practice.

"(j) TREATMENT OF BRANCHES.—(1) For the purposes of this title, a branch of an eligible institution, as defined pursuant to regulations of the Secretary, is a separate institution of higher education and shall separately meet all the requirements of this title, except that such institution shall not be required (under section 481(b)(5) or 481(c)(3)) to be in existence for 2 years prior to seeking such certification unless such institution was in existence as a branch for less than 2 years.

"(2) The Secretary may waive the requirement of section 1201(a)(2) for a branch that (A) is not located in a State, (B) is affiliated with an eligible institution, and (C) was participating in one or more programs under this title on or before January 1, 1992.

"SEC. 498A. PROGRAM REVIEW AND DATA.

"(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—In order to strengthen the administrative capability and financial responsibility provisions of this title, the Secretary—

"(1) shall provide for the conduct of program reviews on a systematic basis designed to include all institutions of higher education participating in programs authorized by this title;

"(2) may give priority for program review to institutions of higher education that are—

"(A) institutions with a cohort default rate for loans under part B of this title in excess of 25 percent or which places such institutions in the highest 25 percent of such institutions;

"(B) institutions with a default rate in dollar volume for loans under part B of this title which places the institutions in the highest 25 percent of such institutions;

"(C) institutions with a significant fluctuation in Federal Stafford Loan volume or Federal Pell Grant awards, or both, in the year for which the determination is made compared to the year prior to such year;

"(D) institutions reported to have deficiencies or financial aid problems by the appropriate State postsecondary review entity designated under subpart 1 of this part or by the appropriate accrediting agency or association;

"(E) institutions with high annual dropout rates;

"(F) any institution which is required to be reviewed by a State postsecondary review entity pursuant to subpart 1 of part H under section 494C(b); and

"(G) such other institutions as the Secretary deems necessary; and

"(3) shall establish and operate a central data base of information on institutional accreditation, eligibility, and certification that includes—

"(A) all information available to the Department;

"(B) all relevant information made available by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs;

"(C) all relevant information from accrediting agencies or associations;

"(D) all relevant information available from a guaranty agency; and

"(E) all relevant information available from States under subpart 1.

"(b) SPECIAL ADMINISTRATIVE RULES.—(1) In carrying out paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a), the Secretary shall establish guidelines designed to ensure uniformity of practice in the conduct of program reviews of institutions of higher education.

"(2) The Secretary shall review the regulations of the Department and the application of such regulations to ensure the uniformity of interpretation and application of the regulations.

"(c) DATA COLLECTION RULES.—The Secretary shall develop and carry out a plan for the data collection responsibilities described in paragraph (3) of subsection (a). The Secretary shall make the information obtained under such paragraph (3) readily available to all institutions of higher education, guaranty agencies, States, and other organizations participating in the programs authorized by this title.

"(d) TRAINING.—The Secretary shall provide training to personnel of the Department, including criminal investigative training, designed to improve the quality of financial and compliance audits and program reviews conducted under this title.

"(e) SPECIAL RULE.—The provisions of section 103(b) of the Department of Education Organization Act, shall not apply to Secretarial determinations made regarding the appropriate length of instruction for programs measured in clock hours.".

TITLE V—EDUCATOR RECRUITMENT, RETENTION, AND DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 501. REVISION OF TITLE V.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Title V of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1101 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE V—EDUCATOR RECRUITMENT, RETENTION, AND DEVELOPMENT

"SEC. 500. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

"(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

"(1) teachers in the classroom are the men and women who must play an integral role in leading our Nation's schools into the 21st century;

"(2) we should encourage individuals to enter the education profession so that our teaching force is representative both of the diversity of our Nation and of the tremendous talents and skills of our citizens;

"(3) the methods used to prepare prospective teachers and the continuing education and support provided to practicing teachers have a significant influence on the effectiveness of classroom teachers;

"(4) the postsecondary education of education professionals has not been linked to local, State and national goals and standards;

"(5) the inservice and continuing professional development of educators has not promoted systematic and sustained improvement of the education system;

"(6) State educational agencies have not been funded and staffed adequately to carry out a mission of supporting a process to achieve local, State, or national goals and standards;

"(7) in order to encourage more women and underrepresented minorities to enter the fields of science and mathematics and succeed in these fields, we must provide proper training for existing mathematics and science teachers and recruit women and underrepresented minorities as teachers in these fields;

"(8) educators must have the expertise and the support that allow them to adapt to the changing environment in our schools and to the evolving skills required of our schools' graduates; and

"(9) the Federal Government plays an essential role in providing support to educator training and professional development that will enable teachers to be classroom leaders and administrators to be school leaders at the forefront of reforming our Nation's schools.

"(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this title—

"(1) to provide assistance to our Nation's teaching force for the continued improvement of their professional skills;

"(2) to provide assistance for professional development activities enabling teachers, school administrators, and institutions of higher education to work collaboratively to improve educational performance through school reform and restructuring;

"(3) to address the Nation's teacher shortage, particularly in areas where there are heavy concentrations of low-income students, by encouraging talented persons, including the individuals already employed as school paraprofessionals and individuals who have been employed in other areas of endeavor, to enter the teaching profession;

"(4) to encourage academically qualified students to become teachers through scholarship assistance;

"(5) to support the recruitment of underrepresented populations into teaching careers;

"(6) to provide scholarship assistance to encourage women and minorities who are underrepresented in the fields of science and mathematics to enter the teaching profession in these fields;

"(7) to encourage the establishment and maintenance of programs that provide professional teacher preparation to individuals who are moving to careers in education from other occupations;

"(8) to promote partnerships between institutions of higher education and local educational agencies for the purpose of promoting the simultaneous restructuring and renewal of elementary and secondary schools and college-based teacher education programs;

"(9) to improve the leadership and administrative skills of elementary and secondary school administrators;

"(10) to provide assistance to schools of education in institutions of higher education in order to reform teacher education programs by encouraging new developments in teacher preparation which provide for greater integration of subject matter and pedagogical training and which prepare classroom teachers to effectively meet changing noneducational challenges in the schools; and

"(11) to promote high quality child development and early childhood education specialist training programs, including preschool and early intervention services for infants and toddlers with disabilities.

"PART A—STATE AND LOCAL PROGRAMS FOR TEACHER EXCELLENCE

"SEC. 501. AUTHORITY AND ALLOCATION OF FUNDS; DEFINITIONS.

"(a) PURPOSE AND AUTHORITY.—

"(1) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this part to provide funds to State educational agencies, local educational agencies and institutions of higher education in order to update and improve the skills of classroom teachers, including preschool and early childhood education specialists and school administrators, to establish State academies for teachers and school leaders, and to provide for a comprehensive examination of State requirements for teacher preservice and certification.

"(2) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to make allotments to State educational agencies for the purposes of enhancing and improving the quality of teaching, including early childhood education, in each of the several States.

"(b) ALLOTMENT OF FUNDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—From the funds appropriated in each fiscal year pursuant to section 510A, the Secretary shall allot to each State—

"(A) 50 percent of such funds on the basis of the number of individuals in the State aged 5 through 17 compared to the number of all such individuals in all States; and

"(B) 50 percent of such funds on the basis of the amount the State receives under sections 1005 and 1006 of chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 compared to the total amount that all States receive under such sections.

"(2) ALLOCATIONS FROM STATE ALLOTMENTS.—

"(A)(i) Except as provided in subsection (c), from the amount allotted to each State in each fiscal year pursuant to paragraph (1) and not reserved pursuant to subparagraph (B)(i), the State education agency shall allocate 50 percent of such amount in accordance with clause (ii) to local educational agencies to carry out the activities described in section 503.

"(ii) The State educational agency shall allocate 50 percent of the amount allotted to the State in each fiscal year under paragraph (1) so that—

"(I) one-half of such amount is allocated to local educational agencies within such State based on the local educational agency's relative share of the enrollments in public schools within the State; and

"(II) one-half of such amount is allocated to local educational agencies within such State based on the local educational agency's relative share of the State's allocation of funds under sections 1005 and 1006 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, except that any local educational agency that would receive an allocation of less than $10,000 shall be required to form a consortium with at least one other local educational agency in order to receive an allocation under this part. In making allocations under this part, the State educational agency shall use the most recent data available.

"(B)(i) From the amount allotted to each State in each fiscal year pursuant to paragraph (1) the State educational agency shall reserve not more than 3 percent of such funds for the purposes of administering the program under this title, including evaluation and dissemination activities.

"(ii) From the amount allotted to each State in each fiscal year under paragraph (1) and not reserved pursuant to clause (i), the State educational agency—

"(I) shall reserve not more than 25 percent of such funds to carry out sections 504, 505, and 506; and

"(II) shall reserve not more than 25 percent of such funds to award grants to institutions of higher education in accordance with sections 507 and 508.

"(c) SPECIAL RULE.—Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (b)(2)(A), if the amount appropriated to carry out this part for any fiscal year is less than $250,000,000, then each State educational agency shall use 50 percent of the amount allotted to such State under paragraph (1) and not reserved pursuant to subsection (b)(2)(B)(i) to award grants to local educational agencies on a competitive basis.

"(d) REALLOTMENT.—If a State or local educational agency elects not to receive assistance under this part in any fiscal year or the Secretary determines in any fiscal year that a State or local educational agency will not be able to use all or any portion of the funds available to such State or local educational agency under this part, then the Secretary shall reallot such funds. The Secretary shall reallot such funds in such fiscal year in accordance with the provisions of this part among the States or local educational agencies who are eligible for assistance under this part and are not described in the preceding sentence.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this part—

"(1) the term 'State' means each of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, American Samoa, and the Republic of Palau (until the Compact of Free Association takes effect pursuant to section 101(a) of Public Law 99-658); and

"(2) the term 'key academic subjects' means English, mathematics, science, history, geography, foreign languages, civics and government, and economics.

"SEC. 502. STATE APPLICATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any State which desires to receive an allotment under this part shall submit to the Secretary an application which—

"(1) designates the State educational agency as the State agency responsible for the administration and supervision of programs assisted under this part;

"(2) provides for a process of active discussion and consultation with a committee, convened by the chief State school officer, which is broadly representative of the following educational interests within the State, including—

"(A) a representative nominated by each of the following:

"(i) the State teacher organizations;

"(ii) the organizations representing preschool and early childhood education specialists;

"(iii) the State school administrators organization;

"(iv) the State parents organizations;

"(v) the State business organizations; and

"(vi) the State student organizations;

"(B) a representative from the State board of education;

"(C) a representative of faculty from departments, schools or colleges of educations;

"(D) other representatives of institutions of higher education, including community colleges;

"(E) the State director of vocational education; and

"(F) the State director of special education;

"(3) describes the competitive process that the State will use to distribute funds among local educational agencies pursuant to section 501(c);

"(4) describes the process the State will use to conduct the assessment required by section 504(c);

"(5) describes how the State will allocate funds among activities required under section 504;

"(6) with respect to the State academies to be established under sections 505 and 506—

"(A) describes the academies to be established under this part and the goals and objectives for each such academy;

"(B) describes how the academies assisted under this part shall relate to the overall plan for the attainment of the national education goals by the State;

"(C) describes the competitive process that shall be used to select applicants to operate the academies assisted under this part;

"(D) assures that the Academies for Teachers shall provide instruction in the key academic subjects;

"(E) assures that the State shall continue to operate the academies assisted under this part when Federal funds provided pursuant to this title are no longer available;

"(F) assures that Federal funds provided under this part shall not be used for construction of new facilities or substantial remodeling;

"(G) assures that the Academies for Teachers shall provide activities designed to enhance the ability of teachers to work with special educational populations, including—

"(i) limited-English proficient children;

"(ii) children with disabilities;

"(iii) economically and educationally disadvantaged children; and

"(iv) gifted and talented children; and

"(H) contains such other assurances and information as the Secretary may reasonably require;

"(7) describes the competitive process that the State will use to distribute funds among institutions of higher education pursuant to section 507;

"(8) describes a plan to promote learning among the State educational agency staff in order to support and facilitate systemic improvement of the State educational agency, schools or colleges of education at institutions of higher education, and local educational agencies; and

"(9) includes such other information and assurances as the Secretary may require.

"(b) FUNCTIONS OF COMMITTEE.—The application required by subsection (a) shall identify the procedures by which the committee required by paragraph (2) of such subsection will be engaged in—

"(1) ensuring that activities assisted under this part are effective, coordinated with other State, local, and Federal activities and programs, and meet the needs of the State for improving the quality of teaching and teacher education programs, including those programs concerned with preschool education and the training of early childhood education specialists, and school leadership programs;

"(2) advising the State on criteria for awarding funds under sections 501(c), 505, 506, and 507; and

"(3) advising the State on criteria for approving local educational agency applications under section 503(a).

"(c) EVALUATION AND REPORT.—

"(1) REPORT TO SECRETARY.—Each State educational agency receiving an allotment under this part shall evaluate the work of each academy that is located in the State and assisted under this part every 2 years, including the impact of each academy's programs on participants, and report the findings of such evaluation to the Secretary. The initial report shall be submitted 3 years after funds are first allotted to such State educational agency under section 501 and subsequent reports shall be submitted every 2 years thereafter. Such report shall also describe the characteristics of the participants and activities provided at each academy assisted under this part.

"(2) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit to the Congress a summary of the reports required under subsection (a). The initial summary shall be submitted 60 days after the due date of the first report described in subsection (a) and subsequent summaries shall be submitted every 2 years thereafter.

"SEC. 503. LOCAL APPLICATION AND USE OF FUNDS.

"(a) LOCAL APPLICATION.—Any local educational agency which desires to receive assistance under section 501(b)(2)(A) or 501(c) shall submit to the State educational agency an application which—

"(1) describes the needs of such local educational agency with respect to inservice training programs for teachers and preschool and early childhood education specialists pursuant to the assessment conducted under subsection (b)(2)(A), and, if appropriate, describes the need of such local educational agency for teacher recruitment, business partnerships, outreach to military veterans, and the provision of other opportunities for teachers to improve their skills;

"(2) describes the process used to determine such needs, including consultation with teachers, preschool and early childhood specialists, principals, parents, representatives from departments, schools or colleges of education, and others in the community;

"(3) describes the activities such agency intends to conduct with the funds provided under section 501(b)(2)(A) or 501(c) consistent with the provisions of this section in order to improve the quality of teaching within such agency;

"(4) describes the processes and methods used to promote systematic improvement through continual learning in order to achieve agreed upon local, State and National standards; and

"(5) any other information that the State educational agency may reasonably require.

"(b) LOCAL USES OF FUNDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Local educational agencies receiving assistance under section 501(b)(2)(A) or 501(c) shall use such funds for the inservice training of teachers and, if appropriate, for preschool and early childhood education specialists, and may use funds for—

"(A) development of programs to recruit individuals into the teaching profession and the field of early childhood education;

"(B) business partnerships;

"(C) outreach to military veterans; and

"(D) other purposes consistent with improving the quality of teaching in the local educational agency, as approved by the State educational agency.

"(2) INSERVICE TRAINING.—

"(A) In order to receive assistance under section 501(b)(2)(A) or 501(c), a local educational agency or a consortium of local educational agencies shall first assess the needs of such agency or agencies for inservice training.

"(B) Funds expended for inservice training shall be used, in accordance with the assessment conducted under subparagraph (A), for the cost of—

"(i) the expansion and improvement of inservice training and retraining of teachers and other appropriate school personnel, including vocational teachers, special education teachers, and preschool teachers, consistent with the assessment conducted under subparagraph (A);

"(ii) providing funds for grants for individual teachers within the local educational agency to undertake projects to improve their teaching ability or to improve the instructional materials used in their classrooms;

"(iii) activities designed to address the effects of chronic community violence on children, such as violence counseling training for teachers and early childhood specialists, and activities and training aimed at resolving conflicts;

"(iv) activities designed to enhance the ability of teachers to work with culturally diverse students;

"(v) activities designed to integrate academic and vocational education;

"(vi) as appropriate, activities designed to assist teacher participation in a Tech-Prep program under section 344 of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Act, in order to develop the skills of such teachers in activities such as organizational development leadership and interdisciplinary curricula development; and

"(vii) other activities consistent with the goals of this part as approved by the State educational agency.

"(C) Such activities may be carried out through agreements with institutions of higher education, nonprofit organizations, public agencies, and museums.

"(D) Activities related to inservice training shall be coordinated with such activities carried out under part A of title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

"(3) RECRUITMENT OF TEACHERS.—

"(A) Local educational agencies receiving assistance under section 501(b)(2)(A) or 501(c) may use such assistance—

"(i) to establish, operate, or expand programs to encourage and recruit interested individuals to pursue a course of study that will lead to a career in education; and

"(ii) to establish, operate, or expand a program where such agency recruits students currently enrolled in a school in the local educational agency to be teachers or early childhood education specialists.

"(B) Activities under this paragraph may include—

"(i) academic and career counseling of and support services for students;

"(ii) programs in which students act as tutors while they are enrolled in schools in the local educational agency;

“(iii) programs in which students enrolled in institutions of higher education and other individuals tutor students within schools in the local educational agency;

“(iv) information and recruitment efforts to attract individuals into the teaching profession; and

“(v) programs to support early childhood education efforts at the preschool and school level.

“(C) In conducting programs under this paragraph, local educational agencies shall place a priority on recruiting students and individuals from minority groups.

“(D) Local educational agencies may conduct programs under this paragraph in consortia with institutions of higher education.

“(4) BUSINESS PARTNERSHIPS.—Local educational agencies receiving assistance under section 501(b)(2)(A) or 501(c) may use such assistance to establish partnerships with representatives of the business community to sponsor—

“(A) programs which allow representatives of local business or firms to go into the classroom and work with the classroom teacher to provide instruction in subject areas where the expertise of the teacher could be supplemented, especially in the subject areas of mathematics, science, and vocational and technology education training;

“(B) internship programs which provide an opportunity for classroom teachers to work in local businesses or firms to gain practical experience or to develop new skills or expertise;

“(C) programs which bring students and teachers into business settings to see applications of course work and in specialized areas, and to learn to use advanced technical equipment;

“(D) programs which allow representatives of local businesses and firms to work with school administrators to develop instructional material; and

“(E) other activities appropriate to forming a working relationship between business leaders and classroom leaders.

“(5) OUTREACH TO MILITARY VETERANS.—Local educational agencies receiving assistance under section 501(b)(2)(A) or 501(c) may use such assistance to establish programs to inform United States military veterans of teaching opportunities and to provide assistance in the establishment of teaching opportunities for such veterans by—

“(A) planning and implementing informational and outreach programs leading to the development of programs specifically designed to inform United States military veterans about teaching opportunities and the qualifications necessary for such opportunities;

“(B) planning and implementing programs leading to the creation of teaching opportunities for such veterans;

“(C) supporting programs to assist such veterans to meet the qualifications to become teachers;

“(D) disseminating information on the program described in this paragraph and on sources of student financial assistance available under title IV of this Act and under programs administered by the Department of Veterans Affairs and other Federal agencies; and “(E) making scholarships available to such military veterans under the same terms and conditions specified in subpart 1 of part C of this title.

“SEC. 504. STATE USES OF FUNDS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Each State educational agency receiving funds reserved pursuant to section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) shall use such funds—

“(1) first, to conduct a study of teacher education programs within such State, as required under subsection (c); and

“(2) secondly, for—

“(A) the establishment of State Academies for Teachers under section 505;

“(B) the establishment of State Academies for School Leaders under section 506; and “(C) activities directly related to the implementation of the teacher education study required under subsection (c).

“(b) SPECIAL RULE.—If a State educational agency can demonstrate that the amount of funds reserved pursuant to section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) is insufficient to establish one State academy, then the State educational agency shall distribute such funds to local educational agencies in accordance with section 501(b)(2)(A) or 501(c) to carry out the activities described in section 503(b).

“(c) TEACHER EDUCATION STUDY.—

“(1) STUDY REQUIRED.—Each State educational agency receiving funds under this part shall, in consultation with institutions of higher education, local educational agencies, teachers, parents, the State legislature, the State board of education, and business, undertake a study of—

“(A) teacher education programs and State teacher professional development requirements, including programs and requirements intended to train preschool and early childhood education specialists; and

“(B) the State laws and regulations relating to such programs and requirements, including any standards or requirements for certification and licensure, in order to determine if such programs and requirements are adequately preparing teachers to effectively educate students.

“(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—Such study shall consider whether such programs or requirements—

“(A) would be improved if teacher education programs were required to coordinate courses with other departments on campus in order to provide prospective teachers with a strong background in their subject matter;

“(B) integrate academic and vocational education instruction;

“(C) give enough flexibility in order to allow experimentation and innovation;

“(D) would be improved if such programs provided preparation for students desiring to become teachers, but who are pursuing a bachelor's degree in an area of study other than education;

“(E) would be improved if teacher certification required a bachelor's degree in a subject area and a masters degree in education; and

“(F) would be improved if institutions of higher education that have developed innovative materials and curricula for inservice training were required to incorporate these improvements into their preservice programs.

“(3) DEADLINES.—

“(A) Such study shall be completed by two years from the end of the first fiscal year in which funding was made available for this part. The results of such study shall be reported to the Secretary. In submitting the report to the Secretary, the State educational agency shall include in the report the most successful practices used to enhance the profession of teaching. The Secretary may disseminate such successful practices in order to assist other States in their efforts to enhance the profession of teaching.

“(B) Except as provided in paragraph (4), beginning in the third fiscal year for which funding under this part is available, State educational agencies shall use all funds provided under section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) which are not allotted for State Academies for Teachers and State Academies for School Leaders—

“(i) to implement the program and policy changes resulting from the findings of such study; and

“(ii) to assist schools and programs of education throughout the State in meeting any new requirements that result from such study.

“(C) The State educational agency shall award grants pursuant to section 507(b)(9) to institutions of higher education to implement the programs and policy changes resulting from the findings of such study.

“(4) WAIVER.—If a State demonstrates to the Secretary that it has completed a study comparable to the study required by this subsection within the previous 5 years prior to the fiscal year for which funds are first made available under this part, then the Secretary may waive the requirements of this subsection. States receiving a waiver shall use funds provided under section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) to implement the program and policy changes resulting from the findings of such study. If the State can demonstrate to the Secretary that such program and policy changes have been implemented, then the State shall use funds provided under section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) to carry out the activities authorized under sections 505 and 506.

“SEC. 505. STATE ACADEMIES FOR TEACHERS.

“(a) PURPOSE; DEFINITIONS.—

“(1) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to improve elementary and secondary school teacher subject matter knowledge and teaching skills in each of the key academic subjects by establishing one or more Academies in the key academic subjects in every State.

“(2) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

“(A) the term ‘Academy’ means a course of instruction and related activities to increase a teacher's knowledge of a specific subject area, a teacher's ability to impart such knowledge to students, and a teacher's ability to address any other issue described in this section, except that such term—

“(i) does not mean a physical facility; and

“(ii) does not require a separate location from another Academy or other training program; and

“(B) the term ‘eligible entity’ means a local educational agency, an institution of higher education, a museum, a private nonprofit educational organization of demonstrated effectiveness, or a consortium of any 2 or more of such entities.

“(b) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Each eligible entity desiring to operate an Academy under this section shall submit an application to the State educational agency at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the State may reasonably require.

“(2) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) shall describe—

“(A) the goals of the Academy and the steps that shall be taken to evaluate the extent to which the Academy reaches its goals;

“(B) the curriculum to be used or developed by the Academy;

“(C) steps to be taken to recruit teachers for the Academy's program, including outreach efforts to identify and attract—

“(i) minority group members;

“(ii) individuals with disabilities;

“(iii) individuals from areas with large numbers or concentrations of disadvantaged students; and

“(iv) other teachers with the potential to serve as mentor teachers;

“(D) steps to be taken to ensure that faculty members teaching at the Academy shall be of exceptional ability and experience, including outreach efforts to identify and attract as faculty members—

“(i) minority group members;

“(ii) individuals with disabilities; and

“(iii) individuals from areas with large numbers or concentrations of disadvantaged students.

“(E) efforts to be undertaken to disseminate information about the Academy;

“(F) selection criteria to be used in identifying teachers to participate in the Academy;

"(G) steps to be taken to assure that the programs offered by the Academy shall be of sufficient length and comprehensiveness to significantly improve participants' knowledge; and

"(H) efforts to be undertaken to evaluate the impact of the Academy on participants.

"(c) USE OF ALLOTTED FUNDS.—

"(1) GRANTS.—Each State educational agency receiving an allotment under this part shall use the funds reserved pursuant to section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) to award one or more competitive grants to eligible entities to enable such eligible entities to operate an Academy in accordance with the provisions of this section.

"(2) COORDINATION OF ACTIVITIES.—To the extent practicable, such academies shall coordinate efforts with teacher inservice activities of local educational agencies.

"(3) COMBINATION OF RESOURCES.—Each State educational agency receiving an allotment under this part may combine the funds reserved pursuant to section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) with such funds reserved by another State educational agency to operate academies assisted under this part on a multistate or regional basis.

"(4) COSTS.—Each eligible entity receiving a grant under this section shall use such funds to meet the operating costs of carrying out the activities described in subsection (d), which may include reasonable startup and initial operating costs, and costs associated with release time, stipends, travel, and living expenses for teachers who participate in the Academy's program if no other funds are available to pay such costs.

"(d) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—Each eligible entity receiving a grant to operate an Academy under this section may use such grant funds for—

"(1) renewal and enhancement of participants' knowledge in key academic subjects;

"(2) skills and strategies to improve academic achievement of students, especially students who are educationally disadvantaged, are limited-English proficient, are drug- or alcohol-exposed, or have disabilities;

"(3) improved teaching and classroom management skills;

"(4) techniques for the integration of academic and vocational subject matter, including the application of such techniques in tech/prep education programs;

"(5) the use of educational technologies in teaching the key academic subjects;

"(6) training needed to participate in curriculum development in a key academic subject;

"(7) training in the development and use of assessment tools;

"(8) review of existing teacher enhancement programs to identify the most promising approaches;

"(9) development of a curriculum for use by the Academy;

"(10) follow-up activities for previous participants;

"(11) dissemination of information about the Academy, including the training curricula developed; and

"(12) any other activities proposed by the applicant and approved by the State educational agency.

"(e) COST SHARING.—Funds received for this section may be used to pay not more than 75 percent of the cost of operating an Academy in the first year an eligible entity receives a grant under this section, 65 percent of such cost in such second year, 55 percent of such cost in such third year, 45 percent of such cost in such fourth year, and 35 percent of such cost in such fifth year. The remaining share shall be provided from non-Federal sources, and may be in cash or in-kind contributions, fairly valued.

"(f) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) USES OF FUNDS.—

"(A) KEY ACADEMIC SUBJECTS.—At least 70 percent of funds received for this section shall be used for enhancement of participant knowledge in key academic subjects.

"(B) OTHER SUBJECTS.—At least 20 percent of the funds received for this section shall be used for enhancement of participant knowledge in areas not related to academic subjects.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—In awarding grants under this section the State educational agency may provide for training in 2 or more key academic subjects at a single site.

"(3) ADDITIONAL ACADEMIES OR AWARDS.—If a State can demonstrate that the State's need for academies in key academic subjects has been met, and if the State can demonstrate that it is implementing the findings of the teacher education study described in section 504(c), then the State may use a portion of the amount reserved pursuant to section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) to establish one or more of the following academies or awards:

"(A) EARLY CHILDHOOD ACADEMIES.—A State educational agency may establish an academy aimed at early childhood education training. Such an academy shall give a priority to recruiting candidates from underrepresented groups in the early childhood education profession and shall provide intensive childhood training in violence counseling.

"(B) TECH-PREP ACADEMIES.—A State educational agency may establish an academy for—

"(i) assisting educators in secondary schools and community colleges to more effectively understand organizational structures and organizational change strategies;

"(ii) assisting educators to learn effective peer leadership strategies;

"(iii) assisting secondary school teachers and community college faculty to identify the knowledge and skills required in highly technical industries and workplaces;

"(iv) assisting secondary school teachers and community college faculty to apply creative strategies to the development of interdisciplinary curricula; and

"(v) assisting educators in integrating academic and vocational education.

"(C) TEACHER AWARDS.—(i) A State educational agency may make awards to State Academies for Teachers to provide for a program of cash awards and recognition to outstanding teachers in the key academic subject or subjects covered by the program of the Academy.

"(ii) Any full-time public or private elementary or secondary school teacher of a key academic subject or vocational and technology education subject, including an elementary school teacher of the general curriculum, shall be eligible to receive an award under this subparagraph.

"(iii) The amount of a teacher's award under this subparagraph shall not exceed $5,000 and shall be available for any purpose the recipient chooses.

"(iv) Each Academy receiving an award under clause (i) of this subparagraph shall select teachers to receive awards from nominations received from local educational agencies, public and private elementary and secondary schools, teachers, associations of teachers, parents, associations of parents and teachers, businesses, business groups, and student groups.

"(v) The Academy shall select award recipients under this subparagraph in accordance with criteria developed by the Academy and approved by the State educational agency. The selection criteria may take into account teacher's success in—

"(I) educating disadvantaged children and children with disabilities;

"(II) educating gifted and talented children;

"(III) encouraging students to enroll, and succeed, in advanced classes in a key academic subject or vocational and technology education subject;

"(IV) teaching a key academic subject or vocational and technology education subject successfully in schools educating large numbers of educationally disadvantaged students, including schools in low-income inner-city or rural areas;

"(V) introducing a new curriculum in a key academic subject into a school or strengthening an established curriculum;

"(VI) acting as a master teacher; and

"(VII) other criteria as developed by the Academies and approved by the State educational agency.

"SEC. 506. STATE ACADEMIES FOR SCHOOL LEADERS.

"(a) PURPOSE; DEFINITIONS.—

"(1) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to improve the training and performance of school principals and other school leaders and to increase the number of persons who are highly trained to be principals and school leaders by establishing an Academy for current and prospective school leaders in every State.

"(2) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this section—

"(A) the term 'Academy' means a course of instruction and related activities to increase a school leader's knowledge of the tools and techniques of school management and leadership, and such leader's ability to exercise such tools and techniques in the school setting, and may include a course of instruction for school district level system leaders separately or in combination with school leaders and teachers, except that such term—

"(i) does not mean a physical facility; and

"(ii) does not require a separate location from another Academy or other training program; and

"(B) the term 'eligible entity' means a technical assistance center assisted under subpart 2 of part C of title V of this Act as such Act was in effect on the day before the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, a local educational agency, an institution of higher education, a museum, a private nonprofit educational organization of demonstrated effectiveness, or a consortium of any 2 or more such entities.

"(b) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—(A) Each eligible entity desiring to operate an Academy under this section shall submit an application to the State educational agency at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the State may reasonably require. Such Academy may be operated in cooperation or consortium with an Academy of another State.

"(B) A priority for awards shall be given to entities who received funds under subpart 2 of part C of title V of the Higher Education Act as in effect on September 30, 1991.

"(2) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) shall describe—

"(A) the goals of the Academy and the steps that shall be taken to evaluate the extent to which the Academy reaches its goals;

"(B) the curriculum to be used or developed by the Academy;

"(C) the steps to be taken to recruit school leaders for the Academy's program, including outreach efforts to identify and attract—

"(i) minority group members;

"(ii) individuals with disabilities;

"(iii) individuals from areas with large numbers or concentrations of disadvantaged students; and

"(iv) other individuals with potential to become school leaders;

"(D) efforts to be taken to disseminate information about the Academy;

"(E) selection criteria to be used in identifying school leaders to participate in the Academy;

"(F) steps to be taken to assure that the programs offered by the Academy shall be of sufficient length and comprehensiveness to significantly improve participants' knowledge;

"(G) steps to be taken to assure the involvement of private sector managers and executives from businesses in the conduct of the Academy's programs; and

"(H) efforts to be undertaken to evaluate the impact of the Academy on participants.

"(c) USE OF ALLOTTED FUNDS.—

"(1) GRANTS.—Each State educational agency receiving an allotment under this part shall use the funds reserved pursuant to section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I) to award a competitive grant to an eligible entity to enable such eligible entity to operate an Academy in accordance with the provisions of this subpart.

"(2) COSTS.—Each eligible entity receiving a grant under this section shall use such funds to meet the costs of carrying out the activities described in subsection (d), which may include reasonable startup and initial operating costs, and stipends, travel, and living expenses for participants in the Academy if no other funds are available to pay such costs.

"(3) LIMITATIONS.—

"(A) PARTICIPANTS.—At least 70 percent of the participants in an Academy shall be from the school building level.

"(B) SPECIAL RULE.—In awarding grants under this section, the State educational agency may provide for the location at the same site of Academies assisted under this section and Academies assisted under section 505.

"(d) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—Each eligible entity receiving a grant to operate an Academy under this section may use such grant funds for—

"(1) developing and enhancing of participants' knowledge in instructional leadership, school-based management, shared decisionmaking, school improvement strategies and school-level accountability mechanisms;

"(2) identifying candidates, including members of minority groups, individuals with disabilities, and individuals from schools with high numbers or concentrations of educationally disadvantaged students and individuals who are bilingual, to be trained as new school leaders;

"(3) conducting programs which provide for the involvement of private sector managers and executives from businesses;

"(4) identifying models and methods of leadership training and development that are promising or have proven to be successful;

"(5) providing intensive training and development programs for current school leaders seeking enhanced and up-to-date knowledge needed to perform their jobs effectively;

"(6) identifying local educational agencies and schools with principal and other school leader vacancies and working with such agencies and schools to match Academy participants with such vacancies;

"(7) facilitating internships for graduates of the program for new school leaders, under the guidance and supervision of experienced administrators;

"(8) providing periodic follow-up development activities for school leaders trained through the Academy's programs;

"(9) disseminating information about the Academy, including the training curricula developed;

"(10) coordinating activities with those of any State Academies for Teachers established in the State; and

"(11) any other activity proposed by the applicant in the application submitted pursuant to subsection (b) and approved by the State educational agency.

"(e) COST-SHARING.—Funds received under this section may be used to pay not more than 75 percent of the cost of operating an Academy in the first year an eligible entity receives a grant under this subpart, 65 percent of such cost in such second year, 55 percent of such cost in such third year, 45 percent of such cost in such fourth year, and 35 percent of such cost in such fifth year. The remaining share shall be provided from non-Federal sources, and be in cash or in kind, fairly valued.

"SEC. 507. INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION USES OF FUNDS.

"(a) APPLICATIONS.—Institutions of higher education desiring to receive a grant under section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(II) shall submit to the State educational agency an application which—

"(1) describes the types of activities that the institution plans to undertake with funds provided;

"(2) describes the process used by the institution to determine the State's needs for improving teacher education and training for preschool and early childhood education specialists, including consulting with current students, teachers, representatives from local educational agencies, parents, and representatives from preschool and early childhood specialists;

"(3) if such institution is applying for a grant to assist local educational agencies in providing inservice training for teachers, describes the training and services that such institution plans to provide for teachers within the local educational agency and demonstrates that such training and services are consistent with the needs of the local educational agencies to be served;

"(4) if such institution is applying for a grant to establish a professional development academy, contains the information required pursuant to section 508;

"(5) describes how the institution plans to integrate academic and vocational teacher education programs; and

"(6) contains any other information that may be required by the State educational agency.

"(b) AWARDS.—The State educational agency shall award grants on a competitive basis to institutions of higher education that have departments, schools, or colleges of education. In awarding grants, the State educational agency shall award funds for the following purposes:

"(1) For the establishment of professional development academies pursuant to section 508.

"(2) For the establishment and maintenance of programs that provide teacher training to individuals who are moving to a career in education from another occupation.

"(3) For institutions of higher education in consultation and cooperation with a local educational agency or a consortium of local educational agencies, to develop and provide technical assistance to local education agencies in providing inservice training for teachers.

"(4) For improving teacher education programs in order to further innovation in teacher education programs within an institution of higher education and to better meet the needs of the local educational agencies for well-prepared teachers.

"(5) For improving training for preschool and early childhood education specialists, including preschool and early intervention services for infants and toddlers with disabilities, in order to further innovation in such programs with institutions of higher education and to better meet the needs of preschool and early childhood education programs for well-prepared personnel.

"(6) To integrate the instruction of academic and vocational teacher education programs.

"(7) For activities to encourage individuals, especially individuals from minority groups, to pursue a career in education.

"(8) For expanding cooperative educational programs between State educational agencies and offices, schools, and school systems, institutions of higher education, appropriate educational entities, and private sector establishments involved in education between the United States and the Republic of Mexico for the purpose of providing bilateral teaching initiatives and programs that provide teacher training experiences between the educational communities of the United States and those of the Republic of Mexico and to enhance mutually beneficial educational activities involving researchers, scholars, faculty members, teachers, educational administrators, and other specialists to lecture, teach, conduct research, and develop cooperative programs.

"(9) When the study of teacher education programs is completed in accordance with section 504(c), to implement the program and policy changes for teacher education programs resulting from the findings of such study.

"SEC. 508. PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT ACADEMIES.

"(a) AUTHORITY; DEFINITIONS.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—From amounts reserved pursuant to section 501(b)(2)(B)(ii)(II), the State educational agency is authorized to make grants to, and enter into contracts and cooperative agreements with, eligible entities to plan, establish, and operate professional development academies.

"(2) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) the term 'Academy' means school-based teacher training operated as a partnership between one or more elementary or secondary schools and one or more institutions of higher education that provides prospective and novice teachers an opportunity to work under the guidance of master teachers and college faculty members. Such Academy shall be established for the purpose of—

"(i) the training of prospective and novice teachers (including preschool and early childhood education specialists, where appropriate) under the guidance of master teachers and teacher educators;

"(ii) the continuing development of experienced teachers;

"(iii) research and development to improve teaching and learning and the organization of schools;

"(iv) public demonstration of exemplary learning programs for diverse students; and

"(v) dissemination of knowledge produced in the research and development process; except that such term—

"(I) does not mean a physical facility; and

"(II) does not require a separate location from another Academy or other training program; and

"(B) the term 'eligible entity' means a partnership that includes one or more local educational agencies and one or more institutions of higher education and may include teachers and the business community.

"(b) AWARDS AND RENEWALS.—An award made under this section may be in the form of a one-year planning grant. Such award may be renewed for implementation purposes without further competition annually for 4 additional years, upon submission of an evaluation of the project to the State educational agency and assurances that the recipient—

"(1) has achieved the goals set out in its application for the original term;

"(2) shows promise of continuing its progress;

"(3) will meet its share of the project costs; and

"(4) has developed a plan for continuing the Academy after Federal funding is no longer available.

"(c) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each eligible entity desiring to operate an Academy under this section shall submit an application to the State educational agency at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the State educational agency may reasonably require.

"(2) Contents.—Each application submitted pursuant to subsection (a) shall describe—

"(A) what schools within the local educational agency and what institutions of higher education shall participate in the partnership or otherwise participate in the program;

"(B) the goals of the Academy and the steps that shall be taken to evaluate the extent to which the Academy reaches such goals;

"(C) a plan for monitoring progress and evaluating the effectiveness of the Academy in meeting the goals it has developed for teacher and student performance;

"(D) a description of the partnership's plan for systemic change in education, and a description of the activities and services for which assistance is sought;

"(E) ways in which the professional development programs shall cover course content in key academic subjects, methods of instruction, and classroom and school-based management skills;

"(F) plans to involve prospective and novice teachers in the programs offered by the Academy, including outreach efforts to identify and attract—

"(i) minority group members;

"(ii) individuals with disabilities; and

"(iii) individuals from areas with large numbers or concentrations of disadvantaged students; and

"(G) estimates of the number of prospective and beginning teachers to be trained in the Academy in each year of the project and assurances that a significant number of prospective and beginning teachers will be trained in the Academy in each year of the project.

"(3) Assurances.—Each application submitted pursuant to this subsection shall contain assurances that—

"(A) professional development programs at the Academy shall be designed and conducted by faculty members from institutions of higher education and teachers from local schools of demonstrated excellence;

"(B) in establishing the Academy, the applicant has consulted with teachers, administrators, and parents who will be affected at the teaching school site;

"(C) participating faculty from institutions of higher education shall include faculty members who are experts in the key academic subjects; and

"(D) the activities, services and programs offered by the Academy shall be of sufficient length and comprehensiveness to significantly improve participants' knowledge.

"(4) Priorities.—In making awards under this part, the State educational agency shall give priority to applicants that—

"(A) select Academy sites based on need, as evidenced by such measures as a high rate of teacher attrition or a high proportion of the student body at risk of educational failure;

"(B) propose projects that demonstrate the strong commitment to or previous active support for educational innovation;

"(C) propose projects that demonstrate collaboration with other educational organizations, social or human service agencies, other community organizations, and the business community in the teaching school's operation;

"(D) demonstrate potential for a significant impact on the quality of the future education work force; and

"(E) demonstrate the long-term feasibility of the partnership.

"(5) Special rules.—Each such application shall describe—

"(A) how the local educational agency will address the need to change or waive a local rule or regulation that is found by an Academy to impede the school's progress in achieving its goals; and

"(B) how partners that are institutions of higher education will involve the School of Education, the School of Arts and Sciences, and the School of Technology or Engineering and any other department of the institution.

"(d) Use of Allotted Funds.—

"(1) Permitted uses.—Each eligible entity receiving a grant under this section shall use such funds to meet the operating costs of carrying out the activities described in subsection (e), which may include reasonable startup and initial operating costs, staff development, purchase of books, materials, and equipment, including new technology, costs associated with release time, payment of personnel directly related to the operation of the Academy, and participation in the activities of a network of Academies.

"(2) Limitations.—The Secretary may limit the amounts of funds that may be used for minor remodeling and the purchase of equipment under this part.

"(e) Authorized Activities.—Each eligible entity receiving a grant to operate an Academy under this section may use such grant funds for—

"(1) training and internship activities for prospective or novice teachers in a school setting under the guidance of master or mentor teachers and faculty from institutions of higher education, especially faculty who are experts in key academic subjects;

"(2) mentoring and induction activities for prospective and novice teachers, including such teachers seeking to enter teaching through alternative routes;

"(3) participation of experienced teachers in the internship training and assessment of prospective and beginning teachers;

"(4) teaching skills and strategies to increase the ability of prospective, novice and experienced teachers to teach disadvantaged students, students with disabilities (including students with severe and multiple disabilities and students with lesser known or newly emerging disabilities), students who are limited-English proficient, and students from diverse cultural backgrounds;

"(5) programs to enhance teaching and classroom management skills, including school-based management skills, of novice, prospective and experienced teachers;

"(6) experimentation and research to improve teaching and learning conducted in the Academy by teachers and university faculty;

"(7) activities to integrate academic and vocational education;

"(8) training and other activities to promote the continued learning of experienced teachers, especially in their subject matter knowledge and how to teach it;

"(9) participation of expert practicing teachers and administrators in the university-based education studies of prospective teachers;

"(10) activities designed to disseminate information about the teaching strategies acquired through the Academy with other teachers in the district's schools;

"(11) organizational restructuring, including the introduction of new roles and staffing patterns in the school and university;

"(12) activities intended to address the effects of chronic community violence, such as violence counseling and conflict resolution training; and

"(13) other activities proposed by the applicant and approved by the Secretary.

"(f) Cost-Sharing.—Funds received under this section may be used to pay 100 percent of the cost of a planning grant and not more than 75 percent of the cost of operating an Academy in the first 2 years an eligible entity receives a grant under this subpart and not more than 50 percent of such cost in such third and fourth years. The remaining share shall be provided from non-Federal sources, and may be in-kind, fairly valued.

"SEC. 509. FEDERAL FUNDS TO SUPPLEMENT, NOT SUPPLANT REGULAR NON-FEDERAL FUNDS.

"A State educational agency, local educational agency, or institution of higher education may use funds received under this part only so as to supplement and, to the extent practicable, increase the level of funds that would be available from non-Federal sources for the uses of funds under this part and in no case may such funds be so used as to supplant such funds from such non-Federal sources.

"SEC. 510. COORDINATION WITH OTHER PROGRAMS.

The State educational agency shall ensure that activities conducted under this part shall be consistent with the goals and objectives of any Federal or State systemic educational reform activities.

"SEC. 510A. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part $350,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"PART B—NATIONAL TEACHER ACADEMIES

"SEC. 511. PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.

"(a) In General.—The Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this part, to make grants to eligible recipients to establish and operate National Teacher Academies.

"(b) Subject Areas and Staff.—

"(1) Subject areas.—At least 1 but not more than 3 National Teacher Academies shall be established in each of the following subject areas commonly taught in elementary and secondary schools:

"(A) English.

"(B) Mathematics.

"(C) Science.

"(D) History.

"(E) Geography.

"(F) Civics and government.

"(G) Foreign languages.

"(2) Staff.—Academy staff shall be selected from the most accomplished and prominent scholars in the relevant fields of study and in the methodologies which improve the skills of persons who teach in such fields of study.

"(c) Duration of Grant.—Each grant to establish and operate a National Teacher Academy shall be for a period of 3 years, and is renewable.

"(d) Competitive Grant Awards.—The Secretary shall award grants under this part on a competitive basis.

"(e) Consistency with Systemic Reforms.—In awarding grants under this part, the Secretary shall ensure that activities conducted under this part are consistent with the goals and objectives of other Federal or State systemic educational reform activities.

"SEC. 512. ELIGIBLE RECIPIENTS.

"(a) In General.—For the purposes of this part, the term 'eligible recipient' means—

"(1) an institution of higher education;

"(2) a private nonprofit educational organization of demonstrated effectiveness; or

"(3) a combination of the institutions or organizations set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph.

"(b) Expertise Requirements.—The Secretary shall only award grants to eligible recipients that have demonstrated expertise in the—

"(1) subject area of the National Teacher Academy to be established and operated; and

"(2) in-service training of teachers at the national, State, and local levels.

"SEC. 513. USE OF FUNDS.

"(a) In General.—Funds provided pursuant to this part shall be used to—

"(1) provide in-service training programs for teachers and administrators, including—

"(A) programs which emphasize improving the teachers' knowledge in the particular subject area of the National Teacher Academy;

"(B) programs which integrate knowledge of subject matter with techniques for communicating that knowledge to students, including students who are disadvantaged, limited-English proficient, drug- or alcohol-exposed, or who have disabilities;

"(C) the use of the most recent applied research findings concerning education and the classroom; and

"(D) integration of materials from different disciplines into classroom instruction, especially for elementary school teachers;

"(2) conduct each year at least one summer institute of at least 3 weeks duration for the State delegations described in section 515; and

"(3) provide support services to the State Academies for Teachers, including—

"(A) the establishment of a national network of individuals to assist in teacher education programs in State Academies for Teachers;

"(B) consultation assistance in the design and implementation of in-service teacher training programs; and

"(C) monthly newsletters or other methods of communicating useful information.

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—Not more than 10 percent of the amount of funds received under this part may be used by an eligible recipient for administrative costs.

"SEC. 514. APPLICATION.

"(a) APPLICATION.—Each eligible recipient desiring a grant under this part shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(b) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to subsection (a) shall—

"(1) describe the activities, services, and programs for which assistance is sought;

"(2) describe how at least 70 percent of the National Teacher Academy's time shall be devoted to basic course content relevant to the particular subject field and necessary for improving the quality of teaching in public and private elementary and secondary schools;

"(3) describe how not more than 30 percent of the National Teacher Academy's time shall be devoted to methods of instruction relevant to the particular subject field;

"(4) describe how the National Teacher Academy's activities will be coordinated with or administered cooperatively with institutes established by other Federal entities, such as the National Science Foundation and the National Endowment for the Humanities; and

"(5) provide such additional assurances or information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"SEC. 515. STATE DELEGATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Each selection panel established pursuant to section 516(b) shall select a State delegation to participate in each National Teacher Academy assisted under this part.

"(b) COMPOSITION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), each State delegation described in subsection (a) shall, at a minimum, be composed of—

"(A) 1 school administrator with authority to design and conduct in-service teacher training and academic programs; and

"(B) at least 5 teachers, of whom at least 2 shall be elementary school teachers.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The State delegations for the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the Republic of Palau (until the Compact of Free Association is ratified) shall, at a minimum, be composed of—

"(A) 1 school administrator with authority to design and conduct in-service teacher training and academic programs; and

"(B) at least 3 teachers, of whom at least 1 shall be an elementary school teacher.

"(3) ADDITIONAL TEACHERS.—

"(A) Each State that has obtained the approval of the appropriate National Teacher Academy may send to such National Teacher Academy the number of additional teachers determined in accordance with subparagraph (B).

"(B) The appropriate National Teacher Academy shall determine the number of additional teachers to attend such National Teacher Academy on the basis of the number of full-time equivalent teachers in the State compared to such number in all States.

"(c) DUTIES.—Each State delegation shall—

"(1) attend the appropriate subject area summer institute at the appropriate National Teacher Academy; and

"(2) after participation in the National Teacher Academy assist in the development and operation of the appropriate National Teacher Academy.

"SEC. 516. SELECTION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Individuals participating in a National Teacher Academy shall be selected by the selection panel described in subsection (b) in accordance with the provisions of section 515.

"(b) SELECTION PANEL.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—Each State educational agency receiving assistance under part A of this title shall establish a 10-member selection panel to select teachers to attend the National Teacher Academies established pursuant to this part.

"(2) COMPOSITION AND REPRESENTATION.—

"(A) COMPOSITION.—At least 50 percent of the membership of each selection panel shall be classroom teachers, selected in consultation with teacher organizations, if any, in the State.

"(B) REPRESENTATION.—The composition of each selection panel shall be broadly representative of the elementary and secondary schools and the State.

"(3) FUNCTION.—Each selection panel shall—

"(A) annually select the State delegations in accordance with section 515; and

"(B) involve the individuals selected pursuant to subparagraph (A) in the operation of the State academies, if any, or other in-service training activities in the local educational agency in which such individuals teach.

"SEC. 517. NATIONAL TEACHER ACADEMY EVALUATION.

"The Secretary shall evaluate the system of National Teacher Academies and the effects of such academies on teachers every 2 years. The Secretary shall make available to the Congress and the public the results of such evaluation.

"SEC. 518. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated $35,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this part, of which not more than $5,000,000 shall be available for each of the National Teacher Academy subject areas listed in section 511(b)(1).

"(b) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) APPROPRIATIONS LESS THAN $14,000,000.—If the amount appropriated pursuant to the authority of subsection (a) is less than $14,000,000, then not more than $2,000,000 shall be available for each National Teacher Academy subject area in the order in which such subject areas are listed in section 511(b)(1), until such funds are expended.

"(2) APPROPRIATIONS EQUAL TO OR IN EXCESS OF $14,000,000.—If the amount appropriated pursuant to the authority of subsection (a) is equal to or exceeds $14,000,000, then such funds as equals or exceeds $14,000,000 shall be allocated equitably among each of the National Teacher Academy subject areas listed in section 511(b)(1).

"PART C—TEACHER SCHOLARSHIPS AND FELLOWSHIPS

"Subpart 1—Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarships

"SEC. 521. PURPOSE; DESIGNATION.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this subpart to make available, through grants to the States, scholarships to individuals who are outstanding secondary school graduates and who demonstrate an interest in teaching, in order to enable and encourage those individuals to pursue teaching careers in education at the preschool, elementary or secondary level.

"(b) DESIGNATION.—Scholarships awarded under this subpart shall be referred to as the 'Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarships'.

"SEC. 522. ALLOCATION AMONG STATES.

"(a) ALLOCATION.—From the sums appropriated for this subpart for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall allocate to any State an amount based on the school-age population in the State compared to the school-age population in all States.

"(b) USE OF CENSUS DATA.—For the purpose of this section, the number of persons in a State and in all States shall be determined by the most recently available data from the Bureau of the Census.

"SEC. 523. GRANT APPLICATIONS.

"(a) SUBMISSION OF APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to States in accordance with the provisions of this subpart. In order to receive a grant under this subpart, a State shall submit an application at such time or times, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation. Such application shall set forth a program of activities for carrying out the purposes set forth in section 521 in such detail as will enable the Secretary to determine the degree to which such program will accomplish such purposes and such other policies, procedures, and assurances as the Secretary may require by regulation.

"(b) CONTENT OF APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary shall approve an application under this subpart only if the application—

"(1) describes the selection criteria and procedures to be used by the State in the selection of scholarship recipients under this subpart;

"(2) designates as the State agency responsible for administering the grants received under this subpart the State agency which administers the program under subpart 4 of part A of title IV (relating to State student incentive grants), the State agency with which the Secretary has an agreement under section 428(b), or another appropriate State agency approved by the Secretary;

"(3) describes the outreach effort the State agency intends to use to publicize the availability of Paul Douglas Scholarships to secondary school students in the State;

"(4) describes how the State will inform recipients, upon receipt of the award, of current and projected teacher shortages and surpluses within the State;

"(5) provides assurances that each recipient eligible under section 525(b) of this subpart who receives a Paul Douglas Scholarship shall enter into an agreement with the State agency under which the recipient shall—

"(A) within the 10-year period after completing the postsecondary education for which the Paul Douglas Teacher Corps Scholarship was awarded, teach for a period of not less than 2 years for each year for which assistance was received, in a public or private nonprofit preschool, elementary, or secondary school in any State, or, on a full-time basis, children with disabilities or children with limited English proficiency in a private nonprofit school, except that, in the case of individuals who teach in a shortage area established by the Secretary pursuant to section 530A, the requirements of this subparagraph shall be reduced by one-half;

"(B) provide the State agency evidence of compliance with section 526 as required by the State agency; and

"(C) repay all or part of a Paul Douglas Scholarship received under section 524 plus interest and, if applicable, reasonable collection fees, in compliance with regulations issued by the Secretary under section 527, in the event that the conditions of subparagraph (A) are not complied with, except as provided for in section 528;

"(6) provides that the agreement entered into with recipients shall fully disclose the terms and conditions under which assistance under this subpart is provided and under which repayment may be required, including—

"(A) a description of the procedures required to be established under paragraph (7); and

"(B) a description of the appeals procedures required to be established under paragraph (8) under which a recipient may appeal a determination of noncompliance with any provision under this subpart;

"(7) provides for procedures under which a recipient of assistance received under this subpart who teaches for less than the period required under paragraph (5)(A) will have the repayment requirements reduced or eliminated consistent with the provisions of sections 527 and 528;

"(8) provides for appeals procedures under which a recipient may appeal any determination of noncompliance with any provision under this subpart; and

"(9) provides assurances that the State agency shall make particular efforts to attract students from low-income backgrounds; ethnic and racial minority students; individuals with disabilities; other individuals from groups historically underrepresented in teaching; individuals who express a willingness or desire to teach in rural schools, urban schools, or schools having less than average academic results or serving large numbers of economically disadvantaged students; or women or minorities who show interest in pursuing teaching careers in mathematics and science and who are underrepresented in such fields.

"(c) SELECTION CRITERIA AND PROCEDURES.—The State educational agency, in cooperation with the State higher education agency, and pursuant to scholarship selection criteria included in section 525, shall establish criteria to select Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarship recipients. These criteria shall be intended to attract highly qualified individuals into teaching, to ensure that these students are enrolled or are accepted for enrollment in approved teacher education programs, and to meet the present and projected needs of States in addressing teacher shortages, including the demand for and supply of early childhood and elementary teachers in the State, the demand for and supply of secondary teachers in the State, and the demand for teachers with training in specific academic disciplines in the State.

"(d) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.—The State educational agency, in cooperation with the State higher education agency, shall give special consideration in the selection of scholarship recipients to individuals who—

"(1) intend to teach or provide related services to students with disabilities;

"(2) intend to teach limited English proficient students;

"(3) intend to teach preschool age children;

"(4) intend to teach in schools servicing inner city or rural or geographically isolated areas (as defined by the Secretary by regulations consistent with the purposes of this section);

"(5) intend to teach in curricular areas or geographic areas where there are demonstrated shortages of qualified teachers; or

"(6) are from disadvantaged backgrounds, including racial and ethnic minorities and individuals with disabilities, and are underrepresented in the teaching profession or in the curricular areas in which they are preparing to teach.

"(e) SOLICITATION OF VIEWS ON SELECTION CRITERIA AND PROCEDURES.—In developing the selection criteria and procedures to be used by the State, the State shall solicit the views of local educational agencies, private educational institutions, and other interested parties. Such views—

"(1) shall be solicited by means of—

"(A) written comments; and

"(B) publication of proposed selection criteria and procedures in final form for implementation; and

"(2) may be solicited by means of—

"(A) public hearings on the teaching needs of elementary and secondary schools in the State (including the number of new teachers needed, the expected supply of new teachers, and the shortages in the State of teachers with specific preparation); or

"(B) such other methods as the State may determine to be appropriate to gather information on such needs.

"SEC. 524. AMOUNT AND DURATION OF AND RELATION TO OTHER ASSISTANCE.

"(a) LIMITATIONS ON AMOUNT AND DURATION.—Subject to subsection (c) each Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarship recipient shall receive a $5,000 scholarship for each academic year of postsecondary education for study in preparation to become a preschool, special education, elementary, or secondary teacher. No individual shall receive scholarship assistance for more than 4 years of postsecondary education, as determined by the State agency.

"(b) CONSIDERATION OF AWARD IN OTHER PROGRAMS.—Notwithstanding the provisions of title IV of this Act, scholarship funds awarded pursuant to this part shall be considered in determining eligibility for student assistance under title IV of this Act.

"(c) ASSISTANCE NOT TO EXCEED COST OF ATTENDANCE.—No individual shall receive an award under the Paul Douglas Teacher Scholarship established under this subpart, in any academic year, which exceeds the cost of attendance, as defined in section 472 of this Act, at the institution the individual is attending. A scholarship awarded under this part shall not be reduced on the basis of the student's receipt of other forms of Federal student financial assistance, but shall be taken into account in determining the eligibility of the student for those other forms of Federal student financial assistance.

"SEC. 525. SELECTION OF PAUL DOUGLAS TEACHER SCHOLARS.

"(a) SELECTION BY STATEWIDE PANELS.—Paul Douglas Teacher Scholars shall be selected by a 7-member statewide panel appointed by the chief State elected official, acting in consultation with the State educational agency, or by an existing grant agency or panel designated by the chief State elected official and approved by the Secretary. The statewide panel shall be representative of school administrators, teachers, including preschool and special education teachers, and parents.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY FOR SELECTION; SELECTION CRITERIA AND PROCEDURES.—Selections of Paul Douglas Scholars shall be made from students who have graduated or who are graduating from secondary school and who rank in the top 10 percent of their graduating class. The State educational agency shall make applications available to public and private nonprofit secondary schools in the State and in other locations convenient to applicants, parents, and others. The statewide panel shall develop criteria and procedures for the selection of Paul Douglas Scholars. Such criteria may include the applicant's secondary school grade point average, involvement in extracurricular activities, financial need, and expression of interest in teaching as expressed in an essay written by the applicant. The panel may also require the applicant to furnish letters of recommendation from teachers and others.

"(c) WAIVER.—The Secretary may waive the requirements of section 523(d) for not more than 25 percent of all individuals receiving a scholarship under this subpart.

"SEC. 526. SCHOLARSHIP CONDITIONS.

"Recipients of scholarship assistance under this subpart shall continue to receive such scholarship payments only during such periods that the State agency finds that the recipient is—

"(1) enrolled as a full-time student in an accredited postsecondary institution;

"(2) pursuing a course of study leading to teacher certification; and

"(3) maintaining satisfactory progress as determined by the postsecondary institution the recipient is attending.

"SEC. 527. SCHOLARSHIP REPAYMENT PROVISIONS.

"Recipients found by the State agency to be in noncompliance with the agreement entered into under section 523(b)(5) of this subpart shall be required to repay a pro rata amount of the scholarship awards received, plus interest (but in no event at an interest rate higher than the rate applicable to loans in the applicable period under part B of title IV of this Act) and, where applicable, reasonable collection fees, on a schedule and at a rate of interest to be prescribed by the Secretary by regulations issued pursuant to this subpart.

"SEC. 528. EXCEPTIONS TO REPAYMENT PROVISIONS.

"(a) DEFERRAL DURING CERTAIN PERIODS.—A recipient shall not be considered in violation of the agreement entered into pursuant to section 523(b)(5)(C) during any period in which the recipient—

"(1) is pursuing a full-time course of study related to the field of teaching at an eligible institution;

"(2) is serving, not in excess of 3 years, as a member of the armed services of the United States;

"(3) is temporarily totally disabled for a period of time not to exceed 3 years as established by sworn affidavit of a qualified physician;

"(4) is unable to secure employment for a period not to exceed 12 months by reason of the care required by a spouse who is disabled;

"(5) is seeking and unable to find full-time employment for a single period not to exceed 12 months;

"(6) is seeking and unable to find full-time employment as a teacher in a public or private nonprofit preschool, elementary or secondary school, or education program for a single period not to exceed 27 months; or

"(7) satisfies the provisions of additional repayment exceptions that may be prescribed by the Secretary in regulations issued pursuant to this subpart.

"(b) FORGIVENESS IF PERMANENTLY TOTALLY DISABLED.—A recipient shall be excused from repayment of any scholarship assistance received under this subpart if the recipient becomes permanently totally disabled as established by sworn affidavit of a qualified physician.

"SEC. 529. FEDERAL ADMINISTRATION OF STATE PROGRAMS; JUDICIAL REVIEW.

"(a) DISAPPROVAL HEARING REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall not finally disapprove any application for a State program submitted under section 523, or any modification thereof, without first affording the State agency submitting the program reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

''(b) SUSPENSION OF ELIGIBILITY.—Whenever the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to the State agency administering a State program approved under this subpart, finds—

''(1) that the State program has been so changed that it no longer complies with the provisions of this subpart, or

''(2) that in the administration of the program there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provisions, the Secretary shall notify such State agency that the State will not be regarded as eligible to participate in the program under this subpart until the Secretary is satisfied that there is no longer any such failure to comply.

''(c) COURT REVIEW.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If any State is dissatisfied with the Secretary's final action under subsection (b) (1) or (2), such State may appeal to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such State is located. The summons and notice of appeal may be served at any place in the United States. The Secretary shall forthwith certify and file in the court the transcript of the proceedings and the record on which the action was based.

''(2) FINDINGS.—The findings of fact by the Secretary, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Secretary to take further evidence, and the Secretary may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify any previous action, and shall certify to the court the transcript and record of further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

''(3) JURISDICTION.—The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Secretary or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

"SEC. 530. EVALUATION.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct, by grant or contract, an independent evaluation of recipients of scholarship assistance under this subpart, which shall summarize and evaluate the State activities assisted under this subpart and the performance of such recipients. The evaluation shall assess the impact of the scholarship program assisted under this subpart to determine whether such program has brought into teaching a significant number of highly able individuals who otherwise would not have entered teaching.

''(b) CONTENTS.—The evaluation described in subsection (a) shall include—

''(1) a description of the characteristics, including the educational preparation and achievement, of recipients of scholarship assistance under this subpart compared to similar students participating in teacher training who do not receive such scholarships;

''(2) the rate at which such recipients successfully complete academic training and go on to teaching careers in preschool, elementary, or secondary education, compared to such rate for similar individuals who do not receive scholarship assistance under this subpart;

''(3) the extent to which it is possible to determine objectively that the receipt of scholarship assistance under this subpart was the primary reason for an individual's choice of a teaching education and career;

''(4) the extent to which such recipients comply with the provisions of this subpart;

''(5) the length of time such recipients remain in teaching careers, compared to similar teachers who do not receive scholarships;

''(6) the barriers to the effectiveness of the program assisted under this subpart; and

''(7) the cost-effectiveness of such program in improving teacher quality and quantity.

''(c) EVALUATION REPORTS.—The Secretary shall submit such interim evaluation reports to the President and the Congress as may be appropriate, and shall submit a final report on or before January 1, 1997.

''(d) FUNDING.—The Secretary shall reserve a total of not more than $1,000,000 from the amounts appropriated pursuant to the authority of section 530B in fiscal years 1993 through 1997 to carry out this section.

"SEC. 530A. DESIGNATION OF SHORTAGE AREAS.

''For the purposes of this part, the term 'shortage areas' means (1) geographic areas of the State in which there is a shortage of elementary and secondary school teachers, and (2) an area of shortage of elementary and secondary school teachers in specific grade levels and in specific academic, instructional, subject matter, and discipline classifications. Such shortage areas shall be prescribed by the Secretary, in consultation with the chief State school officer or, in the case of nonprofit private elementary or secondary schools, with appropriate officials of nonprofit private schools in each State in accordance with this section. In carrying out the provisions of this section, the Secretary shall give special consideration to areas in which emergency certification of individuals in a State is being used to correct teacher shortages and to States which have retirement laws permitting early retirement.

"SEC. 530B. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

''There are authorized to be appropriated $26,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this subpart.

"Subpart 2—Christa McAuliffe Fellowship Program

"SEC. 531. DECLARATION OF PURPOSE; DESIGNATION.

''(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this subpart to establish a national fellowship program for experienced and outstanding teachers.

''(b) DESIGNATION.—A recipient of a fellowship under this subpart shall be known as a 'Christa McAuliffe fellow'.

"SEC. 532. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants, in accordance with the provisions of this subpart, to State educational agencies to enable such State educational agencies to—

''(1) conduct Christa McAuliffe fellowship activities; and

''(2) award fellowships to Christa McAuliffe fellows in accordance with the provisions of this subpart.

''(b) AMOUNT OF GRANTS.—The amount awarded to each State educational agency pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a) shall be an amount awarded on the basis of the school-age population in the State compared to the school-age population in all States, except that the Secretary may adjust the awards to ensure that such awards are of sufficient size to carry out the purposes of this subpart.

''(c) STATE ACTIVITIES.—Each State educational agency receiving a grant pursuant to subsection (a) shall use not more than 3 percent of such grant for administrative purposes.

''(d) USE OF FUNDS FOR FELLOWSHIPS AND ADMINISTRATION.—Funds appropriated for any fiscal year for fellowships to teachers under this subpart shall be used to award fellowships in accordance with the requirements of this subpart, except that not more than 1 percent of such funds shall be used by the Secretary for purposes of administering this subpart, including activities authorized under section 537(b).

"SEC. 533. CHRISTA MCAULIFFE FELLOWSHIPS.

''(a) AWARD DISTRIBUTION AND AMOUNT.—

''(1) AWARD DISTRIBUTION.—Each State educational agency receiving a grant under this subpart shall use such funds to award Christa McAuliffe fellowships to public and private school teachers who have been employed as teachers for 8 or more years to enable such teachers to engage in the activities described in subsection (b).

''(2) AMOUNT.—Fellowships shall be in an amount equal to the annual salary the individual would earn in such individual's current place of employment for the award period.

''(3) RATABLE REDUCTION.—If an individual receives a fellowship award for less than a school year, such fellowship shall be ratably reduced to equal the salary forgone.

''(4) DURATION.—No Christa McAuliffe fellow may receive an award for 2 consecutive years.

''(5) REQUIREMENT.—Subject to the repayment provisions of section 536, each Christa McAuliffe fellow shall be required to return to a teaching position, in their place of employment prior to receiving the fellowship award, for at least 2 years following such award. The Secretary is authorized, in extraordinary circumstances, to waive or defer all or a portion of the service requirement, or allow fellows to fulfill their service requirement by going into a teaching position in another school or school district within the State or in another State upon approval of the sending and receiving State.

''(b) USE OF FELLOWSHIPS.—Each Christa McAuliffe fellowship may be used for—

''(1) sabbaticals for study, research or academic improvement to—

''(A)(i) improve such teacher's knowledge base in an area of expertise; or

''(ii) learn a new area of expertise;

''(B) increase skills and professional ability; and

''(C) enhance the ability of teachers to work with special education populations, including—

''(i) gifted and talented children;

''(ii) limited-English proficient children;

''(iii) children with disabilities; and

''(iv) economically and educationally disadvantaged children;

''(2)(A) consultation with or assistance to other school districts or private school systems; or

''(B) development of special innovative programs;

''(3) projects or partnerships that involve the business community and the schools;

''(4) programs that incorporate the use and the sharing of technologies to help students learn; or

''(5) expanding or replicating model programs of staff development.

"SEC. 534. SELECTION OF CHRISTA MCAULIFFE FELLOWS.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—Christa McAuliffe fellows in each State shall be selected (in accordance with section 535) by a 7-member statewide panel appointed by the chief State school officer, or by an existing panel designated by the chief State school officer. The statewide panel shall be representative of school administrators, teachers, parents, and institutions of higher education.

''(b) SPECIAL RULE.—Each State educational agency may choose to administer the program assisted under this subpart through a pre-existing panel which is experienced in administering similar programs.

"SEC. 535. EVALUATION OF APPLICATIONS.

''(a) SUBMISSION TO AND REVIEW BY STATEWIDE PANEL.—An applicant for a Christa McAuliffe fellowship shall submit a proposal for a project in accordance with section 533(b), and shall indicate the extent to which the applicant wishes to continue current teaching duties. The applicant shall submit such a proposal to the local educational agency for comment prior to submission to the statewide panel (appointed under section 534) for the State in which the project will be conducted. Each such application shall contain such information as such State educational agency may reasonably require.

"(b) Consultation and Consideration.—

"(1) In general.—In evaluating proposals, the statewide panel shall consult with the local educational agency, and shall consider—

"(A) evaluations during employment as a teacher;

"(B) demonstrated commitment to teaching in the future; and

"(C) intended activities during the award period;

"(2) Recommendations.—The statewide panel may request recommendations from teaching peers and the applicant's principal and superintendent on the quality of the proposal, the benefit of such proposal to education, and any other criteria for awarding fellowships as are considered appropriate by such statewide panel.

"(3) Selection.—Selection of members of the statewide panel shall be made in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(c) Public Announcement.—Announcement of fellowship awards shall be made in a public ceremony.

"SEC. 536. FELLOWSHIP REPAYMENT PROVISIONS.

"Repayment of the award shall be made to the Federal Government in the case of fraud or gross noncompliance.

"SEC. 537. SECRETARY'S RESPONSIBILITIES.

"(a) General.—The Secretary shall—

"(1) make awards to State educational agencies having applications approved under section 538; and

"(2) in cooperation with the State educational agency, conduct activities which foster communication among and bring together Christa McAuliffe fellows including activities such as written communications, meetings, or training sessions.

"(b) Information Dissemination.—The Secretary shall establish a clearinghouse or otherwise provide for the collection and dissemination of information on exemplary projects for improving education that were developed in accordance with section 533(b) of this part. The Secretary may utilize the National Diffusion Network in carrying out the requirements of this section.

"SEC. 538. STATE APPLICATION.

"(a) Application Required.—Each State educational agency desiring a grant under this subpart shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(b) Contents.—Each application submitted pursuant to subsection (a) shall—

"(1) provide assurances that Christa McAuliffe fellows will be released from teaching responsibilities for up to one school year (if the fellow's proposal requires such release time) without jeopardizing the rights such members would have had without participating in the program assisted under this subpart;

"(2) provide assurances that the State educational agency, or its designee, in cooperation with local educational agencies, shall maintain accurate records regarding the activities of Christa McAuliffe fellows within the State to ensure that such members are meeting all conditions of the fellowships provided pursuant to this subpart, and shall notify the Secretary immediately upon a change in a Christa McAuliffe fellow's status rendering such fellow in violation of the conditions of the fellowship; and

"(3) provide assurances that the State educational agency has consulted with local educational agencies in designing and developing the Christa McAuliffe Fellowship program.

"SEC. 539. EVALUATION.

"(a) In General.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall conduct, by grant or contract, an independent evaluation of—

"(A) Christa McAuliffe fellows; and

"(B) the impact of the activities undertaken by the Christa McAuliffe fellows on teachers, teacher research, curricula, staff development, improvement of programs and improvement of student achievement.

"(2) Competitive basis.—The grant or contract described in paragraph (1) shall be awarded on a competitive basis.

"(b) Contents.—The evaluation shall—

"(1) include information on the nature of projects developed and implemented by Christa McAuliffe fellows;

"(2) assess the measurable effects of such projects on the academic performance of the students served by such projects;

"(3) assess the effect of the fellowship program assisted under this subpart on the postfellowship experiences of Christa McAuliffe fellows;

"(4) identify the barriers to such program's effectiveness;

"(5) assess the extent to which successful projects were disseminated and adopted by other teachers and schools without further Federal assistance; and

"(6) determine and explore ways to improve the cost-effectiveness of such program.

"(c) Evaluation Reports.—The Secretary shall submit such interim evaluation reports to the President and the Congress as may be appropriate, and shall submit a final report on or before January 1, 1997.

"(d) Funding.—The Secretary shall reserve a total of not more than $1,000,000 from the amounts appropriated pursuant to the authority of section 540 in fiscal years 1993 through 1997 to carry out this section.

"SEC. 540. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this subpart.

"Subpart 3—Teacher Corps

"SEC. 541. TEACHER CORPS PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

"(a) Grants by the Secretary.—In any fiscal year in which the appropriations for this subpart do not equal or exceed $50,000,000, the Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this subpart, to make grants, on a competitive basis, to State educational agencies to carry out Teacher Corps activities.

"(b) State Grant Program.—In any fiscal year in which the appropriations for this subpart equal or exceed $50,000,000, the Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this subpart, to make grants to State educational agencies from allocations under subsection (c) to carry out Teacher Corps activities.

"(c) Allocation.—Except as provided in subsection (a), each State educational agency shall be eligible to receive a grant under this subpart in each fiscal year that bears the same ratio to the amount appropriated under section 548 in that fiscal year as the school-age population of the State bears to the school-age population of all States.

"(d) Teacher Corps School.—For the purpose of this subpart the term 'Teacher Corps school' means a public elementary or secondary school identified by the State educational agency as having the highest levels of poverty and the lowest levels of student achievement based on a ranking of such elementary schools and secondary schools in the State according to the number of children living in poverty and the levels of student achievement. In carrying out the preceding sentence, the State educational agency shall identify and inform not more than 10 percent of such elementary schools and not more than 10 percent of such secondary schools in the State which have the highest levels of poverty and the lowest levels of student achievement.

"(e) Designation.—

"(1) Scholarship.—A scholarship awarded under this subpart shall be referred to as a 'Teacher Corps scholarship'.

"(2) Recipient.—A recipient of a scholarship under this subpart shall be referred to as a 'Teacher Corps member'.

"SEC. 542. USE OF FUNDS.

"(a) Secretary.—The Secretary shall use funds provided pursuant to this subpart to—

"(1) disseminate information nationally about the availability of scholarships under this subpart;

"(2) conduct activities, with the cooperation of the State and local educational agencies, which foster communication among, and bring together, members of the Teacher Corps, including activities such as written communications, meetings, or training sessions;

"(3) establish and conduct summer preservice orientation programs for Teacher Corps members about to begin teaching;

"(4) ensure that Teacher Corps members recognize the challenges of teaching in a Teacher Corps school;

"(5) inform Teacher Corps members of Teacher Corps schools and facilitate the hiring and placement of Teacher Corps members at Teacher Corps schools;

"(6) evaluate applications from and award grants to State educational agencies to enable such agencies to award Teacher Corps scholarships in accordance with the provisions of this subpart; and

"(7) collect scholarship repayments from individual Teacher Corps members, in accordance with the provisions of section 546.

"(b) State Educational Agency.—Each State educational agency receiving a grant under this subpart shall use such grant funds to—

"(1) evaluate applications for Teacher Corps membership and award scholarships to Teacher Corps members;

"(2) provide technical assistance to local educational agencies establishing and operating induction programs;

"(3) ensure that Teacher Corps members understand the obligation to repay the scholarships received under this subpart upon failure to comply with the conditions of the scholarship; and

"(4) ensure that Teacher Corps members are fulfilling the obligation to repay scholarships received under this subpart, and provide the Secretary with the names and addresses of Teacher Corps members who have not fulfilled such obligation.

"(c) Special Rule.—The Secretary may enter into contracts with or make grants to nonprofit educational organizations for—

"(1) recruiting members of the Teacher Corps;

"(2) establishing and conducting summer preservice training programs; and

"(3) conducting activities that foster communications among and bring together members of the Teacher Corps.

"(d) Reservations.—Each State receiving a grant under this subpart may reserve—

"(1) 5 percent of such grant funds to provide technical assistance to local educational agencies and to pay administrative costs; and

"(2) 5 percent of such grant funds to provide for induction and mentoring programs.

"(e) Special Rule.—Each State educational agency receiving a grant under this subpart may enter into contracts with or award grants to nonprofit educational agencies to conduct the activities described in subsection (b).

"SEC. 543. TEACHER CORPS.

"(a) SELECTION.—The State educational agency shall select Teacher Corps members.

"(b) CRITERIA.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The State educational agency shall establish criteria to select Teacher Corps members that are intended to—

"(A) attract highly qualified individuals to teaching; and

"(B) meet the needs of Teacher Corps schools in addressing teacher shortages.

"(2) CRITERIA.—The criteria described in paragraph (1) may include—

"(A) in the case of students or recent graduates, outstanding academic records, or in other cases, contributions which may be made by individuals working in other careers; and

"(B) a demonstrated commitment to teaching or professional experience in substantive fields of expertise in which the State is experiencing or expects to experience teacher shortages.

"(c) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.—The State educational agency, in selecting Teacher Corps members, shall give special consideration to individuals who—

"(1) intend to teach or provide related services to students with disabilities;

"(2) intend to teach limited-English proficient students;

"(3) intend to teach preschool age children;

"(4) are from disadvantaged backgrounds, including racial and ethnic minorities and individuals with disabilities;

"(5) are members of populations that are underrepresented in the teaching profession or in the curricular areas in which such individuals are preparing to teach;

"(6) intend to teach in the areas of science or mathematics, especially women and minorities who are underrepresented in such fields; or

"(7) intend to teach on Indian reservations or in Alaska Native villages named or certified pursuant to section 3(c) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, Public Law 92-203, or in areas with high concentrations of Native Hawaiians.

"(d) APPLICATION.—Each individual desiring to participate in the program assisted under this subpart shall submit an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the State educational agency may reasonably require.

"SEC. 544. STATE APPLICATION.

"In order to receive funds under this subpart, a State educational agency, in consultation with the Governor, shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall—

"(1) describe how the State educational agency shall select Teacher Corps members;

"(2) identify Teacher Corps schools within the State, where Teacher Corps members shall be assigned, provided that not more than 10 percent of all public schools in the State may be designated Teacher Corps schools;

"(3) provide assurances that the State educational agency, in cooperation with local educational agencies, shall assist in employment placement within such State for Teacher Corps members in Teacher Corps schools;

"(4) provide assurances that the State educational agency, in cooperation with local educational agencies, shall ensure that Teacher Corps members are paid at rates comparable to other entry level teachers in the school district where the Teacher Corps member is assigned;

"(5) provide assurances that the local educational agencies in which the Teacher Corps members shall be placed shall establish or expand induction programs that assist Teacher Corps members in adjusting to the new school and community where such members shall teach, including working with a mentor teacher in the school building where the Teacher Corps members are placed; and

"(6) describe how the State educational agency shall monitor and report to the Secretary not less than annually on the operation of programs assisted under this subpart and on the compliance of individuals who receive Teacher Corps scholarships with the provisions of this subpart.

"SEC. 545. SCHOLARSHIPS.

"(a) ELIGIBILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An individual is eligible to receive Teacher Corps scholarships for a maximum of 3 years during enrollment in any of the following programs of study, or a combination thereof:

"(A) a program of study leading to a baccalaureate degree;

"(B) a 1- or 2-year postbaccalaureate program of study leading to a master's or specialist degree or a teaching certificate; or

"(C) a 2-year program of study leading to an associate's degree in early childhood education or early childhood development, or a 1-year program of study leading to a child development associate credential.

"(2) SPECIAL RULES.—(A) An individual pursuing a program of study described in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) is eligible to receive a Teacher Corps scholarship during any of the first 3 years that such individual is employed as a teacher to defray the costs of pursuing such postbaccalaureate instruction.

"(B) An individual in possession of a bachelor's degree, who wishes to enter teaching from another profession, is eligible to receive a Teacher Corps scholarship to enable such individual to receive the instruction necessary to enter the teaching profession, as determined by the State in which the individual wishes to teach. Such instruction may be provided while the individual is employed as a provisional teacher.

"(b) LIMITATIONS ON AMOUNT AND DURATION.—Subject to subsection (d), each Teacher Corps member shall receive a $5,000 scholarship for each academic year of postsecondary education, except that no individual shall receive scholarship assistance for more than 3 years of postsecondary education (including postbaccalaureate), as determined by the Secretary.

"(c) CONSIDERATION OF AWARD IN OTHER PROGRAMS.—Each Teacher Corps scholarship awarded pursuant to this subpart shall be considered as student financial assistance in determining eligibility for student assistance under title IV.

"(d) ASSISTANCE NOT TO EXCEED NEED.—Each Teacher Corps scholarship, when added to assistance received under title IV, if any, shall not exceed the cost of attendance, as defined in section 472, at the institution the individual is attending. If the amount of the Teacher Corps scholarship and assistance received under title IV exceeds the cost of attendance, loans received under parts B, D, or E of such title shall be reduced by an amount equal to the amount by which the combined awards exceed the cost of attendance.

"(e) CONTINUED ELIGIBILITY.—Each individual who receives a Teacher Corps scholarship shall continue to receive such scholarship payments only during such periods that the State educational agency finds that such individual is—

"(1) enrolled as a full-time student in an accredited postsecondary institution; and

"(2) maintaining satisfactory progress defined under section 484.

"SEC. 546. SCHOLARSHIP CONDITIONS.

"(a) SCHOLARSHIP AGREEMENT.—Each individual receiving a scholarship under this subpart shall enter into a written agreement with the State educational agency which shall provide assurances that each such individual—

"(1) shall pursue a course of study which meets State requirements for teacher preparation;

"(2) has completed at least 2 years of undergraduate education at an institution of higher education;

"(3) shall maintain satisfactory academic progress and participate in teaching-related activities while in undergraduate or post-baccalaureate programs;

"(4) shall work as a teacher upon completion of such individual's education for 3 years in a Teacher Corps school, as identified by the State educational agency pursuant to section 541(d), except that Teacher Corps members may transfer to another such school within the State or in another State upon approval of the State educational agency;

"(5) in carrying out the obligation described in paragraph (4), shall meet the performance requirements of—

"(A) the school in which such individual teaches; and

"(B) the local educational agency exercising administrative control or direction of, or performing a service function for such school;

"(6) shall repay all or part of a Teacher Corps scholarship received under section 545(b) plus interest and, if applicable, reasonable collection fees, in compliance with regulations issued by the Secretary under subsection (b), in the event that the conditions of this subsection are not complied with, except as provided for in subsection (c);

"(7) at least during the first year of employment, shall participate in an induction program which includes working with a mentor teacher selected by the local educational agency in which the Teacher Corps member is employed and who, to the extent practicable, is teaching in the same subject as the Teacher Corps member; and

"(8) who is not enrolled in a program of study as set forth in section 545(a)(1)(C) shall obtain State teacher certification during the period of employment or as soon as possible as State law requires.

"(b) SCHOLARSHIP REPAYMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Individuals found by the State educational agency to be in noncompliance with the agreement entered into under subsection (a) shall be required to repay to the Secretary a pro rata amount of the scholarship awards received, plus interest at the highest rate applicable to loans under part B of title IV and, where applicable, reasonable collection fees, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (3).

"(2) EXCEPTIONS TO REPAYMENT.—An individual shall not be considered to be in violation of the agreement entered into pursuant to subsection (a) during any period in which such individual meets the exceptions to repayment provisions set forth in section 528(a)(2), 528(a)(3) or 528(b), or if the individual dies.

"(3) REPAYMENT PERCENTAGES.—Each individual found by the Secretary to be in noncompliance with the agreement entered into under subsection (a) shall be required to repay—

"(A) 100 percent of the total amount of scholarships awarded under this subpart if such individual does not teach pursuant to the agreement described in subsection (a) or teaches pursuant to such agreement for less than 1 year;

"(B) 67 percent of such amount if such individual teaches pursuant to such agreement for at least 1 year but less than 2 years; and

"(C) 34 percent of such amount if such individual teaches pursuant to such agreement for at least 2 years but less than 3 years.

"(4) INTEREST.—If a portion of scholarship is repaid under this subsection in any year, the entire amount of interest on such portion of such scholarship which accrues for such year shall be repaid.

"(5) USE OF REPAYMENTS.—Any repayments of scholarships made to the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this section shall be used by the Secretary to make additional grants in accordance with the provisions of this subpart.

"(c) WAIVER.—The Secretary may provide for the partial or total waiver or suspension of any service obligation or repayment by an individual who received a Teacher Corps scholarship whenever compliance by such individual is impossible or would involve extreme hardship to such individual.

"SEC. 547. PUBLICATION AND RECRUITMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall—

"(1) publicize the availability of, and procedure to apply for, Teacher Corps scholarships, particularly among students participating in teaching-related activities through summer teaching institutes, future teacher clubs, and other teaching-related activities, at institutions of higher education nationwide, particularly in institutions of higher education with large minority enrollments, historically black colleges and universities, secondary schools nationwide (especially such schools with minority enrollment in excess of the statewide average minority enrollment), and with—

"(A) individuals participating in programs assisted under subpart 4 of part A of title IV;

"(B) individuals leaving the armed services, the Peace Corps, VISTA, and programs funded under the National and Community Service Act of 1990;

"(C) community-based organizations working in minority education; and

"(D) other agencies and entities likely to attract individuals interested in entering teaching from another career;

"(2) recruit minority students to participate in the program assisted under this subpart; and

"(3) recruit students with outstanding academic records to participate in such program.

"(b) SPECIAL RULE.—The publications required under subsection (a) shall describe substantive fields of expertise and geographic areas experiencing teacher shortages within the Nation.

"SEC. 548. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this subpart.

"PART D—INNOVATION AND RESEARCH

"Subpart 1—National Board for Professional Teaching Standards

"SEC. 551. NATIONAL BOARD FOR PROFESSIONAL TEACHING STANDARDS.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this subpart—

"(1) The term 'Board' means the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards.

"(2) The term 'Committee' means the Fund for Improvement and Reform of Schools and Teaching Board established in section 3231 of the Fund for the Improvement and Reform of Schools and Teaching Act.

"(3) The term 'Director' means the Director of the National Science Foundation.

"(b) PROGRAM AUTHORIZATION.—

"(1) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—From sums appropriated pursuant to the authority of subsection (k) in any fiscal year, the Secretary shall, in accordance with this subpart, provide financial assistance to the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards, in order to pay the Federal share of the costs of the activities described in subsection (d).

"(2) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—(A) No financial assistance may be made available under this subpart except upon an application as required by subsection (e).

"(B) No financial assistance may be made available under this subpart unless the Secretary determines that—

"(i) the Board will comply with the provisions of this subpart;

"(ii) the Board will use the Federal funds only for research and development activities in accordance with subsection (d) and such teacher assessment and certification procedures will be free from racial, cultural, gender or regional bias;

"(iii) the Board—

"(I) will widely disseminate for review and comment announcements of specific research projects to be conducted with Federal funds, including a description of the goals and focus of the specific project involved and the specific merit review procedures and evaluation criteria to be used in the competitive award process; and

"(II) will send such announcements to the Secretary, the Director, the National Research Council, and the educational research community;

"(iv) the Secretary, pursuant to an arrangement with the Board, will publish the announcements described in clause (iii) in the Federal Register (or such other publication deemed appropriate by the Secretary) and in publications of general circulation designed to disseminate such announcements widely to the educational research community;

"(v) the Board will, after offering any interested party an opportunity to make comment upon, and take exception to, the projects contained in the announcements described in clause (iii) for a 30-day period following publication, and after reconsidering any project upon which comment is made or to which exception is taken, issue through the Secretary a request for proposals in the Federal Register (or such other publication deemed appropriate by the Secretary) containing any revised project information;

"(vi) the Board will make awards of Federal funds competitively on the basis of merit, and, in the award process, the Board will select, to the extent practicable consistent with standards of excellence—

"(I) a broad range of institutions associated with educational research and development; and

"(II) individuals who are broadly representative of the educational research and teaching communities with expertise in the specific area of research and development in question;

"(vii) the Board will adopt audit practices customarily applied to nonprofit private organizations and will comply with subsection (g)(4);

"(viii) the Board will not use Federal funds to meet the administrative and operating expenses of the Board;

"(ix) the Board will submit an annual report to the Congress in accordance with the provisions of subsection (g)(1); and

"(x) the Board will, upon request, disseminate to States, local educational agencies, or other public educational entities the results of any research or research project produced with funds authorized by this subpart, upon the payment of the cost of reproducing the appropriate material.

"(3) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds appropriated to carry out this subpart shall remain available for obligation and expenditure until the end of the second fiscal year succeeding the fiscal year for which the funds were appropriated.

"(B) No funds shall be made available to the Board after September 30, 1997, except as authorized by subparagraph (A) of this subsection.

"(c) CONSULTATION.—The Board shall consult at least twice annually with the Committee on the design and execution of its overall research and development strategy, including procedures to assure compliance with the requirements of this subpart. The procedures shall include—

"(1) an outline of specific research and development agenda and activities to be conducted with the Federal funds; and

"(2) provisions to ensure compliance with the open competition and merit review requirements of this subpart for proposals and projects assisted under this subpart.

"(d) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Federal funds received under this subpart may only be used for research and development activities directly related to the development of teacher assessment and certification procedures for elementary and secondary school teachers.

"(2) PRIORITIES.—(A) The Board shall give priority to research and development activities in—

"(i) mathematics;

"(ii) the sciences;

"(iii) foreign languages; and

"(iv) literacy, including the ability to read, write and analyze.

"(B) The Board shall give priority to research and development activities for the certification of elementary and secondary school teachers and the need and ability of such teachers to teach special educational populations, including—

"(i) limited English proficient children;

"(ii) gifted and talented children;

"(iii) children with disabilities; and

"(iv) economically and educationally disadvantaged children.

"(e) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall submit applications to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall—

"(A) describe the activities for which assistance is sought; and

"(B) provide assurances that the non-Federal share of the cost of activities of the Board is paid from non-Federal sources, together with a description of the manner in which the Board will comply with the requirements of this subparagraph.

"(2) APPROVAL.—The Secretary shall approve an application unless such application fails to comply with the provisions of this subpart.

"(f) FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall pay to the Board the Federal share of the costs of the activities of the Board for the period for which the application is approved under subsection (e).

"(2) AMOUNT OF FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share shall be 50 percent of the costs of the activities described in subsection (d).

"(g) REPORTS AND AUDITING PROVISION.—

"(1) NATIONAL BOARD FOR PROFESSIONAL TEACHING STANDARDS REPORT.—The Board shall submit an annual report to the appropriate committees of the Congress not later than June 30 of any fiscal year in which Federal funds are expended pursuant to this subpart. The Board shall disseminate the report for review and comment to the Department of Education, the National Science Foundation, the National Research Council, and the education research community. The report shall—

"(A) include a detailed financial statement and a report of the audit practices described in subsection (b)(2)(B)(vii);

"(B) include a description of the general procedures to assure compliance with the requirements of this subpart as required in subsection (d); and

"(C) provide a comprehensive and detailed description of the Board's agenda, activities, and planned activities for the preceding and succeeding fiscal years, including—

"(i) the Board's overall research and development program and activities;

"(ii) the specific research and development projects and activities conducted with Federal funds during the preceding fiscal year, including—

"(I) a description of the goals and methodology of the project;

"(II) a description and assessment of the findings (or status and preliminary findings if the project is not yet completed);

"(III) a description of the competitive bidding process, the merit review procedures, and the evaluation criteria used to award project funds; and

"(IV) a description of the Board's plans for dissemination of the findings described in clause (ii);

"(iii) the specific research and development projects and activities planned to be conducted with Federal funds during the succeeding fiscal year, including the goals and methodologies to be used; and

"(iv) a listing of available publications of the Board, including publications related to policies, standards and general information, research reports, and commissioned papers of the Board.

"(2) FIRST ANNUAL REPORT.—The first annual report required by this subsection shall include a description of the Board's research and development agenda for the succeeding 5-year period. Such first report shall include to the maximum extent practicable, a description of specific research and development projects and activities, and the goals and methodologies of such projects and activities.

"(3) ADDITIONAL REPORTS.—The Secretary, the Director, and the National Research Council shall report to the appropriate committees of the Congress on the compliance of the Board with the requirements of this part not later than 30 days after the Board submits its annual report pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(4) AUDITING PROVISION.—The Comptroller General of the United States, and any of the Comptroller's authorized representatives, shall have access, for the purpose of audit and examination, to any books, documents, papers, and records of the Board, and to any recipient of the Board, that is pertinent to the sums received and disbursed under this subpart.

"(h) EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After September 30, 1995, the Secretary shall reserve not more than 2 percent of the amount appropriated pursuant to the authority of subsection (k) to provide for an independent, ongoing evaluation of the research program of teacher assessments carried out by the Board and the fairness and the accuracy of the data such evaluations produce. The evaluation shall include an analysis of the impact of teacher assessments on minority teachers. The findings of the evaluation shall be submitted to the Labor and Human Resources Committee of the Senate and the Education and Labor Committee of the House of Representatives.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The Secretary shall enter into a contract for the performance of the evaluation described in paragraph (1) with a nationally recognized organization (such as the National Academy of Sciences or the National Academy of Education).

"(i) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subpart shall be construed to—

"(1) establish a preferred national curriculum or preferred teaching methodology for elementary and secondary school instruction;

"(2) infringe upon the rights and responsibilities of the States to license elementary and secondary school teachers;

"(3) infringe upon the practice or accreditation of home school or private school teaching;

"(4) provide an individual certified by the Board with a right of action against a State, local educational agency, or other public educational entity for any decisions related to hiring, promotion, retention or dismissal;

"(5) authorize the Board to—

"(A) study, create, or promulgate separate standards applicable to home school or private school teachers;

"(B) take any action to require home school, private school, or public school teachers to participate in any program offered by the Board; or

"(C) take any action that infringes in any manner on the right of parents to direct the education of their children; or

"(6) authorize the Secretary to exercise supervision or control over the research program, standards, assessment practices, administration, or staffing policies of the Board.

"(j) VOLUNTARY PARTICIPATION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subpart, voluntary participation in certification assessments by the Board shall be open to home school, private school, and public school teachers.

"(k) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the period beginning October 1, 1992, and ending September 30, 1997, to carry out the provisions of this subpart.

"Subpart 2—Alternative Routes to Teacher Certification and Licensure

"SEC. 552. SHORT TITLE.

"This subpart may be cited as the 'Alternative Routes to Teacher Certification and Licensure Act of 1992'.

"SEC. 553. FINDINGS.

"The Congress finds that—

"(1) effective elementary and secondary schools require competent teachers and strong leadership;

"(2) school systems would benefit greatly by increasing the pool of qualified individuals from which to recruit teachers;

"(3) many talented professionals who have demonstrated a high level of subject area competence outside the education profession may wish to pursue careers in education, but have not fulfilled the requirements to be certified or licensed as teachers;

"(4) alternative routes can enable qualified individuals to fulfill State certification or licensure requirements and would allow school systems to utilize the expertise of such professionals and improve the pool of qualified individuals available to local educational agencies as teachers; and

"(5) alternative routes to certification or licensure requirements that do not exclude qualified individuals from teaching solely because such individuals do not meet traditional certification or licensure requirements would allow school systems to take advantage of these professionals and improve the supply of well-qualified teachers.

"SEC. 554. PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this subpart to improve the supply of well-qualified elementary and secondary school teachers by encouraging and assisting States to develop and implement programs for alternative routes to teacher certification or licensure requirements. Such programs shall place special emphasis on the participation of individuals who are members of minority groups.

"SEC. 555. ALLOTMENTS.

"(a) ALLOTMENTS TO STATES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—From the amount appropriated to carry out this subpart, the Secretary shall allot to each State the lesser of either the amount the State applies for under section 556 or an amount that is proportional to the State's share of the total population of children ages five through seventeen in all the States (based on the most recent data available that is satisfactory to the Secretary).

"(2) REALLOCATION.—If a State does not apply for its allotment, or the full amount of its allotment, under the preceding paragraph, the Secretary may reallocate the excess funds to one or more other States that demonstrate, to the satisfaction of the Secretary, a current need for the funds.

"(b) SPECIAL RULE.—Notwithstanding section 412(b) of the General Education Provisions Act, funds awarded under this subpart shall remain available for obligation by a recipient for a period of two calendar years from the date of the grant.

"SEC. 556. STATE APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any State desiring to receive a grant under this subpart shall, through the State educational agency, submit an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information, as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(b) REQUIREMENTS.—Each application shall—

"(1) describe the programs, projects, and activities to be undertaken; and

"(2) contain such assurances as the Secretary considers necessary, including assurances that—

"(A) assistance provided to the State educational agency under this subpart will be used to supplement, and not to supplant, any State or local funds available for the development and implementation of programs to provide alternative routes to fulfilling teacher certification or licensure requirements;

"(B) the State educational agency has, in developing and designing the application, consulted with—

"(i) representatives of local educational agencies, including superintendents and school board members (including representatives of their professional organizations where applicable);

"(ii) elementary and secondary school teachers, including representatives of their professional organizations;

"(iii) institutions of higher education with schools or departments of education;

"(iv) parents; and

"(v) other interested organizations and individuals; and

"(C) the State educational agency will submit to the Secretary, at such time as the Secretary may specify, a final report describing the activities carried out with assistance provided under this subpart and the results achieved.

"(c) GEPA PROVISIONS INAPPLICABLE.—Sections 435 and 436 of the General Education Provisions Act, except to the extent that such sections relate to fiscal control and fund accounting procedures, shall not apply to this subpart.

"SEC. 557. USE OF FUNDS.

"(a) USE OF FUNDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A State educational agency shall use assistance provided under this subpart to support programs, projects, or activities that develop and implement new, or expand and improve existing, programs that enable individuals to move to a career in education from another occupation through an alternative route to teacher certification or licensure.

"(2) TYPES OF ASSISTANCE.—A State educational agency may carry out such programs, projects, or activities directly, through contracts, or through grants to local educational agencies, intermediate educational agencies, institutions of higher education, or consortia of such agencies.

"(b) USES.—Funds received under this subpart may be used for—

"(1) the design, development, implementation, and evaluation of programs that enable qualified professionals who have demonstrated a high level of subject area competence outside the education profession and are interested in entering the education profession to fulfill State certification or licensure requirements;

"(2) the establishment of administrative structures necessary for the development and implementation of programs to provide alternative routes to fulfilling State requirements for certification or licensure;

"(3) training of staff, including the development of appropriate support programs, such as mentor programs, for teachers entering the school system through alternative routes to teacher certification or licensure;

"(4) the development of recruitment strategies;

"(5) the development of reciprocity agreements between or among States for the certification or licensure of teachers; and

"(6) other appropriate programs, projects, and activities designed to meet the objectives of this subpart.

"SEC. 558. DEFINITION.

"For purposes of this subpart, the term 'State' means each of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and Palau (until the Compact of Free Association with Palau takes effect pursuant to section 101(a) of Public Law 99-658).

"SEC. 559. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subpart $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1993.

"Subpart 3—Class Size Demonstration Grant

"SEC. 561. PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this subpart to provide grants to local educational agencies to enable such agencies to determine the benefits in various school settings of reducing class size on the educational performance of students and on classroom management and organization.

"SEC. 562. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall carry out a program of awarding grants, in accordance with the provisions of this subpart, to local educational agencies to pay the Federal share of the costs of conducting demonstration projects that demonstrate methods of reducing class size which may provide information meaningful to other State and local educational agencies.

"(2) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share shall be 50 percent.

"(b) RESERVATION.—The Secretary may reserve not more than 5 percent of the amount appropriated pursuant to the authority of section 565A in each fiscal year to carry out the evaluation activities described in section 565.

"(c) SELECTION CRITERIA.—The Secretary shall make grants to local educational agencies on the basis of—

"(1) the need and the ability of a local educational agency to reduce the class size of an elementary or secondary school served by such agency;

"(2) the ability of a local educational agency to furnish the non-Federal share of the costs of the demonstration project for which assistance is sought;

"(3) the ability of a local educational agency to continue the project for which assistance is sought after the termination of Federal financial assistance under this subpart; and

"(4) the degree to which a local educational agency demonstrates in the application submitted pursuant to section 564 consultation in program implementation and design with parents, teachers, school administrators, and local teacher organizations, where applicable.

"(d) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this subpart, the Secretary shall give priority to demonstration projects that involve at-risk students, including educationally or economically disadvantaged students, students with disabilities, limited-English proficient students, and young students.

"(e) GRANTS MUST SUPPLEMENT OTHER FUNDS.—A local educational agency shall use the Federal funds received under this subpart to supplement and not supplant other Federal, State and local funds available to the local educational agency.

"SEC. 563. PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) ANNUAL COMPETITION.—In each fiscal year, the Secretary shall announce the factors to be examined in a demonstration project assisted under this subpart. Such factors may include—

"(1) the magnitude of the reduction in class size to be achieved;

"(2) the level of education and the subject areas in which the demonstration projects shall occur;

"(3) the form of the instructional strategy to be demonstrated; and

"(4) the duration of the project.

"(b) RANDOM TECHNIQUES AND APPROPRIATE COMPARISON GROUPS.—Demonstration projects assisted under this subpart shall be designed to utilize randomized techniques or appropriate comparison groups, where feasible.

"SEC. 564. APPLICATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In order to receive a grant under this subpart a local educational agency shall submit an application to the Secretary that is responsive to the announcement described in section 563(a), at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(b) DURATION.—The Secretary shall encourage local educational agencies to submit applications under this subpart for a period of 3 years.

"(c) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to subsection (a) shall include—

"(1) a description of the objectives to be attained with the financial assistance made available under this subpart and the manner in which such financial assistance shall be used to reduce class size;

"(2) a description of the steps to be taken to achieve target class sizes, including, where applicable, the acquisition of additional teaching personnel and classroom space;

"(3) a statement of the methods for the collection of data necessary for the evaluation of the impact of class size reduction programs on student achievement;

"(4) an assurance that the local educational agency shall pay from non-Federal sources the non-Federal share of the costs of the demonstration project for which assistance is sought; and

"(5) such additional assurances as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(d) SUFFICIENT SIZE AND SCOPE REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall only award grants under this subpart to applicants having applications which describe projects of sufficient size and scope to contribute to carrying out the purposes of this subpart.

"SEC. 565. EVALUATION AND DISSEMINATION.

"(a) NATIONAL EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall conduct a national evaluation of the demonstration projects assisted under this subpart to determine the costs incurred in achieving the reduction in class size and the effects of the reductions on outcomes, such as student performance in the affected subjects or grades, attendance, discipline, classroom organization, management, and teacher satisfaction and retention.

"(b) COOPERATION.—Each local educational agency receiving a grant under this subpart shall cooperate in the national evaluation described in subsection (a) and shall provide such information to the Secretary as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(c) REPORTS.—The Secretary shall report to the Congress on the results of the evaluation conducted pursuant to subsection (a).

"(d) DISSEMINATION.—The Secretary shall widely disseminate information about the results of the class size demonstration projects assisted under this subpart.

"SEC. 565A. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $3,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this subpart.

"Subpart 4—Middle School Teaching Demonstration Programs

"SEC. 566. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this subpart to provide financial assistance to institutions of higher education which offer teacher training or retraining programs to develop model programs with a specialized focus on teaching grades 6 through 9.

"SEC. 567. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this subpart:

"(1) The term 'developmentally appropriate' means a program that is appropriate for a child's age and all areas of an individual child's development, including educational, physical, emotional, social, cognitive, and communication.

"(2) The term 'middle school' means a school which enrolls students in at least two of the grades 6, 7, 8, and 9.

"SEC. 568. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants, on a competitive basis, to institutions of higher education to develop model programs with a specialized focus on teaching grades 6 through 9.

"(b) SPECIAL RULE.—

"(1) EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION.—The Secretary shall ensure an equitable geographic distribution of grants awarded under this subpart.

"(2) CONSIDERATION.—The Secretary shall take into consideration equitable levels of funding for urban and rural areas in awarding grants under this subpart.

"(c) GRANT PERIOD.—Grants under this subpart may be awarded for a period not to exceed 3 years.

"(d) FUNDING LIMITATION.—Grants awarded under this subpart may not exceed $250,000 in the first year of funding.

"SEC. 569. APPLICATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Each institution of higher education desiring a grant under this subpart shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(b) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to subsection (a) shall demonstrate that—

"(1) the applicant will establish and maintain a program of teacher training or retraining designed to offer specialized preparation for individuals teaching grades 6 through 9;

"(2) the applicant has designed a program of teacher training or retraining which includes—

"(A) a study of adolescent development (including cognitive, social, and emotional) with particular emphasis on early adolescent development;

"(B) a study of the influence of institutions such as schools, families, and peer groups in the socialization of adolescents;

"(C) information concerning the organization of schools for students in grades 6 through 9, with particular emphasis on developmentally appropriate school and classroom organization and practices;

"(D) training in at least 2 subject areas and related instructional strategies;

"(E) direct experience through internships in middle grade schools under the guidance of teachers who demonstrate exemplary classroom practices;

"(F) strategies for the prevention and detection of high risk behavior, particularly drug and alcohol abuse, and for the enhancement of self esteem among adolescents;

"(G) a study of effective methods and models of presenting substance abuse information and education to adolescent students; and

"(H) methods of encouraging parental and community involvement with middle schools; and

"(3) the program will be designed and operated with the active participation of classroom teachers and will include an in-service training component.

"SEC. 570. REPORTS AND INFORMATION DISSEMINATION.

"Each institution of higher education receiving a grant under this subpart shall submit to the Secretary such reports and other information regarding programs conducted under this subpart as the Secretary deems necessary. The Secretary shall disseminate such information to other institutions of higher education, State educational agencies, and local educational agencies.

"SEC. 570A. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this subpart.

"PART E—MINORITY TEACHER RECRUITMENT

"Subpart 1—New Teaching Careers

"SEC. 571. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this subpart to establish and operate new career programs to attract minority candidates, who are in school support or paraprofessional positions in shortage area schools serving disadvantaged students, to careers as certified or licensed teachers.

"SEC. 572. STATE GRANT AUTHORITY; APPLICATIONS.

"(a) AUTHORITY.—

"(1) GRANTS BY SECRETARY.—In any fiscal year in which appropriations for this subpart do not equal or exceed $50,000,000, the Secretary is authorized, in accordance with this subpart, to award grants, on a competitive basis, to States to enable States to pay the Federal share of supporting programs that carry out the purpose of this subpart.

"(2) STATE GRANT PROGRAM.—In any fiscal year in which appropriations for this subpart equal or exceed $50,000,000, the Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this subpart, to make grants to States in accordance with allocations under subsection (b) to enable States to pay the Federal share of supporting programs that carry out the purposes of this subpart.

"(b) ALLOCATION AMONG STATES.—Except as provided in subsection (a)(1), each State shall be eligible to receive a grant under this subpart in each fiscal year that bears as nearly as possible the same ratio to the amount appropriated under section 576C as the allocation of funds under part A of chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 in that State bears to the total allocation of such funds in all States, except that no State grant shall be less than $500,000 in any fiscal year.

"(c) DURATION OF GRANT.—Each grant awarded under this subpart shall be awarded for a term of 5 years, subject to the availability of appropriations.

"(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of each grant awarded under this subpart shall be 75 percent in the first year in which the State receives a grant, 65 percent in the second such year, 55 percent in the third such year, 45 percent in the fourth such year, and 35 percent in the fifth such year.

"(e) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of each grant awarded under this subpart may be in cash or in kind fairly evaluated, including planned equipment or services.

"(f) SUBMISSION OF STATE APPLICATIONS.—In order to receive a grant under this subpart, a State shall submit an application at such time or times, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation. Such application shall—

"(1) contain assurances that the State will award grants on a competitive basis to eligible recipients submitting applications described in section 574;

"(2) set forth a program of activities for carrying out the purposes set forth in this subpart in such detail as will enable the Secretary to determine the degree to which such program will accomplish such purposes and such other policies, procedures, and assurances as the Secretary may require by regulation.

"SEC. 573. AGREEMENTS.

"Each State receiving a grant under this subpart shall enter into an agreement with the Secretary. Each such agreement shall include provisions designed to ensure that—

"(1) the State educational agency, the State higher education agency, or the State agency which administers subpart 4 of part A of title IV, relating to State student incentive grants, will administer the program authorized by this subpart in the State;

"(2) the State educational agency or higher education agency will use not more than 5 percent of the grant it receives for administrative expenses;

"(3) the State educational agency or higher education agency will keep such records and provide such information to the Secretary as may be required for fiscal audit and program evaluation, consistent with the responsibilities of the Secretary; and

"(4) the State will establish a system for the evaluation of the programs assisted under this subpart.

"SEC. 574. APPLICATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A grant under this subpart may be made only to an eligible recipient which submits an application to the State containing or accompanied by such information as the State may reasonably require.

"(b) CONTENTS OF APPLICATION.—Each such application shall—

"(1) describe the activities and services for which assistance is sought;

"(2) set forth the number of expected participants in each program assisted under this subpart;

"(3) demonstrate steps on a career ladder leading to the position of fully credentialed teacher, ranging from nonskilled entry positions, extending through intermediate subprofessional functions, and terminating in full professional status as a certified teacher duly recognized by the appropriate State agency;

"(4) contain assurances that advancement within such career ladders would be based on merit, but that the opportunity for professional growth is available to all;

"(5) demonstrate a plan for employing permanently individuals who have participated in the program at their new level of training, including individuals who terminate the program at a level below that of fully credentialed teacher;

"(6) demonstrate a plan for bringing a sizable portion of the educational program and coursework to the place of the participant's employment;

"(7) demonstrate a plan for providing academic credit for in-service training and other relevant experience as well as formal academic coursework;

"(8) provide for participation of individuals who have attained various levels of education, including individuals who have not completed high school, with special consideration for such participation given to individuals already serving within the school system;

"(9) provide assurances that the program assisted under this subpart will be available to individuals with disabilities; and

"(10) contain such other assurances as the State may reasonably require.

"SEC. 575. REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—An eligible recipient of a grant under this subpart shall require that any paraprofessional who receives student financial assistance under this subpart and who becomes a fully certified or licensed teacher enter into an agreement under which the paraprofessional shall—

"(1) within the 10-year period after completing the postsecondary education for which the assistance was provided, act as an educational professional or a paraprofessional in the local educational agency that is a consortium member of the eligible recipient providing such assistance, or, if no teaching position is offered by such local educational agency, in a shortage area school approved by the State for a period of not less than one year for each full-time academic year or equivalent for which the assistance was received;

"(2) provide to the State evidence of compliance with paragraph (1); and

"(3) repay that portion of the student financial assistance received under this subpart which was provided for tuition, plus interest and reasonable collection costs (if applicable), in the event that the teacher fails to comply with the conditions of paragraph (1), in accordance with the regulations prescribed by the Secretary under section 527, except that the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to anyone for whom no teaching position was made available by the local educational agency or State, or in the circumstances provided in section 528.

"(b) AMOUNT OF FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—The amount of financial assistance awarded under this subpart shall be reduced by the amount that the financial assistance exceeds the student's cost of attendance, as defined in section 472. Financial assistance awarded under this subpart shall not be reduced on the basis of the student's receipt of other forms of Federal student financial assistance but shall be taken into account in determining the eligibility of the student for those other forms of Federal student financial assistance.

"SEC. 576. SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.

"In awarding grants under this subpart, the State shall give special consideration to—

"(1) programs designed to identify, recruit, and certify—

"(A) speakers of non-English languages who have been trained as teachers in their home country; or

"(B) individuals already employed in a local educational agency; and

"(2) eligible recipients located in shortage areas as defined in section 576B.

"SEC. 576A. USE OF FUNDS.

"Funds provided to eligible recipients pursuant to this subpart may be used for—

"(1) tuition or part or all of the costs of attendance (as determined under section 472) for participants in programs assisted under this subpart;

"(2) the release time of such participants;

"(3) instructional and supportive services for such participants in such programs; and

"(4) stipends for child care to such participants whose academic coursework takes place outside the normal workday.

"SEC. 576B. DEFINITIONS.

"For the purpose of this subpart—

"(1) the term 'certified or licensed teacher' means an individual who possesses a document certifying that the individual has met the requirements of a State for employment as a teacher in the public schools of that State (including individuals who have been certified as specialists in preschool and early childhood education);

"(2) the term 'eligible recipient' means a consortium of—

"(A) an institution of higher education, and

"(B) one or more local educational agencies.

"(3) the term 'paraprofessional' means an individual with at least a high school diploma or recognized equivalent who is employed in a preschool or elementary or secondary school under the supervision of a certified or licensed teacher, including individuals employed in bilingual education, special education, and migrant education;

"(4) the term 'school support' means an individual who is employed by a local educational agency; and

"(5) the term 'shortage area' means (A) an area the Secretary has designated as an area with a shortage of elementary and secondary school teachers, or (B) a shortage in a designated subject area as described in section 530A of this Act.

"SEC. 576C. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this subpart.

"Subpart 2—Programs to Encourage Minority Students to Become Teachers

"SEC. 577. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of the program conducted pursuant to section 578 to carry out activities designed to—

"(1) improve recruitment and training opportunities in education for minority individuals, including language minority individuals;

"(2) increase the number of minority teachers, including language minority teachers, in elementary and secondary schools; and

"(3) to identify and encourage minority students in the 7th through the 12th grades to aspire to, and to prepare for, careers in elementary and secondary school teaching.

"SEC. 578. PARTNERSHIP GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

"(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to pay the Federal share of carrying out the purposes of this subpart to a partnership between—

"(1) one or more institutions of higher education which have a demonstrated record and special expertise in carrying out the purposes of this subpart; and

"(2)(A) one or more local educational agencies;

"(B) a State educational agency or a State higher education agency; or

"(C) community-based organizations.

"(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of each grant awarded under this section shall be 50 percent.

"(c) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of each grant awarded under this section may be in cash or kind fairly evaluated, including planned equipment or services.

"(d) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—Not more than 5 percent of any grant awarded under this section may be used for administrative expenses.

"SEC. 579. PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In order to be eligible for a grant under section 578, a partnership shall enter into a written partnership agreement. All partners shall sign the agreement.

"(b) CONTENTS OF AGREEMENT.—The agreement shall include—

"(1) a listing of all participants in the partnership;

"(2) a description of the responsibilities of each participant in the partnership; and

"(3) a listing of the resources, if any, to be contributed to the partnership.

"(c) SELECTION CRITERIA.—In making grants under section 578, the Secretary shall approve applications which contain provision for projects designed to carry out the purposes described in section 577 and which—

"(1) identify students who indicate an interest in entering the teaching profession, and provide such individuals with support programs such as—

"(A) scholarship funds to meet expenses;

"(B) remedial and tutoring programs;

"(C) counseling and support services;

"(D) academic advice and guidance in course selection to prepare for teacher certification;

"(E) information and advice regarding eligibility for membership in the Teacher Corps established under subpart 3 of part C of this title, and other financial assistance programs;

"(F) teaching mentors;

"(G) motivational activities;

"(H) teaching skill development;

"(I) future teacher clubs; and

"(J) instruction in test-taking skills.

"(2) establish or strengthen teacher training programs;

"(3) establish or enhance early identification/articulation partnership programs with secondary schools and community colleges;

"(4) establish partnerships with graduate schools of education to foster and facilitate the movement of minority students into post-graduate studies;

"(5) establish programs and activities which foster and facilitate the movement of students interested in pursuing teaching careers from 2-year institutions to 4-year institutions, focusing particular attention on facilitating the transfer of academic credit; and

"(6) improve existing assessment practices that determine an individual's qualifications to become a teacher.

"SEC. 580. APPLICATION FOR TEACHER PARTNERSHIPS PROGRAM.

"(a) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—A partnership desiring to receive a grant under section 578 shall submit an application to the Secretary.

"(b) CONTENTS OF APPLICATION.—The application shall include—

"(1) the written and signed partnership agreement required by section 579;

"(2) set forth the individuals to be served;

"(3) a listing of the elementary, if applicable, and secondary schools of the local educational agency to be involved in the program assisted under this subpart;

"(4) a description of the services and activities to be offered under the program assisted under this subpart; and

"(5) such additional information and assurances as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(c) STATE EDUCATIONAL AGENCY REVIEW.—Each application from a partnership for a grant under section 578 shall be forwarded to the appropriate State educational agency (unless the State educational agency is a member of the partnership) for review and comment if the State educational agency requests the opportunity for such a review. The State educational agency must complete a review of such application and comment to the Secretary within 30 calendar days of receipt. Failure of the State educational agency to submit comments to the Secretary shall not prejudice such application.

"SEC. 580A. TEACHER PLACEMENT PROGRAM.

"(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education that have schools or departments of education to pay the Federal share of developing and carrying out programs and activities designed to—

"(A) prepare and train students to become elementary and secondary school teachers; and

"(B) to the extent practicable, place the students as teachers in urban and rural public or private nonprofit elementary or secondary schools where at least 50 percent of students enrolled are from minority groups.

"(2) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of each grant awarded under this section shall be 50 percent.

"(3) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of each grant awarded under this section may be in cash or in kind fairly evaluated, including planned equipment or services.

"(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Grants under this section may be used for the costs of developing and carrying out the program of teacher preparation, training, and placement described in subsection (a).

"(c) APPLICATIONS.—No grant may be made under this section unless an application to the Secretary is made by the institution of higher education at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(d) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.—The Secretary is authorized, in making grants under this section, to give special consideration to historically Black colleges and universities and to institutions which—

"(1) are eligible to receive funds under part C of title X; and

"(2) have enrollments of at least 50 percent minority students in their teacher education programs.

"(e) PERFORMANCE INCENTIVE.—In any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1993, the Secretary may, based upon evaluation and monitoring of programs assisted under this section, increase the Federal share for a recipient of funds under this section for the succeeding fiscal year to 75 percent, if the Secretary determines that there is demonstrated success in the operation of the program assisted by such recipient.

"(f) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—Not more than 5 percent of any grant awarded under this section may be used for administrative expenses.

"SEC. 580B. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years, of which not more than ⅔ shall be available to carry out programs under section 578 and not less than ⅓ shall be available to carry out programs under section 580A.

"PART F—PROGRAMS FOR SPECIAL POPULATIONS

"Subpart 1—National Mini Corps Program

"SEC. 581. NATIONAL MINI CORPS.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education to enable such institutions to establish partnerships with local educational agencies to carry out the purposes of the National Mini Corps Program.

"(b) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this subpart—

"(1) the term 'children' means children who are eligible to receive services under part A or subpart 1 of part D of chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965; and

"(2) the term 'individual' (A) has the same meaning as the terms 'first generation college student' and 'low income individual' as defined under section 402A(g)(2) of this Act, or (B) means a student enrolled in an institution of higher education who is the child of current or former migratory workers (including migratory agricultural dairy workers) or of migratory fishermen.

"(c) PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM.—It is the purpose of the National Mini Corps Program to—

"(1) provide individuals who are enrolled or plan to enroll in an institution of higher education with advisement, training, and instructional services, and to encourage individuals to be role models for children;

"(2) provide outreach and recruitment services to encourage individuals to enroll in teacher education programs;

"(3) provide support and instructional services to individuals who are enrolled in an institution of higher education to enable such individuals to provide direct instructional services, which are coordinated with the overall educational goals of the State or local educational agency, to children eligible to receive services under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 during the regular school year or summer term. Such support and services may include—

"(A) lessons and provision of materials that meet the academic needs of children in the classroom;

"(B) supplemental instruction to reinforce the basic skills and concepts provided through instruction by the teacher;

"(C) instruction in other subject areas;

"(D) academic assistance, home visits, parental involvement, parent-student advisement services, and family advocacy; and

"(E) stipends for individuals who participate in the program assisted under this subpart for at least 10 but not more than 15 hours per week;

"(4) designate college coordinators at participating institutions of higher education to train, supervise, and assign individuals to carry out the activities of this subpart in cooperation with State and local educational agencies in which children with special needs have been identified; and

"(5) support other appropriate activities related to encouraging individuals to enter the teaching profession and to provide a link to the community.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—Institutions of higher education desiring to receive a grant under this subpart shall submit an application to the Secretary which shall include—

"(1) a written partnership agreement with the State and local educational agency in which the children have been identified for participation in the activities under this subpart;

"(2) a description of the strategies that will be employed to engage the community generally in the activities and programs supported by the programs under this subpart;

"(3) a description of the process by which individuals will be recruited and selected to participate in the programs assisted under this subpart;

"(4) a description of the programs and activities which will be supported by the programs under this subpart; and

"(5) such other information as the Secretary considers necessary to determine the nature of the local needs, the quality of the proposed Mini Corps Program, and the capability of the applicant to implement the proposed Mini Corps Program.

"(e) AWARDING OF GRANTS.—In awarding grants under this subpart, the Secretary shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that—

"(1) grants are equitably distributed on a geographic basis throughout the Nation and among a variety of communities;

"(2) the amount of the grant awarded is proportionate to the number of individuals and children who, on the basis of the grant application, are expected to be involved in the programs and activities supported by the National Mini Corps; and

"(3) not less than 30 percent of the grants awarded under this subpart are awarded for programs serving migrant students and children.

"(f) USES OF FUNDS.—Funds provided under this part may be used for planning, implementing and operating a National Mini Corps Program, except that not more than 5 percent of any grant received under this subpart may be used for administrative costs.

"(g) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall, by January 1, 1996, evaluate the demonstration program assisted under this part and report the results of such evaluation to the appropriate committees of the Congress.

"(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subpart $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"Subpart 2—Foreign Language Instruction

"SEC. 586. DEMONSTRATION GRANTS FOR CRITICAL LANGUAGE AND AREA STUDIES.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to make demonstration grants to eligible consortia to enable such eligible consortia to—

"(1) operate critical language and area studies programs;

"(2) develop and acquire educational equipment and materials; and

"(3) develop teacher training programs, texts, curriculum, and other activities designed to improve and expand the instruction of foreign languages at elementary and secondary schools across the Nation.

"(b) GRANT LIMITATION.—The Secretary shall not award a grant which exceeds $2,000,000 to an eligible consortium under this section in any fiscal year, but shall award grants of sufficient size, scope and quality for a program of comprehensive instruction of foreign languages.

"(c) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to eligible consortia with demonstrated, proven effectiveness in the field of critical language and area studies and which have been in existence for at least 1 year prior to applying for a grant under this section.

"(2) EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall take into consideration providing an equitable geographic distribution of such grants among the regions of the United States.

"(3) PROGRAM REQUIREMENT.—Each eligible consortium receiving a grant under this section shall include in the activities assisted pursuant to such grant, a study abroad or cultural exchange program.

"(d) ELIGIBLE CONSORTIUM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For the purposes of this section, the term 'eligible consortium' means a cooperative effort between entities in one or more States that must include at least 4 schools, of which—

"(A) one shall be an institution of higher education;

"(B) one shall be a secondary school with experience in teaching critical languages;

"(C) one shall be a secondary school with experience in teaching critical languages and in which at least 25 percent of the students are eligible to be counted under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965; and

"(D) one shall be a secondary school in which at least 25 percent of the students are eligible to be counted under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

"(2) NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS.—Each eligible consortium described in paragraph (1) may include a nonprofit organization to provide services not otherwise available from the entities described in paragraph (1).

"(e) ADMINISTRATION.—Each eligible consortium receiving a grant under this section may use not more than 10 percent of such grant for administrative expenses.

"(f) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), each eligible consortium desiring a grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The State educational agency or State higher education agency responsible for the supervision of any one school participating in an eligible consortium may submit the application described in paragraph (1) on behalf of such eligible consortium.

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'critical language' means each of the languages contained in the list of critical foreign languages designated by the Secretary pursuant to section 212(d) of the Education for Economic Security Act (50 Fed. Reg. 149, 31413).

"(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this section.

"SEC. 587. DEVELOPMENT OF FOREIGN LANGUAGE AND CULTURE INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS.

"(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to provide one or more grants on a competitive basis to a State or local educational agency, an institution of higher education, a private nonprofit foreign language organization, a nonprofit education association, or a consortium thereof, to enable such entity to act as a resource center for—

"(1) coordinating the development of and disseminating foreign language and culture instructional material, including children's literature in foreign languages, videotapes and computer software, and teacher's instructional kits relating to international study; and

"(2) encouraging the expanded use of technology in teaching foreign languages and culture at the elementary school level and, when the needs of elementary schools have been met, at the secondary school level, with a particular emphasis on expanding the use of technology in teaching foreign languages and culture at elementary and secondary schools that have proportionally fewer resources available for teaching foreign languages and cultures, including schools in urban and rural areas.

"(b) COORDINATION.—In developing materials and technologies under this section, the Secretary shall, where appropriate, make use of materials and technologies developed under the Star Schools Program Assistance Act.

"(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated $4,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this section.

"Subpart 3—Small State Teaching Initiative

"SEC. 591. MODEL PROGRAMS AND EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to provide sufficient funds to small States to enable such States to develop model programs for educational excellence, teacher training and educational reform.

"(b) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to small States in order to enable such States to make grants to eligible institutions for the purpose of enhancing and improving the quality of teacher education, training, and recruitment in the Nation's smallest States.

"(2) EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION.—The Secretary shall award grants described in paragraph (1) in equal amounts among small States having applications approved under subsection (e).

"(c) INSTITUTIONAL USE OF FUNDS.—Eligible institutions receiving funds under this section may use such funds for the development of innovative teaching techniques and materials, preservice and inservice training programs, renovation of training facilities and construction of model classrooms.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—

"(1) SMALL STATE.—For the purposes of this section the term 'small State' means a State the total population of which is less than 1,108,500 as reported in the 1990 Census of Population and Housing.

"(2) ELIGIBLE INSTITUTION.—For the purposes of this section, the term 'eligible institution means any institution of higher education (as such term is defined in section 1201(a)) that is located in a small State and that provides a course of study which prepares an individual to become a classroom teacher.

"(e) APPLICATION.—Any eligible institution which desires to receive a grant under this section shall submit to the State an application which—

"(1) if the State educational agency is not administering the program assisted under this subpart, certifies that the State educational agency has participated in the development of the application;

"(2) provides for a process of active discussion and consultation with an advisory committee convened by the State educational agency and the eligible institution; and

"(3) describes how the institution will use the funding.

"(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purposes of this part there are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary in each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"Subpart 4—Faculty Development Grants

"SEC. 593. TRAINING GRANTS.

"(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to award grants to institutions of higher education to enable such institutions to—

"(1) develop model programs that provide training to secondary school faculty to prepare students with disabilities for postsecondary educational opportunities; and

"(2) establish programs of faculty development for faculty who teach in an institution of higher education to prepare such faculty for the enrollment of students with disabilities at such institution.

"(b) USE OF GRANTS.—The grants described in subsection (a) may be used to—

"(1) provide scholarships, including stipends and allowances, to faculty described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a);

"(2) develop materials and inservice programs to assist such faculty in making the curriculum at an institution of higher education accessible to students with disabilities; and

"(3) provide funds to support the release of such faculty from teaching assignments for the purpose of educating such faculty regarding the needs of students with disabilities.

"(c) SPECIAL RULES.—The Secretary shall ensure that grants awarded under subsection (a)(1) are used for programs that are in compliance with State and professionally recognized standards for the training of special education personnel.

"(d) APPLICATION.—Each institution of higher education desiring a grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subpart $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"Subpart 5—Early Childhood Education Training

"SEC. 596. TRAINING IN EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION AND VIOLENCE COUNSELING.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary shall award grants to institutions of higher education to enable such institutions to establish innovative programs to recruit and train students for careers in—

"(1) early childhood development and care, or preschool programs; or

"(2) providing counseling to young children from birth to 6 years of age who have been affected by violence and to adults who work with such young children.

"(b) APPLICATION.—An institution of higher education desiring a grant pursuant to subsection (a) shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such form and containing or accompanied by such information or assurances as the Secretary may require. Each such application shall—

"(1) describe the activities and services for which assistance is sought;

"(2) contain a plan in accordance with subsection (c);

"(3) demonstrate that such institution has the capacity to implement such plan; and

"(4) provide assurances that such plan was developed in consultation with agencies and organizations that will assist the institution in carrying out such plan.

"(c) PLAN.—Each application described in subsection (a) shall contain a comprehensive plan for the recruitment, retention and training of students seeking careers in early childhood development or violence counseling. Such plan shall include a description of—

"(1) specific strategies for reaching students at secondary schools, community colleges, undergraduate institutions, or other agencies and institutions from which such students are to be drawn for participation in the program, including any partnerships with such institutions;

"(2) specific strategies for retaining such students in the program, such as summer sessions, internships, mentoring, and other activities;

"(3) methods that will be used to ensure that students trained pursuant to the plan will find employment in early childhood education, development and care, or violence counseling;

"(4) the goals, objectives, and timelines to be used in assessing the success of the plan and of the activities assisted under this section;

"(5) the curriculum and training leading to the degree or credential that prepares students for the careers described in the plan;

"(6) the special plans, if any, to assure that students trained pursuant to the plan will be prepared for serving in economically disadvantaged areas; and

"(7) sources of financial aid, to ensure that the training program offered pursuant to this section is available to all qualified students.

"(d) SELECTION AND PRIORITIES.—In evaluating the applications submitted under this section, the Secretary shall prescribe criteria regarding such evaluation and shall give priority in granting funds to institutions that—

"(1) prepare students for work in economically disadvantaged areas;

"(2) plan to focus their recruitment, retention, and training efforts on disadvantaged students; and

"(3) have demonstrated effectiveness in providing the type of training for which the institution seeks assistance under this section.

"(e) DURATION AND AMOUNT.—

"(1) DURATION.—A grant under this section shall be awarded for a period of not less than 3 years nor more than 5 years.

"(2) AMOUNT.—The total amount of the grant awarded under this section to any institution of higher education for any 1 year shall not be less than $500,000 nor more than $1,000,000.

"SEC. 597. EARLY CHILDHOOD STAFF TRAINING AND PROFESSIONAL ENHANCEMENT.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall award grants, on a competitive basis, to States in accordance with the provisions of this section.

"(2) DURATION.—Grants under this section shall be awarded for a period of 5 years.

"(b) APPLICATION.—A State desiring a grant pursuant to this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such form and containing or accompanied by such information or assurances as the Secretary may require.

"(c) LEAD AGENCY.—

"(1) DESIGNATION OF LEAD AGENCY.—The chief executive officer of a State, in consultation with the State educational agency, desiring to receive a grant shall designate an appropriate State agency to act as the lead agency to—

"(A) administer funds received under this section;

"(B) develop a State plan pursuant to subsection (e); and

"(C) coordinate the provision of services with other appropriate Federal, State, and local programs.

"(2) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—The lead agency shall establish an advisory committee, described in subsection (d), to assist in developing the plan required under subsection (e).

"(d) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—Each advisory committee established pursuant to subsection (c)(2) shall consist of a representative of the following agencies, institutions, organizations, divisions, programs or departments in the State to the extent such entities exist within such State:

"(1) The lead State agency responsible for administering funds received under the Child Care Development and Block Grant Act.

"(2) Other State agencies administering or regulating childcare, early childhood development or education programs.

"(3) Institutions of higher education.

"(4) Organizations representing early childhood development staff and parents.

"(5) A local child care resource and referral agency or an organization representing local child care resource and referral.

"(6) A State Head Start association.

"(7) An organization with significant experience in training in the fields of early childhood development, early care and early education.

"(8) State agencies or departments administering or regulating employment, job training, and community development programs.

"(e) STATE PLAN.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each State desiring a grant under this section shall submit, through the lead agency, a plan to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require. The Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of Health and Human Services regarding the contents of such plan.

"(2) CONTENTS.—Each plan submitted pursuant to subsection (a) shall—

"(A) identify the lead agency as described in subsection (c);

"(B) assess the training offerings and content of such offerings, amount of training required for an early childhood development staff license or certificate, compensation, recruitment and turnover of staff, and any coordination of training offerings and professional growth of early childhood development staff in the State;

"(C) describe the goals of the activities assisted under this part; and

"(D) describe how the State shall—

"(i) identify and maintain a career development path, based on a progression of roles for early childhood development staff, with each role articulated with training and different levels of responsibility and suggested compensation, in such manner as will permit an individual to qualify for a more responsible role;

"(ii) ensure that trainers of early childhood development staff in the State are qualified, licensed or certified in accordance with State law;

"(iii) describe the ways in which the State will encourage the coordination of training programs among institutions of higher education, including, if practicable, transfer of credits among institutions;

"(iv) set forth the ways in which the State will pay the costs of any assessment, credentialing, certification, licensing, training offering, training inventory, increase in staff participation in training, or other services assisted by a grant under this section;

"(v) describe the ways in which the State plans to coordinate the various State and local agencies and organizations to maximize coordination of standards and requirements for certifications, licenses, and accreditations;

"(vi) describe the ways in which the State will compile and disseminate information on—

"(I) training offerings;

"(II) requirements for admission into courses and programs;

"(III) requirements for a license, certificate, credential, or degree to which such offerings may be applied;

"(IV) funding sources available for such activities; and

"(V) the cost of training offerings; and

"(vii) describe the ways in which the State will use the funds received under this section and any other funds available to the State to carry out the activities described in the State plan.

"SEC. 598. REPORT.

"Each institution of higher education or State receiving a grant under this subpart shall submit to the Secretary program reports and evaluations at such times and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

"SEC. 599. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) TRAINING IN EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION AND VIOLENCE COUNSELING.—To carry out activities described in section 596, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(b) EARLY CHILDHOOD STAFF TRAINING AND PROFESSIONAL ENHANCEMENT.—To carry out activities described in section 597, there are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

(b) EXPIRATION DATE.—Effective July 1, 1995, the Alternative Routes to Teacher and Principal Certification and Licensure Act of 1992 (as contained in subpart 2 of part D of title V of this Act) is repealed.

TITLE VI—INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS

SEC. 601. REVISION OF TITLE VI.

Title VI of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1121 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE VI—INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS

"PART A—INTERNATIONAL AND FOREIGN LANGUAGE STUDIES

"SEC. 601. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

"(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

"(1) the well-being of the United States, its economy and long-range security, is dependent on the education and training of Americans in international and foreign language studies and on a strong research base in these areas;

"(2) knowledge of other countries and the ability to communicate in other languages is essential to the promotion of mutual understanding and cooperation among nations; and

"(3) present and future generations of Americans must be afforded the opportunity to develop to the fullest extent possible their intellectual capacities in all areas of knowledge.

"(b) PURPOSES.—It is the purpose of this part to assist in the development of knowledge, international study, resources and trained personnel, to stimulate the attainment of foreign language acquisition and fluency, to develop a pool of international experts to meet national needs, and to coordinate the programs of the Federal Government in the areas of foreign language, area and other international studies, including professional international affairs education, and research.

"SEC. 602. GRADUATE AND UNDERGRADUATE LANGUAGE AND AREA CENTERS.

"(a) NATIONAL LANGUAGE AND AREA CENTERS AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized—

"(A) to make grants to institutions of higher education, or combinations thereof, for the purpose of establishing, strengthening, and operating comprehensive language and area centers and programs; and

"(B) to make grants to such institutions or combinations for the purpose of establishing, strengthening, and operating a diverse network of undergraduate language and area centers and programs, which will be national resources for teaching of any modern foreign language, for instruction in fields needed to provide full understanding of areas, regions, or countries in which such language is commonly used, for research and training in international studies, and the international and foreign language aspects of professional and other fields of study, and for instruction and research on issues in world affairs which concern one or more countries.

"(2) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—Any such grant may be used to pay all or part of the cost of establishing or operating a center or program, including the cost of—

"(A) faculty, staff, and student travel in foreign areas, regions, or countries;

"(B) teaching and research materials;

"(C) curriculum planning and development;

"(D) bringing visiting scholars and faculty to the center to teach or to conduct research;

"(E) establishing and maintaining linkages with overseas institutions of higher education and other organizations that may contribute to the educational objectives of this section for the purpose of contributing to the teaching and research of the center or program; and

"(F) training and improvement of the staff, for the purpose of, and subject to such conditions as the Secretary finds necessary, for carrying out the objectives of this section.

"(3) GRANTS TO MAINTAIN LIBRARY COLLECTIONS.—The Secretary may make grants to centers described in paragraph (1)(A) having important library collections for the maintenance of such collections.

"(4) OUTREACH GRANTS AND SUMMER INSTITUTES.—The Secretary may make additional grants to centers described in paragraph (1)(A) for any one or combination of the following purposes:

"(A) Programs of linkage or outreach between foreign language, area studies, and other international fields and professional schools and colleges.

"(B) Programs of linkage or outreach with 2 and 4-year colleges and universities.

"(C) Programs of linkage or outreach with departments or agencies of Federal and State Governments.

"(D) Programs of linkage or outreach with the news media, business, professional, or trade associations.

"(E) Summer institutes in foreign area and other international fields designed to carry out the programs of linkage and outreach in subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of this paragraph.

"(b) STIPENDS FOR FOREIGN LANGUAGE AND AREA STUDIES.—

"(1) GRADUATE STIPENDS.—(A) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions for the purpose of paying stipends to individuals undergoing advanced training in any center or program approved by the Secretary under this part.

"(B) Students receiving stipends described in subparagraph (A) shall be individuals who are engaged in an instructional program with stated performance goals for functional foreign language use or in a program developing such performance goals, in combination with area studies, international studies, or the international aspects of a professional studies program.

"(C) Stipends awarded to graduate level recipients may include allowances for dependents and for travel for research and study in the United States and abroad.

"(2) DOCTORAL STIPENDS.—(A) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions for the purpose of paying stipends to students beginning with their third year of graduate training in any center or program approved by the Secretary under this part.

"(B) Students receiving stipends described in subparagraph (A) shall be individuals engaged in completing advanced degree requirements in foreign language, foreign area studies, or other international fields.

"(C) Stipends shall be for the purpose of completing degree requirements, such as the predissertation level studies, preparation for dissertation research including the study of less commonly taught languages, dissertation research abroad, and dissertation writing.

"(D) Students may receive stipends described in subparagraph (A) for a maximum of 4 years if such students make satisfactory progress toward completion of a degree program.

"(3) FUNDING LIMITATIONS.—The Secretary is not authorized to make awards under paragraph (2) for any fiscal year unless the amount made available under paragraph (1) for such fiscal year equals or exceeds the current services equivalent of the level of funding during fiscal year 1992 under paragraph (1).

"(c) SPECIAL RULE WITH RESPECT TO TRAVEL.—No funds may be expended under this part for undergraduate travel except in accordance with rules prescribed by the Secretary setting forth policies and procedures to assure that Federal funds made available for such travel are expended as part of a formal program of supervised study.

"SEC. 603. LANGUAGE RESOURCE CENTERS.

"(a) LANGUAGE RESOURCES CENTERS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to and enter into contracts with institutions of higher education, or combinations of such institutions, for the purpose of establishing, strengthening, and operating a small number of national language resource and training centers, which shall serve as resources to improve the capacity to teach and learn foreign languages effectively. Activities carried out by such centers may include—

"(1) the conduct of research on new and improved teaching methods, including the use of advanced educational technology;

"(2) the development of new teaching materials reflecting the use of such research in effective teaching strategies;

"(3) the development and application of performance testing appropriate to an educational setting for use as a standard and comparable measurement of skill levels in all languages;

"(4) the training of teachers in the administration and interpretation of performance tests, the use of effective teaching strategies, and the use of new technologies;

"(5) the publication of instructional materials in the less commonly taught languages; and

"(6) the widespread dissemination of research results, teaching materials, and improved pedagogical strategies to others within the postsecondary education community.

"(b) CONDITIONS FOR GRANTS.—Grants under this section shall be made on such conditions as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"SEC. 604. UNDERGRADUATE INTERNATIONAL STUDIES AND FOREIGN LANGUAGE PROGRAMS.

"(a) INCENTIVES FOR THE CREATION OF UNDERGRADUATE INTERNATIONAL STUDIES AND FOREIGN LANGUAGE PROGRAMS.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions to assist such institutions or combinations in planning, developing, and carrying out a program to improve undergraduate instruction in international studies and foreign languages. Such grants shall be awarded to institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions seeking to create new programs or curricula in area studies, foreign languages, and other international fields.

"(2) FEDERAL SHARE AND USE OF FUNDS.—Grants made under this section may be used to pay not more than 50 percent of the cost of projects and activities which are an integral part of such a program, such as—

"(A) planning for the development and expansion of undergraduate programs in international studies;

"(B) teaching, research, curriculum development, and other related activities;

"(C) training of faculty members in foreign countries;

"(D) expansion of foreign language courses;

"(E) programs under which foreign teachers and scholars may visit institutions as visiting faculty;

"(F) international education programs designed to develop or enhance linkages between two- and four-year institutions of higher education, or baccalaureate and post-baccalaureate programs or institutions;

"(G) the development of an international dimension in preservice and inservice teacher training;

"(H) the development of undergraduate study abroad programs in locations abroad in which such study opportunities are not otherwise available or which serve students for whom such opportunities are not otherwise available and which provide courses that are closely related to on-campus foreign language and international studies curricula; and

"(I) the integration of new study abroad opportunities for undergraduate students into curricula of specific degree programs.

"(3) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of the programs assisted under this subsection may be provided either in cash or in kind. Such assistance may be composed of institutional and noninstitutional funds, including State and private contributions.

"(4) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to applications from institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions that require entering students to have successfully completed at least 2 years of secondary school foreign language instruction or that require each graduating student to earn 2 years of postsecondary credit in a foreign language (or have demonstrated equivalent competence in the foreign language) or, in the case of a two-year degree granting institution, offer 2 years of postsecondary credit in a foreign language.

"(b) GRANTS TO STRENGTHEN PROGRAMS OF DEMONSTRATED EXCELLENCE IN UNDERGRADUATE INTERNATIONAL STUDIES AND FOREIGN LANGUAGE PROGRAMS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education, combinations of such institutions, or partnerships between nonprofit educational organizations and institutions of higher education to enable such institutions of higher education, combinations of such institutions or partnerships to—

"(A) strengthen programs of demonstrated excellence in area studies, foreign languages, and other international fields in order to ensure the self-sustaining maintenance and growth of such programs; and

"(B) enhance the capacity-building and dissemination functions of such programs.

"(2) FEDERAL SHARE AND USE OF GRANT FUNDS.—Grants awarded under this subsection may be used to pay not more than 50 percent of the cost of projects and activities which are an integral part of the programs described in paragraph (1), such as—"(A) teaching, research, curriculum development, and other related activities;

"(B) strengthening undergraduate majors and minors directly related to the generation of international expertise;

"(C) developing new foreign language courses, especially in languages previously not taught at such institution or combination of such institutions, and improving the quality of existing foreign language programs;

"(D) expanding library and teaching resources;

"(E) establishing linkages overseas with institutions of higher education and organizations that contribute to the educational objectives of this subsection;

"(F) developing programs designed to integrate professional and technical education with area studies, foreign languages, and other international fields;

"(G) disseminating curricular materials and program designs to other educational institutions;

"(H) integrating on-campus undergraduate curriculum with study abroad and exchange programs;

"(I) training faculty and staff in area studies, foreign languages, and other international fields;

"(J) conducting summer institutes in foreign area and other international fields to provide faculty and curriculum development, including the integration of professional and technical education with foreign area and other international studies, and to provide foreign area and other international knowledge or skills to government personnel or private sector professionals in international activities;

"(K) developing study and internship abroad programs—

"(i) in locations in which such opportunities are not otherwise available; or

"(ii) which serve students for whom such opportunities are not otherwise available; and

"(L) developing model programs to enrich or enhance the effectiveness of study abroad programs, including predeparture and post return orientation programs, integration of study abroad into the curriculum of the home institution, credit transfer, improved faculty involvement, cross-disciplinary programs, student selection and advising services, and academic advising.

"(3) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of the programs assisted under this subsection may be provided either in cash or in kind. Such assistance may be composed of institutional and noninstitutional funds, including State and private contributions.

"(4) EVALUATION CRITERIA AND REPORT.—As a condition for the award of any grant under this subsection, the Secretary may establish criteria for evaluating programs and require an annual report which evaluates the progress and performance of students in such programs.

"(c) PROGRAMS OF NATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE.—The Secretary may also award grants to public and private nonprofit agencies and organizations, including professional and scholarly associations, whenever the Secretary determines such grants will make an especially significant contribution to attaining the objective of this section.

"SEC. 605. INTENSIVE SUMMER LANGUAGE INSTITUTES.

"(a) INTENSIVE SUMMER LANGUAGE INSTITUTES AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education, or combinations of such institutions, for the purpose of establishing and conducting intensive summer language institutes.

"(2) ELIGIBLE GRANT RECIPIENTS.—Training authorized by this section shall be provided through—

"(A) institutes designed to meet the needs for intensive language training by advanced foreign language students;

"(B) institutes designed to provide professional development and improve language instruction through preservice and inservice training for language teachers; or

"(C) institutes that combine the purposes of subparagraphs (A) and (B).

"(3) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—Grants made under this section may be used for—

"(A) intensive training in critical languages;

"(B) training in neglected languages; and

"(C) stipends for students and faculty attending the institutes authorized by this section.

"(4) INSTRUCTIONAL PROGRAM.—Institutes supported under this section may provide instruction on a full-time or part-time basis to supplement instruction not fully available in centers supported under section 602.

"(b) PEER REVIEW.—Grants made under this section shall be awarded on the basis of recommendations made by peer review panels composed of broadly representative professionals.

"SEC. 606. RESEARCH; STUDIES; ANNUAL REPORT.

"(a) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary may, directly or through grants or contracts, conduct research and studies which contribute to the purposes of this part. Such research and studies may include but are not limited to—

"(1) studies and surveys to determine needs for increased or improved instruction in foreign language, area studies, or other international fields, including the demand for foreign language, area, and other international specialists in government, education, and the private sector;

"(2) studies and surveys to assess the utilization of graduates of programs supported under this title by governmental, educational, and private sector organizations and other studies assessing the outcomes and effectiveness of programs so supported;

"(3) comparative studies of the effectiveness of strategies to provide international capabilities at institutions of higher education;

"(4) research on more effective methods of providing instruction and achieving competency in foreign languages;

"(5) the development and publication of specialized materials for use in foreign language, area studies, and other international fields, or for training foreign language, area, and other international specialists; and

"(6) the application of performance tests and standards across all areas of foreign language instruction and classroom use.

"(b) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Secretary shall prepare, publish, and announce an annual report listing the books and research materials produced with assistance under this section.

"SEC. 607. PERIODICALS AND OTHER RESEARCH MATERIALS PUBLISHED OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

"(a) Program Authorized; Authorization of Appropriations.—

"(1) Program authorized.—From the amount appropriated under paragraph (2), the Secretary is authorized to award grants to institutions of higher education, public or nonprofit private library institutions, or consortia of such institutions for the acquisition of, and provision of access to, periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States.

"(2) Authorization of appropriations.—In addition to the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 610A, there are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this section.

"(b) Authorized Activities.—Grants under this section shall be used for the following purposes:

"(1) To acquire periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States which are not commonly held by American academic libraries and which are of scholarly or research importance.

"(2) To maintain in machine-readable form current bibliographic information on periodicals and other research materials thus acquired, and to enter such information into one or more of the widely available bibliographic data bases.

"(3) To preserve such periodicals and other research materials.

"(4) To make such periodicals and other research materials widely available to researchers and scholars.

"(c) Application and Preference.—

"(1) Application.—Each institution or consortium desiring a grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information and assurances as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) Preference.—The Secretary shall give preference to grant applications according to the following criteria:

"(A) The total number of library research materials in an institution's or consortium's collection.

"(B) The comprehensiveness, both current and retrospective, of the institution's or consortium's collection of periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States.

"(C) Public accessibility to the institution's or consortium's collection of periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States.

"(D) The institution's or consortium's technological capability to share its collection of periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States with other institutions of higher education, with public or nonprofit institutions, and with individual scholars.

"(E) The institution's or consortium's budget and staff capability to build, maintain, and service periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States.

"(3) Sufficient size.—The Secretary shall award grants under this section of sufficient size to enable an institution or consortium to—

"(A) substantially improve its collection of foreign periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States; and

"(B) contribute to a comprehensive national base of foreign language materials for students and scholars.

"(d) Written Agreement.—

"(1) Agreement required.—Prior to the awarding of grants authorized under subsection (c), each recipient institution or consortium shall file a formal written agreement with the Secretary which outlines their collecting responsibilities regarding periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States and ensures public access.

"(2) Funding limitation.—No funds from grants authorized under subsection (c) may be used by a recipient institution or consortium to acquire and process periodicals and other research materials published outside the United States other than that specified in the agreement filed with the Secretary under paragraph (1).

"(e) Copyright.—Nothing in this section shall be considered to amend, affect, or define the provisions of title 17, United States Code, relating to copyright.

"SEC. 608. SELECTION OF CERTAIN GRANT RECIPIENTS.

"(a) Competitive Grants.—The Secretary shall award grants under section 602 competitively on the basis of criteria that separately, but not less rigorously, evaluates the applications for comprehensive and undergraduate language and area centers and programs.

"(b) Selection Criteria.—The Secretary shall set criteria for grants awarded under section 602 by which a determination of excellence shall be made to meet the differing objectives of graduate and undergraduate institutions.

"(c) Equitable Distribution of Grants.—The Secretary shall, to the extent practicable, award grants under this part (other than section 602) in such manner as to achieve an equitable distribution of funds throughout the United States, based on the merit of a proposal with peer review by broadly representative professionals.

"SEC. 609. EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF CERTAIN FUNDS.

"(a) Selection Criteria.—The Secretary shall make excellence the criterion for selection of grants awarded under section 602.

"(b) Equitable Distribution.—To the extent practicable and consistent with the criterion of excellence, the Secretary shall award grants under this part (other than section 602) in such a manner as will achieve an equitable distribution of funds throughout the Nation.

"(c) Support for Undergraduate Education.—The Secretary shall also award grants under this part in such manner as to ensure that an appropriate portion of the funds appropriated for this part (as determined by the Secretary) are used to support undergraduate education.

"SEC. 610. AMERICAN OVERSEAS RESEARCH CENTERS.

"(a) Centers Authorized.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to and enter into contracts with any American overseas research center that is a consortium of institutions of higher education (hereafter in this section referred to as a 'center') to enable such center to promote postgraduate research, exchanges and area studies.

"(b) Use of Grants.—Grants made and contracts entered into pursuant to this section may be used to pay all or a portion of the cost of establishing or operating a center or program, including the cost of faculty and staff stipends and salaries, faculty, staff and student travel, the operation and maintenance of overseas facilities, the cost of teaching and research materials, the cost of acquisition, maintenance and preservation of library collections, the cost of bringing visiting scholars and faculty to a center to teach or to conduct research, the cost of organizing and managing conferences and the cost of publication and dissemination of material for the scholarly and general public.

"(c) Limitation.—The Secretary shall only award grants to and enter into contracts with centers under this section that—

"(1) receive more than 50 percent of their funding from public or private United States sources;

"(2) have a permanent presence in the country in which the center is located; and

"(3) are organizations described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 which are exempt from taxation under section 501(a) of such Code.

"SEC. 610A. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part $80,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"PART B—BUSINESS AND INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS

"SEC. 611. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

"(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

"(1) the future economic welfare of the United States will depend substantially on increasing international skills in the business and educational community and creating an awareness among the American public of the internationalization of our economy;

"(2) concerted efforts are necessary to engage business schools, language and area study programs, professional international affairs education programs, public and private sector organizations, and United States business in a mutually productive relationship which benefits the Nation's future economic interests;

"(3) few linkages presently exist between the manpower and information needs of United States business and the international education, language training and research capacities of institutions of higher education in the United States, and public and private organizations; and

"(4) organizations such as world trade councils, world trade clubs, chambers of commerce and State departments of commerce are not adequately used to link universities and business for joint venture exploration and program development.

"(b) Purposes.—It is the purpose of this part—

"(1) to enhance the broad objective of this Act by increasing and promoting the Nation's capacity for international understanding and economic enterprise through the provision of suitable international education and training for business personnel in various stages of professional development; and

"(2) to promote institutional and noninstitutional educational and training activities that will contribute to the ability of United States business to prosper in an international economy.

"SEC. 612. CENTERS FOR INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS EDUCATION.

"(a) Program Authorized.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education, or combinations of such institutions, to pay the Federal share of the cost of planning, establishing and operating centers for international business education which—

"(A) will be national resources for the teaching of improved business techniques, strategies, and methodologies which emphasize the international context in which business is transacted;

"(B) will provide instruction in critical foreign languages and international fields needed to provide understanding of the cultures and customs of United States trading partners; and

"(C) will provide research and training in the international aspects of trade, commerce, and other fields of study.

"(2) Special rule.—In addition to providing training to students enrolled in the institution of higher education in which a center is located, such centers shall serve as regional resources to businesses proximately located by offering programs and providing research designed to meet the international training needs of such businesses. Such centers shall also serve other faculty, students, and institutions of higher education located within their region.

"(b) AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES.—Each grant made under this section may be used to pay the Federal share of the cost of planning, establishing or operating a center, including the cost of—

"(1) faculty and staff travel in foreign areas, regions, or countries;

"(2) teaching and research materials;

"(3) curriculum planning and development;

"(4) bringing visiting scholars and faculty to the center to teach or to conduct research; and

"(5) training and improvement of the staff, for the purpose of, and subject to such conditions as the Secretary finds necessary for, carrying out the objectives of this section.

"(c) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) MANDATORY ACTIVITIES.—Programs and activities to be conducted by centers assisted under this section shall include—

"(A) interdisciplinary programs which incorporate foreign language and international studies training into business, finance, management, communications systems, and other professional curricula;

"(B) interdisciplinary programs which provide business, finance, management, communications systems, and other professional training for foreign language and international studies faculty and advanced degree candidates;

"(C) evening or summer programs, such as intensive language programs, available to members of the business community and other professionals which are designed to develop or enhance their international skills, awareness, and expertise;

"(D) collaborative programs, activities, or research involving other institutions of higher education, local educational agencies, professional associations, businesses, firms, or combinations thereof, to promote the development of international skills, awareness, and expertise among current and prospective members of the business community and other professionals;

"(E) research designed to strengthen and improve the international aspects of business and professional education and to promote integrated curricula; and

"(F) research designed to promote the international competitiveness of American businesses and firms, including those not currently active in international trade.

"(2) PERMISSIBLE ACTIVITIES.—Programs and activities to be conducted by centers assisted under this section may include—

"(A) the establishment of overseas internship programs for students and faculty designed to provide training and experience in international business activities, except that no Federal funds provided under this section may be used to pay wages or stipends to any participant who is engaged in compensated employment as part of an internship program;

"(B) the establishment of linkages overseas with institutions of higher education and other organizations that contribute to the educational objectives of this section;

"(C) summer institutes in international business, foreign area studies, and other international studies designed to carry out the purposes of subparagraph (A) of this paragraph;

"(D) the development of opportunities for business students to study abroad in locations which are important to the existing and future economic well-being of the United States;

"(E) outreach activities or consortia with business programs located at other institutions of higher education for the purpose of providing expertise regarding the internationalization of such programs, such as assistance in research, curriculum development, faculty development, or educational exchange programs; and

"(F) other eligible activities prescribed by the Secretary.

"(d) ADVISORY COUNCIL.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—In order to be eligible for assistance under this section, an institution of higher education, or combination of such institutions, shall establish a center advisory council which will conduct extensive planning prior to the establishment of a center concerning the scope of the center's activities and the design of its programs.

"(2) MEMBERSHIP ON ADVISORY COUNCIL.—The center advisory council shall include—

"(A) one representative of an administrative department or office of the institution of higher education;

"(B) one faculty representative of the business or management school or department of such institution;

"(C) one faculty representative of the international studies or foreign language school or department of such institution;

"(D) one faculty representative of another professional school or department of such institution, as appropriate;

"(E) one or more representative of local or regional businesses or firms;

"(F) one representative appointed by the Governor of the State in which the institution of higher education is located whose normal responsibilities include official oversight or involvement in State-sponsored trade-related activities or programs; and

"(G) such other individuals as the institution of higher education deems appropriate.

"(3) MEETINGS.—In addition to the initial planning activities required under subsection (d)(1), the center advisory council shall meet not less than once each year after the establishment of the center to assess and advise on the programs and activities conducted by the center.

"(e) GRANT DURATION; FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(1) DURATION OF GRANTS.—The Secretary shall make grants under this section for a minimum of 3 years unless the Secretary determines that the provision of grants of shorter duration is necessary to carry out the objectives of this section.

"(2) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of planning, establishing and operating centers under this section shall be—

"(A) not more than 90 percent for the first year in which Federal funds are received;

"(B) not more than 70 percent for the second such year; and

"(C) not more than 50 percent for the third such year and for each such year thereafter.

"(3) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of planning, establishing, and operating centers under this section may be provided either in cash or in-kind.

"(4) WAIVER OF NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—In the case of an institution of higher education receiving a grant under this part and conducting outreach or consortia activities with another institution of higher education in accordance with section 612(c)(2)(E), the Secretary may waive a portion of the requirements for the non-Federal share required in paragraph (2) equal to the amount provided by the institution of higher education receiving such grant to such other institution of higher education for carrying out such outreach or consortia activities. Any such waiver shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary deems necessary for carrying out the purposes of this section.

"(f) GRANT CONDITIONS.—Grants under this section shall be made on such conditions as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out the objectives of this section. Such conditions shall include—

"(1) evidence that the institution of higher education, or combination of such institutions, will conduct extensive planning prior to the establishment of a center concerning the scope of the center's activities and the design of its programs in accordance with subsection (d)(1);

"(2) assurance of ongoing collaboration in the establishment and operation of the center by faculty of the business, management, foreign language, international studies, professional international affairs, and other professional schools or departments, as appropriate;

"(3) assurance that the education and training programs of the center will be open to students concentrating in each of these respective areas, as appropriate; and

"(4) assurance that the institution of higher education, or combination of such institutions, will use the assistance provided under this section to supplement and not to supplant activities conducted by institutions of higher education described in subsection (c)(1).

"SEC. 613. EDUCATION AND TRAINING PROGRAMS.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary shall make grants to, and enter into contracts with, institutions of higher education to pay the Federal share of the cost of programs designed to promote linkages between such institutions and the American business community engaged in international economic activity. Each program assisted under this section shall both enhance the international academic programs of institutions of higher education and provide appropriate services to the business community which will expand its capacity to engage in commerce abroad.

"(b) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—Eligible activities to be conducted by institutions of higher education pursuant to grants or contracts awarded under this section shall include—

"(1) innovation and improvement in international education curricula to serve the needs of the business community, including development of new programs for nontraditional, mid-career, or part-time students;

"(2) development of programs to inform the public of increasing international economic interdependence and the role of American business within the international economic system;

"(3) internationalization of curricula at the junior and community college level, and at undergraduate and graduate schools of business;

"(4) development of area studies programs, and interdisciplinary international programs;

"(5) establishment of export education programs through cooperative arrangements with regional and world trade centers and councils, and with bilateral and multilateral trade associations;

"(6) research for and development of specialized teaching materials, including language materials, and facilities appropriate to business-oriented students;

"(7) establishment of student and faculty fellowships and internships for training and education in international business activities;

"(8) development of opportunities for junior business and other professional school faculty to acquire or strengthen international skills and perspectives;

"(9) development of research programs on issues of common interest to institutions of higher education and private sector organizations and associations engaged in or promoting international economic activity;

"(10) the establishment of internships overseas to enable foreign language students to develop their foreign language skills and knowledge of foreign cultures and societies;

"(11) the establishment of linkages overseas with institutions of higher education and organizations that contribute to the educational objectives of this section; and

"(12) summer institutes in international business, foreign area and other international studies designed to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(c) APPLICATIONS.—No grant may be made and no contract may be entered into under this section unless an institution of higher education submits an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall be accompanied by a copy of the agreement entered into by the institution of higher education with a business enterprise, trade organization or association engaged in international economic activity, or a combination or consortium of such enterprises, organizations or associations, for the purpose of establishing, developing, improving or expanding activities eligible for assistance under subsection (b) of this section. Each such application shall contain assurances that the institution of higher education will use the assistance provided under this section to supplement and not to supplant activities conducted by institutions of higher education described in subsection (b).

"(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share under this part for each fiscal year shall not exceed 50 percent of the cost of such program.

"SEC. 614. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) CENTERS FOR INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS EDUCATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated $11,000,000 for the fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of section 612.

"(b) EDUCATION AND TRAINING PROGRAMS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $7,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as may be necessary for the 4 succeeding fiscal years, to carry out the provisions of section 613.

"PART C—INSTITUTE FOR INTERNATIONAL PUBLIC POLICY

"SEC. 621. MINORITY FOREIGN SERVICE PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary is authorized to award a grant, on a competitive basis, to an eligible recipient to enable such recipient to establish an Institute for International Public Policy (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Institute'). The Institute shall conduct a program to significantly increase the numbers of African Americans and other underrepresented minorities in the international service, including private international voluntary organizations and the foreign service of the United States. Such program shall include a program for such students to study abroad in their junior year, fellowships for graduate study, internships, intensive academic programs such as summer institutes, or intensive language training.

"(b) DEFINITION OF ELIGIBLE RECIPIENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For the purose of this part, the term 'eligible recipient' means a consortium consisting of 1 or more of the following entities:

"(A) An institution eligible for assistance under part B of title III of this Act.

"(B) An institution of higher education which serves substantial numbers of African American or other underrepresented minority students.

"(C) An institution of higher education with programs in training foreign service professionals.

"(2) HOST INSTITUTION.—Each eligible recipient receiving a grant under this section shall designate an institution of higher education as the host institution for the Institute.

"(c) APPLICATION.—Each eligible recipient desiring a grant under this section shall submit an application at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(d) DURATION.—Grants made pursuant to this section shall be awarded for a period not to exceed 5 years.

"(e) MATCH REQUIRED.—The eligible recipient of a grant under this section shall contribute to the conduct of the program supported by the grant an amount from non-Federal sources equal to at least one-fourth the amount of the grant, which contribution may be in cash or in kind.

"SEC. 622. JUNIOR YEAR ABROAD PROGRAM.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—The Institute shall conduct, by grant or contract, a junior year abroad program. The junior year abroad program shall be open to eligible students at institutions of higher education, including historically Black colleges and universities as defined in section 322 of this Act, tribally controlled Indian community colleges as defined in the Tribally Controlled Community College Assistance Act of 1978, and other institutions of higher education with significant minority student populations. Eligible student expenses shall be shared by the Institute and the institution at which the student is in attendance. Each student may spend not more than 9 months abroad in a program of academic study, as well as social, familial and political interactions designed to foster an understanding of and familiarity with the language, culture, economics and governance of the host country.

"(b) DEFINITION OF ELIGIBLE STUDENT.—For the purpose of this section, the term 'eligible student' means a student that is—

"(1) enrolled full-time in a baccalaureate degree program at an institution of higher education; and

"(2) entering the third year of study at an institution of higher education which nominates such student for participation in the junior year abroad program.

"(c) SPECIAL RULE.—An institution of higher education desiring to send a student on the junior year abroad program shall enter into a Memorandum of Understanding with the Institute under which such institution of higher education agrees to—

"(1) provide the requisite academic preparation for students participating in the junior year abroad or internship programs;

"(2) pay one-half the cost of each student it nominates for participation in the junior year abroad program; and

"(3) meet such other requirements as the Secretary may from time to time, by regulation, reasonably require.

"SEC. 623. MASTERS DEGREE IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS.

"The Institute shall provide, in cooperation with the other members participating in the eligible recipient consortium, a program of study leading to a masters degree in international relations. The masters degree program designed by the consortia shall be reviewed and approved by the Secretary. The Institute may grant fellowships in an amount not to exceed the level of support comparable to that provided by the National Science Foundation graduate fellowships, except such amount shall be adjusted as necessary so as not to exceed the fellow's demonstrated level of need according to measurement of need approved by the Secretary. A fellowship recipient shall agree to undertake full-time study and to enter the international service (including work with private international voluntary organizations) or foreign service of the United States.

"SEC. 624. INTERNSHIPS.

"The Institute shall enter into agreements with historically Black colleges and universities as defined in section 322 of this Act, tribally controlled Indian community colleges as defined in the Tribally Controlled Community College Assistance Act of 1978, other institutions of higher education with significant numbers of minority students, and institutions of higher education with programs in training foreign service professionals, to provide academic year internships during the junior and senior year and summer internships following the sophomore and junior academic years, by work placements with an international voluntary or government organizations or agencies, including the Agency for International Development, the United States Information Agency, the International Monetary Fund, the National Security Council, the Organization of American States, the Export-Import Bank, the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, the Department of State, Office of the United States Trade Representative, the World Bank, and the United Nations.

"SEC. 625. REPORT.

"The Institute shall annually prepare a report on the activities of the Institute and shall submit such report to the Secretary of Education and the Secretary of State.

"SEC. 626. GIFTS AND DONATIONS.

"The Institute is authorized to receive money and other property donated, bequeathed, or devised to the Institute with or without a condition of restriction, for the purpose of providing financial support for the fellowships or underwriting the cost of the Junior Year Abroad Program. All funds or property given, devised, or bequeathed shall be retained in a separate account, and an accounting of those funds and property shall be included in the annual report described in section 625.

"SEC. 627. AUTHORIZATION.

"There is authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this part.

"PART D—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"SEC. 631. DEFINITIONS.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this title—

"(1) the term 'area studies' means a program of comprehensive study of the aspects of a society or societies, including study of its history, culture, economy, politics, international relations and languages;

"(2) the term 'international business' means profit-oriented business relationships conducted across national boundaries and includes activities such as the buying and selling of goods, investments in industries, the licensing of processes, patents and trademarks, and the supply of services;

"(3) the term 'export education' means educating, teaching and training to provide general knowledge and specific skills pertinent to the selling of goods and services to other countries, including knowledge of market conditions, financial arrangements, laws and procedures;

"(4) the term 'internationalization of curricula' means the incorporation of international or comparative perspectives in existing courses of study or the addition of new components to the curricula to provide an international context for American business education;

"(5) the term 'comprehensive language and area center' means an administrative unit of a university that contributes significantly to the national interest in advanced research and scholarship, employs a critical mass of scholars in diverse disciplines related to a geographic concentration, offers intensive language training in languages of its area specialization, maintains important library collections related to the area, and makes training available in language and area studies to a graduate, postgraduate, and undergraduate clientele; and

"(6) the term 'undergraduate language and area center' means an administrative unit of an institution of higher education, including but not limited to 4-year colleges, that contributes significantly to the national interest through the education and training of students who matriculate into advanced language and area studies programs, professional school programs, or incorporates substantial international and foreign language content into baccalaureate degree programs, engages in research, curriculum development and community outreach activities designed to broaden international and foreign language knowledge, employs faculty with strong language, area, and international studies credentials, maintains library holdings, including basic reference works, journals, and works in translation, and makes training available predominantly to undergraduate students;

"(7) the term 'critical languages' means each of the languages contained in the list of critical languages designated by the Secretary pursuant to section 212(d) of the Education for Economic Security Act (50 Fed. Reg. 149, 31413), except that, in the implementation of this definition, the Secretary may set priorities according to the purposes of this title; and

"(8) the term 'institution of higher education' means, in addition to institutions which meet the definition of section 1201(a) of this Act, institutions which meet the requirements of section 1201(a) of this Act except that (1) they are not located in the United States, and (2) they apply for assistance under this title in consortia with institutions which meet the definition of 1201(a) of this Act.

"(b) SPECIAL CONDITIONS.—All references to individuals or organizations, unless the context otherwise requires, mean individuals who are citizens or permanent residents of the United States or organizations which are organized or incorporated in the United States.

"SEC. 632. PRESERVATION OF PRE-1992 PROGRAMS.

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, amendments to this title establishing new programs or expanding existing programs enacted pursuant to the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 shall not be funded in fiscal year 1993, or the 4 succeeding fiscal years, unless and until Congress enacts appropriations for programs under this title enacted prior to such Amendments at a level no less than the level of funding in effect for such preexisting programs for fiscal year 1992.

TITLE VII—CONSTRUCTION, RECONSTRUCTION, AND RENOVATION OF ACADEMIC FACILITIES

SEC. 701. PURPOSES.

Section 701 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132a) is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1) of subsection (a)—

(A) by inserting a period after "instructional instrumentation and equipment";

(B) by striking "if the primary purpose of such assistance is to enable such institutions—" in subsection (a) and inserting the following: "In making such grants, the Secretary shall include assistance to enable institutions—";

(2) in subsection (a)(1)—

(A) by striking subparagraphs (A) and (B) and inserting the following:

"(A) Federal, State, and local laws requiring removal of barriers to full participation by individuals with disabilities;";

(B) by redesignating subparagraphs (C) and (D) as subparagraphs (B) and (C), respectively; and

(3) in subsection (a)(4), by inserting "(including renovation of libraries to promote the use of new technologies and preservation of library materials)" after "libraries".

SEC. 702. PRIOR RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS.

Section 702 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132a–1) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 702. PRIOR RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS.

"(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1993 and for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to pay obligations incurred prior to 1987 under parts C and D of this title, as such parts were in effect before the effective date of the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1992.

"(b) LEGAL RESPONSIBILITIES.—Except as provided in section 783, all entities with continuing obligations incurred under parts A, B, C, and D of this title, as such parts were in effect before the effective date of the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1992, shall be subject to the requirements of such part as in effect before the effective date of the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1992.".

SEC. 703. IMPROVEMENT OF ACADEMIC AND LIBRARY FACILITIES.

Part A of title VII of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132b et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART A—IMPROVEMENT OF ACADEMIC AND LIBRARY FACILITIES

"SEC. 711. SHORT TITLE.

"This part may be cited as the 'Higher Education Facilities Act of 1992'.

"SEC. 712. FINDINGS.

"The Congress finds that—

"(1) over the past 50 years institutions of higher education have expanded dramatically, while at the same time traditional sources of funding facilities maintenance and repair have declined and even disappeared in some instances;

"(2) in order to meet the rising cost of educating students, resulting mainly from inflation and the higher costs of research, many colleges and universities made the choice to defer renovations and improvements;

"(3) overall, the need for capital investment by institutions of higher education has been estimated to exceed $60,000,000,000;

"(4) the deterioration of facilities has caused valuable research experiments and programs to be postponed, delayed or canceled; and

"(5) the United States' competitive position within the world economy is vulnerable if the necessary research facilities are not available to provide advanced training in the fields of science and technology.

"SEC. 713. DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE.

"(a) COMPETITIVE OR FORMULA DISTRIBUTION.—

"(1) COMPETITIVE GRANTS.—If the amount appropriated pursuant to section 716 for a fiscal year is less than $50,000,000, then the Secretary shall award grants under this part on a competitive basis in accordance with subsection (h) to institutions of higher education to carry out the activities described in section 714.

"(2) ALLOTMENT FORMULA.—

"(A) FORMULA.—If the amount appropriated pursuant to section 716 for a fiscal year is equal to or greater than $50,000,000, then the Secretary shall allot to each State higher education agency with an approved application—

"(i) 50 percent of such funds on the basis of the population of the State compared to the population of all States; and

"(ii) 50 percent of such funds on the basis of the number of students attending institutions of higher education within the State compared to the number of students attending institutions of higher education in all States.

"(B) USE OF FORMULA GRANTS.—Each State higher education agency receiving an allotment pursuant to subparagraph (A), shall use such allotment to award grants, on a competitive basis, to institutions of higher education within the State to enable such institutions to carry out the activities described in section 714.

"(C) REALLOTMENT.—Except as provided in subsection (f), any amount that the Secretary determines will not be available to a State higher education agency because such agency elects not to participate in the program assisted under this part shall be reallotted to other States in the same manner as the original allotments were made.

"(b) MATCHING REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) STATE MATCHING REQUIREMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In order to receive an allotment under subsection (a)(2)(A), each State higher education agency shall provide matching funds equal to 25 percent of the amount of any allotment received pursuant to such subsection. The Secretary may waive the requirements of the preceding sentence if the State can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such matching requirement would present a severe financial hardship to the State.

"(B) CASH REQUIREMENT.—Each State higher education agency receiving funds under this part shall only provide matching funds pursuant to paragraph (1) in cash.

"(2) INSTITUTIONAL MATCHING REQUIREMENT.—In order to receive a grant under subsection (a)(1) or (a)(2)(B), each eligible institution shall provide matching funds equal to 50 percent of the amount of any grant received pursuant to such subsection. Such matching funds may be provided by the State higher education agency or the institution of higher education.

"(c) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants pursuant to subsection (a), the Secretary or each State higher education agency shall give priority to institutions of higher education that serve large numbers or percentages of minority or disadvantaged students.

"(d) EQUITABLE PARTICIPATION.—In awarding grants pursuant to subsection (a), the Secretary or each State higher education agency shall ensure the equitable participation of both public and private eligible institutions within the State.

"(e) SPECIAL RULE.—If the Secretary determines that any eligible institution within a State has received, within the 2 preceding fiscal years, a direct, noncompetitive award of Federal funds for facilities construction, renovation, improvement or repair, then the eligible institution shall be ineligible to receive assistance under this part.

"(f) USE FOR MAINTENANCE.—An amount less than or equal to 10 percent of that portion of funds awarded under this part which is allotted by the recipient to meet costs of—

"(1) research and instructional instrumentation and equipment; and

"(2) equipment and structural changes necessary to ensure the proper functioning of such research or instructional instrumentation and equipment; may be allocated by the recipient for maintenance of equipment and changes described in paragraphs (1) and (2). Part or all of this percentage may also be applied to costs of upgrading such equipment and structural changes within 3 years of the date of initial use, if the recipient deems such upgrading essential to the continued usefulness of such research or instructional instrumentation and equipment.

"(g) SUPPLEMENTATION.—Grants awarded pursuant to subsection (a) shall be used to supplement and not supplant other Federal, State, and local funds available for improvement of academic and library facilities.

"(h) PEER REVIEW REQUIRED.—In making grants under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary shall utilize a national peer review panel. The panel shall be broadly representative of all types and classes of institutions of higher education in the United States.

"SEC. 714. USE OF FUNDS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Institutions of higher education shall use funds awarded under this part for any one or more of the following activities:

"(1) The improvement, renovation, and repair of academic facilities.

"(2) The improvement and renovation of library facilities.

"(3) The improvement and renovation of broadcast, cable, and satellite interconnection equipment for use in postsecondary educational television and radio programming, including interactive technology and communications.

"(4) The construction of academic and library facilities if the State determines such construction necessary.

"SEC. 715. APPLICATION.

"(a) State Higher Education Agency.—

"(1) Application.—Each State higher education agency desiring an allotment pursuant to section 713(a)(2)(A) shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) Contents.—Each application described in paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) describe the activities and services for which assistance is sought;

"(B) contain assurances that the State higher education agency will comply with the matching requirement described in section 713(b)(1);

"(C) contain a description and the amount of any direct, noncompetitive appropriation of funds for facilities construction, renovation, improvement or repair which the State provides to any institution of higher education within the State; and

"(D) contain such other assurances as the Secretary determines necessary to ensure compliance with the provisions of this part.

"(b) Institutions of Higher Education.—

"(1) State grants.—

"(A) Application.—Each institution of higher education desiring a grant pursuant to section 713(a)(1) or 713(a)(2)(B) shall submit an application to the Secretary or the State higher education agency, as appropriate, at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary or such agency may reasonably require.

"(B) Contents.—Each application described in paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) describe the activities and services for which assistance is sought;

"(B) contain assurances that the eligible institution will comply with the matching requirement described in section 713(b)(2); and

"(C) contain such other assurances as the Secretary or State higher education agency determines necessary to ensure compliance with the provisions of this part.

"SEC. 716. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $350,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this part.".

SEC. 704. HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY CAPITAL FINANCING.

Part B of title VII of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132c et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART B—HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY CAPITAL FINANCING

"SEC. 721. FINDINGS.

"The Congress finds that—

"(1) a significant part of the Federal mission in education has been to attain equal opportunity in higher education for low-income, educationally disadvantaged Americans and African Americans;

"(2) the Nation's historically Black colleges and universities have played a prominent role in American history and have an unparalleled record of fostering the development of African American youth by recognizing their potential, enhancing their academic and technical skills, and honing their social and political skills through higher education;

"(3) the academic and residential facilities on the campuses of all historically Black colleges and universities have suffered from neglect, deferred maintenance and are in need of capital improvements in order to provide appropriate settings for learning and social development through higher education;

"(4) due to their small enrollments, limited endowments and other financial factors normally considered by lenders in construction financing, historically Black colleges and universities often lack access to the sources of funding necessary to undertake the necessary capital improvements through borrowing and bond financing;

"(5) despite their track record of long-standing and remarkable institutional longevity and viability, historically Black colleges and universities often lack the financial resources necessary to gain access to traditional sources of capital financing such as bank loans and bond financing; and

"(6) Federal assistance to facilitate low-cost capital basis for historically Black colleges and universities will enable such colleges and universities to continue and expand their educational mission and enhance their significant role in American higher education.

"SEC. 722. DEFINITIONS.

"For the purposes of this part:

"(1) The term 'eligible institution' means a 'part B institution' as that term is defined in section 322(2) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1061(2)).

"(2) The term 'loan' means a loan made to an eligible institution under the provisions of this part and pursuant to an agreement with the Secretary.

"(3) The term 'qualified bond' means any obligation issued by the designated bonding authority at the direction of the Secretary, the net proceeds of which are loaned to an eligible institution for the purposes described in section 723(b).

"(4) The term 'funding' means any payment under this part from the Secretary to the eligible institution or its assignee in fulfillment of the insurance obligations of the Secretary pursuant to an agreement under section 723.

"(5) The term 'capital project' means, subject to section 724(b) the repair, renovation, or, in exceptional circumstances, the construction or acquisition, of—

"(A) any classroom facility, library, laboratory facility, dormitory (including dining facilities) or other facility customarily used by colleges and universities for instructional or research purposes or for housing students, faculty, and staff;

"(B) instructional equipment, research instrumentation, and any capital equipment or fixture related to facilities described in subparagraph (A);

"(C) any other facility, equipment or fixture which is essential to the maintaining of accreditation of the member institution by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association; and

"(D) any real property or interest therein underlying facilities described in subparagraph (A) or (C).

"(6) The term 'interest' includes accredited value or any other payment constituting interest on an obligation.

"(7) The term 'outstanding', when used with respect to bonds, shall not include bonds the payment of which shall have been provided for by the irrevocable deposit in trust of obligations maturing as to principal and interest in such amounts and at such times as will ensure the availability of sufficient moneys to make payments on such bonds.

"(8) The term 'designated bonding authority' means the private, for-profit corporation selected by the Secretary pursuant to section 725(1) for the purpose of issuing taxable construction bonds in furtherance of the purposes of this part.

"(9) The term 'Advisory Board' means the Advisory Board established by section 727 of this part.

"SEC. 723. FEDERAL INSURANCE FOR BONDS.

"(a) General Rule.—Subject to the limitations in section 724, the Secretary is authorized to enter into insurance agreements to provide financial insurance to guarantee the full payment of principal and interest on qualified bonds upon the conditions set forth in subsections (b), (c) and (d).

"(b) Responsibilities of the Designated Bonding Authority.—The Secretary may not enter into an insurance agreement described in subsection (a) unless the Secretary designates a qualified bonding authority in accordance with sections 725(1) and 726 and the designated bonding authority agrees in such agreement to—

"(1) use the proceeds of the qualified bonds, less costs of issuance not to exceed 2 percent of the principal amount thereof, to make loans to eligible institutions or for deposit into an escrow account for repayment of the bonds;

"(2) provide in each loan agreement with respect to a loan that not less than 95 percent of the proceeds of the loan will be used—

"(A) to finance the repair, renovation, and, in exceptional cases, construction or acquisition, of a capital project; or

"(B) to refinance an obligation the proceeds of which were used to finance the repair, renovation, and, in exceptional cases, construction or acquisition, of a capital project;

"(3)(A) charge such interest on loans, and provide for such a schedule of repayments of loans, as will, upon the timely repayment of the loans, provide adequate and timely funds for the payment of principal and interest on the bonds; and

"(B) require that any payment on a loan expected to be necessary to make a payment of principal and interest on the bonds be due not less than 60 days prior to the date of the payment on the bonds for which such loan payment is expected to be needed;

"(4) prior to the making of any loan, provide for a credit review of the institution receiving the loan and assure the Secretary that, on the basis of such credit review, it is reasonable to anticipate that the institution receiving the loan will be able to repay the loan in a timely manner pursuant to the terms thereof;

"(5) provide in each loan agreement with respect to a loan that, if a delinquency on such loan results in a funding under the insurance agreement, the institution obligated on such loan shall repay the Secretary, upon terms to be determined by the Secretary, for such funding;

"(6) assign any loans to the Secretary, upon the demand of the Secretary, if a delinquency on such loan has required a funding under the insurance agreement;

"(7) in the event of a delinquency on a loan, engage in such collection efforts as the Secretary shall require for a period of not less than 45 days prior to requesting a funding under the insurance agreement;

"(8) establish an escrow account—

"(A) into which each eligible institution shall deposit 10 percent of the proceeds of any loan made under this part; and

"(B) the balance of which—

"(i) shall be available to the Secretary to pay principal and interest on the bonds in the event of delinquency in loan repayment; and

"(ii) when all bonds under this part are retired or canceled, shall be divided among the eligible institutions making deposits into such account on the basis of the amount of each such institution's deposit;

"(9) provide in each loan agreement with respect to a loan that, if a delinquency on such loan results in amounts being withdrawn from the escrow account to pay principal and interest on bonds, subsequent payments on such loan shall be available to replenish such escrow account;

"(10) comply with the limitations set forth in section 724 of this part; and

"(11) make loans only to eligible institutions under this part in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary to ensure that loans are fairly allocated among as many eligible institutions as possible, consistent with making loans of amounts that will permit capital projects of sufficient size and scope to significantly contribute to the educational program of the eligible institutions.

"(c) ADDITIONAL AGREEMENT PROVISIONS.—Any insurance agreement described in subsection (a) of this section shall provide as follows:

"(1) The payment of principal and interest on bonds shall be insured by the Secretary until such time as such bonds have been retired or canceled.

"(2) The Federal liability for delinquencies and default for bonds guaranteed under this part shall only become effective upon the exhaustion of all the funds held in the escrow account described in subsection (b)(8).

"(3) The Secretary shall create a letter of credit authorizing the Department of the Treasury to disburse funds to the designated bonding authority or its assignee.

"(4) The letter of credit shall be drawn upon in the amount determined by paragraph (5) of this subsection upon the certification of the designated bonding authority to the Secretary or the Secretary's designee that there is a delinquency on 1 or more loans and there are insufficient funds available from loan repayments and the escrow account to make a scheduled payment of principal and interest on the bonds.

"(5) Upon receipt by the Secretary or the Secretary's designee of the certification described in paragraph (4) of this subsection, the designated bonding authority may draw a funding under the letter of credit in an amount equal to—

"(A) the amount required to make the next scheduled payment of principal and interest on the bonds, less

"(B) the amount available to the designated bonding authority from loan repayments and the escrow account.

"(6) All funds provided under the letter of credit shall be paid to the designated bonding authority within 2 business days following receipt of the certification described in paragraph (4).

"(d) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT PROVISIONS.—Subject to section 723(c)(1) the full faith and credit of the United States is pledged to the payment of all funds which may be required to be paid under the provisions of this section.

"SEC. 724. LIMITATIONS ON FEDERAL INSURANCE FOR BONDS ISSUED BY THE DESIGNATED BONDING AUTHORITY.

"(a) LIMIT ON AMOUNT.—At no time shall the aggregate principal amount of outstanding bonds insured under this part together with any accrued unpaid interest thereon exceed $375,000,000, of which—

"(1) not more than $250,000,000 shall be used for loans to eligible institutions that are private historically Black colleges and universities; and

"(2) not more than $125,000,000 shall be used for loans to eligible institutions which are historically Black public colleges and universities. For purposes of paragraphs (1) and (2), Lincoln University of Pennsylvania is an historically Black public institution. No institution of higher education that has received assistance under section 8 of the Act of March 2, 1867 (20 U.S.C. 123) shall be eligible to receive assistance under this part.

"(b) LIMITATION ON CREDIT AUTHORITY.—The authority of the Secretary to issue letters of credit and insurance under this part is effective only to the extent provided in advance by appropriations Acts.

"(c) RELIGIOUS ACTIVITY PROHIBITION.—No loan may be made under this part for any educational program, activity or service related to sectarian instruction or religious worship or provided by a school or department of divinity or to an institution in which a substantial portion of its functions is subsumed in a religious mission.

"(d) DISCRIMINATION PROHIBITION.—No loan may be made to an institution under this part if the institution discriminates on account of race, color, religion, national origin, sex (to the extent provided in title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972), or disabling condition; except that the prohibition with respect to religion shall not apply to an institution which is controlled by or which is closely identified with the tenets of a particular religious organization if the application of this section would not be consistent with the religious tenets of such organization.

"SEC. 725. AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY.

"In the performance of, and with respect to, the functions vested in the Secretary by this part, the Secretary—

"(1) shall, within 120 days of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, publish in the Federal Register a notice and request for proposals for any private for-profit organization or entity wishing to serve as the designated bonding authority under this part, which notice shall—

"(A) specify the time and manner for submission of proposals; and

"(B) specify any information, qualifications, criteria, or standards the Secretary determines to be necessary to evaluate the financial capacity and administrative capability of any applicant to carry out the responsibilities of the designated bonding authority under this part;

"(2) may sue and be sued in any court of record of a State having general jurisdiction or in any district court of the United States, and such district courts shall have jurisdiction of civil actions arising under this part without regard to the amount in controversy, and any action instituted under this part without regard to the amount in controversy, and any action instituted under this section by or against the Secretary shall survive notwithstanding any change in the person occupying the office of the Secretary or any vacancy in such office;

"(3)(A) may foreclose on any property and bid for and purchase at any foreclosure, or any other sale, any property in connection with which the Secretary has been assigned a loan pursuant to this part; and

"(B) in the event of such an acquisition, notwithstanding any other provisions of law relating to the acquisition, handling, or disposal of real property by the United States, complete, administer, remodel and convert, dispose of, lease, and otherwise deal with, such property, except that—

"(i) such action shall not preclude any other action by the Secretary to recover any deficiency in the amount of a loan assigned to the Secretary; and

"(ii) any such acquisition of real property shall not deprive any State or political subdivision thereof of its civil or criminal jurisdiction in and over such property or impair the civil rights under the State or local laws of the inhabitants on such property;

"(4) may sell, exchange, or lease real or personal property and securities or obligations; and

"(5) may include in any contract such other covenants, conditions, or provisions necessary to ensure that the purposes of this part will be achieved.

"SEC. 726. PROHIBITION.

"No institution that receives a loan under this part shall also receive a grant under part A of this title or a loan under part D of this title.

"SEC. 727. HBCU CAPITAL FINANCING ADVISORY BOARD.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT AND PURPOSE.—There is established within the Department of Education, the Historically Black College and Universities Capital Financing Advisory Board (hereinafter in this part referred to as the 'Advisory Board') which shall provide advice and counsel to the Secretary and the designated bonding authority as to the most effective and efficient means of implementing construction financing on African American college campuses, and advise the Congress of the United States regarding the progress made in implementing this part. The Advisory Board shall meet with the Secretary at least twice each year to advise him as to the capital needs of historically Black colleges and universities, how those needs can be met through the program authorized by this part, and what additional steps might be taken to improve the operation and implementation of the construction financing program.

"(b) BOARD MEMBERSHIP.—

"(1) COMPOSITION.—The Advisory Board shall be appointed by the Secretary and shall be composed of 9 members as follows:

"(A) The Secretary or the Secretary's designee.

"(B) Three members who are presidents of private historically Black colleges or universities.

"(C) Two members who are presidents of public historically Black colleges or universities.

"(D) The president of the United Negro College Fund, Inc.

"(E) The president of the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education.

"(F) The executive director of the White House Initiative on historically Black colleges and universities.

"(2) TERMS.—The term of office of each member appointed under paragraphs (1)(B) and (1)(C) shall be 3 years, except that—

"(A) of the members first appointed pursuant to paragraphs (1)(B) and (1)(C), 2 shall be appointed for terms of 1 year, and 3 shall be appointed for terms of 2 years;

"(B) members appointed to fill a vacancy occurring before the expiration of a term of a member shall be appointed to serve the remainder of that term; and

"(C) a member may continue to serve after the expiration of a term until a successor is appointed.

"(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $50,000 for fiscal year 1993 and each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this section.

"SEC. 728. MINORITY BUSINESS ENTERPRISE UTILIZATION.

"In the performance of and with respect to the Secretary's effectuation of his responsibilities under section 725(1) and to the maximum extent feasible in the implementation of the purposes of this part, minority business persons, including bond underwriters and credit enhancers, bond counsel, marketers, accountants, advisors, construction contractors, and managers should be utilized.".

SEC. 705. CONSOLIDATION OF PARTS C AND F.

Part C of title VII of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132d et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART C—LOANS FOR CONSTRUCTION, RECONSTRUCTION AND RENOVATION OF ACADEMIC, HOUSING, AND OTHER EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES

"SEC. 731. FEDERAL ASSISTANCE IN THE FORM OF LOANS.

"(a) AUTHORITY AND CONDITIONS FOR LOANS.—To assist institutions of higher education and higher education building agencies in the construction, reconstruction, or renovation of housing, undergraduate and graduate academic facilities, and other educational facilities for students and faculties, the Secretary may make loans of funds to such institutions for the construction, reconstruction, or renovation of such facilities. No such assistance shall be provided unless—

"(1) the educational institution involved is unable to secure the necessary funds for the construction or purchase from other sources upon terms and conditions equally as favorable as the terms and conditions applicable to loans under this title; and

"(2) the Secretary finds that any such construction will be undertaken in an economical manner, and that any such facilities are not or will not be of elaborate or extravagant design or materials.

"(b) AMOUNT AND CONDITIONS OF LOANS.—A loan to institutions of higher education or higher education building agency—

"(1) may be in an amount not exceeding the total development cost of the facility, as determined by the Secretary;

"(2) shall be secured in such manner and be repaid within such period, not exceeding 50 years, as may be determined by the Secretary; and

"(3) shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary which shall be not more than the lower of (A) 5.5 percent per annum, or (B) the total of one-quarter of 1 percent per annum added to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(c) USE OF LOANS FOR PREVIOUSLY MADE CONTRACTS.—Any institution of higher education or higher education building agency which, prior to October 17, 1986, had contracted for housing or other educational facilities may, in connection therewith, receive loans authorized under this part, as the Secretary may determine. No such loan shall be made for any housing or other educational facilities, the construction of which was begun prior to enactment of such date, or completed prior to the filing of an application under this part.

"(d) MATCHING REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall not make a loan under this part unless the institution of higher education or higher education building agency receiving such loan provides from non-Federal sources at least 20 percent of the development cost of the project for which the loan is made.

"SEC. 732. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

"(a) BUDGET AND ACCOUNTING.—In the performance of, and with respect to, the functions, powers, and duties under this part, the Secretary, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, shall—

"(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program as provided for wholly owned Government corporations by chapter 91 of title 31, United States Code; and

"(2) maintain a set of accounts which shall be audited by the Comptroller General in accordance with the provisions of chapter 35 of title 31, United States Code, but such financial transactions of the Secretary, as the making of loans and vouchers approved by the Secretary, in connection with such financial transactions shall be final and conclusive upon all officers of the Government.

"(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Funds made available to the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this part shall be deposited in a checking account or accounts with the Treasurer of the United States. Receipts and assets obtained or held by the Secretary in connection with the performance of functions under this part, and all funds available for carrying out the functions of the Secretary under this part (including appropriations therefor, which are hereby authorized), shall be available, in such amounts as may from year to year be authorized by the Congress, for the administrative expenses of the Secretary in connection with the performance of such functions.

"(c) LEGAL POWERS.—In the performance of, and with respect to, the functions, powers, and duties under this part, the Secretary, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, may—

"(1) prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this part;

"(2) sue and be sued;

"(3) foreclose on any property or commence any action to protect or enforce any right conferred upon the Secretary by any law, contract, or other agreement, and bid for and purchase at any foreclosure or any other sale any property in connection with which the Secretary has made a loan pursuant to this part;

"(4) in the event of any such acquisition, notwithstanding any other provision of law relating to the acquisition, handling, or disposal of real property by the United States, complete, administer, remodel and convert, dispose of, lease, and otherwise deal with, such property, but any such acquisition of real property shall not deprive any State or political subdivision thereof of its civil or criminal jurisdiction in and over such property or impair the civil rights under the State or local laws of the inhabitants on such property;

"(5) sell or exchange at public or private sale, or lease, real or personal property, and sell or exchange any securities or obligations, upon such terms as the Secretary may fix;

"(6) obtain insurance against loss in connection with property and other assets held;

"(7) subject to the specific limitations in this part, consent to the modification, with respect to the rate of interest, time of payment of any installment of principal or interest, security, or any other term of any contract or agreement to which the Secretary is a party or which has been transferred to the Secretary pursuant to this part, granting to a borrower of a loan made before October 1, 1992, the option of repaying the loan at a discount computed in accordance with subsection (d) if the repayment is (A) made from non-Federal sources, (B) not derived from proceeds of obligations the income of which is exempt from taxation under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and (C) made on a loan that has been outstanding for at least 5 years; and

"(8) include in any contract or instrument made pursuant to this part such other covenants, conditions, or provisions as may be necessary to assure that the purposes of this part will be achieved.

"(d) COMPUTATION OF ALLOWABLE DISCOUNTS.—The Secretary shall compute the discount which may be offered to a borrower as an inducement to early repayment under subsection (c)(7) in an amount determined by the Secretary to be in the best financial interests of the Government, taking into account the yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to the remaining term of such loan.

"(e) NONDISCRIMINATION BETWEEN BORROWERS IN OFFERING DISCOUNTED PREPAYMENT.—

"(1) GENERAL RULE.—If the Secretary offers a discount as an inducement to early repayment under subsection (c)(7), such offer shall be available without regard to whether the borrower is delinquent or in default on the loan on or before October 1, 1992, but the Secretary shall refuse to make such offer to a borrower that becomes delinquent or goes into default after that date.

"(2) APPLICABILITY.—The discount offered shall apply, in the case of a borrower that complies with paragraph (1), to the entire amount outstanding on the loan (including any amount owed with respect to payments that are overdue).

"(f) CONTRACTS FOR SUPPLIES OR SERVICES.—Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes shall not apply to any contract for services or supplies on account of any property acquired pursuant to this part if the amount of such contract does not exceed $1,000.

"(g) APPLICABILITY OF GOVERNMENT CORPORATION CONTROL ACT.—The provisions of section 9107(a) of title 31, United States Code, which are applicable to corporations or agencies subject to chapter 91 of such title, shall also be applicable to the activities of the Secretary under this part.

"(h) WAGE RATES.—The Secretary shall take such action as may be necessary to ensure that all laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on any project assisted under this part—

"(1) shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing on the same type of work on similar construction in the immediate locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Act of March 3, 1931 (Davis-Bacon Act), as amended; and

"(2) shall be employed not more than 40 hours in any one week unless the employee receives wages for the employee's employment in excess of the hours specified above at a rate not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which the employee is employed, but the Secretary may waive the application of this subsection in cases or classes of cases where laborers or mechanics, not otherwise employed at any time in the construction of such project, voluntarily donate their services without full compensation for the purpose of lowering the costs of construction and the Secretary determines that any amounts saved thereby are fully credited to the educational institution undertaking the construction.

"(i) LIMITATION.—No loan may be made under this part for any facility on the campus of any postsecondary educational institution until 5 years after the date on which a previous loan for another facility on such campus was made under this part, unless the loan is intended to be used to construct or reconstruct a facility damaged as a result of a national disaster, as declared by the President.

"SEC. 733. APPORTIONMENT.

"(a) LIMITATION.—Not more than 12.5 percent of the amount of the funds provided for in this part in the form of loans shall be made available to educational institutions within any one State.

"(b) PRIORITIES.—In awarding loans under this part, the Secretary shall give priority—

"(1) to loans for renovation or reconstruction of undergraduate and graduate academic facilities; and

"(2) to loans for renovation or reconstruction of older undergraduate and graduate academic facilities that have gone without major renovation or reconstruction for an extended period.

"SEC. 734. DEFINITIONS.

"For the purpose of this part:

"(a) HOUSING.—The term 'housing' means—

"(1) new or existing structures suitable for dwelling use, including single-room dormitories and apartments; and

"(2) dwelling facilities provided for rehabilitation, alteration, conversion, or improvement of existing structures which are otherwise inadequate for the proposed dwelling use.

"(b) EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION.—The term 'institution of higher education or higher education building agency' means—

"(1)(A) any educational institution which offers, or provides satisfactory assurance to the Secretary that it will offer within a reasonable time after completion of a facility for which assistance is requested under this part, at least a 2-year program acceptable for full credit toward a baccalaureate degree (including any public educational institution, or any private educational institution no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual); or

"(B) any public educational institution which—

"(i) is administered by a college or university which is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association;

"(ii) offers technical or vocational instruction; and

"(iii) provides residential facilities for some or all of the students receiving such instruction;

"(2) any hospital operating a school of nursing beyond the level of high school approved by the appropriate State authority, or any hospital approved for internships, by recognized authority, if such hospital is either a public hospital or a private hospital, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual;

"(3) any corporation (no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual)—

"(A) established for the sole purpose of providing housing or other educational facilities for students or students and faculty of one or more institutions included in paragraph (1) without regard to their membership in or affiliation with any social, fraternal, or honorary society or organization; and

"(B) upon dissolution of which all title to any property purchased or built from the proceeds of any loan which is made under section 731 (as such section was in effect prior to the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992), will pass to such institution (or to any one or more of such institutions) unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such property or the proceeds from its sale will be used for some other nonprofit educational purpose;

"(4) any agency, public authority, or other instrumentality of any State, established for the purpose of providing or financing housing or other educational facilities for students or faculty of any educational institution included in paragraph (1), but nothing in this paragraph shall require an institution included in paragraph (1) to obtain loans or grants through any instrumentality included in this paragraph; and

"(5) any nonprofit student housing cooperative corporation established for the purpose of providing housing for students or students and faculty of any institution included in paragraph (1).

In the case of any loan made under section 731 (as such section was in effect prior to the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992) to a corporation described in paragraph (3) which was not established by the institution or institutions for whose students or students and faculty it would provide housing, or to a student housing cooperative corporation described in paragraph (5), and in the case of any loan which is obtained from other sources by such a corporation, the Secretary shall require that the note securing such loan be cosigned by such institution (or by any one or more of such institutions). Where the law of any State in effect on the date of enactment of the Housing Act of 1964 prevents the institution or institutions, for whose students or students and faculty housing is to be provided, from cosigning the note, the Secretary shall require the corporation and the proposed project to be approved by such institution (or by any one or more of such institutions) in lieu of such cosigning.

"(c) UNDERGRADUATE AND GRADUATE ACADEMIC FACILITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the term 'undergraduate and graduate academic facilities' means structures suitable for use as classrooms, laboratories, libraries, and related facilities, the primary purpose of which is the instruction of students pursuing at least a 2-year program acceptable for full credit toward a baccalaureate degree, or for administration of the educational programs serving such students, of an institution of higher education, and maintenance, storage, or utility facilities essential to operation of the foregoing facilities, as well as infirmaries or other facilities designed to provide primarily for outpatient care of student and instructional personnel. Plans for such facilities shall be in compliance with such standards as the Secretary may prescribe or approve in order to ensure that projects assisted with the use of Federal funds under this part shall be, to the extent appropriate in view of the uses to be made of the facilities, accessible to and usable by individuals with disabilities.

"(2) EXCEPTIONS.—The term 'undergraduate and graduate academic facilities' shall not include (A) any facility intended primarily for events for which admission is to be charged to the general public, (B) any gymnasium or other facility specially designed for athletic or recreational activities, other than for an academic course in physical education or where the Secretary finds that the physical integration of such facilities with other undergraduate academic facilities included under this part is required to carry out the objectives of this part, (C) any facility used or to be used for sectarian instruction or as a place for religious worship, or (D) any facility which (although not a facility described in the preceding clause) is used or to be used primarily in connection with any part of the program of a school or department of divinity.

"(d) DEVELOPMENT COST.—The term 'development cost' means costs of the construction of the housing or other educational facilities and the land on which it is located, including necessary site improvements to permit its use for housing, academic facilities, or other educational facilities, except that in the case of the purchase of facilities such term means the cost as approved by the Secretary.

"(e) FACULTIES.—The term 'faculties' means members of the faculty and their families.

"(f) OTHER EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES.—The term 'other educational facilities' means (1) new or existing structures suitable for use as cafeterias or dining halls, student centers or student unions, infirmaries or other inpatient or outpatient health facilities, or for other essential service facilities, and (2) structures suitable for the above uses provided by rehabilitation, alteration, conversion, or improvement of existing structures which are otherwise inadequate for such uses.

"SEC. 735. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part, $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

SEC. 706. REPEAL OF PARTS D, F, G, AND J.

Parts D, F, G, and J of title VII of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132e et seq., 1132g et seq., 1132h–1 et seq., 1132j et seq., respectively) are repealed.

SEC. 707. REDESIGNATION OF AND AMENDMENTS TO PART E.

(a) REDESIGNATION.—Part E of title VII of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132f et seq.) is redesignated as part D.

(b) AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE DIRECT INSURANCE TO HIGHER RATED INSTITUTIONS.—Section 752(c) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132f–1(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the Corporation may issue primary insurance or guarantees covering the assets or obligations of institutions which are, without insurance or guarantee, listed by a nationally recognized statistical rating organization at or above the third highest rating of such organization, subject to all of the following conditions and limitations:

"(A) The proposed transaction shall have been declined for coverage by all unaffiliated monoline insurers that are authorized to write financial guarantee insurance and that, in the previous year, provided primary insurance or guarantees on educational facility obligations. The Secretary shall publish by January 31 of each year a list of all such insurers.

"(B) Within 2 business days of receiving complete documentation concerning a proposed transaction by an institution seeking insurance from the Corporation pursuant to this paragraph (5), an insurer shall offer to provide coverage or execute an affidavit of declination, or its failure to respond shall be deemed a declination. The institution seeking insurance from the Corporation shall file with the Corporation the affidavits from all declining insurers, as well as an affidavit of the institution's financial advisor specifically identifying the pertinent terms of the proposed transaction, the requested insurance coverage, and the date on which complete documentation concerning the proposed transaction was submitted to each insurer and certifying that such information was provided to each insurer that declined coverage.

"(C) The proceeds of the assets or obligations insured or guaranteed by the Corporation pursuant to this paragraph shall be used exclusively for the renovation, repair, replacement, or construction of academic and educational facilities and shall not be used for the renovation, repair, replacement, or construction of athletic facilities.

"(D) The aggregate par value of assets and obligations insured or guaranteed by the Corporation under this paragraph (5) shall not exceed—

"(i) $100,000,000 per year during calendar years 1993, 1994, and 1995; or

"(ii) $150,000,000 per year during calendar years 1996 and 1997.

"(E) The aggregate dollar amount of transactions under this paragraph (5) shall not exceed—

"(i) in calendar year 1993, 1994, or 1995, 10 percent of the aggregate dollar amount of assets and obligations directly covered by primary insurance or guarantees issued by the Corporation under this section in such year; or

"(ii) in calendar year 1996 or 1997, 15 percent of the aggregate dollar amount of assets and obligations directly covered by primary insurance or guarantees issued by the Corporation under this section in such year.".

SEC. 708. REDESIGNATION OF AND AMENDMENTS TO PART H.

(a) REDESIGNATION.—Part H of title VII of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132i et seq.) is redesignated as part E.

(b) RECOVERY OF PAYMENTS.—Section 781 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132i) is amended by striking "part A or B of this title" each place such term appears and inserting "part A of this title, or part B of this title as such part was in effect prior to the enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992,".

(c) ELIMINATION OF UNNECESSARY DEFINITIONS.—Section 782 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1089) is amended—

(1) by striking paragraphs (5) and (7); and

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (6), (8), and (9) as paragraph (5), (6), and (7), respectively.

(d) FORGIVENESS OF CERTAIN LOANS.—Section 783 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1132i–2) is amended to read as follows:

"FORGIVENESS OF CERTAIN LOANS

"SEC. 783. (a) FORGIVENESS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary may forgive the entire balance due, or any portion thereof, on any loan made under part C or part F of this title (as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992), or under the College Housing and Academic Facilities Loan program, or any other federally subsidized, insured, or authorized loan program designed to assist institutions of higher education to construct academic or dormitory facilities, whenever the Secretary determines that—

"(1) the institution of higher education is current in its payments to the Department or has entered into a moratorium agreement with the Secretary with respect to such payments; and

"(2) the outstanding indebtedness equals at least one-quarter of the annual budget for the most recent fiscal year of the institution of higher education seeking forgiveness of its housing loan indebtedness, exclusive of funds provided under titles III and IV of this Act, and in the judgment of the Secretary the survival of the institution of higher education is threatened.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For the purpose of this section the term 'institution of higher education' includes a postsecondary educational institution.

"(c) APPLICATION.—Each institution of higher education requesting forgiveness of any loan under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and containing or accompanied by such information, as the Secretary may reasonably require.".

TITLE VIII—COOPERATIVE EDUCATION

SEC. 801. COOPERATIVE EDUCATION.

Title VIII of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1133 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE VIII—COOPERATIVE EDUCATION

"SEC. 801. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE; DEFINITION.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this title to award grants to institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions to encourage such institutions to develop and make available to as many of their students as possible work experience that will aid such students in future careers and will enable such students to support themselves financially while in school.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For the purpose of this title the term 'cooperative education' means the provision of alternating or parallel periods of academic study and public or private employment in order to give students work experiences related to their academic or occupational objectives and an opportunity to earn the funds necessary for continuing and completing their education.

"SEC. 802. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS; RESERVATIONS.

"(a) APPROPRIATIONS AUTHORIZED.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(b) RESERVATIONS.—Of the amounts appropriated in each fiscal year—

"(1) not less than 50 percent shall be available for carrying out grants to institutions of higher education and combinations of such institutions described in section 803(a)(1)(A) for cooperative education under section 803;

"(2) not less than 25 percent shall be available for carrying out grants to institutions of higher education described in section 803(a)(1)(B) for cooperative education under section 803;

"(3) not to exceed 11 percent shall be available for demonstration projects under paragraph (1) of section 804(a);

"(4) not to exceed 11 percent shall be available for training and resource centers under paragraph (2) of section 804(a); and

"(5) not to exceed 3 percent shall be available for research under paragraph (3) of section 804(a).

"(c) AVAILABILITY OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Appropriations under this title shall not be available for the payment of compensation of students for employment by employers under arrangements pursuant to this title.

"SEC. 803. GRANTS FOR COOPERATIVE EDUCATION.

"(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized—

"(A) from the amount available under section 802(b)(1) in each fiscal year and in accordance with the provisions of this title, to make grants to institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions that have not received a grant under this paragraph in the 10-year period preceding the date for which a grant under this section is requested to pay the Federal share of the cost of planning, establishing, expanding, or carrying out programs of cooperative education by such institutions or combinations of institutions; and

"(B) from the amount available under section 802(b)(2) in each fiscal year and in accordance with the provisions of this title, to make grants to institutions of higher education that are operating an existing cooperative education program as determined by the Secretary to pay the cost of planning, establishing, expanding, or carrying out programs of cooperative education by such institutions.

"(2) PROGRAM REQUIREMENT.—Cooperative education programs assisted under this section shall provide alternating or parallel periods of academic study and of public or private employment, giving students work experience related to their academic or occupational objectives and the opportunity to earn the funds necessary for continuing and completing their education.

"(3) AMOUNT OF GRANTS.—(A) The amount of each grant awarded pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) to any institution of higher education or combination of such institutions in any fiscal year shall not exceed $500,000.

"(B)(i) Except as provided in clauses (ii) and (iii), the Secretary shall award grants in each fiscal year to each institution of higher education described in paragraph (1)(B) that has an application approved under subsection (b) in an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount reserved pursuant to section 802(b)(2) for such fiscal year as the number of unduplicated students placed in cooperative education jobs during the preceding fiscal year (other than cooperative education jobs under section 804 and as determined by the Secretary) by such institution of higher education bears to the total number of all such students placed in such jobs during the preceding fiscal year by all such institutions.

"(ii) No institution of higher education shall receive a grant pursuant to paragraph (1)(B) in any fiscal year in an amount which exceeds 25 percent of such institution's cooperative education program's personnel and operating budget for the preceding fiscal year.

"(iii) The minimum annual grant amount which an institution of higher education is eligible to receive under paragraph (1)(B) is $1,000 and the maximum annual grant amount is $75,000.

"(4) LIMITATION.—The Secretary shall not award grants pursuant to paragraphs (1)(A) and (1)(B) to the same institution of higher education or combination of such institution in any one fiscal year.

"(5) USES.—Grants under paragraph (1)(B) shall be used exclusively—

"(A) to expand the quality and participation of a cooperative education program;

"(B) for outreach in new curricular areas; and

"(C) for outreach to potential participants including underrepresented and nontraditional populations.

"(b) APPLICATIONS.—Each institution of higher education or combination of such institutions desiring to receive a grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe. Each such application shall—

"(1) set forth the program or activities for which a grant is authorized under this section;

"(2) specify each portion of such program or activities which will be performed by a nonprofit organization or institution other than the applicant and the compensation to be paid for such performance;

"(3) provide that the applicant will expend during such fiscal year for the purpose of such program or activities not less than the amount expended for such purpose during the previous fiscal year;

"(4) describe the plans which the applicant will carry out to assure, and contain a formal statement of the institution's commitment which assures, that the applicant will continue the cooperative education program beyond the 5-year period of Federal assistance described in subsection (c)(1) at a level which is not less than the total amount expended for such program during the first year such program was assisted under this section;

"(5) provide that, in the case of an institution of higher education that provides a 2-year program which is acceptable for full credit toward a bachelor's degree, the cooperative education program will be available to students who are certificate or associate degree candidates and who carry at least one-half the normal full-time academic workload;

"(6) provide that the applicant will—

"(A) make such reports as may be essential to ensure that the applicant is complying with the provisions of this section, including the reports for the second and each succeeding fiscal year for which the applicant receives a grant data with respect to the impact of the cooperative education program in the previous fiscal year, including—

"(i) the number of unduplicated student applicants in the cooperative education program;

"(ii) the number of unduplicated students placed in cooperative education jobs;

"(iii) the number of employers who have hired cooperative education students;

"(iv) the income for students derived from working in cooperative education jobs; and

"(v) the increase or decrease in the number of unduplicated students placed in cooperative education jobs in each fiscal year compared to the previous fiscal year; and

"(B) keep such records as are essential to ensure that the applicant is complying with the provisions of this title, including the notation of cooperative education employment on the student's transcript;

"(7) describe the extent to which programs in the academic discipline for which the application is made have had a favorable reception by public and private sector employers;

"(8) describe the extent to which the institution is committed to extending cooperative education on an institution-wide basis for all students who can benefit;

"(9) describe the plans that the applicant will carry out to evaluate the applicant's cooperative education program at the end of the grant period;

"(10) provide for such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement of, and accounting for, Federal funds paid to the applicant under this title;

"(11) demonstrate a commitment to serving special populations such as women, individuals with disabilities, and African American, Mexican-American, Puerto Rican, Cuban, other Hispanic, American Indian, Alaska Native, Aleut, Native Hawaiian, American Samoan, Micronesian, Guamanian (Chamorro), and Northern Marianian students; and

"(12) include such other information as is essential to carry out the provisions of this title.

"(c) DURATION OF GRANTS; FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(1) DURATION OF GRANTS.—No individual institution of higher education may receive, individually or as a participant in a combination of such institutions—

"(A) a grant pursuant to subsection (a)(1)(A) for more than 5 fiscal years; or

"(B) a grant pursuant to subsection (a)(1)(B) for more than 5 fiscal years.

"(2) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of a grant under section 803(a)(1)(A) may not exceed—

"(A) 85 percent of the cost of carrying out the program or activities described in the application in the first year the applicant receives a grant under this section;

"(B) 70 percent of such cost in the second such year;

"(C) 55 percent of such cost in the third such year;

"(D) 40 percent of such cost in the fourth such year; and

"(E) 25 percent of such cost in the fifth such year.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE.—Any provision of law to the contrary notwithstanding, the Secretary shall not waive the provisions of this subsection.

"(d) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—If the Secretary determines that a recipient of funds under this section has failed to maintain the fiscal effort described in subsection (b)(3), then the Secretary may elect not to make grant payments under this section to such recipient.

"(e) FACTORS FOR SPECIAL CONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In approving applications under this section, the Secretary shall give special consideration to applications from institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions for programs which show the greatest promise of success because of—

"(A) the extent to which programs in the academic discipline with respect to which the application is made have had a favorable reception by public and private sector employers;

"(B) the strength of the commitment of the institution of higher education or combination of such institutions to cooperative education as demonstrated by the plans and formalized institutional commitment statement which such institution or combination has made to continue the program after the termination of Federal financial assistance,

"(C) the extent to which the institution or combination is committed to extending cooperative education for all students who can benefit, and

"(D) such other factors as are consistent with the purposes of this section.

"(2) ADDITIONAL SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.—The Secretary shall also give special consideration to applications from institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions which demonstrate a commitment to serving special populations such as women, individuals with disabilities, and African American, Mexican American, Puerto Rican, Cuban, other Hispanic, American Indian, Alaska Native, Aleut, Native Hawaiian, American Samoan, Micronesian, Guamanian (Chamorro), and Northern Mariana students.

"SEC. 804. DEMONSTRATION AND INNOVATION PROJECTS; TRAINING AND RESOURCE CENTERS; AND RESEARCH.

"(a) AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this section, to make grants and enter into contracts for—

"(1) the conduct of demonstration projects designed to demonstrate or determine the feasibility or value of innovative methods of cooperative education from the amounts available in each fiscal year under section 802(b)(3);

"(2) the conduct of training and resource centers designed to—

"(A) train personnel in the field of cooperative education;

"(B) improve materials used in cooperative education programs if such improvement is conducted in conjunction with other activities described in this paragraph;

"(C) furnish technical assistance to institutions of higher education to increase the potential of the institution to continue to conduct a cooperative education program without Federal assistance;

"(D) encourage model cooperative education programs which furnish education and training in occupations in which there is a national need;

"(E) support partnerships under which an institution carrying out a comprehensive cooperative education program joins with one or more institutions of higher education in order to (i) assist the institution other than the comprehensive cooperative education institution to develop and expand an existing program of cooperative education, or (ii) establish and improve or expand comprehensive cooperative education programs; and

"(F) encourage model cooperative education programs in the fields of science and mathematics for women and minorities who are underrepresented in such fields from the amounts available in each fiscal year under section 802(b)(4); and

"(3) the conduct of research relating to cooperative education, from the amounts available in each fiscal year under section 802(b)(5).

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To carry out this section, the Secretary may—

"(A) make grants to or contracts with institutions of higher education, or combinations of such institutions; and

"(B) make grants to or contracts with other public or private nonprofit agencies or organizations, whenever such grants or contracts will make an especially significant contribution to attaining the objectives of this section.

"(2) LIMITATION.—(A) The Secretary may not use more than 3 percent of the amount appropriated to carry out this section in each fiscal year to enter into contracts described in paragraph (1)(A).

"(B) The Secretary may use not more than 3 percent of the amount appropriated to carry out this section in each fiscal year to enter into contracts described in paragraph (1)(B).

"(c) SUPPLEMENT NOT SUPPLANT.—A recipient of a grant or contract under this section may use the funds provided only so as to supplement and, to the extent possible, increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such funds, be made available from non-Federal sources to carry out the activities supported by such grant or contract, and in no case to supplant such funds from non-Federal sources.".

TITLE IX—GRADUATE PROGRAMS

SEC. 901. GRADUATE PROGRAMS.

Title IX of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1134 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE IX—GRADUATE PROGRAMS

"SEC. 901. PURPOSE AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this title to—

"(1) foster and support graduate and professional education;

"(2) provide incentives and support for United States citizens to complete doctoral degree programs leading to academic careers, especially women and students from underrepresented groups; and

"(3) provide support for students from underrepresented groups to complete masters and professional degree programs.

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

"(1) COORDINATED ADMINISTRATION.—In carrying out the purposes of this title, the Secretary shall provide for coordinated administration and regulation of graduate programs under this title to ensure that the programs are carried out in a manner most compatible with academic practices.

"(2) HIRING AUTHORITY.—For purposes of carrying out this title, the Secretary shall appoint, without regard to the provisions of title 5 of the United States Code governing appointments in the competitive service, such administrative and technical employees, with the appropriate educational background, as shall be needed to assist in the administration of such part. Such employees shall be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

"(3) USE FOR RELIGIOUS PURPOSES PROHIBITED.—No fellowship shall be awarded under this title for study at a school or department of divinity.

"PART A—GRANTS TO INSTITUTIONS AND CONSORTIA TO ENCOURAGE WOMEN AND MINORITY PARTICIPATION IN GRADUATE EDUCATION

"SEC. 911. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

"The Secretary shall make grants to institutions of higher education and consortia of such institutions to enable such institutions and consortia—

"(1) to identify talented undergraduate students who—

"(A) demonstrate financial need; and

"(B) are individuals from minority groups underrepresented in graduate education or are women underrepresented in fields of study in graduate education such as the fields of science and mathematics; and

"(2) to provide such students with an opportunity to participate in a program of research and scholarly activities at such institutions or consortia designed to provide such students with effective preparation for graduate study in such fields or related fields.

"SEC. 912. SUBMISSION AND CONTENTS OF APPLICATION.

"(a) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—Each institution of higher education or consortium desiring assistance under this part shall submit an application to the Secretary in such form and containing such information as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe. Each such application shall provide information regarding—

"(1) the program of study, to take the form of summer research internships, seminars, and other educational experiences;

"(2) the institution's or consortium's plan for identifying and recruiting talented women and minority undergraduates, especially those interested in entering fields in which such women and minority undergraduates are underrepresented;

"(3) the participation of faculty in the program and a detailed description of the research in which students will be involved;

"(4) a plan for the evaluation of the effectiveness of the program; and

"(5) such other assurances and information as the Secretary may require by regulation.

"(b) SELECTION REQUIREMENTS.—In making awards to institutions and consortia—

"(1) the Secretary shall consider the quality of the research in which students will be involved as well as the recruitment program and program of study; and

"(2) the Secretary shall ensure an equitable geographic distribution among public and private institutions of higher education and consortia.

"SEC. 913. USE OF FUNDS.

"Awards made to institutions or consortia under this part shall be used exclusively to provide direct fellowship aid which may include need-based stipends, room and board costs, transportation costs, and tuition for courses for which credit is given by the institution or consortium as approved by the Secretary.

"SEC. 914. INFORMATION COLLECTION.

"In order to assist institutions of higher education or consortia to identify talented women and minority undergraduates for graduate study, institutions or consortia receiving awards under this part shall provide to the Secretary such information as the Secretary determines is necessary to carry out this section. With respect to students participating in a summer internship under this part, the Secretary shall collect information submitted by such institutions or consortia, such as the students' names, addresses, and institutions attended for undergraduate study. The Secretary shall, subject to the authorization of each student, make the information available to institutions of higher education or consortia offering graduate programs seeking to identify talented women and minority undergraduates for graduate study.

"SEC. 915. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"PART B—PATRICIA ROBERTS HARRIS FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

"SEC. 921. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE; DESIGNATION.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this part to provide, through institutions of higher education, a program of grants to assist in making available the benefits of master's level, professional, and doctoral education programs to individuals from minority groups and women who are underrepresented in such programs.

"(b) DESIGNATION.—Each recipient of such an award under this part shall be known as a 'Patricia Roberts Harris Graduate Fellow'.

"SEC. 922. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

"(a) GRANTS BY SECRETARY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make grants to institutions of higher education to enable such institutions to make grants in accordance with the provisions of this part.

"(2) RESERVATIONS.—The Secretary shall reserve—

"(A) 50 percent of the amount appropriated pursuant to the authority of section 924 to award grants to institutions of higher education to enable such institutions to make awards for master's level and professional study; and

"(B) 50 percent of such amount to award grants to such institutions to enable such institutions to make awards for doctoral study.

"(b) DISTRIBUTION AND AMOUNTS OF GRANTS.—

"(1) EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION.—In making such grants the Secretary shall, to the maximum extent feasible, ensure an equitable geographic distribution of awards and an equitable distribution among eligible public and independent institutions of higher education.

"(2) REALLOTMENT.—Whenever the Secretary determines that an institution of higher education is unable to use all of the amounts available to it under this part, the Secretary shall, on such dates during each fiscal year as the Secretary may fix, reallot such amounts not needed to institutions which can use the grants authorized by this part.

"(c) APPLICATIONS.—Any eligible institution of higher education offering a program of postbaccalaureate study leading to a master's level, professional, or doctoral degree may apply for grants under this part. Each such institution may make an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require. Such application may be made on behalf of professional schools, academic departments, or similar organizational units within such institution meeting the requirements of this subsection, including interdisciplinary or interdepartmental programs.

"(d) SELECTION OF APPLICATIONS.—In making grants to institutions of higher education, the Secretary shall—

"(1) take into account present and projected needs for highly trained individuals in academic career fields of high national priority;

"(2) consider the need to prepare a larger number of women and individuals from minority groups, especially from among such groups which have been traditionally underrepresented in professional and academic careers requiring master's level, professional, or doctoral degrees, but nothing contained in this paragraph shall be interpreted to require any institution to grant preference or disparate treatment to the members of one minority group on account of an imbalance which may exist with respect to the total number or percentage of individuals of such group participating in or receiving the benefits of the program authorized in this section, in comparison with the total number or percentage of individuals of such group in any community, State, section, or other area;

"(3) take into account the need to expand access by women and minority groups to careers heretofore lacking adequate representation of women and minority groups; and

"(4) take into account the success of the applicant in providing students with access to careers in which women and minority groups are underrepresented.

"(e) PRIORITIES FOR FELLOWSHIPS.—The Secretary shall assure that, in making grants under this part, a priority for awards is accorded to—

"(1) individuals from minority groups and women who are pursuing master's level or professional study in fields in which they are underrepresented;

"(2) individuals from minority groups and women who are pursuing master's level study leading to careers that serve the public interest; and

"(3) women and individuals from traditionally underrepresented groups undertaking doctoral study, including those interested in entering the fields of science and mathematics.

"(f) INSTITUTIONAL PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall (in addition to stipends paid to individuals under this part) pay to the institution of higher education, for each individual awarded a fellowship under this part at such institution, $9,000 with respect to such awards made for the academic year 1993–1994, to be adjusted annually thereafter in accordance with inflation as determined by the Department of Labor's Consumer Price Index for the previous calendar year.

"SEC. 923. AWARD OF FELLOWSHIPS.

"(a) AWARDS.—The Secretary shall make payments to institutions of higher education for the purpose of paying stipends to individuals who are awarded fellowships under this part. The stipends the Secretary may establish shall reflect the purpose of this program to encourage students to undertake master's level, professional, and doctoral study as described in this part. In the case of an individual who receives such individual's first stipend under this part in academic year 1993–1994 or any succeeding academic year, such stipend shall be set at a level of support equal to that provided by the National Science Foundation graduate fellowships, except such amount shall be adjusted as necessary so as not to exceed the fellow's demonstrated level of need according to measurements of need approved by the Secretary.

"(b) REQUIREMENTS FOR AWARDS.—

"(1) MASTER'S OR PROFESSIONAL DEGREE.—No student enrolled in graduate study leading to a master's or professional degree shall receive an award except during periods in which such student is maintaining satisfactory progress in, and devoting essentially full time to study or research (including acting as a teaching assistant or research assistant as may be required as a condition to award a degree), in the field in which such fellowship was awarded and is not engaging in gainful employment, other than part-time employment by the institution of higher education involved in teaching, research, or similar activities, approved by the Secretary. Such period shall not exceed the normal period for completing the program in which the student is enrolled or a total of 3 years, whichever is less, except that the Secretary may provide by regulation for the granting of such fellowships for a period of study not to exceed one 12-month period, in addition to the 3-year period for study or research set forth in this section, under special circumstances which the Secretary determines would most effectively serve the purposes of this part. The Secretary shall make a determination to provide such 12-month extension of an award to an individual fellowship recipient for study or research upon review of an application for such extension by the recipient.

"(2) DOCTORAL DEGREE.—No student enrolled in graduate study leading to a doctoral degree shall receive an award under this part except during periods in which such student is maintaining satisfactory progress in, and devoting essentially full time to study, research (including acting as a teaching assistant or research assistant as may be required as a condition to award a degree), or dissertation work in the field in which such fellowship was awarded and is not engaging in gainful employment, other than part-time employment by the institution of higher education involved in teaching, research, or similar activities, approved by the Secretary. Such period shall not exceed a total of 3 years, consisting of not more than 2 years of support for study or research, and not more than 1 year of support for dissertation work provided that the student has attained satisfactory progress prior to the dissertation stage. The institution shall provide 2 years of support for each student, including at least 1 year of supervised teaching, following the 2 years of predissertation support under this part.

"SEC. 924. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $60,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this part.

"PART C—JACOB K. JAVITS FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

"SEC. 931. AWARD OF JACOB K. JAVITS FELLOWSHIPS.

"(a) AUTHORITY AND TIMING OF AWARDS.—The Secretary is authorized to award fellowships in accordance with the provisions of this part for graduate study in the arts, humanities, and social sciences by students of superior ability selected on the basis of demonstrated achievement and exceptional promise. All funds appropriated in a fiscal year shall be obligated and expended to the students for fellowships for use in the academic year beginning after July 1 of the fiscal year for which the funds were appropriated. The fellowships shall be awarded for only 1 academic year of study and shall be renewable for a period not to exceed 4 years of study.

"(b) DESIGNATION OF FELLOWS.—Students receiving awards under this part shall be known as 'Jacob K. Javits Fellows'.

"(c) INTERRUPTIONS OF STUDY.—The institution of higher education may allow a fellowship recipient to interrupt periods of study for a period not to exceed 12 months for the purpose of work, travel, or independent study away from the campus, if such independent study is supportive of the fellowship recipient's academic program and shall continue payments for those 12-month periods during which the student is pursuing travel or independent study supportive of the recipient's academic program.

"SEC. 932. ALLOCATION OF FELLOWSHIPS.

"(a) FELLOWSHIP BOARD.—

"(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Secretary shall appoint a Jacob K. Javits Fellows Program Fellowship Board (hereinafter in this part referred to as the 'Board') consisting of 9 individuals representative of both public and private institutions of higher education who are especially qualified to serve on the Board. In making appointments, the Secretary shall give due consideration to the appointment of individuals who are highly respected in the academic community. The Secretary shall assure that individuals appointed to the Board are broadly knowledgeable about and have experience in doctoral education in arts, humanities, and social sciences.

"(2) DUTIES.—The Board shall—

"(A) establish general policies for the program established by this part and oversee its operation;

"(B) establish general criteria for the distribution of fellowships among eligible academic fields identified by the Board;

"(C) appoint panels of academic scholars with distinguished backgrounds in the arts, humanities, and social sciences for the purpose of selecting fellows; and

"(D) prepare and submit to the Congress at least once in every 3-year period a report on any modifications in the program that the Board determines are appropriate.

"(3) CONSULTATIONS.—In carrying out its responsibilities, the Board shall consult on a regular basis with representatives of the National Science Foundation, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Endowment for the Arts, and representatives of institutions of higher education and associations of such institution, learned societies, and professional organizations.

"(4) TERM.—The term of office of each member of the Board shall be 4 years, except that any member appointed to fill a vacancy shall serve for the remainder of the term for which the predecessor of the member was appointed. No member may serve for a period in excess of 6 years.

"(5) INITIAL MEETING; VACANCY.—The Secretary shall call the first meeting of the Board, at which the first order of business shall be the election of a Chairperson and a Vice Chairperson, who shall serve until 1 year after the date of their appointment. Thereafter each officer shall be elected for a term of 2 years. In case a vacancy occurs in either office, the Board shall elect an individual from among the members of the Board to fill such vacancy.

"(6) QUORUM; ADDITIONAL MEETINGS.—(A) A majority of the members of the Board shall constitute a quorum.

"(B) The Board shall meet at least once a year or more frequently, as may be necessary, to carry out its responsibilities.

"(7) COMPENSATION.—Members of the Board, while serving on the business of the Board, shall be entitled to receive compensation at rates fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding the rate of basic pay payable for level IV of the Executive Schedule, including traveltime, and while so serving away from their homes or regular places of business, they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons in Government service employed intermittently.

"(b) USE OF SELECTION PANELS.—The recipients of fellowships shall be selected in each designated field from among all applicants nationwide in each field by distinguished panels appointed by the Board to make such selections under criteria established by the Board. The number of recipients in each field in each year shall not exceed the number of fellows allocated to that field for that year by the Board.

"(c) FELLOWSHIP PORTABILITY.—Each recipient shall be entitled to use the fellowship in a doctoral program at any accredited institution of higher education in which the recipient may decide to enroll.

"SEC. 933. STIPENDS.

"(a) AWARD BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall pay to individuals awarded fellowships under this part such stipends as the Secretary may establish, reflecting the purpose of this program to encourage highly talented students to undertake graduate study as described in this part. In the case of an individual who receives such individual's first stipend under this part in academic year 1993–1994 or any succeeding academic year, such stipend shall be set at a level of support equal to that provided by the National Science Foundation graduate fellowships, except such amount shall be adjusted as necessary so as not to exceed the fellow's demonstrated level of need according to measurements of need approved by the Secretary.

"(b) INSTITUTIONAL PAYMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall (in addition to the stipends paid to individuals under subsection (a)) pay to the institution of higher education, for each individual awarded a fellowship for pursuing a course at such institution, $9,000 with respect to such awards made for the academic year 1993–1994, to be adjusted annually thereafter in accordance with inflation as determined by the Department of Labor's Consumer Price Index for the previous calendar year, except that such amount charged to a fellowship recipient and collected from such recipient for tuition and other expenses required by the institution as part of the recipient's instructional program shall be deducted from the payment to the institution under this subsection.

"(2) SPECIAL RULES.—(A) Beginning March 1, 1992, any applicant for a fellowship under this part who has been notified in writing by the Secretary that such applicant has been selected to receive such a fellowship and is subsequently notified that the fellowship award has been withdrawn, shall receive such fellowship unless the Secretary subsequently makes a determination that such applicant submitted fraudulent information on the application.

"(B) Subject to the availability of appropriations, amounts payable to an institution by the Secretary pursuant to this subsection shall not be reduced for any purpose other than the purposes specified under paragraph (1).

"SEC. 934. FELLOWSHIP CONDITIONS.

"(a) REQUIREMENTS FOR RECEIPT.—An individual awarded a fellowship under the provisions of this part shall continue to receive payments provided in section 933 only during such periods as the Secretary finds that such individual is maintaining satisfactory proficiency in, and devoting essentially full time to, study or research in the field in which such fellowship was awarded, in an institution of higher education, and is not engaging in gainful employment other than part-time employment by such institution in teaching, research, or similar activities, approved by the Secretary.

"(b) REPORTS FROM RECIPIENTS.—The Secretary is authorized to require reports containing such information in such form and filed at such times as the Secretary determines necessary from any person awarded a fellowship under the provisions of this part. The reports shall be accompanied by a certificate from an appropriate official at the institution of higher education, library, archive, or other research center approved by the Secretary, stating that such individual is making satisfactory progress in, and is devoting essentially full time to the program for which the fellowship was awarded.

"SEC. 935. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this part.

"PART D—GRADUATE ASSISTANCE IN AREAS OF NATIONAL NEED

"SEC. 941. PURPOSE.

"In order to sustain and enhance the capacity for teaching and research in areas of national need, it is the purpose of the part to provide, through academic departments and programs of institutions of higher education, a fellowship program to assist graduate students of superior ability who demonstrate financial need.

"SEC. 942. GRANTS TO ACADEMIC DEPARTMENTS AND PROGRAMS OF INSTITUTIONS.

"(a) GRANT AUTHORITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make grants to academic departments and programs and other academic units of institutions of higher education that provide courses of study leading to a graduate degree in order to enable such institutions to provide assistance to graduate students in accordance with this part.

"(2) ADDITIONAL GRANTS.—The Secretary may also make grants to such departments and programs and to other units of institutions of higher education granting graduate degrees which submit joint proposals involving nondegree granting institutions which have formal arrangements for the support of doctoral dissertation research with degree-granting institutions. Nondegree granting institutions eligible for awards as part of such joint proposals include any organization which—

"(A) is described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and is exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Code;

"(B) is organized and operated substantially to conduct scientific and cultural research and graduate training programs;

"(C) is not a private foundation;

"(D) has academic personnel for instruction and counseling who meet the standards of the institution of higher education in which the students are enrolled; and

"(E) has necessary research resources not otherwise readily available in such institutions to such students.

"(b) AWARD AND DURATION OF GRANTS.—

"(1) AWARDS.—The principal criterion for the allocation of awards shall be the relative quality of the graduate programs presented in competing applications. Consistent with an allocation of awards based on quality of competing applications, the Secretary shall, in making such grants, promote an equitable geographic distribution among eligible public and private institutions of higher education.

"(2) DURATION.—The Secretary shall approve a grant recipient under this part for a 3-year period. From the sums appropriated under this part for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall not make a grant to any academic department or program of an institution of higher education of less than $100,000 or greater than $750,000 per fiscal year.

"(3) REALLOTMENT.—Whenever the Secretary determines that an academic department or program of an institution of higher education is unable to use all of the amounts available to it under this part, the Secretary shall, on such dates during each fiscal year as the Secretary may fix, reallot the amounts not needed to academic departments and programs of institutions which can use the grants authorized by this part.

"(c) PREFERENCE TO CONTINUING GRANT RECIPIENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make new grant awards under this part only to the extent that each previous grant recipient has received continued funding in accordance with subsection (b)(2).

"(2) RATABLE REDUCTION.—To the extent that appropriations under this part are insufficient to comply with paragraph (1), available funds shall be distributed by ratably reducing the amounts required to be awarded by subsection (b)(2).

"SEC. 943. INSTITUTIONAL ELIGIBILITY.

"(a) ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA.—Any academic department or program of an institution of higher education that offers a program of postbaccalaureate study leading to a graduate degree in an area of national need (as designated under subsection (b)) may apply for a grant under this part. No department or program shall be eligible for a grant unless the program of postbaccalaureate study has been in existence for at least 4 years at the time of application for assistance under this part.

"(b) DESIGNATION OF AREAS OF NATIONAL NEED.—After consultation with the National Science Foundation, the National Academy of Sciences, the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities, and other appropriate Federal and nonprofit agencies and organizations, the Secretary shall designate areas of national need, such as mathematics, biology, physics, chemistry, engineering, geosciences, computer science, or foreign languages or area studies. In making such designations, the Secretary shall take into account the extent to which the interest is compelling and the extent to which other Federal programs support postbaccalaureate study in the area concerned.

"SEC. 944. CRITERIA FOR APPLICATIONS.

"(a) SELECTION OF APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary shall make grants to academic departments and programs of institutions of higher education on the basis of applications submitted in accordance with subsection (b). Applications shall be ranked on program quality by geographically balanced review panels of nationally recognized scholars. To the extent possible (consistent with other provisions of this section), the Secretary shall make awards that are consistent with recommendations of the review panels.

"(b) CONTENTS OF APPLICATIONS.—An academic department or program of an institution of higher education, in its application for a grant, shall—

"(1) describe the current academic program of the applicant for which the grant is sought;

"(2) provide assurances that the applicant will provide, from other non-Federal funds, for the purposes of the fellowship program under this part an amount equal to at least 25 percent of the amount of the grant received under this part;

"(3) set forth policies and procedures to assure that, in making fellowship awards under this part the institution will seek talented students from traditionally underrepresented backgrounds, as determined by the Secretary;

"(4) set forth policies and procedures to assure that, in making fellowship awards under this part, the institution will make awards to individuals who—

"(A) have financial need, as determined under criteria developed by the institution;

"(B) have excellent academic records in their previous programs of study;

"(C) plan teaching or research careers; and

"(D) plan to pursue the highest possible degree available in their course of study;

"(5) set forth policies and procedures to ensure that Federal funds made available under this part for any fiscal year will be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, increase the funds that would otherwise be made available for the purpose of this part and in no case to supplant those funds;

"(6) provide assurances that, in the event that funds made available to the academic department or program under this part are insufficient to provide the assistance due a student under the commitment entered into between the academic department or program and the student, the academic department or program will endeavor, from any funds available to it, to fulfill the commitment to the student;

"(7) provide that the applicant will comply with the limitations set forth in section 945;

"(8) provide assurances that the academic department will provide at least 1 year of supervised training in instruction for students; and

"(9) include such other information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"SEC. 945. AWARDS TO GRADUATE STUDENTS.

"(a) COMMITMENTS TO GRADUATE STUDENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An academic department or program of an institution of higher education shall make commitments to graduate students (including students pursuing a doctoral degree after having completed a master's degree program at an institution of higher education) at any point in their graduate study to provide stipends for the length of time necessary for a student to complete the course of graduate study, but in no case longer than 5 years.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—No such commitments shall be made to students under this part unless the academic department or program has determined adequate funds are available to fulfill the commitment either from funds received or anticipated under this part, or from institutional funds.

"(b) AMOUNT OF STIPENDS.—The Secretary shall make payments to institutions of higher education for the purpose of paying stipends to individuals who are awarded fellowships under this part. The stipends the Secretary establishes shall reflect the purpose of this program to encourage highly talented students to undertake graduate study as described in this part. In the case of an individual who receives such individual's first stipend under this part in academic year 1993–1994 or any succeeding academic year, such stipend shall be set at a level of support equal to that provided by the National Science Foundation graduate fellowships, except such amount shall be adjusted as necessary so as not to exceed the fellow's demonstrated level of need according to measurements of need approved by the Secretary.

"(c) SUPPLEMENTATION RULE.—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 944(b)(6), any non-Federal funds provided to a student in accordance with section 944(b)(2) by the academic department or program of an institution of higher education for tuition and fees under subsection (a), may be used to supplement stipends awarded under this part.

"(d) ACADEMIC PROGRESS REQUIRED.—Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a), no student shall receive an award—

"(1) except during periods in which such student is maintaining satisfactory progress in, and devoting essentially full time to, study or research in the field in which such fellowship was awarded, or

"(2) if the student is engaging in gainful employment other than part-time employment involved in teaching, research, or similar activities determined by the institution to be in support of the student's progress towards a degree.

"SEC. 946. ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE FOR COST OF EDUCATION.

"(a) PAYMENTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary shall (in addition to stipends paid to individuals under this subpart) pay to the institution of higher education, for each individual awarded a fellowship at such institution, $9,000 with respect to such awards made for the academic year 1993–1994, to be adjusted annually thereafter in accordance with inflation as determined by the Department of Labor's Consumer Price Index for the previous calendar year.

"(b) USE FOR OVERHEAD PROHIBITED.—Funds made available pursuant to this part may not be used for the general operational overhead of the academic department or program.

"SEC. 947. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this part.

"PART E—FACULTY DEVELOPMENT FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

"SEC. 951. FELLOWSHIPS AUTHORIZED.

"(a) FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary shall make grants to institutions of higher education or consortia of such institutions and nonprofit organizations associated with institutions of higher education, with a demonstrated record of enhancing the access of individuals from underrepresented groups including African Americans, Asian Americans, Hispanic Americans, Native Americans, and Native Hawaiians, to enable such institutions or consortia to—

"(1) identify talented faculty from underrepresented groups who wish to—

"(A) continue in the higher education professorate and obtain a doctoral degree; or

"(B) participate in faculty professional development programs specifically designed to advance the careers of underrepresented minorities;

"(2) identify talented baccalaureate degree recipients from underrepresented groups who have financial need and who wish to obtain a doctoral degree and enter the higher education professorate; and

"(3) provide the individuals described in paragraphs (1) and (2) with a fellowship to assist such students in obtaining a doctoral degree or to participate in a faculty development program.

"(b) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—In awarding grants pursuant to subsection (a), the Secretary shall ensure—

"(1) an equitable geographic distribution of such grants; and

"(2) that both public and private institutions of higher education are fairly represented among the grant recipients.

"(c) SPECIAL RULE.—

"(1) EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION.—Each institution of higher education or consortium receiving a grant under this part shall ensure that during the period of the grant there is an equitable distribution of fellowships under this part among underrepresented groups.

"(2) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be interpreted to require any institution of higher education or consortium to grant preference or disparate treatment to the members of one group on account of an imbalance which may exist with respect to the total number or percentage of individuals of such group participating in or receiving the benefits of the program authorized in this part, in comparison with the total number or percentage of individuals of such group in any community, State, section, or other area.

"(d) WAIVER BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary may waive all or any portion of the requirement under subsection (b) upon application of any institution which is eligible for funds under title III of this Act, pursuant to criteria established by the Secretary by regulation.

"(e) SELECTION REQUIREMENTS.—In awarding grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give priority to applications describing programs that—

"(1) provide to each fellowship recipient—

"(A) a tuition waiver; and

"(B)(i) a minimum $2,000 stipend; or

"(ii) additional financial support in conjunction with teaching or research activities that are part of such recipient's doctoral program;

"(2) provide additional financial support to each fellowship recipient from non-Federal resources, either in cash or in kind, such as contributions from the business community and civic organizations;

"(3) emphasize courses of study leading to the doctoral degrees in disciplines where minorities are underrepresented; and

"(4) describe steps to ensure that a fellowship recipient will teach at an institution of higher education where minority undergraduate students are likely to benefit from the educational experience and academic achievement of such recipient.

"(f) DESIGNATION.—Students receiving fellowship awards under this part shall be known as 'Faculty Development Fellows'.

"SEC. 952. FELLOWSHIPS.

"Each institution of higher education or consortium receiving a grant under this part shall award fellowships in an amount equal to the amount awarded to National Science Foundation graduate fellowship recipients for that year, or an amount based on the financial need of the recipient (as determined by the institution in accordance with measurements of need approved by the Secretary) whichever is less.

"SEC. 953. APPLICATION.

"(a) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—Each institution of higher education or consortium desiring a grant under this part shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and containing such information as the Secretary may by regulation reasonably require.

"(b) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to subsection (a) shall contain—

"(1) the institution of higher education's or consortium's plan for identifying and recruiting faculty and baccalaureate degree recipients who may participate in the program assisted under this part;

"(2) a description of the program or programs of doctoral study that the institution of higher education or consortium plans to offer in the institution's doctoral program;

"(3) the institution of higher education's or consortium's plan for using minority faculty and other faculty as advisors and academic resources in support of the program assisted under this part;

"(4) a description of other resources of the institution of higher education or consortium, including tuition waivers, assistantships or financial aid other than loans, that such institution or consortium shall make available to fellowship recipients;

"(5) a description of the method such institution or consortium shall use to determine a student's financial need;

"(6) the names of those undergraduate institutions which are historically or predominantly black colleges and universities or other institutions with significant enrollments of African Americans, Asian Americans, Hispanic Americans, Native Hawaiians, Pacific Islanders, and Native Americans which have agreed to cooperate with the applicant institution to carry out the purposes of this part; and

"(7) such other assurances and information as the Secretary may reasonably require by regulation.

"SEC. 954. FELLOWSHIP AGREEMENT.

"Each recipient of a fellowship under this part shall enter into an agreement with the institution of higher education or consortium awarding such fellowship under which the fellowship recipient shall—

"(1) in the case of a fellowship recipient described in section 951(a)(1), within a 5-year period after completing the doctoral degree for which the fellowship under this part was awarded, teach, for a period of not less than 1 year for each year for which financial assistance under this part was received, in a public or private nonprofit institution of higher education that has a significant minority enrollment;

"(2) in the case of a fellowship recipient described in section 951(a)(2), within a 5-year period after completing the doctoral degree for which the fellowship under this part was awarded, teach, for a period of not less than 1 year for each year for which financial assistance under this part was received, in a public or private nonprofit institution of higher education;

"(3) agree to provide the Secretary with evidence of compliance, determined pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary, with the provisions of paragraph (1) or (2); and

"(4) repay all or part of the fellowship received, plus interest, and if applicable reasonable collection fees, under regulations issued by the Secretary, in the event the conditions of paragraph (1) or (2) are not complied with, except as provided in section 956.

"SEC. 955. FELLOWSHIP REPAYMENT PROVISIONS.

"A recipient of a fellowship under this part found by the Secretary to be in noncompliance with the agreement entered into under section 954(1) or 954(2) shall be required to repay a pro rata amount of such fellowship assistance received, plus interest (but in no event at an interest rate higher than the rate applicable to loans in the applicable period under part B of title IV) and, where applicable, reasonable collection fees, on a schedule and at a rate of interest to be prescribed by the Secretary by regulations issued pursuant to this part.

"SEC. 956. EXCEPTIONS TO REPAYMENT PROVISIONS.

"(a) DEFERRAL DURING CERTAIN PERIODS.—A recipient shall not be considered in violation of the agreement entered into pursuant to section 954(1) or (2) during any period in which the recipient—

"(1) is pursuing a full-time course of study related to the field of teaching at an eligible institution;

"(2) is serving, not in excess of 3 years, as a member of the armed services of the United States;

"(3) is temporarily totally disabled for a period of time not to exceed 3 years as established by sworn affidavit of a qualified physician;

"(4) is unable to secure employment for a period not to exceed 12 months by reason of the care required by a spouse who is disabled;

"(5) is seeking and unable to find full-time employment for a single period not to exceed 12 months;

"(6) is engaged in full-time employment as a teacher in a public or private nonprofit preschool, elementary or secondary school, or a public or private nonprofit preschool, education program; or

"(7) satisfies the provisions of additional repayment exceptions that may be prescribed by the Secretary in regulations issued pursuant to this part.

"(b) FORGIVENESS IF PERMANENTLY TOTALLY DISABLED.—A recipient shall be excused from repayment of any fellowship assistance received under this part if the recipient becomes permanently totally disabled as established by sworn affidavit of a qualified physician.

"SEC. 957. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

Part A of title X of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART A—FUND FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION

"Subpart 1—Program Authority

"SEC. 1001. FUND FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION.

"(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to, or enter into contracts with, institutions of higher education or combinations of such institutions and other public and private nonprofit institutions and agencies, to enable such institutions and combinations of such institutions to improve postsecondary education opportunities by—

"(1) encouraging the reform, innovation, and improvement of postsecondary education, and providing equal educational opportunity for all;

"(2) the creation of institutions and programs involving new paths to career and professional training, and new combinations of academic and experiential learning;

"(3) the establishment of institutions and programs based on the technology of communications;

"(4) the carrying out in postsecondary educational institutions of changes in internal structure and operations designed to clarify institutional priorities and purposes;

"(5) the design and introduction of cost-effective methods of instruction and operation;

"(6) the introduction of institutional reforms designed to expand individual opportunities for entering and reentering institutions and pursuing programs of study tailored to individual needs;

"(7) the introduction of reforms in graduate education, in the structure of academic professions, and in the recruitment and retention of faculties; and

"(8) the creation of new institutions and programs for examining and awarding credentials to individuals, and the introduction of reforms in current institutional practices related thereto.

"(b) PLANNING GRANTS.—The Secretary is authorized to make planning grant to institutions of higher education for the development and testing of innovative techniques in postsecondary education. Such grants shall not exceed $20,000.

"SEC. 1002. NATIONAL BOARD OF THE FUND FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established a National Board of the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Board'). The Board shall consist of 15 members appointed by the Secretary for overlapping 3-year terms. A majority of the Board shall constitute a quorum. Any member of the Board who has served for 6 consecutive years shall thereafter be ineligible for appointment to the Board during a 2-year period following the expiration of such sixth year.

"(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall designate one of the members of the Board as Chairperson of the Board. A majority of the members of the Board shall be public interest representatives, including students, and a minority shall be educational representatives. All members selected shall be individuals able to contribute an important perspective on priorities for improvement in postsecondary education and strategies of educational and institutional change.

"(2) APPOINTMENT OF DIRECTOR.—The Secretary shall appoint the Director of the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Director').

"(c) DUTIES.—The Board shall—

"(1) advise the Secretary and the Director on priorities for the improvement of postsecondary education and make such recommendations as the Board may deem appropriate for the improvement of postsecondary education and for the evaluation, dissemination, and adaptation of demonstrated improvements in postsecondary educational practice;

"(2) advise the Secretary and the Director on the operation of the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education, including advice on planning documents, guidelines, and procedures for grant competitions prepared by the Fund; and

"(3) meet at the call of the Chairperson, except that the Board shall meet whenever one-third or more of the members request in writing that a meeting be held.

"(d) INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE.—The Director shall make available to the Board such information and assistance as may be necessary to enable the Board to carry out its functions.

"SEC. 1003. ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

"(a) TECHNICAL EMPLOYEES.—The Secretary may appoint, for terms not to exceed 3 years, without regard to the provisions of title 5 of the United States Code governing appointments in the competitive service, not more than 5 technical employees to administer this subpart who may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

"(b) PROCEDURES.—The Director shall establish procedures for reviewing and evaluating grants and contracts made or entered into under this subpart. Procedures for reviewing grant applications or contracts for financial assistance under this section may not be subject to any review outside of officials responsible for the administration of the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education.

"SEC. 1004. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part (except for section 1001(b)) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(b) PLANNING GRANTS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out section 1001(b) $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"Subpart 2—Special Projects in Areas of National Need

"SEC. 1011. SPECIAL PROJECTS.

"(a) GRANT AUTHORITY.—The Director is authorized to make grants to institutions of higher education, or consortia thereof, and such other public agencies and nonprofit organizations as the Director deems necessary for innovative projects concerning one or more areas of particular national need identified by the Director.

"(b) APPLICATION.—No grant shall be made under this part unless an application is made at such time, in such manner, and contains or is accompanied by such information as the Secretary may require.

"(c) AREAS OF NATIONAL NEED.—Areas of national need shall initially include, but shall not be limited to, the following:

"(1) International exchanges.

"(2) Campus climate and culture.

"(3) Evaluation and dissemination.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

SEC. 1002. AMENDMENTS TO PART B.

(a) MINORITY SCIENCE IMPROVEMENT PROGRAMS.—Section 1021(b) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135b(b)) is amended by inserting ", particularly minority women," after "ethnic minorities".

(b) MULTIAGENCY STUDY.—Section 1024 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135b-3) is amended to read as follows:

"MULTIAGENCY STUDY OF MINORITY SCIENCE PROGRAMS

"SEC. 1024. The Secretary, in cooperation with the heads of other departments and agencies that operate programs similar in purposes to the Minority Science Improvement Program which seek to increase minority participation and representation in scientific fields, shall submit a report to the President and Congress summarizing and evaluating such programs by January 1, 1996.".

(c) SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING ACCESS.—Section 1033(5) of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135c-2(5)) is amended by inserting ", particularly minority women," after "minority students".

(d) CONSULTATION.—Section 1043 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135d-2) is amended by inserting "and consult" after "cooperate".

(e) ADVISORY PROVISIONS.—Section 1045 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135d-4) is repealed.

(f) REAUTHORIZATION OF PART B.—Section 1047 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135d-6) is amended to read as follows:

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 1047. (a) AUTHORIZATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the purposes of this part, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(b) APPROPRIATION LIMITATION.—For any fiscal year, 50 percent of the funds appropriated for this part shall be allocated for the purpose of section 1021, 33.33 percent for the purpose of section 1031, and 16.67 percent for the purpose of section 1032.".

SEC. 1003. WOMEN AND MINORITIES SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING OUTREACH DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.

Part C of title X of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135e et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART C—WOMEN AND MINORITIES SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING OUTREACH DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM

"SEC. 1061. PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this part to provide grants to institutions working in partnership with elementary and secondary schools to establish outreach programs for female and minority elementary and secondary school students to increase the participation of those students in science and engineering undergraduate and graduate degree programs.

"SEC. 1062. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

"The Secretary shall, in accordance with the provision of this part, award grants to eligible institutions to enable such eligible institutions to pay the Federal share of the costs of carrying out a program that is designed to enhance, coordinate, develop, and expand programs and initiatives which identity and encourage female and minority elementary and secondary school students to pursue higher education in preparation for careers in science and engineering.

"SEC. 1063. ELIGIBLE INSTITUTIONS.

"(a) DEFINITION.—For the purpose of this part the term 'eligible institution' means an institution of higher education which—

"(1) has science and engineering programs;

"(2) has female and minority enrollment and retention rates significantly higher than the national averages of such rates, but does not meet the definition of 'minority institution' set forth in section 1046(3);

"(3) demonstrates its ability to conduct outreach activities in science and engineering to female and minority students at the elementary and secondary school levels;

"(4) incorporates the use of advanced telecommunications equipment, including fiber optics and interactive video systems, to improve the development of intermodal programs targeted toward female and minority students; and

"(5) enters into a partnership agreement with a local educational agency and at least 1 local business or industry; and

"(6) describes in the application submitted pursuant to section 1065 the duties of each partner entering into the partnership agreement described in paragraph (5).

"(b) LIMITATION.—The Secretary shall award at least 40 percent of the total funds made available under this section in any fiscal year to eligible institutions located in any of the Nation's ten largest metropolitan statistical areas.

"SEC. 1064. AMOUNT, DURATION, AND USE OF FUNDS.

"(a) AMOUNT AND DURATION OF GRANTS.—Grants under this part shall be provided in an amount which is not less than $500,000 in a single fiscal year, and shall be continued for a period not to exceed 5 fiscal years.

"(b) USE OF GRANTS.—Grants provided under this section may be used for—

"(1) the operation and administration of outreach programs to elementary and secondary school students;

"(2) faculty development programs in support of outreach programs;

"(3) curriculum development in support of the outreach programs;

"(4) disseminating information about the outreach programs to elementary and secondary schools and institutions of higher education;

"(5) supporting cooperative efforts with elementary and secondary schools, community groups, business and industry, and other education-related groups, to expand the scope of the outreach programs; and

"(6) establishing infrastructure necessary to operate programs, specifically including telecommunications equipment providing distance learning capabilities.

"SEC. 1065. APPLICATION.

"To receive a grant under this part, an eligible institution shall submit an application at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information, as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall contain a description of the goals of the activities to be assisted.

"SEC. 1066. EVALUATION.

"(a) INDEPENDENT ANNUAL EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall provide for the annual independent evaluation of activities assisted under this part to determine their effectiveness in providing—

"(1) the operation and administration of outreach programs to elementary and secondary school students;

"(2) faculty development programs in support of outreach programs;

"(3) curriculum development in support of the outreach programs;

"(4) disseminating information about the outreach programs to elementary and secondary schools and institutions of higher education;

"(5) supporting cooperative efforts with elementary and secondary schools, community groups, business and industry, and other education-related groups, to expand the scope of outreach programs; and

"(6) establishing infrastructure necessary to operate programs, specifically including telecommunications equipment providing distance learning capabilities.

"(b) EVALUATIONS.—

"(1) CONDUCT AND CRITERIA.—Each evaluation described in subsection (a) shall be conducted by individuals not directly involved in the administration of the activities assisted under this part. Such independent evaluators and the program administrators shall jointly develop evaluation criteria which provide for appropriate analysis of the factors described in subsection (a). When possible, each evaluation shall include comparisons with appropriate control groups.

"(2) PROGRAM EFFECTIVENESS.—In order to determine the effectiveness of assistance provided under this part in achieving the goals stated in the application described in section 1065, each evaluation described in subsection (a) shall contain objective measures of such goals and, where feasible, shall obtain the specific views of participants about the activities assisted under this part.

"(c) REPORT TO CONGRESS AND DISSEMINATION.—The Secretary shall prepare and submit to the Congress a review and summary of the results of the evaluations described in subsection (a) not later than September 30, 1997.

"SEC. 1067. FEDERAL SHARE.

"The Federal share of the costs of activities assisted under this part shall be 90 percent of the costs of such activities in the first year an eligible institution receives a grant under this part, 80 percent of such cost in the second such year, 70 percent of such cost in the third such year, 60 percent of such cost in the fourth such year, and 50 percent of such costs in the fifth such year. The remaining funds shall be provided from non-Federal sources.

"SEC. 1068. SUPPLEMENT NOT SUPPLANT.

"An eligible institution may use funds received under this part only so as to supplement and, to the extent practicable, increase the level of funds that would be available from non-Federal sources for the activities described in section 1064(b) and in no case may such funds be so used as to supplant such funds from such non-Federal sources.

"SEC. 1069. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years. Not more than 3 percent of the amount appropriated for this part in any fiscal year may be used for purposes of section 1066.".

SEC. 1004. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LEADERSHIP PROGRAM.

Title X of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1135 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART D—DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER LEADERSHIP PROGRAM

"SEC. 1181. SHORT TITLE; ESTABLISHMENT OF THE PROGRAM.

"(a) SHORT TITLE.—This part may be cited as the 'Dwight D. Eisenhower Leadership Development Act of 1992'.

"(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a program to be known as the 'Dwight D. Eisenhower Leadership Development Program'.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The program assisted under this part shall be established in conjunction with institutions of higher education which are specially prepared to undertake the development of new generations of leaders in the areas of national and international affairs.

"(c) FUNCTIONS OF THE PROGRAM.—The functions of the program assisted under this part shall include—

"(1) stimulating and supporting the development of leadership skills among new generations of American college students;

"(2) directing a national program that identifies, recruits, inspires, and educates outstanding young men and women regarding leadership roles in a wide variety of fields in both the public and private sectors;

"(3) offering opportunities for young American leaders who meet the requirements of section 484(a) of this Act and who are broadly representative of the population of the United States to benefit from internships in national and international organizations, with special attention being given to establishing such opportunities in developing countries;

"(4) developing curriculum for secondary and postsecondary education;

"(5) developing a prototype for understanding and teaching critical leadership skills to young Americans and encouraging institutions of higher education to establish similar leadership programs throughout the United States and abroad; and

"(6) stimulating the theoretical and practical study of leadership and leadership development to develop both a better understanding of leadership and improved methods to teach critical skills to young adults.

"(d) OPERATION OF THE PROGRAM.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to or enter into cooperative agreements, contracts, or leases with institutions of higher education (as defined in section 1201 of this title) or with nonprofit private organizations in consortia with such institutions to operate the program assisted under this part.

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this part.".

TITLE XI—COMMUNITY SERVICE PROGRAMS

SEC. 1101. URBAN COMMUNITY SERVICE.

Title XI of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1136 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE XI—COMMUNITY SERVICE PROGRAMS

"PART A—URBAN COMMUNITY SERVICE

"SEC. 1101. FINDINGS.

"The Congress finds that—

"(1) the Nation's urban centers are facing increasingly pressing problems and needs in the areas of economic development, community infrastructure and service, social policy, public health, housing, crime, education, environmental concerns, planning and work force preparation;

"(2) there are, in the Nation's urban institutions, people with underutilized skills, knowledge, and experience who are capable of providing a vast range of services toward the amelioration of the problems described in paragraph (1);

"(3) the skills, knowledge and experience in these urban institutions, if applied in a systematic and sustained manner, can make a significant contribution to the solution of such problems; and

"(4) the application of such skills, knowledge and experience is hindered by the limited funds available to redirect attention to solutions to such urban problems.

"SEC. 1102. PURPOSE; PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this part to provide incentives to urban academic institutions to enable such institutions to work with private and civic organization to devise and implement solutions to pressing and severe problems in their communities.

"(b) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary is authorized to carry out a program of providing assistance to eligible institutions to enable such institutions to carry out the activities described in section 1104 in accordance with the provisions of this part.

"SEC. 1103. APPLICATION FOR URBAN COMMUNITY SERVICE GRANTS.

"(a) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An eligible institution seeking assistance under this part shall submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such form, and containing or accompanied by such information and assurances as the Secretary may require by regulation.

"(2) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) describe the activities and services for which assistance is sought; and

"(B) include a plan that is agreed to by the members of a consortium that includes, in addition to the eligible institution, one or more of the following entities:

"(i) A community college.

"(ii) An urban school system.

"(iii) A local government.

"(iv) A business or other employer.

"(v) A nonprofit institution.

"(3) WAIVER.—The Secretary may waive the consortium requirements described in paragraph (2) for any applicant who can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the applicant has devised an integrated and coordinated plan which meets the purpose of this part.

"(b) PRIORITY IN SELECTION OF APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary shall give priority to applications that propose to conduct joint projects supported by other local, State, and Federal programs.

"(c) SELECTION PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, develop a formal procedure for the submission of applications under this part and shall publish in the Federal Register an announcement of that procedure and the availability of funds under this part.

"SEC. 1104. ALLOWABLE ACTIVITIES.

"Funds made available under this part shall be used to support planning, applied research, training, resource exchanges or technology transfers, the delivery of services, or other activities the purpose of which is to design and implement programs to assist urban communities to meet and address their pressing and severe problems, such as the following:

"(1) Work force preparation.

"(2) Urban poverty and the alleviation of such poverty.

"(3) Health care, including delivery and access.

"(4) Underperforming school systems and students.

"(5) Problems faced by the elderly and individuals with disabilities in urban settings.

"(6) Problems faced by families and children.

"(7) Campus and community crime prevention, including enhanced security and safety awareness measures as well as coordinated programs addressing the root causes of crime.

"(8) Urban housing.

"(9) Urban infrastructure.

"(10) Economic development.

"(11) Urban environmental concerns.

"(12) Other problem areas which participants in the consortium described in section 1103(a)(2)(B) concur are of high priority in the urban area.

"(13)(A) Problems faced by individuals with disabilities regarding accessibility to institutions of higher education and other public and private community facilities.

"(B) Amelioration of existing attitudinal barriers that prevent full inclusion by individuals with disabilities with their community.

"SEC. 1105. PEER REVIEW.

"The Secretary shall designate a peer review panel to review applications submitted under this part and make recommendations for funding to the Secretary. In selecting the peer review panel, the Secretary may consult with other appropriate Cabinet-level officials and with non-Federal organizations, to ensure that the panel will be geographically balanced and be composed of representatives from public and private institutions of higher education, labor, business, State and local government, who have expertise in urban community service or in education.

"SEC. 1106. DISBURSEMENT OF FUNDS.

"(a) MULTIYEAR AVAILABILITY.—Subject to the availability of appropriations, grants under this part may be made on a multiyear basis, except that no institution, individually or as a participant in a consortium of such institutions, may receive a grant for more than 5 years.

"(b) EQUITABLE GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—The Secretary shall award grants under this part in a manner that achieves equitable geographic distribution of such grants.

"(c) MATCHING REQUIREMENT.—An applicant under this part and the local governments associated with its application shall contribute to the conduct of the program supported by the grant an amount from non-Federal funds equal to at least one-fourth of the amount of the grant, which contribution may be in cash or in kind.

"SEC. 1107. DESIGNATION OF URBAN GRANT INSTITUTIONS.

"The Secretary shall publish a list of eligible institutions under this part and shall designate these institutions of higher education as 'Urban Grant Institutions'. The Secretary shall establish a national network of Urban Grant Institutions so that the results of individual projects achieved in one metropolitan area can then be generalized, disseminated, replicated and applied throughout the Nation.

"SEC. 1108. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part:

"(1) URBAN AREA.—The term 'urban area' means a metropolitan statistical area having a population of not less than 350,000, or two contiguous metropolitan statistical areas having a population of not less than 350,000, or, in any State which does not have a metropolitan statistical area which has such a population, the entity of the State having an agreement or submitting an application under section 1103, or, if no such entity has an agreement, the Secretary shall designate one urban area for the purposes of this part.

"(2) ELIGIBLE INSTITUTION.—The term 'eligible institution' means—

"(A) a nonprofit municipal university, established by the governing body of the city in which it is located, and operating as of the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 under that authority; or

"(B) an institution of higher education, or a consortium of such institutions any one of which meets all of the requirements of this paragraph, which—

"(i) is located in an urban area;

"(ii) draws a substantial portion of its undergraduate students from the urban area in which such institution is located, or from contiguous areas;

"(iii) carries out programs to make postsecondary educational opportunities more accessible to residents of such urban area, or contiguous areas;

"(iv) has the present capacity to provide resources responsive to the needs and priorities of such urban area and contiguous areas;

"(v) offers a range of professional, technical, or graduate programs sufficient to sustain the capacity of such institution to provide such resources; and

"(vi) has demonstrated and sustained a sense of responsibility to such urban area and contiguous areas and the people of such areas.

"SEC. 1109. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this part.

"PART B—INNOVATIVE PROJECTS

"Subpart 1—Innovative Projects for Community Service

"SEC. 1121. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this subpart to support innovative projects in order to encourage student participation in community service projects, including literacy projects.

"SEC. 1122. INNOVATIVE PROJECTS FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE.

"(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this subpart, to make grants to and enter into contracts with institutions of higher education (including combinations of such institutions) and with such other public agencies and nonprofit private organizations as the Secretary deems necessary for innovative projects designed to carry out the purpose of this subpart.

"(2) PROJECTS.—The projects described in paragraph (1) may—

"(A) support research regarding the effects of student community service organizations;

"(B) provide assistance to student organizations that work with community service organizations;

"(C) support linkages between youth corps as defined in section 101(30) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 and institutions of higher education; and

"(D) support innovative student service programs.

"(b) APPLICATIONS.—No grant may be made and no contract may be entered into under this section unless an application is made at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may require.

"(c) APPLICABLE PROCEDURES.—

"(1) PROCEDURES.—No application may be approved under subsection (b) unless the National Board of the Fund for Improvement of Postsecondary Education, under procedures established by the Director of such Fund, approves the application.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The provisions of section 1003(b) shall apply to grants made under this subpart.

"(d) DEFINITION.—For the purpose of this subpart, the term 'community service' means planned, supervised services designed to improve the quality of life for community residents, particularly community residents with low income, or to assist in the solution of particular problems related to the needs of such residents.

"Subpart 2—Student Literacy Corps and Student Mentoring Corps

"SEC. 1141. PURPOSE.

"It is the purpose of this subpart to provide financial assistance to institutions of higher education to promote the development of literacy corps programs and mentoring corps programs to be operated by institutions of higher education in public community agencies in the communities in which such institutions are located.

"SEC. 1142. LITERACY CORPS PROGRAM AND MENTORING CORPS PROGRAM.

"(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—From the amount appropriated for this subpart pursuant to section 1151 for any fiscal year, the Secretary is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this subpart, to make grants to institutions of higher education for not more than 4 years to pay the Federal share of the cost of carrying out a student literacy corps program or a student mentoring corps program.

"(b) LIMITATION.—An institution of higher education shall only receive 1 grant under this subpart in each fiscal year.

"(c) CONTINUATION OF LITERACY OR MENTORING PROGRAM.—Grants under this section are renewable upon application by the institution of higher education in accordance with section 1144.

"(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of carrying out a student literacy corps program or a student mentoring corps program under this subpart shall be—

"(A) not more than 100 percent for an initial grant to an institution of higher education; and

"(B) not more than 75 percent for a grant renewed under subsection (c).

"(2) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of carrying out a student literacy corps or a student mentoring corps program under this subpart may be paid from any non-Federal sources.

"SEC. 1143. USES OF FUNDS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Funds made available under this subpart may be used for—

"(1) grants to institutions of higher education for—

"(A) the costs of participation of institutions of higher education in the student literacy corps program or student mentoring corps program for which assistance is sought; and

"(B) stipends for student coordinators engaged in the student literacy corps program or student mentoring corps program for which assistance is sought; and

"(2) technical assistance, collection and dissemination of information, and evaluation in accordance with section 1145.

"(b) LIMITATIONS.—No grant under this subpart to an institution of higher education may exceed $100,000. No institution of higher education may expend more than $35,000 of a grant made under this subpart in the first year in which the institution receives such a grant.

"SEC. 1144. APPLICATIONS.

"(a) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—Each institution of higher education desiring to receive a grant under this subpart shall submit an application to the Secretary, at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(b) CONTENTS OF APPLICATION.—

"(1) LITERACY CORPS.—Each application to conduct a student literacy corps program under this subpart shall—

"(A) contain assurances that the institution will use the grant in accordance with section 1143;

"(B) contain adequate assurances that—

"(i) the institution has established 1 or more courses of instruction for academic credit which are designed to combine the training of undergraduate students in various academic departments such as social sciences, economics, and education with experience as tutors;

"(ii) such individuals will be required, as a condition of receiving credit in such course, to perform, for each credit, not less than 2 hours a week, of voluntary, uncompensated service during the academic term in a public community agency as a tutor in such agency's educational or literacy program;

"(iii) such tutoring service will be supplementary to the existing instructional services, offered in a structured classroom setting, and furnished under the supervision of qualified personnel; and

"(iv) the institution will locate such tutoring services in one or more public community agencies which serve educationally or economically disadvantaged individuals, and will give priority in providing tutoring services to—

"(I) educationally disadvantaged students receiving services under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965;

"(II) students with disabilities; and

"(III) illiterate parents of educationally or economically disadvantaged elementary school students, with special emphasis on single-parent households; and

"(C) demonstrate that the institution of higher education has participated, prior to applying for a grant under this subpart, in community service activities, including the conduct of a cooperative education program; and

"(D) contain such other assurances as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(2) MENTORING CORPS.—Each application to conduct a student mentoring corps program under this subpart shall—

"(A) contain assurances that the institution will use the grant in accordance with section 1144;

"(B) contain adequate assurances that—

"(i) the institution has established 1 or more courses of instruction for academic credit which are designed to combine the training of undergraduate students of various academic departments with experience as mentors;

"(ii) such individuals will be required, as a condition of receiving credit in such course, to perform not less than 60 hours of voluntary, uncompensated service during the academic term as a mentor to economically disadvantaged children and youth;

"(iii) such mentoring will be complimentary to the existing instructional services offered in a structured classroom setting, and will include structured and informal activities geared towards improving the academic, social and emotional development of children in the programs;

"(iv) the institution will locate public community agencies or elementary or secondary schools which serve educationally or economically disadvantaged youth and will give priority in providing mentoring services to economically disadvantaged children and youth through community-based organizations or elementary or secondary schools;

"(C) demonstrate that the institution of higher education has participated, prior to applying for a grant under this subpart, in community service activities, including the conduct of a cooperative education program; and

"(D) contain such other assurances as the Secretary may reasonably require.

"(c) WAIVER.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may, upon request of an institution of higher education which does not meet the requirements of subsection (b)(1)(C) or (b)(2)(C), grant a waiver of the requirement under such paragraph if the institution of higher education provides assurances that—

"(A) the institution of higher education has conducted another significant program which involves community outreach and service; or

"(B) its failure to engage in community service-related programs or activities prior to making application under this subpart will not impede the ability of the institution to engage in the outreach efforts necessary to carry out the requirements of this subpart.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE.—An institution of higher education may apply for a waiver as part of the application described in subsection (b).

"(d) CARRYOVER OF FUNDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any fiscal year in which funds are appropriated under this subpart but not expended by the end of such fiscal year, at least 75 percent of such funds shall remain available in the succeeding fiscal year to carry out this subpart.

"SEC. 1145. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE AND COORDINATION CONTRACT.

"To the extent that funds are available therefor pursuant to section 1151, the Secretary may, directly or by way of grant, contract, or other arrangement—

"(1) provide technical assistance to grant recipients under this subpart;

"(2) collect and disseminate information with respect to programs assisted under this subpart; and

"(3) evaluate such programs and issue reports on the results of such evaluations.

"SEC. 1146. DEFINITIONS.

"For the purpose of this subpart—

"(1) INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION.—The term 'institution of higher education', in the case of an institution of higher education with a branch campus, means, at the election of the institution—

"(A) a branch campus of the institution; or

"(B) the institution.

"(2) PUBLIC COMMUNITY AGENCY.—The term 'public community agency' means an established community agency with an established program of instruction such as elementary and secondary schools, Head Start centers, prisons, agencies serving youth, and agencies serving individuals with disabilities, including disabled veterans.

"Subpart 3—Authorization of Appropriations

"SEC. 1151. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years of which, for any such fiscal year—

"(1) not more than one-third shall be available to carry out subpart 1; and

"(2) not less than two-thirds shall be available to carry out subpart 2.".

TITLE XII—GENERAL PROVISIONS AND DEMONSTRATION PROGRAMS

SEC. 1201. DEFINITIONS.

SEC. 1202. ANTIDISCRIMINATION.

Section 1202 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1142) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—" after "SEC. 1202."; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) LIMITATIONS ON STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit the rights or responsibilities of any individual under the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, or any other law.".

SEC. 1203. NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON INSTITUTIONAL QUALITY AND INTEGRITY.

Section 1205 of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1145) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 1205. COMMITTEE ON INSTITUTIONAL QUALITY AND INTEGRITY.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Department a Committee on Institutional Quality and Integrity (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Committee'), which shall be composed of 15 members appointed by the Secretary from among individuals who are representatives of, or knowledgeable concerning, education and training beyond secondary education, including representatives of all sectors and types of institutions of higher education (as defined in section 481(a)), to assess the process of eligibility and certification of such institutions under title IV of this Act and the provision of financial aid under title IV of this Act. The Secretary may also appoint to the Committee representatives of the general public serving on the National Advisory Committee on Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility (as such Committee was in existence on the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992).

"(b) TERMS OF MEMBERS.—Terms of office of each member of the Committee shall be 3 years, except that—

"(1) of the members first appointed to the Committee the Secretary shall designate—

"(A) 5 such members to serve for a term of 1 year;

"(B) 5 such members to serve for a term of 2 years; and

"(C) 5 such members to serve for a term of 3 years; and

"(2) any member appointed to fill in a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which the member's predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term.

"(c) FUNCTIONS.—The Committee shall—

"(1) advise the Secretary with respect to establishment and enforcement of the standards of accrediting agencies or associations under subpart 2 of part H;

"(2) advise the Secretary with respect to the recognition of a specific accrediting agency or association;

"(3) advise the Secretary with respect to the preparation and publication of the list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies and associations;

"(4) develop and recommend to the Secretary standards and criteria for specific categories of vocational training institutions and institutions of higher education for which there are no recognized accrediting agencies, associations, or State agencies, in order to establish the eligibility of such institutions on an interim basis for participation in federally funded programs;

"(5) advise the Secretary with respect to the eligibility and certification process for institutions of higher education under title IV of this Act, together with recommendations for improvements in such process;

"(6) advise the Secretary with respect to the functions of the Secretary under subpart 1 of part H, relating to State institutional integrity standards;

"(7) advise the Secretary with respect to the relationship between—

"(A) accreditation of institutions of higher education and the certification and eligibility of such institutions; and

"(B) State licensing responsibilities with respect to such institutions; and

"(8) carry out such other advisory functions relating to accreditation and institutional eligibility as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(d) MEETING PROCEDURES.—The Committee shall meet not less than twice each year at the call of the Chairperson. The date of, and agenda for, each meeting of the Committee shall be submitted in advance to the Secretary for approval. A representative of the Secretary shall be present at all meetings of the Committee.

"(e) REPORT.—The Committee shall, not later than November 30 of each year, make an annual report through the Secretary to the Congress. The annual report shall contain—

"(1) a list of the members of the Committee and their addresses;

"(2) a list of the functions of the Committee;

"(3) a list of dates and places of each meeting during the preceding fiscal year; and

"(4) a summary of the activities, findings and recommendations made by the Committee during the preceding fiscal year.

"(f) TERMINATION.—Subject to section 448(b) of the General Education Provision Act, the National Advisory Committee on Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility shall continue to exist until September 30, 1998.".

SEC. 1204. DISCLOSURE OF FOREIGN GIFTS AND FOREIGN OWNERSHIP.

Title XII of the Act (20 U.S.C. 1141 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 1208 the following section:

"SEC. 1209. DISCLOSURES OF FOREIGN GIFTS.

"(a) DISCLOSURE REPORT.—Whenever any institution is owned or controlled by a foreign source or receives a gift from or enters into a contract with a foreign source, the value of which is $250,000 or more, considered alone or in combination with all other gifts from or contracts with that foreign source within a calendar year, the institution shall file a disclosure report with the Secretary on January 31 or July 31, whichever is sooner.

"(b) CONTENTS OF REPORT.—Each report to the Secretary required by this Act shall contain:

"(1) For gifts received from or contracts entered into with a foreign source other than a foreign government, the aggregate dollar amount of such gifts and contracts attributable to a particular country. The country to which a gift is attributable is the country of citizenship, or if unknown, the principal residence for a foreign source who is a natural person, and the country of incorporation, or if unknown, the principal place of business, for a foreign source which is a legal entity.

"(2) For gifts received from or contracts entered into with a foreign government, the aggregate amount of such gifts and contracts received from each foreign government.

"(3) In the case of an institution which is owned or controlled by a foreign source, the identity of the foreign source, the date on which the foreign source assumed ownership or control, and any changes in program or structure resulting from the change in ownership or control.

"(c) ADDITIONAL DISCLOSURES FOR RESTRICTED AND CONDITIONAL GIFTS.—Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (b), whenever any institution receives a restricted or conditional gift or contract from a foreign source, the institution shall disclose:

"(1) For such gifts received from or contracts entered into with a foreign source other than a foreign government, the amount, the date, and a description of such conditions or restrictions. The report shall also disclose the country of citizenship, or if unknown, the principal residence for a foreign source which is a natural person, and the country of incorporation, or if unknown, the principal place of business for a foreign source which is a legal entity.

"(2) For gifts received from or contracts entered into with a foreign government, the amount, the date, a description of such conditions or restrictions, and the name of the foreign government.

"(d) RELATION TO OTHER REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) STATE REQUIREMENTS.—If an institution described under subsection (a) is within a State which has enacted requirements for public disclosure of gifts from or contracts with a foreign source that are substantially similar to the requirements of this section, a copy of the disclosure report filed with the State may be filed with the Secretary in lieu of a report required under subsection (a). The State in which the institution is located shall provide to the Secretary such assurances as the Secretary may require to establish that the institution has met the requirements for public disclosure under State law if the State report is filed.

"(2) USE OF OTHER FEDERAL REPORTS.—If an institution receives a gift from, or enters into a contract with, a foreign source, where any other department, agency, or bureau of the Executive Branch requires a report containing requirements substantially similar to those required under this Act, a copy of this report may be filed with the Secretary in lieu of a report required under subsection (a).

"(e) PUBLIC INSPECTION.—All disclosure reports required by this Act shall be public records open to inspection and copying during business hours.

"(f) ENFORCEMENT.—

"(1) COURT ORDERS.—Whenever it appears that an institution has failed to comply with the requirements of this section, including any rule or regulation promulgated thereunder, a civil action may be brought in an appropriate district court of the United States, or the appropriate United States court of any territory or other place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, to request such court to compel compliance with the requirements of the Act.

"(2) COSTS.—For knowing or willful failure to comply with the requirements of this section, including any rule or regulation promulgated thereunder, an institution shall pay to the Treasury of the United States the full costs to the United States of obtaining compliance, including all associated costs of investigation and enforcement.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may promulgate regulations to carry out the ministerial duties imposed on the Secretary by this section.

"(h) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this section—

"(1) the term 'contract' means any agreement for the acquisition by purchase, lease, or barter of property or services by the foreign source, for the direct benefit or use of either of the parties;

"(2) the term 'foreign source' means—

"(A) a foreign government, including an agency of a foreign government;

"(B) a legal entity, governmental or otherwise, created solely under the laws of a foreign state or states;

"(C) an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States or a trust territory or protectorate thereof; and

"(D) an agent, including a subsidiary or affiliate of a foreign legal entity, acting on behalf of a foreign source;

"(3) the term 'gift' means any gift of money or property;

"(4) the term 'institution' means any institution, public or private, or, if a multicampus institution, any single campus of such institution, in any State which—

"(A) is legally authorized within such State to provide a program of education beyond secondary school;

"(B) provides a program for which it awards a bachelor's degree (or provides not less than a 2-year program which is acceptable for full credit toward such a degree) or more advanced degrees; and

"(C) is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association and to which institution Federal financial assistance is extended (directly or indirectly through another entity or person), or which institution receives support from the extension of Federal financial assistance to any of its subunits; and

"(5) the term 'restricted or conditional gift or contract' means any endowment, gift, grant, contract, award, present, or property of any kind which includes provisions regarding (A) the employment, assignment, or termination of faculty; (B) the establishment of departments, centers, research or lecture programs, or new faculty positions; (C) the selection or admission of students; or (D) the award of grants, loans, scholarships, fellowships, or other forms of financial aid restricted to students of a specified country, religion, sex, ethnic origin, or political opinion.".

TITLE XIII—INDIAN HIGHER EDUCATION PROGRAMS

PART A—TRIBALLY CONTROLLED COMMUNITY COLLEGES

SEC. 1301. REAUTHORIZATION OF THE TRIBALLY CONTROLLED COMMUNITY COLLEGES ACT.

(a) GENERAL AUTHORIZATION.—Section 110(a) of the Tribally Controlled Community College Assistance Act of 1978 (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Act") (25 U.S.C. 1810(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 110. (a)(1) There is authorized to be appropriated, for the purpose of carrying out section 105 $3,200,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(2) There is authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of carrying out section 107, $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(3) There is authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of carrying out sections 112(b) and 113, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

"(4) Funds appropriated pursuant to the authorizations under this section for the fiscal year 1993 and for each of the succeeding 4 fiscal years shall be transferred by the Secretary of the Treasury through the most expeditious method available, with each of the Tribally Controlled Community Colleges being designated as its own certifying agency.".

(b) ENDOWMENT GRANTS.—Section 306(a) of the Act (25 U.S.C. 1836(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 306. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

(c) ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT.—Section 403 of the Act (25 U.S.C. 1852) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 403. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated for grants under this title, $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

(d) NAVAJO COMMUNITY COLLEGES.—Section 5(a)(1) of the Navajo Community College Act of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 640c–1(a)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. (a)(1) For the purpose of making construction grants under this Act, there are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.".

PART B—HIGHER EDUCATION TRIBAL GRANT AUTHORIZATION ACT

SEC. 1311. SHORT TITLE.

This part may be cited as the "Higher Education Tribal Grant Authorization Act".

SEC. 1312. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) there are increasing numbers of Indian students qualifying for postsecondary education, and there are increasing numbers desiring to go to postsecondary institutions;

(2) the needs of these students far outpace the resources available currently;

(3) Indian tribes have shown an increasing interest in administering programs serving these individuals and making decisions on these programs reflecting their determinations of the tribal and human needs;

(4) the contracting process under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act has provided a mechanism for the majority of the tribes to assume control over this program from the Bureau of Indian Affairs;

(5) however, inherent limitations in the contracting philosophy and mechanism, coupled with cumbersome administrative procedures developed by the Bureau of Indian Affairs have effectively limited the efficiency and effectiveness of these programs;

(6) the provision of these services in the most effective and efficient form possible is necessary for tribes, the country, and the individuals to be served; and

(7) these services are part of the Federal Government's continuing trust responsibility to provide education services to American Indian and Alaska Natives.

SEC. 1313. PROGRAM AUTHORITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall, from the amounts appropriated for the purpose of supporting higher education grants for Indian students under the authority of the Act of November 2, 1921, popularly known as the Snyder Act (25 U.S.C. 13), make grants to Indian tribes in accordance with the requirements of this part to permit those tribes to provide financial assistance to individual Indian students for the cost of attendance at institutions of higher education.

(b) LIMITATION ON SECRETARY'S AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall not place any restrictions on the use of funds provided to an Indian tribe under this part that is not expressly authorized by this part.

(c) EFFECT ON FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITIES.—The provisions of this part shall not affect any trust responsibilities of the Federal Government.

(d) NO TERMINATION FOR ADMINISTRATIVE CONVENIENCE.—Grants provided under this part may not be terminated, modified, suspended, or reduced only for the convenience of the Administering agency.

SEC. 1314. QUALIFICATION FOR GRANTS TO TRIBES.

(a) CONTRACTING TRIBES.—Any Indian tribe that obtains funds for educational purposes similar to those authorized in this part pursuant to contract under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act may qualify for a grant under this part by submitting to the Secretary a notice of intent to administer a student assistance program under section 1313. Such notice shall be effective for the fiscal year following the fiscal year in which it is submitted, except that if such notice is submitted during the last 90 days of a fiscal year such notice shall be effective the second fiscal year following the fiscal year in which it is submitted, unless the Secretary waives this limitation.

(b) NONCONTRACTING TRIBES.—Any Indian tribe that is not eligible to qualify for a grant under this part by filing a notice under subsection (a) may qualify for such a grant by filing an application for such a grant. Such application shall be submitted under guidelines for programs under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, as in effect on January 1, 1991, and shall be reviewed under the standards, practices, and procedures applicable to applications to contract under such Act as in effect on the date the application is received, except that—

(1) if the tribe is not notified that its application has been disapproved within 180 days after it is filed with the Secretary, the application shall be deemed to be approved;

(2) if the application is disapproved, the Secretary shall provide technical assistance to the tribe for purposes of correcting deficiencies in the application;

(3) the Secretary shall designate an office or official to receive such applications, and shall toll the 180-day period described in paragraph (1) from the date of receipt by such office or official; and

(4) applications shall be approved for the fiscal year following the fiscal year in which submitted, unless the Secretary waives the limitation of this paragraph.

(c) TERMINATION OF GRANTS.—

(1) CONTINUING ELIGIBILITY PRESUMED.—An Indian tribe which has qualified under subsection (a) or (b) for a grant under this part for any fiscal year shall continue to be eligible for such a grant for each succeeding fiscal year unless the Secretary revokes such eligibility for a cause described in paragraph (2).

(2) CAUSES FOR LOSS OF ELIGIBILITY.—The Secretary may revoke the eligibility of an Indian tribe for a grant under this part if such tribe—

(A) fails to submit to the Bureau an annual financial statement that reports revenues and expenditures determined by use of an accounting system, established by the tribe, that complies with generally accepted accounting principles;

(B) fails to submit to the Bureau an annual program description, stating the number of students served, and containing such information concerning such students, their educational programs and progress, and the financial assistance distributed to such students as the Secretary may require by regulation;

(C) fails to submit to the Secretary a biennial financial audit conducted in accordance with chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code; or

(D) fails, in an evaluation of its financial assistance program conducted by an impartial third party entity, to comply with standards under this part relating to (i) eligible students, programs, or institutions of higher education, (ii) satisfactory progress, or (iii) allowable administrative costs; as determined under contracts applicable to programs to provide financial assistance to individual Indian students for the cost of attendance at institutions of higher education administered by Indian tribes under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act and in effect on January 20, 1991.

(3) PROCEDURES FOR REVOCATION OF ELIGIBILITY.—The Secretary shall not revoke the eligibility of an Indian tribe for a grant under this part except—

(A) after notice in writing to the tribe of the cause and opportunity to the tribe to correct;

(B) providing technical assistance to the tribe in making such corrections; and

(C) after hearing and appeals conducted under the same rules and regulations that apply to similar termination actions under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.

SEC. 1315. ALLOCATION OF GRANT FUNDS.

(a) ALLOCATION OF FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall continue to determine the amount of program funds to be received by each grantee under this part by the same method used for determining such distribution in fiscal year 1991 for tribally-administered and Bureau-administered programs of grants to individual Indians to defray postsecondary expenses.

(2) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—In addition to the amount determined under paragraph (1), a grantee which has exercised the option given in section 1314(a) to administer the program under a grant shall receive an amount for administrative costs determined pursuant to the method used by the grantee during the preceding contract period. All other grantees shall receive an amount for administrative costs determined pursuant to the regulations governing such determinations under the Indian Self Determination and Education Assistance Act, as in effect at the time of application to grants being made.

(3) SINGLE GRANT; SEPARATE ACCOUNTS.—Each grantee shall receive only one grant during any fiscal year, which shall include both of the amounts under paragraphs (1) and (2). Each grantee shall maintain this grant in a separate account.

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Funds provided by grants under this part shall be used—

(1) to make grants to individual Indian students to meet, on the basis of need, any educational expense of attendance in a postsecondary education program (as determined under the contracts applying to the postsecondary education program administered by tribes under the Indian Self Determination and Education Assistance Act (Public Law 93-638)), to the extent that such expense is not met from other sources or cannot be defrayed through the action of any State, Federal, or municipal Act, except that nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted as requiring any priority in consideration of resources; and

(2) costs of administering the program under this part, except that no more may be spent on administration of such program than is generated by the method for administrative cost computation specified in section 1315(a)(2).

SEC. 1316. LIMITATIONS ON USE OF FUNDS.

(a) USE FOR RELIGIOUS PURPOSES.—None of the funds made available under this part may be used for study at any school or department of divinity or for any religious worship or sectarian activity.

(b) INTEREST ON FUNDS.—No interest or other income on any funds made available under this part shall be used for any purpose other than those for which such funds may be used.

(c) PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the Secretary shall make payments to grantees under this part in two payments—

(A) one payment to be made no later than October 1 of each fiscal year in an amount equal to one-half the amount paid during the preceding fiscal year to the grantee or a contractor that has elected to have the provisions of this part apply, and

(B) the second payment consisting of the remainder to which the grantee or contractor is entitled for the fiscal year to be made by no later than January 1 of the fiscal year.

(2) NEW GRANTEES.—For any tribe for which no payment was made under this part in the preceding fiscal year, full payment of the amount computed for each fiscal year shall be made by January 1 of the fiscal year.

(d) INVESTMENT OF FUNDS.—

(1) TREATMENT AS TRIBAL PROPERTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any interest or investment income that accrues on any funds provided under this part after such funds are paid to the Indian tribe or tribal organization and before such funds are expended for the purpose for which such funds were provided under this part shall be the property of the Indian tribe or tribal organization and shall not be taken into account by any officer or employee of the Federal Government in determining whether to provide assistance, or the amount of assistance, under any provision of Federal law.

(2) INVESTMENT REQUIREMENTS.—Funds provided under this part may be—

(A) invested by the Indian tribe or tribal organization only in obligations of the United States or in obligations or securities that are guaranteed or insured by the United States, or

(B) deposited only into accounts that are insured by an agency or instrumentality of the United States.

(e) RECOVERIES.—For the purposes of under recovery and over recovery determinations by any Federal agency for any other funds, from whatever source derived, funds received under this part shall not be taken into consideration.

SEC. 1317. ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

(a) BIENNIAL REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit a biennial report to the Congress on the programs established under this part. Such report shall include—

(1) a description of significant administrative actions taken by the Secretary under this part;

(2) the number of grants made under the authority of this part;

(3) the number of applications denied for such grants and the reasons therefor;

(4) the remedial actions taken to enable applicants to be approved;

(5) the number of students served, by tribe;

(6) statistics on the academic pursuits of the students provided assistance under this part and the average amount of assistance provided; and

(7) such additional information as the Secretary considers significant.

(b) ROLE OF THE DIRECTOR.—Applications for grants under this part, and all application modifications, shall be reviewed and approved by personnel under the direction and control of the Director of the Office of Indian Education Programs. Required reports shall be submitted to education personnel under the direction and control of the Director of such Office.

(c) APPLICATION OF INDIAN SELF-DETERMINATION AND EDUCATION ASSISTANCE ACT.—All provisions of sections 5, 6, 7, 105, 109, and 110 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450c et seq.), except those provisions pertaining to indirect costs and length of contract, shall apply to grants provided under this part.

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary is authorized to issue regulations relating to the discharge of duties specifically assigned to the Secretary by this part. In all other matters relating to the details of planning, development, implementing, and evaluating grants under this part, the Secretary shall not issue regulations. Regulations issued pursuant to this part shall not have the standing of a Federal statute for the purposes of judicial review.

(e) RETROCESSION.—Whenever an Indian tribe requests retrocession of any program for which assistance is provided under this part, such retrocession shall become effective upon a date specified by the Secretary not more than 120 days after the date on which the tribe requests the retrocession, or such later date as may be mutually agreed upon by the Secretary and the tribe. If such a program is retroceded, the Secretary shall provide to any Indian tribe served by such program at least the same quantity and quality of services that would have been provided under such program at the level of funding provided under this part prior to the retrocession. The tribal governing body requesting the retrocession shall specify whether the retrocession shall be to a contract administered by the tribe, or a tribal entity, under the authority of the Indian Self-Determination Act or to a Bureau administered program.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this part:

(1) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

(2) The terms "Indian" and "Indian tribe" have the same meaning given those terms in sections 4(d) and (e), respectively, of the Indian Self Determination and Education Assistance Act (P.L. 93-638, 20 U.S.C. 450b).

PART C—CRITICAL NEEDS FOR TRIBAL DEVELOPMENT ACT

SEC. 1321. SHORT TITLE.

This part may be cited as the "Critical Needs for Tribal Development Act".

SEC. 1322. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this part:

(1) The term "federally funded higher education assistance" means any grant assistance provided to an Indian student from funds made available for such purpose by contract or grant to an Indian tribe from amounts appropriated under the authority of the Act of November 2, 1921, popularly known as the Snyder Act (25 U.S.C. 13).

(2) The term "eligible Indian tribe or tribal organization" means any Indian tribe or tribal organization that qualifies to administer federally funded higher education assistance under a contract pursuant to the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act or under a grant pursuant to the Higher Education Tribal Grant Authorization Act.

(3) The term "Indian" has the meaning given such term in section 4(d) of the Indian Self Determination and Education Assistance Act (P.L. 93-638, 20 U.S.C. 450b).

SEC. 1323. SERVICE CONDITIONS PERMITTED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An eligible Indian tribe or tribal organization may, in accordance with the requirements of this part, require any applicant for federally funded higher education assistance, as a condition of receipt of such assistance, to enter into a critical area service agreement in accordance with section 1324.

(b) CRITICAL AREA DESIGNATION.—Any eligible Indian tribe or tribal organization that intends to require critical area service agreements shall, by a formal action of the tribal council or its delegate, designate particular occupational areas as critical areas for the economic or human development needs of the tribe or its members. The tribe or organization shall notify the Secretary of the Interior in writing of such designated critical areas. Such designations shall be applicable to federally funded higher education assistance for any fiscal year following the fiscal year in which the designation is made until such designation is withdrawn by the tribe or organization by formal action. The tribe or organization shall notify the Secretary of the Interior in writing of any designations that are withdrawn.

SEC. 1324. CRITICAL AREA SERVICE AGREEMENTS.

(a) TERMS OF AGREEMENTS.—A critical area service agreement shall be an agreement between an Indian student who receives or who shall receive federally funded higher education assistance and an Indian tribe or tribal organization providing such assistance in which the student agrees—

(1) to undertake a course of study at an eligible institution (as that term is defined in section 435(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965) in an area of critical need, as determined under section 1323, and to pursue that course of study to its completion; and

(2)(A) to perform, for each academic year for which the student receives federally funded higher education assistance under a critical area service agreement, one calendar year of service to the tribe or organization in an occupation that is in a critical area designated by the tribe pursuant to section 1322(b), commencing not later than 6 months after the student ceases to carry at an institution of higher education at least one-half the normal full-time academic workload as determined by the institution; or

(B) to repay such assistance to the Secretary, together with interest thereon at a rate prescribed by the Secretary by regulation, in monthly or quarterly installments over not more than 5 years.

(b) SERVICE LIMITATIONS AND CONDITIONS.—The tribe or tribal organization shall agree that a student performing services under a critical area service agreement—

(1) shall be provided compensation, benefits, and working conditions at the same level and to the same extent as any other employee working a similar length of time and doing the same type of work;

(2) may be treated as providing services to the tribe or organization if the student provides services for members of the tribe or organization that are approved by the tribe or organization and agreed to by the student even though such services are performed while the student is employed by a Federal, State, or local agency or instrumentality or by a nonprofit or for-profit private institution or organization; and

(3) may obtain the benefits of a waiver or suspension in accordance with the requirements of subsection (c).

(c) WAIVER AND SUSPENSION OF SERVICE AGREEMENT.—

(1) WAIVER.—An Indian tribe or tribal organization may, by formal action, waive the service agreement of an Indian student for just cause, as determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary. The tribe or organization shall notify the Secretary in writing of any waiver granted under this subsection.

(2) SUSPENSION.—The obligation of a student to perform services under a critical area service agreement—

(A) shall be suspended for not more than 18 months if, at the request of the student, the tribe or organization determines that there are no employment opportunities available in any critical service area; and

(B) shall be suspended if the student ceases to attend an institution of higher education as a consequence of an institutional determination of unsatisfactory performance.

If, at the end of a period of suspension under subparagraph (A), there are still no employment opportunities available in any critical service area, the student's obligations under the agreement shall terminate. A suspension under subparagraph (B) shall be reviewed by the tribe or organization annually, but may be continued indefinitely.

(d) PRO RATA REDUCTION FOR PARTIAL SERVICES.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, provide for the pro rata reduction of repayment obligations under subsection (a)(2) in the case of any student who partially completes the service obligation of that student under subsection (a)(2)(A).

(e) CERTIFICATION OF SERVICE.—An Indian tribe or tribal organization receiving services under a critical area service agreement—

(1) shall establish procedures for monitoring and evaluating the provisions of this part, and provide a copy of such procedures to the Secretary and to each individual providing services under a critical area service agreement;

(2) shall annually certify to the Secretary the identities of the individuals performing service under such agreements; and

(3) shall annually certify to the Secretary the amount of service performed, and the amount remaining to be performed, by each such individual under such agreements.

SEC. 1325. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

(a) APPLICATION OF EXISTING PROCEDURES.—Except as provided in subsection (b), the requirements relating to student eligibility, needs analysis, and determination of eligibility for the program to be attended regularly incorporated by reference into contracts under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act for tribal operation of higher education grant programs prior to January 1, 1991, shall apply.

(b) ADDITIONAL, EXCESS, AND INCREMENTAL COSTS.—The tribe or tribal organization may establish in writing, subject to the review of the Secretary, procedures for determining additional, excess, or inducement costs to be associated with grants for critical area service agreements.

PART D—INSTITUTE OF AMERICAN INDIAN NATIVE CULTURE AND ARTS DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 1331. INSTITUTE OF AMERICAN INDIAN NATIVE CULTURE AND ARTS DEVELOPMENT.

(a) BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—Section 1505 of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4412) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1)(A)—

(A) by striking "The voting" and inserting "Subject to the provisions of subsection (i), the voting"; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: "and diverse fields of expertise, including finance, law, fine arts, and higher education administration";

(2) by redesignating paragraph (3) of subsection (a) as paragraph (4);

(3) by inserting after paragraph (2) of subsection (a) the following new paragraph:

"(3) The President shall carry out the activities described in subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (2) through the Board. The Board may make recommendations based upon the nominations received, may make recommendations of its own, and may review and make comments to the President or the President's appointed staff on individuals being considered by the President for whom no nominations have been received."; and

(4) by striking subsection (i) and inserting the following:

"(i) APPOINTMENT EXCEPTION FOR CONTINUITY.—

"(1) In order to maintain the stability and continuity of the Board, the Board shall have the power to recommend the continuation of members on the Board pursuant to the provisions of this subsection. When the Board makes such a recommendation, the Chairman of the Board shall transmit the recommendation to the President no later than 75 days prior to the expiration of the term of the member.

"(2) If the President has not transmitted to the Senate a nomination to fill the position of a member covered by such a recommendation within 60 days from the date that the member's term expires, the member shall be deemed to have been reappointed for another full term to the Board, with all the appropriate rights and responsibilities.

"(3) This subsection shall not be construed to permit less than 7 members of the Board to be Indians. If an extension of a term under paragraph (2) would result in less than 7 members being Indians, the term of the member covered by paragraph (2) shall be deemed to expire 60 days after the date upon which it would have been deemed to expire without the operation of this subsection, except that the provisions of subsection (b)(4), relating to continuation of service pending replacement, shall continue to apply.".

(b) GENERAL POWERS OF BOARD.—Section 1507 of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4414) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (3) through (13) as paragraphs (4) through (14), respectively;

(B) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) to make agreements and contracts with persons, Indian tribes, and private or governmental entities and to make payments or advance payments under such agreements or contract without regard to section 3324 of title 31, United States Code;

"(3) any other provision of law to the contrary notwithstanding, to enter into joint development ventures with public or private commercial or noncommercial entities for development of facilities to meet the plan required under section 1519, if the ventures are related to and further the mission of the Institute;"; and

(C) by striking paragraph (13) (as redesignated in subparagraph (A)) and inserting the following:

"(13) to use any funds or property received by the Institute to carry out the purpose of this title, including the authority to designate on an annual basis a portion, not to exceed 10 percent, of the funds appropriated pursuant to section 1531 for investment, without regard to any other provision of law regarding investment or disposition of federally appropriated funds, on a short-term basis for the purpose of maximizing yield and liquidity of such funds; and"; and

(2) in subsection (c), by striking "may be expended" and inserting "shall be expended".

(c) STAFF OF INSTITUTE.—Section 1509(b)(2) of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4416(b)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) The President of the Institute shall fix the basic compensation for officers and employees of the Institute at rates comparable to the rates in effect under the General Schedule for individuals with comparable qualifications and positions, to whom chapter 51 of title 5, United States Code applies. If the Board determines that such action is necessary for purposes of recruitment or retention of officers or employees necessary to the functions of the Institute, the Board is authorized, by formal action, to establish a rate of, or a range for, basic compensation that is comparable to the rate of compensation paid to officers or employees having similar duties and responsibilities in other institutions of higher education.".

(d) FUNCTIONS OF INSTITUTE.—Section 1510(b) of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4417(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE ENTITIES.—

"(1) The Board shall be responsible for establishing the policies and internal organization that relate to the control and monitoring of all subdivisions, administrative entities, and departments of the Institute.

"(2) The specific responsibilities of each subdivision, entity, and department of the Institute are solely within the discretion of the Board, or its designee.

"(3) The Board shall establish, within the Institute, departments for the study of culture and arts and for research and exchange, and a museum. The Board shall establish the areas of competency for the departments created under this paragraph, which may include (but are not limited to) Departments of Arts and Sciences, Visual Arts, Performing Arts, Language, Literature and Museology and a learning resources center, programs of institutional support and development, research programs, fellowship programs, seminars, publications, scholar-in-residence programs and inter-institutional programs of cooperation at national and international levels.".

(e) INDIAN PREFERENCE.—Section 1511(a) of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4418(a)) is amended by inserting "develop a policy or policies for the Institute to" after "is authorized to".

(f) TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS.—Section 1514 of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4421) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(1), by striking "All personnel" and inserting "Subject to subsection (d), all personnel"; and

(2) in subsection (d)(2), by striking "monetary damage" and inserting "monetary damages".

(g) REPORTS.—Section 1515(b) of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4422(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1); and

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (2) through (4) as paragraphs (1) through (3).

(h) HEADQUARTERS.—Section 1516 of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4423) is amended—

(1) by striking "The site of the Institute of American Indian Arts, at"; and

(2) by striking "the Secretary" and inserting "the Board".

(i) COMPLIANCE WITH OTHER ACTS.—Section 1517 of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4424) is amended—

(1) by redesignating the text of subsection (c) as paragraph (1) of such subsection; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) The Institute shall not be subject to any provision of law requiring that non-Federal funds or other moneys be used in part to fund any grant, contract, cooperative agreement, or project as a condition to the application for, or receipt of, Federal assistance. This subsection shall not be construed to effect in a negative fashion the review, prioritization, or acceptance of any application or proposal for such a program, solicited or unsolicited.".

(j) ENDOWMENT PROGRAM.—Section 1518 of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4425) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(3)—

(A) by striking "the date of enactment of this Act" and inserting "November 29, 1990"; and

(B) by inserting after the last sentence the following new sentence: "All funds transferred to the Institute by the Secretary of the Treasury after June 2, 1988, shall be deemed to have been properly transferred as of the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992.";

(2) in subsection (b)(4), by inserting ", non-Federal governmental," after "any private"; and

(3) in subsection (c)—

(A) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4); and

(B) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) Any amounts deposited in a trust fund authorized under subsection (a) may be used to secure loans procured for the purposes of constructing or improving Institute facilities.".

(k) PROVISION OF FACILITIES.—Part A of the American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Culture and Art Development Act (20 U.S.C. 4411 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 1519. PROVISION OF FACILITIES.

"(a) PLAN.—The Board shall prepare a master plan on the short- and long-term facilities needs of the Institute. The master plan shall include evaluation of all facets of existing Institute programs, including support activities and programs and facilities. The master plan shall include impact projections for the Institute's move to a new campus site. This master plan shall evaluate development and construction requirements (based on a growth plan approved by the Board), including (but not limited to) items such as infrastructure and site analysis, development of a phased plan with architectural and engineering studies, cost projections, landscaping, and related studies which cover all facets of the Institute's programs and planned functions.

"(b) DEADLINE FOR TRANSMITTAL.—The plan required by this subsection shall be transmitted to Congress no later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this provision. Such plan shall include a prioritization of needs, as determined by the Board.".

PART E—TRIBAL DEVELOPMENT STUDENT ASSISTANCE REVOLVING LOAN PROGRAM

SEC. 1341. SHORT TITLE.

This part may be cited as the "Tribal Development Student Assistance Act".

SEC. 1342. FINDINGS; PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) a substantial number of Indian students have partially completed their degrees in postsecondary education, but have been unable, for a number of reasons, to complete the degrees;

(2) in at least some measure these students have been supported by tribal funds or grants of Federal monies administered by the Bureau of Indian Affairs or tribes;

(3) the inability of the students to complete these degrees has led to a hardship for the students and a loss of a potential pool of talent to the tribes or tribal organizations which originally financed, at least in part, these efforts;

(4) this loss has crippled tribal efforts in the areas of economic and social development;

(5) this failure to complete the postsecondary schooling has led to economic loss to the tribes and the Federal Government which could be remedied by completion of the courses of study; and

(6) a program to identify students with a level of postsecondary completion short of the fulfillment of graduation requirements and to encourage them to complete these requirements, including provision of resources, will benefit the students, the tribes, and the Federal Government.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this part are—

(1) to establish a revolving loan program to be administered by a tribe or tribal organization for the purposes of increasing the number of college graduates available to work in tribal businesses, tribal government, and tribal services such as schools and hospitals;

(2) to conduct research to assess the situational and educational barriers to participation in postsecondary education; and

(3) to encourage development, through grants, of a model which provides, in addition to loans, transitional and follow-up services needed to encourage persistence in postsecondary education.

SEC. 1343. REVOLVING FUND.

(a) RECEIPT, INVESTMENT, AND ACCOUNTING.—(1) TRIBES AND TRIBAL ORGANIZATIONS.—Funds received under a grant under this part or recovered under the provisions of section 1346(a)(2)(B) shall be identified and accounted for separately from any other tribal or Federal funds received from the Federal Government. All funds in this account shall be used for the purposes of this part.

(2) FINANCIAL PROCEDURES.—The Secretary of the Interior is responsible for establishing, by regulations, such requirements for receipt, investment and accounting of funds under subsection (b) as shall safeguard and financial interests of the Federal Government.

(b) INVESTMENT.—Funds provided under this part or recovered by the tribe or tribal organization under the provisions of section 1346(a)(2)(B) shall be—

(1) invested by the Indian tribe or tribal organization only in obligations of the United States or in obligations or securities that are guaranteed or insured by the United States, or

(2) deposited only in accounts that are insured by an agency or instrumentality of the United States.

(c) TREATMENT OF INCOME.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any interest or investment income that accrues on any funds covered under this provision after such funds have been distributed to a tribe or tribal organization and before such funds are distributed for the purposes of making loans under this part shall be the property of the tribe or tribal organization and shall not be taken into account by any officer or employee of the Federal Government in determining whether to provide assistance, or the amount of assistance, under any provision of Federal law.

SEC. 1344. ELIGIBLE RECIPIENTS.

(a) TRIBES AND TRIBAL ORGANIZATIONS.—The Secretary of the Interior (hereafter in this part referred to as the "Secretary") shall make grants, in accordance with the requirements of this part, to—

(1) tribes or multitribal organizations not serviced by current federally funded postsecondary institutions authorized for economic development grants; and

(2) tribes or multitribal organizations which lack sufficient numbers of professionally trained tribal members to support established or ongoing economic development initiatives.

(b) STUDENTS.—Any tribe or tribal organization that receives funds under subsection (a) shall make such funds available by loan, under terms and conditions consistent with section 1345, to Indian students who have successfully completed 30 hours of postsecondary education and who are eligible for readmission to a postsecondary institution.

SEC. 1345. TERMS OF LOANS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A loan under this part to an Indian student shall—

(1) be subject to repayment over a period of not more than 5 years;

(2) not bear interest;

(3) be subject to forgiveness for services to the tribe in accordance with section 1346; and

(4) contain such additional terms and conditions as the initial loan agreement between the tribe or tribal organization and student may prescribe in writing.

(b) COST OF ATTENDANCE.—Calculation of the cost of attendance for the student must include all costs as determined by the tribe for the purposes of fulfilling the policy of this part.

(c) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—Any student seeking a loan under this part shall apply for and accept the maximum financial aid available from other sources. However, for purposes of determining eligibility, loans provided under this program may not be considered in needs analysis under any other Federal law, and may not penalize students in determining eligibility for other funds.

SEC. 1346. SERVICE FULFILLMENT AND CONDITIONS; REPAYMENTS; WAIVERS.

(a) SERVICE AGREEMENT REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Prior to receipt of a loan under this part, the tribe or tribal organization and the eligible recipient shall enter into a written agreement, subject to the conditions of this section, which commits the recipient—

(A) to perform, for each academic year for which the student receives assistance under this part one calendar year of service to the tribe or organization in an occupation related to the course of study pursued and an economic or social development plan developed by the tribe or tribal organization, commencing not later than 6 months after the student ceases to carry at an institution of higher education at least one-half the normal full-time academic workload as determined by the institution; or

(B) to repay to the tribe or tribal organization the full amount of the loan, in monthly or quarterly installments over not more than 5 years.

(2) REPORT REQUIREMENT.—Funds recovered pursuant to paragraph (1)(B) shall be reported annually to the Secretary and invested in the account established under section 1343.

(b) SERVICE LIMITATIONS AND CONDITIONS.—The tribe or tribal organization shall agree that a student performing services under this part—

(1) shall be provided compensation, benefits, and working conditions at the same level and to the same extent as any other employee working a similar length of time and doing the same type of work;

(2) may be treated as providing services to the tribe or organization if the student provides services for members of the tribe or organization that are approved by the tribe or organization and agreed to by the student even though such services are performed while the student is employed by a Federal, State, or local agency or instrumentality or by a nonprofit or for-profit private institution or organization; and

(3) may obtain the benefits of a waiver or suspension in accordance with the requirements of subsection (c).

(c) WAIVER AND SUSPENSION OF SERVICE AGREEMENT.—

(1) WAIVER.—An Indian tribe or tribal organization may, by formal action, waive the service agreement of an Indian student for just cause, as determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary. The tribe or organization shall notify the Secretary in writing of any waiver granted under this subsection.

(2) SUSPENSION.—The obligation of a student to perform services under this part—

(A) shall be suspended for not more than 18 months if, at the request of the student, the tribe or organization determines that there are no employment opportunities available in any applicable area; and

(B) shall be suspended if the student ceases to attend an institution of higher education as a consequence of an institutional determination of unsatisfactory performance.

If, at the end of a period of suspension under subparagraph (A), there are still no employment opportunities available which fulfill the requirements of this part, the student's obligations under the agreement shall terminate. A suspension under subparagraph (B) shall be reviewed by the tribe or organization annually, but may be continued indefinitely.

(d) PRO RATA REDUCTION FOR PARTIAL SERVICES.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, provide for the pro rata reduction of repayment obligations under subsection (a)(2)(B) in the case of any student who partially completes the service obligation of that student under subsection (a)(2)(A).

(e) CERTIFICATION OF SERVICE.—An Indian tribe or tribal organization receiving services under this part—

(1) shall establish procedures for monitoring and evaluating the provisions of this part, and provide a copy of such procedures to the Secretary and to each individual providing services under a critical area service agreement;

(2) shall annually certify to the Secretary the identities of the individuals performing service under such agreements; and

(3) shall annually certify to the Secretary the amount of service performed, and the amount remaining to be performed, by each such individual under such agreements.

SEC. 1347. ADMINISTRATION.

(a) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall establish, by regulation, an application process containing such requirements as the Secretary deems necessary for purposes of making grants to eligible entities under this part, providing that the Secretary shall take into account in reviewing applications under this part the number of students with partial completion identified by the applicant, relative to the total number of the members of tribes which would be benefited by provision of services under section 1346, and shall attempt to achieve geographic and demographic diversity in grants made under this part.

(b) GRANT PROCEDURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the availability of funds and acceptable applications, the Secretary shall make 5 grants to tribes or tribal organizations for purposes of this part, each grant to be for a period of 4 years.

(2) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—The amount of administrative costs associated with grants under this part shall be negotiated by the Secretary with the successful applicants and made a part of the grant agreement.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this part, the terms "Indian", "Indian tribe", "Secretary", and "tribal organizations" have the same meanings given such terms in sections 4(d), (e), (i), and (l), respectively, of the Indian Self Determination and Education Assistance Act (P.L. 93-638, 20 U.S.C. 450b).

SEC. 1348. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part, $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

PART F—AMERICAN INDIAN POSTSECONDARY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT SCHOLARSHIP

SEC. 1361. AMERICAN INDIAN POSTSECONDARY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT SCHOLARSHIP.

(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants, in accordance with the provisions of this part, to federally recognized Indian tribes which lack sufficient numbers of professionally trained tribal members to support established or ongoing economic development initiatives. Priority shall be given to tribes which are not served by federally funded postsecondary institutions. The purpose of such grants is to enable such tribes to make scholarships available to tribal members to assist such members to pursue courses of study leading to an undergraduate or postbaccalaureate degree in order to provide professionally trained tribal members to support such economic development initiatives on Indian reservations.

(b) DESIGNATION.—A scholarship awarded under this part shall be referred to as an "American Indian Post-Secondary Economic Development Scholarship" (hereafter referred to in this part as "scholarship").

SEC. 1362. INDIAN SCHOLARSHIPS.

(a) SELECTION.—Each Indian tribe receiving a grant pursuant to this part for the purpose of providing scholarships shall select tribal members eligible to receive such scholarships. In determining grant recipients the Secretary of Education shall consider—

(1) geographic distribution of grants; and

(2) a tribal economic plan which demonstrates how individual recipients shall benefit the economic conditions of the tribe.

(b) CRITERIA.—Each Indian tribe, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall give preference to select, as those tribal members eligible to receive such scholarships, tribal members who have successfully completed at least 30 hours of postsecondary education and who are eligible for readmission to a postsecondary institution.

SEC. 1363. SCHOLARSHIP CONDITIONS.

(a) SCHOLARSHIP AGREEMENT.—Each tribal member receiving a scholarship under this part shall enter into an agreement, satisfactory to the Secretary of Education and the tribal government awarding such scholarship, under which such member agrees—

(1) to utilize the proceeds of such scholarship to pursue a course of study which meets the requirements of the educational institution in which the student is enrolled for an undergraduate or postbaccalaureate degree;

(2) upon the acquisition of such degree, to work, one year for each year of financial assistance under this part, on the Indian reservation in employment related to the course of study pursued which will support economic development initiatives on such reservation; and

(3) to maintain satisfactory academic progress, as determined in accordance with section 484(c) of the Higher Education Act of 1965, while in an undergraduate or postbaccalaureate program.

(b) REPAYMENTS.—Each tribal member found by the Secretary of Education to be in noncompliance with the agreement pursuant to subsection (a)(2) shall be required to repay—

(1) 100 percent of the total amount of scholarships awarded under this part if such tribal member does not work pursuant to such agreement; or

(2) a pro rata portion of the total amount of scholarships awarded under this part, as determined by the Secretary of Education, if such tribal member worked pursuant to such agreement but less than the time period required thereunder.

(c) WAIVER AND SUSPENSION OF SERVICE AGREEMENT.—

(1) WAIVER.—A federally recognized Indian tribe may, by formal action, waive the service agreement of a tribal member for just cause, as determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary. The tribe shall notify the Secretary in writing of any waiver granted under this subsection.

(2) SUSPENSION.—The obligation of a tribal member to perform services under this part—

(A) shall be suspended for not more than 18 months if, at the request of the tribal member, the tribe determines that there are no employment opportunities available in any applicable area; and

(B) shall be suspended if the tribal member ceases to attend an institution of higher education as a consequence of an institutional determination of unsatisfactory performance.

If, at the end of a period of suspension under subparagraph (A), there are still no employment opportunities available which fulfill the requirements of this part, the tribal member's obligations under the agreement shall terminate. A suspension under subparagraph (B) shall be reviewed by the tribe annually, but may be continued indefinitely.

(d) DISCLAIMER.—No scholarship awarded pursuant to this part shall be considered in determining eligibility for student assistance under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

(e) LIMITATION.—Any tribal member selected by an Indian tribe to receive a scholarship under this part shall be eligible to receive a $10,000 scholarship for each academic year of postsecondary education, except that no such member shall receive scholarship assistance under this part for more than 4 years of postsecondary education (including postbaccalaureate).

(f) COST OF ATTENDANCE.—Calculation of the cost of attendance for the tribal member shall include all costs as determined by the tribe for the purposes of fulfilling the policy of this part.

(g) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—Any tribal member seeking a loan under this part shall apply for and accept the maximum financial aid available from other sources. However, for purposes of determining eligibility, loans provided under this program may not be considered in needs analysis under any other Federal law, and may not penalize tribal members in determining eligibility for other funds.

(h) APPLICATIONS FOR ASSISTANCE.—Any federally recognized Indian tribe desiring a grant under this part shall submit an application to the Secretary of Education at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall—

(1) describe the shortages on the reservation of such Indian tribe of professionally trained tribal members necessary to support economic development initiatives on such reservation;

(2) provide assurances that the Indian tribe will assist in employment placement on the reservation of tribal members receiving scholarship assistance under this part; and

(3) provide assurances that any tribal member performing work pursuant to this part will be provided compensation, benefits, and working conditions at the same level and to the same extent as any other employee working a similar length of time and doing the same type of work.

SEC. 1364. REPORT.

Each federally recognized Indian tribe receiving a grant pursuant to this part shall annually report to the Secretary concerning the administration of such grant, including the identities of any individual receiving a scholarship pursuant to this part, and of any individual performing service pursuant to his or her commitment under this part.

SEC. 1365. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this part, there are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

PART G—AMERICAN INDIAN TEACHER TRAINING

SEC. 1371. AMERICAN INDIAN TEACHER TRAINING.

(a) INSTITUTIONAL SUPPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to award grants to tribally controlled postsecondary, vocational and technical institutions for the purposes of—

(A) developing teacher training programs;

(B) building articulation agreements between such institutions and other institutions of higher education as defined in section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965; and

(C) basic strengthening of tribally controlled community colleges, as defined in section 2(a)(4) of the Tribally Controlled Community Colleges Act (P.L. 95–471, 25 U.S.C. 1801).

(2) USE OF GRANTS.—Grants awarded under this subsection shall be for the purpose of providing upper division course work, transfer programs, articulation agreements (similar to those under part D of title I of the Higher Education Act of 1965) with other accredited institutions, telecommunications programs or other mechanisms which directly support the training of American Indian teachers.

(b) STUDENT SUPPORT GRANTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to award grants to institutions that have developed teacher training programs under subsection (a) for the purpose of providing financial and programmatic support to American Indian students seeking to participate in such institutions' teacher training programs.

(2) USE OF GRANTS.—Institutions receiving grants under this section shall require recipients of grants under this subsection to serve as teachers in an Indian community for 1 year for each year of scholarship support received.

(3) ELIGIBILITY.—Students eligible to receive support grants shall include those who have completed at least 30 hours of postsecondary education and who intend to pursue a 4-year degree.

(4) WORK REQUIREMENT.—Students who fail to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (2) shall be required to repay a pro rata portion of the total amount of scholarships awarded under this part if the student worked for less than the required time period described in such paragraph.

(c) SCHOLARSHIPS.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to provide scholarship assistance to American Indian students who seek to become teachers and who—

(A) agree to serve as teachers in an Indian community for 1 year for each year of scholarship support received, and

(B) have completed at least 30 hours of postsecondary education.

(2) WORK REQUIREMENT.—Students who fail to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (1) shall be required to repay a pro rata portion of the total amount of scholarships awarded under this part if the student worked for less than the required time period described in paragraph (1)(B).

(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, the term "Indian" has the same meaning given such term in section 4(d) of the Indian Self Determination and Education Assistance Act (P.L. 93–638, 20 U.S.C. 450b).

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this part.

TITLE XIV—STUDIES AND COMMISSIONS

PART A—STUDIES BY THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

SEC. 1401. STUDY OF ROLE OF GUARANTY AGENCIES.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Education shall review the role of guaranty agencies within the Federal Family Education Loan Program by examining the administrative and financial operations of such agencies and the relationships between guaranty agencies and State governments.

(b) REPORT.—The Secretary of Education shall report to the Congress within 1 year of the date of enactment of this Act on the study described in subsection (a). Such report shall consider and make recommendations concerning—

(1) increasing the role of guaranty agencies in oversight and licensing of proprietary trade schools under the Federal Family Education Loan Program;

(2) strengthening Federal disincentives for high default rate portfolios;

(3) consolidating guaranty agencies regionally or otherwise;

(4) eliminating the role of guaranty agencies within the Federal Family Education Loan Program; and

(5) the compensation of chief executive officers and managerial staffs of guaranty agencies.

SEC. 1402. STUDY OF STATUTORY PROTECTIONS.

The Secretary of Education shall report to the Congress within 180 days of the date of enactment of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 on the advisability of statutorily protecting officials of accrediting agencies involved in the performance of legitimate Federal Family Education Loan Program activities.

SEC. 1403. STUDY OF FRAUD-BASED DEFENSES.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a study of the impact of fraud-based defenses on the Federal Family Education Loan Program. Such study shall include—

(1) an analysis of statutory, regulatory, and case law regarding the use of fraud-based defenses against repayment of such loans;

(2) an estimate of the total number of borrowers filing for relief from repayment of such loans using a fraud-based defense and amount of such loan principal involved;

(3) an estimate of such loan principal relieved annually through fraud-based defenses;

(4) an evaluation of the importance of a fraud-based defense to the protection of borrowers of such loans; and

(5) an evaluation of the effects of the availability of a fraud-based defense on the accessibility of Stafford loans by geographical area and by type of postsecondary institution.

(b) DATE.—The study described in subsection (a) shall be completed not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall submit a report to the Congress on the study described in subsection (a) that makes specific recommendations for legislative options that may be needed to address the rights of borrowers with respect to the availability of fraud-based defenses under the Federal Family Education Loan Program without jeopardizing the participation of lenders or the solvency of guaranty agencies required to maintain the integrity of such program.

(2) DATE.—The report described in paragraph (1) shall be completed not later than 19 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1404. DATA ON NONTRADITIONAL STUDENTS.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Education shall conduct a 2-year study regarding the types of programs available for, and determine the success or failure of such programs in, increasing the accessibility for nontraditional students to postsecondary education. The study shall be conducted through the Office of Educational Research and Improvement.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the study shall be—

(1) to appraise the adequacies and deficiencies of current student financial aid information resources and services and evaluate the effectiveness of these programs as they pertain to the nontraditional student;

(2) to investigate the availability of grants and loans and other financial assistance to nontraditional students (including independent students and part-time students);

(3) to assess the availability of supportive services for the nontraditional students including (but not limited to) counseling, child care services, campus health center services, and library services;

(4) to make recommendations on how the Department of Education can maintain an effective data base regarding nontraditional students that will include—

(A) a yearly count of the number of students who are nontraditional and breakdown of the institutions they are attending;

(B) the number of nontraditional students who work and go to school;

(C) the extent of participation in Federal student aid programs;

(D) the amount of unmet costs of postsecondary education for nontraditional students; and

(E) trends over the last decade regarding participation of nontraditional students in title IV programs.

(c) REPORT.—The Secretary of Education shall submit an interim report to the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate within 1 year after the date of enactment of this section and submit a final report 2 years after such date of enactment.

SEC. 1405. STUDY OF FEDERAL BENEFIT COORDINATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education shall conduct a study to evaluate the coordination of Federal student financial assistance programs under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 with other programs funded in whole or in part with Federal funds, giving particular attention to—

(1) the effect of receipt of program assistance under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 on students eligible for other programs funded in whole or in part with Federal funds, including reduction or denial of such other program funds; and

(2) the attendance cost elements funded in whole or in part by programs under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 for students eligible for other Federal programs and the inclusion of room or board costs in such attendance costs.

(b) REPORT.—The Secretary of Education shall prepare and submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a report on the study conducted pursuant to subsection (a) not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, together with such recommendations as the Secretary of Education deems appropriate.

SEC. 1406. NATIONAL SURVEY OF FACTORS ASSOCIATED WITH PARTICIPATION.

(a) AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY OF EDUCATION.—In order to assure improved and accurate data on the participation of at-risk students in postsecondary education, the Secretary of Education, acting through the National Center for Educational Statistics, shall conduct a special purpose survey on a biennial basis of factors associated with participation of low-income, disadvantaged, non-English language background, disabled, and minority students, including (but not limited to) African American, Native Americans, Native Hawaiians, major Hispanic subgroups, and Asian students from disadvantaged backgrounds in various types of postsecondary education. The survey data shall permit comparisons with other groups that have characteristically participated at higher rates than at-risk students.

(b) DEVELOPMENT OF THE SURVEY.—The Secretary of Education shall consult with the Congress and the elementary and secondary and higher education community in developing such an annual survey. The survey shall include, but not be limited to—

(1) academic preparation of groups at key points in the elementary and secondary education process;

(2) rates of academic progress and graduation from high school;

(3) participation in postsecondary education by type and control of institution and by program of study;

(4) persistence rates in postsecondary programs, or, in the case of short-term programs, completion rates; and

(5) average student financial assistance awarded to groups, including Federal, State, and other assistance.

(c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Education shall report relevant data and conclusions from the survey to Congress on an annual basis, including comparisons of important factors for at-risk and other relevant populations.

(d) DEVELOPMENT OF PLAN.—In the event of significant findings related to underparticipation rates of at-risk and other students, the Secretary of Education shall submit a plan containing policies and program modifications for ensuring the participation of at-risk students. The plan shall indicate the modifications the Secretary will make to increase participation, including, but not limited to, increasing information and training, and recommending other relevant changes to the programs under this title.

(e) PANEL SURVEY ON INCOME DYNAMICS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education, acting through the National Center for Education Statistics, shall make an interagency agreement with the National Science Foundation to provide for additional questions and an appropriate sample size as part of an existing panel study of income dynamics to provide information on the educational processes and other developmental behavior of Hispanic, black, and non-Hispanic white children and their short-term and long-term consequences.

(2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $900,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this subsection.

SEC. 1407. EVALUATION OF TUITION GUARANTY PROGRAMS.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purposes of this section are—

(1) to require the Secretary of Education to determine the effectiveness of programs for disadvantaged elementary and secondary school students that offer guarantees for postsecondary education; and

(2) to identify ways to encourage the business community to participate in such programs.

(b) CONDUCT OF STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education shall evaluate the effectiveness of programs for disadvantaged children that, in exchange for the child's commitment to achieving a satisfactory elementary and secondary education, promise the child the financial resources needed to pursue a postsecondary education.

(2) CONTENT.—The Secretary of Education shall study a sample of the types of programs available, and (A) determine the success or failure of such programs in increasing the access and entry of disadvantaged students into postsecondary education, (B) identify the most successful programs and the causes for success, and (C) determine the responsibilities of sponsors of the programs.

(3) PROGRAMS STUDIED.—The programs studied shall include a guarantee of postsecondary education for students currently in elementary or secondary grade levels. The programs may include supportive services, mentoring, study skills, and counseling to students participating in the program.

(c) DISSEMINATION.—The Secretary of Education shall disseminate the findings through appropriate agencies and organizations including associations of businesses.

(d) SUBMISSION OF REPORT.—The Secretary of Education shall submit an interim report regarding the study by June 30, 1996, and a final report regarding the study by January 1, 1997, to the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate.

SEC. 1408. INFORMATION ON GRADUATE EDUCATION.

(a) ASSESSMENT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Education shall conduct a study which will provide an assessment of the information currently collected on graduate education and will identify what additional information should be generated to guide the Department of Education in defining and executing its role in the support of graduate education.

(b) SUBJECT OF ASSESSMENT.—The assessment required by subsection (a) shall include the assessment of the total amount of Federal, State, private, foundation, and institutional fellowships, assistantships, loans, or any other forms of financial assistance to all graduate students, including both American and foreign students; and how these amounts are distributed by race, by sex, to nontraditional students, and to students with disabilities. In addition, the assessment shall determine the number of graduate students, cross-referenced by race, sex, and national origin, part-time, full-time, independent versus dependent status, and individuals with disabilities who enrolled and completed all requirements for the degrees master of arts, master of science, master in business administration, doctor of philosophy, doctor of education, juris doctor, medical doctor, doctor in veterinary medicine, and doctor of dental science.

(c) CONSULTATION.—In conducting such study, the Secretary of Education shall consult with other agencies and organizations involved in graduate education policy, including the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment, the President's Office of Science and Technology Policy, the National Science Foundation and the other Federal agencies supporting academic research and graduate education, the National Academy of Sciences and other public and private organizations which participate in the formulation and implementation of national graduate education policies and programs.

(d) DATE FOR COMPLETION.—The study shall be completed within 2 years of the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1409. STUDY OF ENVIRONMENTAL HAZARDS IN INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION.

(a) STUDY AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Education, in cooperation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, is authorized to conduct a study of the extent to which asbestos, lead in drinking water, or radon gas pose a threat to the health and safety of students and employees of institutions of higher education.

(b) SURVEY REQUIRED.—Such study shall include a survey of a representative sample of institutions of higher education in order to assess how widespread such hazards are. A sufficient number of institutions shall be sampled and tested in order to provide reasonable estimates on—

(1) the number of institutions which contain friable asbestos (as defined in the Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act) and how many students and employees may be exposed to unsafe levels of asbestos fibers,

(2) the number of institutions that have rooms which contain more than 4 picocuries/liter of radon, and

(3) the number of institutions which contain water fountains or faucets or water coolers which discharge water with more than 10 parts per billion of lead.

(c) CONSULTATION.—In designing and carrying out such study, the Secretary shall consult with associations representing institutions of higher education, faculty, and other employees.

(d) REPORT ON STUDY.—The Secretary of Education shall submit a report with the results of the assessment, including the information required by subsection (b), along with recommendations by the Secretary regarding what actions, if any, Congress and the Administration should take to ensure that environmental health hazards, if any, are eliminated. The report shall be presented to Congress not later than July 1, 1995.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $3,000,000 in fiscal year 1994 for the purposes of carrying out this section.

SEC. 1410. STUDY OF CIVILIAN AVIATION TRAINING PROGRAMS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the role of the military as a source of supply of trained pilots and mechanics and other personnel for commercial aviation is severely reduced;

(2) approximately 50 percent of the 52,000 commercial pilots currently flying will retire by the year 2000 and an additional 8,000 to 10,000 pilots will be needed by then;

(3) there is significant underrepresentation of minorities and women currently working in the aviation industry and African Americans constitute less than 1 percent of pilots with the Nation's scheduled air carriers;

(4) there is a substantial projected increase of minorities and women as a proportion of the workforce by the year 2000; and

(5) there is need for a comprehensive study of future human resources needs for the air transportation industry, including a thorough investigation of recruitment, aviation training outside the military context, financial and other incentives and disincentives which affect the flow of people, and especially minorities and women, into the industry.

(b) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Education shall enter into appropriate arrangements with the National Academy of Sciences Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education to study civilian aviation training programs needed to satisfy the workforce requirements of the commercial aviation industry in the year 2000 and beyond. The specific concerns to be addressed by the study shall include—

(1) the avenues for civilians to enter the aviation industry,

(2) the characteristics of current training and the match with skill requirements in the workplace, and

(3) the impediments and incentives for minorities and women to enter the aviation industry (such as a lack of role models, cost of schooling and flight time, the underutilization of historically black colleges and universities in the educational training process, and institutional barriers).

(c) INTERIM REPORT.—The Secretary of Education shall request that the National Academy of Sciences Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education submit an interim report to the Secretary and the Congress within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, and the study shall be completed within 2 years of the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1411. REPORT ON THE USE OF PELL GRANTS BY PRISONERS.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Education shall submit to the Congress a report on the use of Pell Grants by prisoners. Such report shall contain a statement of—

(1) the number of prisoners receiving Pell Grants;

(2) the average amount of the Pell Grants awarded to prisoners;

(3) the average length of Pell Grant subsidized study for prisoners;

(4) the graduation or success rate of prisoners receiving Pell Grants;

(5) an analysis of whether prisoners' lack of income has made them more successful in obtaining Pell Grants over other low-income citizens who are not incarcerated;

(6) an analysis of whether prisoners lack of income provides them within an advantage in receiving Pell Grants; and

(7) the Secretary's recommendations for making the program more equitable with regard to awards to prisoners in relation to other applicants.

(b) DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSION.—The report required by subsection (a) shall be submitted not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1412. NATIONAL JOB BANK FOR TEACHER RECRUITMENT.

(a) FEASIBILITY STUDY.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to conduct a study on the feasibility of—

(1) establishing a clearinghouse to operate a national teacher job bank; or

(2) establishing regional clearinghouses to operate regional teacher job banks.

(b) NATIONAL TEACHER JOB BANK DEMONSTRATION.—

(1) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to contract with one or more State entities, nonprofit organizations, or institutions of higher education to establish a national or regional teacher job bank clearinghouse which shall—

(A) assist local educational agencies and private schools in locating qualified applicants for teaching-related positions; and

(B) help individuals in locating teaching-related jobs or the training necessary to enter the teaching profession or the field of early childhood or preschool education.

(2) APPLICATION REQUIRED.—Each entity desiring to enter into a contract with the Secretary of Education for the establishment of a teacher job bank clearinghouse shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require. Each such application shall include—

(A) a demonstration of the applicant's capacity to efficiently and effectively handle a large volume of inquiries from employers and potential employees;

(B) a demonstration of support from local educational agencies and private schools and institutions of higher education that are likely to use the services provided by the teacher job bank clearinghouse; and

(C) a demonstration of ability to provide prospective teachers with information, either directly or by contract with another entity, regarding the certification and licensure requirements of each State which is served by a clearinghouse and information regarding procedures for assisting out-of-State teachers to meet State certification requirements.

(3) PRIORITY.—The Secretary shall give priority to applications submitted pursuant to paragraph (2) which—

(A) demonstrate the ability to serve a region of the United States and involve the cooperation of several State educational agencies and institutions of higher education; or

(B) demonstrate an ability to address shortages of teachers, such as teachers from minority groups, special education teachers, bilingual teachers, or individuals planning to teach in subject areas, geographical areas, or types of schools with shortages.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—Each entity, organization, or institution receiving funds under this section may use such funds to—

(1) develop, in consultation with local education agencies and other appropriate entities, standardized initial application forms for teaching jobs and related positions, and standardized forms and procedures for announcing available teaching positions;

(2) coordinate and assist State and local teacher recruitment efforts;

(3) publish and disseminate information about opportunities for teacher employment and teacher training;

(4) maintain a system for matching available teachers with job openings for which they are qualified and for tracking the supply of teachers and the demand for teachers among the States;

(5) encourage the development of programs to recruit and train minorities and individuals with disabilities to become teachers;

(6) assist employers in checking the background of applicants;

(7) publicize the availability of scholarships, loans, and other programs that assist individuals wishing to pursue a teaching career;

(8) assist employers in the development of effective teacher recruitment programs;

(9) assist in developing reciprocal agreements on teacher certification among States; and

(10) conduct such other activities and services necessary to carrying out the purposes of this section in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(d) Definition.—For the purposes of this section, the term "teacher" includes elementary and secondary school classroom teachers, and preschool and early childhood education specialists.

(e) Authorization.—There are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this section.

PART B—NATIONAL COMMISSION ON INDEPENDENT HIGHER EDUCATION

SEC. 1421. SHORT TITLE.

This part may be cited as the "National Independent Colleges and Universities Discovery Act".

SEC. 1422. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the quality and scope of higher education in our Nation is without argument the finest in the world, and a distinguishing feature of our Nation's system of higher education is its strong and diverse nonprofit independent sector;

(2) independent colleges and universities are as diverse as the Nation itself and include traditional liberal arts institutions, major research universities, church- and faith-related colleges, colleges and universities primarily attended by minorities, women's colleges, junior colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business and other professions;

(3) the diversity of independent colleges and universities offers students a choice in the type of educational experience that will best serve such students' interests, needs and aspirations;

(4) independent colleges and universities enroll 21 percent of all students in the United States, award 33 percent of all bachelor's degrees in the United States, 42 percent of all such master's degrees, 36 percent of all such doctoral degrees, and 59 percent of all such professional degrees;

(5) a majority of all undergraduate students attending independent colleges and universities receive some form of financial assistance, and such independent colleges and universities provide such financial assistance from their own resources;

(6) independent colleges and universities are deeply involved in hundreds of partnerships with elementary and secondary schools, and such partnerships are largely funded by such colleges and universities;

(7) independent colleges and universities have been an extraordinary example of private-public partnerships, with such colleges and universities operating in the public interest to provide a public good;

(8) less than 20 percent of the revenue of independent colleges and universities comes from governmental funds, most of which is in the form of Federal and State financial aid;

(9) decreases in Federal and State support for student financial aid programs has placed at risk the option of choosing an independent college or university for an increasing number of students;

(10) whereas at the turn of the twentieth century 80 percent of the students enrolled in higher education in the United States were enrolled in independent colleges and universities, such percentage has now declined to 21 percent, and further erosions place at risk the option of choosing an independent college or university for students and parents; and

(11) the entire sector of independent colleges and universities and the important contributions such sector makes to our Nation is at risk and deserves national policy attention.

SEC. 1423. PURPOSE.

It is the purpose of this part to establish a National Commission on Independent Higher Education.

SEC. 1424. NATIONAL COMMISSION ON INDEPENDENT HIGHER EDUCATION.

(a) Establishment.—There is established as an independent agency in the executive branch a commission to be known as the National Commission on Independent Higher Education (hereafter in this part referred to as the "Commission").

(b) Membership.—

(1) Composition.—The Commission shall be composed of 9 members, 3 of whom shall be appointed by the President, 2 of whom shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, 1 of whom shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives, 2 of whom shall be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate, and 1 of whom shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate.

(2) Expertise requirement.—The members of the Commission shall consist of individuals with expertise and experience in independent higher education, including expertise in national tax policy, individuals with expertise in State higher education finance, individuals with expertise in Federal financial aid programs, individuals with expertise in issues of student and faculty diversity, and individuals with expertise in graduate education and research.

(3) Date.—The members of the Commission shall be appointed not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) Period of Appointment; Vacancies.—Members of the Commission shall be appointed for the life of the Commission. Any vacancy in the Commission shall not affect its powers, but shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment.

(d) Meetings.—The Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman.

(e) Quorum.—Six of the members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number of members may hold hearings.

(f) Chairperson.—The Commission shall select a Chairperson from among its members.

SEC. 1425. DUTIES OF THE COMMISSION.

The Commission shall—

(1) develop a factual base for understanding the status of independent colleges and universities, their contributions to public priorities, and the effects of national higher education policies on the independent nonprofit sector;

(2) review the issuance of Federal regulations regarding independent colleges and universities, and suggest means by which independent colleges and universities can be held accountable for use of public resources without inappropriate intrusion into institutional autonomy; and

(3) address the relation between Federal and State policies on independent colleges and universities, particularly with respect to student access and choice, finance, institutional subsidies, and institutional accountability.

SEC. 1426. REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

(a) Interim Report.—The Commission shall submit an interim report to the President and the Congress on the Commission's activities and findings within 18 months of the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) Final Report.—

(1) In general.—The Commission shall submit a final report to the President and the Congress on the Commission's activities and findings within 3 years of the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) Recommendation.—The report described in paragraph (1) shall contain a recommendation regarding the establishment of a national policy on independent colleges and universities appropriate to meeting the Nation's higher educational goals in the twenty-first century.

SEC. 1427. POWERS OF THE COMMISSION.

(a) Hearings.—The Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence as the Commission considers advisable to carry out the purposes of this part.

(b) Information From Federal Agencies.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal department or agency such information as the Commission considers necessary to carry out the provisions of this part. Upon request of the Chairperson of the Commission, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(c) Gifts.—The Commission may accept in the name of the United States grants, gifts, and bequests of money for immediate disbursement in furtherance of the functions of the Commission. Such grants, gifts, and bequests, after acceptance by the Commission, shall be paid by the donor or representative of the donor to the Treasurer of the United States, whose receipts shall be their acquittance. The Treasurer of the United States shall enter such grants, gifts, and bequest in a special account to the credit of the Commission for the purposes specified.

(d) Authorization of Appropriations.—There are authorized to be appropriated $1,000,000 to carry out this part for fiscal year 1993 and each succeeding fiscal year. Amounts appropriated under this subsection are authorized to remain available until expended, or until the Commission is terminated, whichever occurs first.

SEC. 1428. COMMISSION PERSONNEL MATTERS.

(a) Travel Expenses.—From amounts appropriated under section 1427(d), the members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, while away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Commission.

(b) Detail of Government Employees.—Any Federal Government employee may be detailed to the Commission without reimbursement, and such detail shall be without interruption or loss of civil service status or privilege.

(c) Staff.—

(1) In general.—The Chairperson of the Commission may, without regard to the civil service laws and regulations, appoint and terminate an executive director and not more than 2 staff members to enable the Commission to perform its duties. The employment of an executive director shall be subject to confirmation by the Commission.

(2) Compensation.—The Chairperson of the Commission may fix the compensation of the executive director and not more than 2 staff members without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, relating to classification of positions and General Schedule pay rates, except that the rate of pay for the executive director and such staff may not exceed the rate payable for level 15 of the General Schedule classified under section 5107 of such title.

SEC. 1429. TERMINATION OF THE COMMISSION.

The Commission shall terminate 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act.

PART C—NATIONAL COMMISSION ON THE COST OF HIGHER EDUCATION

SEC. 1441. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION.

There is established a Commission to be known as the "National Commission on the Cost of Higher Education" (hereafter in this part referred to as the "Commission").

SEC. 1442. MEMBERSHIP OF COMMISSION.

(a) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 12 members as follows:

(1) Four citizens of the United States appointed by the President.

(2) Two Senators appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate, of which—

(A) one shall be a member of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate; and

(B) one shall be a member of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate.

(3) Two Senators appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate, of which—

(A) one shall be a member of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate; and

(B) one shall be a member of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate.

(4) Two Members of the House of Representatives appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, of which—

(A) one shall be a member of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives; and

(B) one shall be a member of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(5) Two Members of the House of Representatives appointed by the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives, of which—

(A) one shall be a member of the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives; and

(B) one shall be a member of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(b) ADDITIONAL QUALIFICATIONS.—

(1) PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTEES.—An individual appointed under subsection (a)(1) may not be an officer or an employee of the Executive Branch.

(2) CITIZENS.—Individuals who are not Members of the Congress and are appointed under subsection (a)(1) shall be individuals who—

(A) have extensive knowledge of higher education and its financing and who are leaders of the education community, distinguished academics, State or local government officials, students, parents of college students, members of the business community, or other individuals with distinctive qualifications or experience; and

(B) are not officers or employees of the United States.

(c) CHAIRPERSON AND VICE CHAIRPERSON.—The members of the Commission shall elect a Chairman and a Vice Chairperson. In the absence of the Chairperson, the Vice Chairperson will assume the duties of the Chairperson.

(d) QUORUM.—A majority of the members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

(e) APPOINTMENTS.—All appointments under subsection (a) shall be made within 3 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

(f) VOTING.—Each member of the Commission shall be entitled to one vote, which shall be equal to the vote of every other member of the Commission.

(g) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy on the Commission shall not affect its powers, but shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(h) PROHIBITION OF ADDITIONAL PAY.—Members of the Commission shall receive no additional pay, allowances, or benefits by reason of their service on the Commission. Members appointed from among private citizens of the United States may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem, in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by law for persons serving intermittently in the government service to the extent funds are available for such expenses.

SEC. 1443. FUNCTIONS OF COMMISSION.

(a) SPECIFIC FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.—The Commission shall study and make findings and specific recommendations regarding the following:

(1) The increase in tuition costs compared with other commodities and services as well as methods of reducing increased tuition costs.

(2) Trends in college and university administrative costs as well as other costs and means of reducing such increased costs.

(3) The development of a standardized annual report that colleges and universities shall distribute which details the administrative costs, instructional costs and capital costs of such colleges and universities.

(4) The extent to which Federal, State and local regulations contribute to increased tuition costs and the increase in the cost of higher education.

(5) The establishment of a mechanism for a more timely and widespread distribution of data on tuition trends and other costs of operating colleges and universities.

(6) The extent to which the lack of student financial assistance programs has contributed to increased tuition costs.

(7) Other related topics determined to be appropriate by the Commission.

(b) FINAL REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), the Commission shall submit to the President and to the Congress not later than September 1, 1994, a report which shall contain a detailed statement of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, including the Commission's recommendations for administrative and legislative action that the Commission considers advisable.

(2) MAJORITY VOTE REQUIRED FOR RECOMMENDATIONS.—Any recommendation described in paragraph (1) shall be made by the Commission to the President and to the Congress only if such recommendation is adopted by a majority vote of the members of the Commission who are present and voting.

SEC. 1444. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—The Commission may, for the purpose of carrying out this part, hold such hearings and sit and act at such times and places, as the Commission may find advisable.

(b) RULES AND REGULATIONS.—The Commission may adopt such rules and regulations as may be necessary to establish the Commission's procedures and to govern the manner of the Commission's operations, organization, and personnel.

(c) ASSISTANCE FROM FEDERAL AGENCIES.—

(1) INFORMATION.—The Commission may request from the head of any Federal agency or instrumentality such information as the Commission may require for the purpose of this part. Each such agency or instrumentality shall, to the extent permitted by law and subject to the exceptions set forth in section 552 of title 5, United States Code (commonly referred to as the Freedom of Information Act), furnish such information to the Commission, upon request made by the Chairperson of the Commission.

(2) FACILITIES AND SERVICES, PERSONNEL DETAIL AUTHORIZED.—Upon request of the Chairperson of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency or instrumentality shall, to the extent possible and subject to the discretion of such head—

(A) make any of the facilities and services of such agency or instrumentality available to the Commission; and

(B) detail any of the personnel of such agency or instrumentality to the Commission, on a nonreimbursable basis, to assist the Commission in carrying out the Commission's duties under this part, except that any expenses of the Commission incurred under this subparagraph shall be subject to the limitation on total expenses set forth in section 1445(b).

(d) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other Federal agencies.

(e) CONTRACTING.—The Commission, to such extent and in such amounts as are provided in appropriation Acts, may enter into contracts with State agencies, private firms, institutions, and individuals for the purpose of conducting research or surveys necessary to enable the Commission to discharge the Commission's duties under this part, subject to the limitation on total expenses set forth in section 1445(b).

(f) STAFF.—Subject to such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the Commission, the Chairperson of the Commission (subject to the limitation on total expenses set forth in section 1445(b)) shall have the power to appoint, terminate, and fix the compensation (without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title, or of any other provision, or of any other provision of law, relating to the number, classification, and General Schedule rates) of an Executive Director, and of such additional staff as the Chairperson deems advisable to assist the Commission, at rates not to exceed a rate equal to the maximum rate for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5332 of such title.

(g) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—The Commission shall be considered an advisory committee within the meaning of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) and shall be independent from the Executive Branch.

SEC. 1445. EXPENSES OF COMMISSION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any expenses of the Commission shall be paid from such funds as may be available to the Secretary of the Treasury.

(b) LIMITATION.—The total expenses of the Commission shall not exceed $2,000,000.

(c) GAO AUDIT.—Prior to the termination of the Commission pursuant to section 1446, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct an audit of the financial books and records of the Commission to determine that the limitation on expenses has been met, and shall include the Comptroller General's determination in an opinion to be included in the report of the Commission.

SEC. 1446. TERMINATION OF COMMISSION.

The Commission shall cease to exist on the date that is 90 days after the date on which the Commission submits its final report in accordance with section 1443(b).

TITLE XV—RELATED PROGRAMS AND AMENDMENTS TO OTHER LAWS

PART A—NATIONAL CENTER FOR THE WORKPLACE

SEC. 1511. PURPOSE; DESIGNATION.

It is the purpose of this part to address the problems created by the simultaneous convergence of broad economic, social, cultural, political, and technological changes in the workplace through a national center administered by the Department of Labor that will join together workplace experts from America's best institutions of higher education with experts from the public and private sectors to conduct research, share information, and propose remedies.

SEC. 1512. ESTABLISHMENT.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be established the National Center for the Workplace (hereafter in this part referred to as the "Center") through competitive grant or contract between the Secretary of Labor and an eligible recipient.

(2) MATCHING FUNDS.—In order to receive the grant described in paragraph (1) an eligible entity shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources equal to 25 percent of the funds received pursuant to such grant.

(b) ELIGIBLE RECIPIENT.—An eligible recipient shall be a consortium of institutions of higher education in the United States. The consortium shall represent a diversity of views on and an expertise in the field of employment policy, and shall be represented and coordinated by a host institution of higher education that meets all of the following criteria:

(1) Broad collective knowledge of and demonstrable experience in the wide range of employment and workplace issues.

(2) A faculty that, collectively, demonstrates a nonpartisan research and policy perspective joining the several relevant workplace disciplines (labor economics, industrial relations, collective bargaining, human resource management, sociology, psychology, and law) in a multidisciplinary approach to workplace issues.

(3) Established credibility and working relationships with employers, unions, and government agencies on a national scale, and established means of providing education and technical assistance to each of the above groups that include publications, state-of-the-art electronic and video technology, and distinguished extension/outreach programs operating on a national and international level.

(c) REPORT.—The Center shall annually report to the Congress, the Secretary of Education, and the Secretary of Labor on the activities of the Center.

SEC. 1513. USE OF FUNDS.

(a) CENTER ACTIVITIES.—Payments made under this part may be used to establish and operate the Center, to bring together major independent researchers from the Center's member-institutions focused on the most significant workplace problems with the aim of analysis and synthesis of policy implications and dissemination of findings, and to support the following activities:

(1) The coordination and funding of research activities of the Center's member-institutions for collaborative collection and evaluation of data on changes and trends in the workplace and in the labor force, on established and emerging public policy issues, on the economic and occupational structures, and on work organizations and employment conditions.

(2) The analysis of the public policy implications of social and demographic changes in the United States as they relate to the workplace.

(3) The conduct of seminars for Federal and State policymakers on policy implications of the Center's findings. Such seminars shall be held not more frequently than once each year. In addition, the Center shall utilize electronic technology, such as computer networks and video conferencing, to convey the cumulative value of the Center's activities from year to year and to foster continuous exchange of ideas and information.

(4) The conduct of a National Conference on employment policy not more frequently than once each year for the leaders of business and organized labor in the United States designed to convey the cumulative value of the Center's activities and to foster an exchange of ideas and information.

(5) The nonpartisan evaluation of the economic and social implications of national and international workplace and employment issues.

(6) The provision of ready access to the Center's collective expertise for policy officials in the Federal and State governments and representatives of private and public sector organizations through meetings, publications, special reports, video conferences, electronic mail and computer networks, and other means to share up-to-date information on workplace and employment issues, practices, and innovations, the most promising options, and guidance in management of the change process.

(7) The development of programs, curricula, and instructional materials for colleges, universities, and other educational institutions designed to impart the knowledge and skills required to promote innovations in the design of work and employment conditions that enhance organizational performance and meet worker needs.

(8) The development and administration of a national repository of information on key workplace issues that can be readily accessed by the public and private sector.

(b) FELLOWSHIPS.—Grant funds awarded under this title may also be used to provide graduate assistantships and fellowships at the Center to encourage graduate study of the field of employment policy and to encourage graduate research in areas that are seen as critical to national competitiveness.

SEC. 1514. GIFTS AND DONATIONS.

The Center is authorized to receive money and other property donated, bequeathed, or devised to the Center with or without a condition of restriction, for the purpose of furthering the activities of the Center. All funds or property given, devised, or bequeathed shall be retained in a separate account, and an accounting of those funds and property shall be included in the annual report submitted pursuant to section 1512(c).

SEC. 1515. AUTHORIZATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated $2,500,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this part.

(b) AVAILABILITY.—Funds appropriated pursuant to the authority of subsection (a) shall remain available until expended.

PART B—NATIONAL CLEARINGHOUSE FOR POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION MATERIALS

SEC. 1521. NATIONAL CLEARINGHOUSE FOR POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION MATERIALS.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to coordinate the production and distribution of educational materials in an accessible form, especially audio and digital text production, to college and university based print-disabled populations.

(b) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to award a grant or contract to pay the Federal share of the cost of establishing a National Clearinghouse for Postsecondary Education Materials (hereafter in this part referred to as the "Clearinghouse") to coordinate the production and distribution of educational materials, in an accessible form, including audio and digital, for students with disabilities.

(2) AWARD BASIS.—The grant or contract awarded pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be made on a competitive basis.

(3) DURATION.—The grant or contract awarded under this section shall be awarded for a period of 3 years.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—The grant or contract awarded under this section shall be used to—

(1) catalog in computer-readable form postsecondary education materials;

(2) identify college campus-based services producing taped texts whose technical and reader quality make them eligible for inclusion in the Clearinghouse and share its quality control standards with campus-based student support services offices serving students with disabilities;

(3) promote data conversion and programming to allow the electronic exchange of bibliographic information between existing on line systems;

(4) encourage outreach efforts that will educate print-disabled individuals, as defined by section 652(d)(2) of the Individuals With Disabilities Education Act, educators, schools, and agencies about the Clearinghouse's activities;

(5) upgrade existing computer systems at the Clearinghouse;

(6) coordinate with identifiable and existing data bases containing postsecondary education materials, including the programs authorized under section 652(d) of the Individuals With Disabilities Act; and

(7) develop and share national guidelines and standards for the production of audio and digital text materials.

(d) FEDERAL SHARE LIMITATION.—The Federal share under this section may not be more than—

(1) 80 percent of the total cost of the program in the first year;

(2) 60 percent of the total cost of the program in the second year; and

(3) 50 percent of the total cost of the program in the third year.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of this section, $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1994 and 1995.

PART C—SCHOOL-BASED DECISIONMAKERS

SEC. 1531. TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE FOR SCHOOL-BASED DECISIONMAKERS DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants to local education agencies, in consortia with one or more institutions of higher education, to establish programs to provide training and technical assistance to school-based decisionmakers in local education agencies implementing system-wide reform.

(b) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a training and technical assistance demonstration grant under this section, consortia shall submit an application to the Secretary of Education in such form and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may require. A copy of the application shall also be sent to the State educational agency for notification purposes.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1994 and 1995.

PART D—GRANTS FOR SEXUAL OFFENSES EDUCATION

SEC. 1541. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS SEXUAL OFFENSES EDUCATION.

(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education (hereafter in this part referred to as the "Secretary") is authorized to make grants to or enter into contracts with institutions of higher education or consortia of such institutions to enable such institution to carry out sexual offenses education and prevention programs under this section.

(2) AWARD BASIS.—The Secretary shall award grants and contracts under this section on a competitive basis.

(3) EQUITABLE PARTICIPATION.—The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure the equitable participation of private and public institutions of higher education and to ensure the equitable geographic participation of such institutions in the activities assisted under this part.

(4) PRIORITY.—In the award of grants and contracts under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to institutions of higher education or consortia of such institutions that show the greatest need for the sums requested.

(b) GENERAL SEXUAL OFFENSES PREVENTION AND EDUCATION GRANTS.—Funds provided under this part may be used for the following purposes:

(1) To provide training for campus security and college personnel, including campus disciplinary or judicial boards, that address the issues of sexual offenses.

(2) To develop, disseminate, or implement campus security and student disciplinary policies to prevent and discipline sexual offense crimes.

(3) To develop, enlarge, or strengthen support services programs including medical or psychological counseling to assist victims' recovery from sexual offense crimes.

(4) To create, disseminate, or otherwise provide assistance and information about victims' options on and off campus to bring disciplinary or other legal action.

(5) To implement, operate, or improve sexual offense education and prevention programs, including programs making use of peer-to-peer education.

(c) Model Grants.—Not less than 25 percent of the funds appropriated for this section in any fiscal year shall be available for grants or contracts for model demonstration programs which will be coordinated with local rape crisis centers for the development and implementation of quality rape prevention and education curricula and for local programs to provide services to student sexual offense victims.

(d) Eligibility.—No institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions shall be eligible to be awarded a grant or contract under this section unless—

(1) its student code of conduct, or other written policy governing student behavior explicitly prohibits all forms of sexual offenses;

(2) it has in effect and implements a written policy requiring the disclosure to the victim of any sexual offense of the outcome of any investigation by campus police or campus disciplinary proceedings brought pursuant to the victim's complaint against the alleged perpetrator of the sexual offense, except that nothing in this section shall be interpreted to authorize disclosure to any person other than the victim; and

(3) the Secretary shall give priority to those applicants who do not have an established campus education program regarding sexual offenses.

(e) Applications.—

(1) In general.—In order to be eligible to be awarded a grant or contract under this section for any fiscal year, an institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

(2) Contents.—Each application submitted under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) set forth the activities and programs to be carried out with funds granted under this part;

(B) contain an estimate of the cost for the establishment and operation of such programs;

(C) explain how the program intends to address the issue of sexual offenses;

(D) provide assurances that the Federal funds made available under this section shall be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, to increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available by the applicant for the purpose described in this part, and in no case to supplant such funds; and

(E) include such other information and assurances as the Secretary reasonably determines to be necessary.

(f) Grantee Reporting.—Upon completion of the grant or contract period under this section, the grantee institution or consortium of such institutions shall file a performance report with the Secretary explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this section. The Secretary shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

(g) Definitions.—For purposes of this part, the term "sexual offenses educational and prevention" includes programs that provide education seminars, peer-to-peer counseling, operation of hotlines, self-defense courses, the preparation of informational materials, and any other effort to increase campus awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual offenses.

(h) General Terms and Conditions.—

(1) Regulations.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. Not later than 150 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.

(2) Reports to congress.—Not later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants or contracts are awarded under this section, the Secretary shall submit to the committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate responsible for issues relating to higher education and to crime, a report that includes—

(A) the amount of grants or contracts awarded under this section;

(B) a summary of the purposes for which those grants or contracts were awarded and an evaluation of their progress; and

(C) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to subsection (f) of this section.

(i) Authorization of Appropriations.—For the purpose of carrying out this part, there are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for the fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

PART E—OLYMPIC SCHOLARSHIPS

SEC. 1543. OLYMPIC SCHOLARSHIPS.

(a) Scholarships Authorized.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to provide financial assistance to the United States Olympic Education Center or the United States Olympic Training Center to enable such centers to provide financial assistance to athletes who are training at such centers and are pursuing postsecondary education at institutions of higher education (as such term is defined in section 481(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965).

(2) Award determination.—The amount of financial assistance provided to athletes described in paragraph (1) shall be determined in accordance with such athlete's financial need as determined in accordance with part F of title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

(b) Eligibility.—The Secretary of Education shall ensure that financial assistance provided under this part is available to both full-time and part-time students who are athletes at centers described in subsection (a).

(c) Application.—Each center desiring financial assistance under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary of Education at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

(d) Authorization of Appropriations.—There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out this section.

PART F—NEED-BASED AID

SEC. 1544. AUTHORITY TO AWARD NEED-BASED AID.

(a) Effect on Pending Cases Prohibited.—Nothing in this section shall in any way be construed to affect any antitrust litigation pending on the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) In General.—Except as provided in subsections (a), (c), and (e), institutions of higher education may—

(1) voluntarily agree with any other institution of higher education to award financial aid not awarded under the Higher Education Act of 1965 to students attending those institutions only on the basis of demonstrated financial need for such aid; and

(2) discuss and voluntarily adopt defined principles of professional judgment for determining student financial need for aid not awarded under the Higher Education Act of 1965.

(c) Exception.—Institutions of higher education shall not discuss or agree with each other on the prospective financial aid award to a specific common applicant for financial aid.

(d) Related Matter.—No inference of unlawful contract, combination, or conspiracy shall be drawn from the fact that institutions of higher education engage in conduct authorized by this section.

(e) Sunset Provision.—This section shall expire on September 30, 1994.

PART G—ADVANCED PLACEMENT FEE PAYMENT PROGRAM

SEC. 1545. ADVANCED PLACEMENT FEE PAYMENT PROGRAM.

(a) Program Established.—The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants to States to enable the States to reimburse individuals to cover part or all of the cost of advance placement test fees, to low-income individuals who—

(1) are enrolled in an advanced placement class; and

(2) plan to take an advanced placement test.

(b) Information Dissemination.—The State educational agency shall disseminate information on the availability of test fee payments under this section to eligible individuals through secondary school teachers and guidance counselors.

(c) Requirements for Approval of Applications.—In approving applications for grants the Secretary of Education shall—

(1) require that each such application contain a description of the advance placement test fees the State will pay on behalf of individual students;

(2) require an assurance that any funds received under this section shall only be used to pay advanced placement test fees; and

(3) contain such information as the Secretary may require to demonstrate that the State will ensure that the student is eligible for payments under this section, including the documentation required by chapter 1 of subpart 2 of part A of title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

(d) Supplementation of Funding.—Funds provided under this section shall be used to supplement and not supplant other Federal, State, and local or private funds available to assist low-income individuals in paying for advanced placement testing.

(e) Regulations.—The Secretary of Education shall prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out this section.

(f) Authorization of Appropriations.—There are authorized to be appropriated $3,600,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years to carry out the provisions of this section.

(g) Definition.—As used in this section:

(1) Advanced placement test.—The term "advanced placement test" includes only an advanced placement test approved by the Secretary of Education for the purposes of this section.

(2) Low-income individual.—The term "low-income individual" has the meaning given the term in section 402A(g)(2) of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

PART H—AMENDMENTS TO OTHER LAWS

SEC. 1551. HIGHER EDUCATION TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.

Subsection (c) of section 3 of the Higher Education Technical Amendments of 1991 (Public Law 102–26) is amended by striking "that are brought before November 15, 1992".

"(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years for awards to National Science Scholars.".

(b) NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCE, SPACE, AND TECHNOLOGY.—Section 621 of the Excellence in Mathematics, Science and Engineering Education Act of 1990 (20 U.S.C. 5411) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) FUNCTION.—The Advisory Board shall develop an exam for secondary students testing knowledge in science, mathematics, and engineering, or shall select an exam from among existing national exams, and shall annually administer such exam.";

(2) by striking subsections (d), (e), and (f);

(3) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d);

(4) by inserting after subsection (b), the following new subsection:

"(c) RESULTS OF EXAM.—The Advisory Board shall annually certify the top 10 scorers in each congressional district on the exam developed or selected under subsection (b)(2), and award to the top scorer in each district a scholarship under this section.";

(5) in subsection (d)(1), as so redesignated by paragraph (3) of this section, by striking "subsection (n)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (l)";

(6) in subsection (d)(2), as so redesignated by paragraph (3) of this section, by striking "subsection (h)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (f)";

(7) in subsection (d)(3), as so redesignated by paragraph (3) of this section—

(A) by striking "subsection (h)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (f)"; and

(B) by inserting "such additional" after "maximum of 3";

(8) by redesignating subsections (g) through (o) as subsections (e) through (m), respectively;

(9) in subsection (f)(2), as so redesignated by paragraph (8) of this section, by striking "subsection (f)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (d)(3)"; and

(10) in subsection (m), as so redesignated by paragraph (8) of this section, by striking "$2,200,000 for fiscal year 1991" and inserting in lieu thereof "$2,200,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years".

SEC. 1557. NATIONAL AND COMMUNITY SERVICE ACT OF 1990.

Paragraph (1) of section 146(b) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12576(b)(1)) is amended by striking "that is equal in value to $2,500 for each year of service that such participant provides to the program" and inserting "for each year of service that such participant provides to the program, which benefit shall be equal in value to $2,500 for each such year, and which benefit shall be adjusted to match any increases in the maximum Pell Grant as provided by the annual appropriation".

SEC. 1559. SPECIAL PROJECTS FOR 2-YEAR SCHOOLS.

Subsection (f) of section 788 of the Public Health Service Act (20 U.S.C. 295g-8(f)) is amended to read as follows:

"(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $316,203 for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996 to carry out subsection (a).".

PART I—BUY AMERICA

SEC. 1561. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of the Congress that a recipient (including a nation, individual, group, or organization) of any form of student assistance or other Federal assistance under the Act should, in expanding that assistance, purchase American-made equipment and products.

And the House agree to the same.

That the House recede from its amendment to the title of the bill.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1150) to reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment to the text of the bill struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the House with an amendment which is a substitute for the Senate bill and the House amendment. The differences between the Senate bill, the House amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, provides that all references to "the Act" are references to the Higher Education Act of 1965.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, contains a provision that, except as otherwise provided, the amendments made by the Act shall take effect on October 1, 1992.

The Senate recedes.

TITLE I—PARTNERSHIPS FOR EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE

Both bills repeal title I of current law. The Senate bill inserts a new title I, "Postsecondary Improvement and Community Service," which contains: the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE); a new State-level FIPSE program; Innovative Projects for Community Service; the Student Literacy Corps; and Access and Equity to Education for All Americans Through Telecommunications. The House bill replaces current law with "Partnerships for Educational Excellence," which includes: Urban Community Service; Urban and Rural College, University, and School Partnerships; Administrative Provisions; Articulation Agreements; and Access and Equity to Education for All Americans Through Telecommunications.

The conference substitute restructures titles I, X, and XI. Title I is to be "Partnerships for Educational Excellence" and include the following programs: part A—School, College, and University Partnerships; part B—Articulation Agreements; and part C—Access and Equity to Education for All Americans through Telecommunications. Title X is to be entitled "Postsecondary Improvement" and include the following programs: part A—Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (including new provisions on planning grants); part B—Special Projects in Areas of National Need; part C—Minority Science Improvement Program; part D—Women and Minorities Science and Engineering Outreach Demonstration Program; and part E—Dwight D. Eisenhower Leadership Program. Title XI is to be entitled "Community Service Programs" and is to include the following: part A—Urban Community Service; and part B—Innovative Projects, comprised of subpart 1—Innovative Projects for Community Service and subpart 2—Student Literacy Corps and Student Mentoring Corps.

The House bill authorizes all appropriations for title I at the beginning of the title. The Senate bill's authorization levels are provided separately throughout the title.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill authorizes all programs in the Act for fiscal year 1993 and the six succeeding fiscal years; the House bill authorizes all programs for fiscal year 1993 and the four succeeding fiscal years.

The Senate recedes.

FUND FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION

Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE). The Senate bill reauthorizes FIPSE in subpart 1 of part A ("Institutional Assistance") of title I. The House bill reauthorizes FIPSE in part A of title X, Postsecondary Improvement Program.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, amends the FIPSE provisions "to read as follows."

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, strikes "postsecondary" and replaces it with "higher" in the lines preceding paragraph (1) of section 1001.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill amends with technical changes the language preceding paragraph (1) of section 111. The House bill maintains current law language of the corresponding section 1001.

The House recedes.

The House bill adds a new subsection 1001(b) authorizing the Secretary to make planning grants of not more than $20,000 to institutions of higher education for the development and testing of innovative techniques. The Senate bill has no such provision.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, repeals section 1002 of current law, which prohibits FIPSE grants or contracts from being entered into unless an application has been submitted to the appropriate state entity and that entity has had an opportunity to submit comments to the Secretary.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, adds a provision that the National Board of FIPSE shall be referred to as the "Board."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill requires the Secretary to designate "one of the members of the Board as Chairman." The House bill maintains current law, which requires the Secretary to designate "one of the members as Chairman."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill adds a paragraph on the appointment of the Director of FIPSE, who is referred to subsequently as the "Director of the Fund." The House bill maintains current law, which is silent on the issue.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill repeals paragraph 1003(c)(2) of current law, which states that the Board shall "advise the Secretary and the Director of the Fund . . . on priorities for the improvement of postsecondary education and make such recommendations as it may deem appropriate for the improvement of postsecondary education and for the evaluation, dissemination, and adaptation of demonstrated improvements in postsecondary education." The House bill maintains current law.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill repeals paragraph 103(c)(4) of current law, which requires the Board to meet four times during each fiscal year or whenever one-third of members request a meeting in writing. The House bill maintains current law.

The conference substitute amends the paragraph to read as follows: "meet at the call of the Chairman, except that it shall meet whenever one-third of the members request in writing that a meeting be held.

Section 113 of the Senate bill is entitled "Administrative Technical Provisions"; the corresponding section 1004 of current law, which the House maintains, is entitled "Administrative Provisions."

The Senate recedes.

Both the Senate bill and the House bill authorize $20 million and such sums for FIPSE. The House bill authorizes an additional $1 million for subsection 1001(b), described in comment 10, which establishes planning grants.

The Senate recedes.

Subpart 2 of part A of the Senate bill, Innovative Programs at Institutions of Higher Education, establishes a new program which awards matching grants to states to fund innovative programs. When appropriations are less than $10 million, the Secretary is to award competitive grants to State higher education agencies; when appropriations equal or exceed $10 million, the Secretary is to make grants to states based 50% on population and 50% on the number of full time equivalent students served. $10 million is authorized for fiscal year 1993, with the stipulation that funds are to be appropriated for this subpart only when at least $20 million is appropriated for subpart 1 (FIPSE). The House bill has no similar provisions.

The Senate recedes.

SPECIAL PROJECTS IN AREAS OF NATIONAL NEED

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, establishes title X, part C as Special Projects in Areas of National Need. Areas are to be identified by the Secretary and the Director of the Fund, and shall initially include, but are not limited to: international exchanges; campus climate and culture; and evaluation and dissemination. $5 million is authorized for fiscal year 1993 and such sums for the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

The conference substitute places this program in part B of title X and clarifies the roles of the Director of the Fund and the Secretary.

INNOVATIVE PROJECTS FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE

The Senate bill moves Innovative Projects for Community Services and Student Financial Independence to subpart 1 of part B. The House bill moves this program to part C of title XI. Title XI of the House bill is entitled "Student Community Service" and contains, in addition to this program, the following: Higher Education Innovative Projects for Community Service; Student Literacy Corps and Student Mentoring Corps; Community Service Learning; and Grants for Sexual Offenses Education.

The conference substitute provides that title Xi is to be entitled "Community Service Programs" and is to include the following: part A—Urban Community Service; and part B—Innovative Projects, comprised of subpart 1—Innovative Projects for Community Service and subpart 2—Student Literacy Corps and Student Mentoring Corps.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, renames the above program as "Innovative Projects for Community Service."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill supports innovative projects "to encourage student participation in community service projects, including literacy projects." The House bill provides that projects are "to determine the feasibility of encouraging student participation in community service projects in exchange for educational services or financial assistance and thereby reduce the debt acquired by students in the course of completing postsecondary educational programs."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, provides a list of the activities that funded projects may include.

The conference substitute modifies the list of eliminating the reference to "international" service programs.

The Senate bill states that applications must be made "at such time, in such manner, and containing . . . such information as the Secretary may require." The House bill gives authority to the "Director" of FIPSE rather than to the "Secretary."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, defines the term "community service."

The conference substitute shortens the definition.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, defines the term "Director."

The conference substitute strikes the term "Director" and inserts the term "Director of the Fund."

STUDENT LITERACY CORPS AND STUDENT MENTORING CORPS

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, renames the Student Literacy Corps as the "Student Literacy Corps and Student Mentoring Corps," and mentions "mentoring corps programs" in the purpose section. The mentoring corps is a difference throughout the programs.

The Senate recedes. This legislation includes numerous references to "mentoring." The conferees intend the term "mentoring" to mean the professionally supervised pairing of youth with individuals who will spend time with them, one-on-one, and who are trained to assist youth in achieving their full potential. The Secretary should ensure that mentoring programs funded under this Act include appropriate screening, training, and supervision of mentors. Mentors will be most effective if they are properly screened to ensure that they have the necessary commitment to carry out the program and receive basis training during which clear expectations are communicated and information is provided to help the mentor avoid unintentional bias based on cultural and gender differences. Specialized training tied to the specific goals of the program will also make the program more effective.

The Senate bill limits grants to 3 years; the House bill limits grants to 4 years.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill forbids institutions from expending more than $50,000 of a grant in the first year; the House bill limits expenditures to $25,000.

The Conference substitute sets the amount at $35,000.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, requires applications to contain assurances that institutions will locate tutoring services in agencies serving "individuals with disabilities."

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, requires applications to contain assurances that institutions will give priority in providing tutoring services to "students with disabilities" as well as to educationally disadvantaged chapter 1 students and illiterate parents of disadvantaged students.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, authorizes a Student Mentoring Corps, and outlines the required contents of applications.

The Senate recedes.

The provisions on the waiver and on the reopening of the application process are drafted differently in the House and Senate bills.

The conference substitute provides that in any fiscal year in which funds go unawarded, 75% of such unawarded funds shall be carried into the next fiscal year and shall be available for grants. It is the intent of the conferees that the legislative changes made under this Act increase access to the available grant money to benefit current and prospective participants in the Student Literacy Corps program. These much-needed changes, recommended by the Department of Education, include extending the grant from two years to four years and increasing from $25,000 to $35,000 the amount available each year under the grant. In addition, other changes were made to improve the application process and to increase awareness of this important program. However, the conferees express concern over the amount of money spent on technical assistance rather than on the creation of additional Student Literacy Corps projects around the nation. The conferees understand the importance of technical assistance in helping grant recipients successfully implement the program. But in the existing program, over 25 percent of funds spent were used for technical assistance and evaluations. The conferees find this to be excessive. It is the conferees' intent that less money be spent on technical assistance, and that grant money be more appropriately used to help new applicants formulate projects and to inform other institutions of higher education that funds are available for additional Student Literacy Corps projects.

Under the definition of the term "institution of higher education," the House bill, but not the Senate bill, includes the following: "(as defined in section 1201 of this Act)."

The House recedes.

Under the definition of the term "public community agency," the Senate bill mentions "individuals with disabilities"; the House bill uses the term "the handicapped."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill authorizes a total of $10 million for Innovative Projects for Community Service and the Student Literacy Corps, and reserves for the Student Literacy Corps at least 50% of the total amount appropriated. The House bill authorizes $15 million for the Student Literacy Corps and Student Mentoring Corps and $5 million for Innovative Projects for Community Services and Student Financial Independence, with the provision that no funds may be appropriated for the latter unless funds are appropriated for title XI, part A, Higher Education Innovative Projects for Community Service.

The conference substitute authorizes $15 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding years for Innovative Projects for Community Service and the Student Literacy Corps and Student Mentoring Corps, of which not more than ⅓ shall be reserved for Innovative Projects for Community Service and not less than ⅔ shall be reserved for the Student Literacy Corps and Student Mentoring Corps. The amendment also strikes the funding trigger relating to the Higher Education Innovative Projects for Community Service.

ACCESS AND EQUITY TO EDUCATION FOR ALL AMERICANS THROUGH TELECOMMUNICATIONS

The overall content of the provisions of the Senate and House bills are the same, but the bills are structured with some differences. The Senate bill authorizes the Secretary "to make grants to eligible partnerships to enable such partnerships to pay the Federal share of the cost of the activities described in the application submitted pursuant to section 142," which outlines the application requirements. The House bill authorizes the Secretary "in accordance with provisions of this part to make grants to eligible entities for the Federal share of the cost of telecommunications services to promote access and equity to education."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, provides that funds appropriated shall remain available until expended.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill defines the term "Eligible Partnership"; the House bill defines the term "Eligible Applicants." the Two definitions are drafted differently.

The House recedes.

Under the above definition, the Senate bill mentions "a unit of local government" while the House bill mentions "a local unit of government."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill has an additional subsection specifying that "The Federal share shall be 50 percent." The House bill, under the subsection on applications, provides that "the applicant shall match each dollar of funding received under this part on a one-to-one basis."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill states that applications shall "describe the education telecommunications activities or services to be assisted." The House bill states that applications shall "describe education telecommunications services to be supported with the grant."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill requires applications to describe the structure supporting "such activities or services." The House bill requires applications to describe the structure supporting "the activities funded by the grant."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill mentions "the useful life of such equipment, software or facilities." The House bill mentions "the use of the life of such facilities."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill requires applications to describe how students will benefit "from the activities and services supported." The House bill requires applications to describe how students will benefit "in the services supported."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill mentions "individuals with disabilities" where the House bill mentions "handicapped individuals."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill requires applications to "provide assurances that the eligible partnership will provide the non-Federal share of assistance under this part." The House bill requires that applications "provide evidence that each dollar received under this part shall be matched by funds from other, non-Federal sources."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, specifies that priority be given to applications which "describe programs that" support the activities listed.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill considers programs that provide "activities or" services. The House bill refers only to services.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill mentions "accredited" telecommunications coursework "for individuals with disabilities otherwise denied such access." The House bill mentions "creditworthy" telecommunications coursework "to individuals otherwise denied such opportunity."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill mentions evidence of "support for the program from the business community." The House bill mentions "business support."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill mentions programs that "provide" matching funds, "in an amount which exceeds the required non-Federal share." The House bill mentions those which "include" matching funds, "exceeding the minimum amount required under this part."

The House recedes.

The Senate bill provides that grant funds shall be used for five specified activities. The House bill provides that funds shall "support one or more" of five activities. The two lists of activities have been drafted with several small technical differences.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill refers to pre-service or in-service education for "kindergarten through 4th grade teachers," whereas the House bill refers to pre-service/in-service for "K-12 teachers."

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, defines the terms "institution of higher education" and "State".

The Senate recedes.

The provisions of the Senate and House bills with respect to the report are similar. They are, however, drafted differently, and include the following differences: (A) the Senate bill, but not the House bill, separates the contents and dissemination into separate subsections; (B) the Senate bill, but not the House bill, specifies that the report should include a description of activities "and services"; (C) the Senate bill, but not the House bill, mentions entities "participating in the eligible partnership."

The House recedes.

ARTICULATION AGREEMENTS

This program, which is included in the House bill but not in the Senate bill, provides grants for articulation agreements between two-year and four-year institutions of higher education to build partnerships between education programs. It is authorized at $50 million and such sums.

The Senate recedes with an amendment authorizing $25 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years.

TITLE II—ACADEMIC LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION SERVICES

The Senate bill renames title II "Academic Libraries and Information Services." The House bill renames title II "Academic Libraries in an Electronic Networked Environment." Also, the House bill, but not the Senate bill, amends title II to read as follows.

The House recedes on the first point; the Senate recedes on the second point.

Under section 201(a)(3), the Senate bill continues current law which states that libraries will be assisted in making "their holdings" available. The House bill instead makes "information resources" available.

The Senate recedes.

Both the Senate bill and the House bill strike section 201(a)(4) of current law, but the House bill replaces it with a new paragraph that refers to a new program to strengthen library services at historically black colleges and universities.

The Senate recedes.

For part A, the Senate bill authorizes $10 million and such sums, while the House bill authorizes $25 million and such sums.

The conference substitute authorizes $20 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years.

For part B, the Senate bill authorizes $7.5 million and such sums, while the House bill authorizes $25 million and such sums.

The conference substitute authorizes $10 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years.

For part C, the Senate bill authorizes $15 million and such sums, while the House bill authorizes $25 million and such sums.

The conference substitute authorizes $20 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years.

For part D, the House bill authorizes $25 million and such sums. The Senate bill has no authorization for part D, which is repealed in the Senate bill.

The conference substitute authorizes $15 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years.

Section 203 of the Senate bill, Library Experts, provides that "The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure that programs under this title are administered by appropriate library experts." Section 203 of the House bill, Administration, provides that "Programs under this title shall be administered in the Department by appropriate experts in library technology, library education, and related fields."

The House recedes.

PART A—COLLEGE LIBRARY TECHNOLOGY AND COOPERATION GRANTS

Section 211 of the Senate bill is entitled "College Library Technology and Cooperation Grants." Section 211 of the House bill is entitled "Grants for Technology, Networking, and Other Purposes."

The House recedes.

Section 211(a)(2) refers to "institutions of higher education" in the Senate bill, but to "higher education institutions" in the House bill.

The House recedes.

The language on awards is drafted with the following differences: (A) the House bill, but not the Senate bill, mentions that grants are made "to institutions or combinations of institutions"; (B) the Senate bill limits to $50,000 the maximum award which an individual institution can receive, whereas the House limitation is set at $35,000; (C) the Senate bill provides that the grant award period shall not exceed 3 years, while the House bill permits an award to be expended "over a 3-year period."

The Senate recedes on (A), the House recedes on (B), and the House recedes on (C).

The House and Senate provisions contain the following differences: (A) the Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires applications to be submitted "at such time, in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require"; (B) the Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires applications to "describe the activities and services for which assistance is sought"; (C) the House bill, but not the Senate bill, mentions the "3-year period" for which the grant is sought; (D) both bills require the Secretary to prescribe criteria for the approval of applications, but the House bill specifies that criteria be prescribed "in regulations."

The House recedes on (A), the House recedes on (B), the House recedes on (C), and the Senate recedes on (D).

PART B—LIBRARY EDUCATION, RESEARCH, AND DEVELOPMENT

The Senate bill authorizes the Secretary to "make grants to, and enter into contracts with." The House bill authorizes the Secretary to "make grants to, and contract with." The Senate bill refers to "new technology" where the House bill mentions "new technologies."

The House recedes.

PART D—STRENGTHENING LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE PROGRAMS AT HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES AND OTHER MINORITY-SERVING INSTITUTIONS

The Senate bill repeals part D. The House bill replaces part D of current law with a new part D, Strengthening Library and Information Science Programs and Libraries in Historically Black Colleges and Universities. This program provides assistance to HBCUs and library organizations serving minority groups to improve programs, promote staff development, and establish and maintain fellowships and traineeships.

The Senate recedes with an amendment ensuring that other institutions serving large numbers or percentages of minorities will be assisted under part D. The conferees intend the Secretary to make grants to historically black colleges and universities and to other minority-serving institutions which are eligible to receive funds under part C of title X, which have demonstrated evidence of enrollment and graduation of minorities in library science, and which have evidence of exceptional need for the development of their infrastructure in library science technology.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, contains a provision stating that new or expanded programs shall not be funded unless current programs are appropriated at levels no less than those for fiscal year 1992.

The Senate recedes with an amendment making this provision a section of part D and stating that funds for this part shall not be authorized to be appropriated unless appropriations for parts A, B, and C of title II equal or exceed FY 1992 appropriations.

TITLE III—INSTITUTIONAL AID

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, eliminates the reference to "recruitment activities" in the findings section.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, amends the findings to eliminate reference to minimum assistance and continuing participation of eligible institutions.

The House recedes.

PART A—STRENGTHENING INSTITUTIONS

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, eliminates current law language that gives special consideration to institutions with low endowment funds and low expenditures per full-time equivalent student. Activities for which special consideration is authorized in current law are, in the House bill, allowable uses of grant awards.

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, eliminates the current law requirement that an institution be in existence for five years in order to be eligible for part A funds.

The Senate recedes.

Enrollment of Needy Students. The House bill, but not the Senate bill, inserts a technical amendment to section 312(c)(2) clarifying the fiscal year to be used.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, inserts a new section 313 to provide assistance to institutions serving Hispanic students. Institutions receiving a grant under this section must, among other requirements, be eligible under part A and have a full-time student enrollment that is at least 25 percent Hispanic. Grants may be used for a variety of activities, including purchase or rental of equipment, renovation and improvement of academic facilities, faculty and curriculum development, and academic tutoring and counseling programs. No institutions receiving funds under this section may concurrently receive other funds under part A or part B. $45 million for FY 93 and such sums for the six succeeding fiscal years are authorized.

The House recedes with an amendment that: authorizes such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years; adds a hold harmless provision stating that no funds are authorized to be appropriated for this section unless $80 million are appropriated for the rest of part A; modifies the definition of "Hispanic-serving institution"; eliminates certain authorized activities; amends the guidelines on applications; and ensures that the Secretary's waiver authority for part A grants applies to grants under this section. It is the intent of the conferees that the hold harmless for part A, which must be met before any appropriations can be allotted for the new Hispanic Serving Institutions program, not be construed in any way as a cap on funding for part A institutions. There are over 900 institutions, comprising nearly one-third of all institutions of higher education in the nation, that are eligible for part A assistance. These institutions are in need of Federal assistance because they are in severe financial hardship and because they enroll segments of society that historically have been underrepresented in higher education. Historically, one in six part A grant applications is funded, with the cut-off point for successful applicants higher than 95 points out of a possible 100. The conferees believe it is crucial that adequate levels of funding be available to these institutions under part A of title III.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, eliminates 3-year and 4-year grants.

The conference substitute provides that grants may only be awarded for 5 years.

The Senate bill eliminates the "wait out" period, but requires the Secretary to give priority to applicants that are not already receiving grants under part A. The House maintains a five year wait out for institutions receiving grants.

The House recedes. The conferees intend that institutions which are not receiving grants at the time of application will be given preference over those which are currently being funded. However, as soon as an institution's funding ends, that institution will be put in the priority category. The result would be that an institution holding a title III, part A grant at the time of application will have non-priority status for up to but not exceeding one year. Preference will be given to institutions that do not currently have funding by awarding funds first to priority institutions.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, requires that part A institutions include in their applications a description of goals for financial management and academic programs along with a plan for achieving those goals. The House bill also requires that continuation applications demonstrate progress toward achievement of the goals.

The Senate recedes.

PART B—STRENGTHENING HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, adds language to specify that funds can be used to support telecommunications equipment, services, or materials.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill allows support for "other activities" that contribute to the purposes of part B and that are approved by the Secretary. The House bill allows support for community outreach programs.

The conference substitute allows support both for "other activities" and for community outreach programs.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, amends the allotment formula that is based on graduate and professional students to include only students who are admitted to graduate or professional school "within 5 years of graduation with a baccalaureate degree."

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, prohibits the Secretary from awarding grants for telecommunications equipment, facilities or services if such equipment, facilities or services are available pursuant to the Communications Act of 1934.

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, requires that part B institutions include in their applications a description of goals for financial management and academic programs along with a plan for achieving those goals.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill adds six more schools to the five that are currently eligible under section 326. The House bill adds eleven institutions to those currently eligible.

The conference substitute adds eleven institutions to the five that are currently eligible and provides that, in order to receive funds, institutions listed must have been accredited or approved by the appropriate accrediting or approving agency and have students matriculated in their programs by the time of application.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, provides that institutions awarded grants prior to the enactment of this Act shall continue to receive grant payments until the grant period has expired or September 30, 1993, whichever is later.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill prohibits the Secretary from warding more than 1 grant under section 326 in any fiscal year to any institution of higher education or university system. The House bill is more specific, providing that either Texas Southern University School of Law or Texas Southern University School of Pharmacy, but not both, may receive a grant under section 326 in any fiscal year.

The House recedes. While only one grant can be awarded to an institution of higher education or university system, such institution or university system may support one or a combination of its graduate programs in science, engineering and mathematics and professional programs that would be eligible under section 326, that are approved by the appropriate program governing bodies, and that have students matriculated.

The Senate funding rule provides that if appropriations for section 326 do not exceed $12,000,000, then grants shall be awarded only to the five institutions that were eligible prior to the enactment of the Act. The House provides that all newly appropriated funds above the FY 1992 level will be shared equally among the new schools until each institution matches its award. Once parity is achieved, all schools will share equally in subsequent appropriations.

The conference substitute holds the original institutions harmless at $12 million and provides that appropriations above $12 million will be distributed to the new schools until each eligible institution receives at least $500,000. Additional funding will then be available to the original institutions and to the new institutions.

PART C—ENDOWMENT CHALLENGE GRANTS

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, amends section 331 to refer to "eligible institutions" rather than to "eligible institutions of higher education."

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, amends section 331(b)(1) by inserting "endowment" before "challenge grant."

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, raises the maximum grant under this section in stages: when appropriations are less than $15 million, the maximum grant is $500,000; when appropriations are equal to or greater than $15 million but less than $25 million, the maximum grant rises to $1 million; and when appropriations are greater than $25 million, the maximum grant increases to $1.5 million. The House bill increases the appropriations trigger for $1 million grants to $20 million.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill reduces the "wait out" period from 10 to 5 years, and does not apply the wait out to institutions receiving grants of less than $1 million. The House bill maintains the 10-year wait out but applies it only when appropriations for part C are less than $20 million; when appropriations for part C are less than $20 million; when appropriations exceed $20 million, the wait out period is reduced to 5 years.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill strikes section 332(b)(4)(A) of current law, while the House updates it to conform to the new section on eligible institutions.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill amends current law to conform to previous changes, which are explained in comment 105. The House bill amends the section to set maximum awards at $500,000 when appropriations do not exceed $20 million.

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, specifies that an application must include the institution's long-term and short-term plans for raising and using part C funds.

The Senate recedes.

PART D—GENERAL PROVISIONS

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, permits rather than requires the Secretary to waive requirements for part A under certain circumstances.

The House recedes.

Both the Senate bill and the House bill repeal sections 355 and 359, but only the House bill redesignates sections 356, 357, 358, and 360 as sections 355, 356, 357, and 358.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill provides that eligible institutions "may" be eligible for waivers. The House bill maintains current law, which provides that institutions "shall" be eligible for waivers.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill authorizes $125 million and such sums for part A; the House bill authorizes $150 million and such sums.

The conference substitute authorizes $135 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years.

The Senate bill authorizes $125 million and such sums for part B; the House bill authorizes $150 million and such sums.

The conference substitute authorizes $135 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years.

The Senate bill authorizes $40 million and such sums for part C; the House bill authorizes $60 million and such sums.

The conference substitute authorizes $50 million for FY 93 and such sums for the four succeeding fiscal years.

The Senate bill reserves 25% of excess part A funds for institutions "with a very high percentage of students who are" minorities; the House bill reserves this amount for institutions "at which at least 60 percent of the students are" minorities.

The Senate recedes.

Both the Senate bill and the House bill reserve a portion of part C funds for historically black colleges and universities. There are, however, several differences: (A) the Senate bill reserves 25% of part C funds, while the House bill reserves 30%; (B) the House bill, but not the Senate bill, specifies that the set-aside should apply "unless there are an insufficient number of quality applications or an insufficient number of applications due to the provisions in" sections 331(b)(2)(C) or 331(b)(4)(B).

The House recedes on (A), and the Senate recedes on (B).

TITLE IV—STUDENT ASSISTANCE

FEDERAL PELL GRANTS

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, extends the authority to make grants under this subpart through September 30, 1998.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, changes the name of the program to Federal Pell Grants.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill revises the statement of purpose to remove the 60 percent of cost limitation and to change the references to "parental or independent student" contribution to "family and student" contribution. The Senate bill does this also but further revises the statement of purpose to provide Pell grants sufficient to cover a student's total cost of attendance.

The conference substitute revises the statement of purpose to remove the 60 percent of cost limitation and provides that at least 75 percent of a student's costs should be covered by grant assistance.

The Senate bill sets the maximum Pell grant at $3600 for the 1993-94 academic year and increases the maximum award by $200 per year until the maximum grant would be $4800 for the 1999-2000 academic year. The House bill sets the maximum Pell grant at $4500 for the 1992-93 academic year with increases in the maximum grant for succeeding years through academic year 1998-99 determined by the Consumer Price Index.

The conference substitute sets the maximum Pell grant at $3700 for the 1993-94 academic year and increases the maximum award by $200 per year until the maximum grant would be $4500 for the 1997-1998 academic year.

The Senate bill ensures that tuition sensitivity will be phased in as the maximum award increases from $2400 so that when the maximum award is $3600, there will be a component of a student's award equal to 25 percent of the tuition. The Senate bill provides that when the maximum Pell is $3600, the maximum grant for a student is a basic educational allowance of $2300 plus 25 percent of tuition (not to exceed $1300). The Senate bill provides that when the maximum Pell is greater than $3600, both the educational allowance and the allowance for tuition will increase proportionately. The House bill provides tables for determining a student's award determined by using the Expected Family Contribution (as determined under Part F) and the tuition.

The conference substitute provides for the current Pell allocation formula when the maximum award is less than or equal to $2400. When the maximum grant is greater than $2400, increases would be divided 50-50 between tuition and education allowance.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, contains a $3000 allowance for child care or disability related expenses to be added to the tuition component of the Pell award rules.

The conference substitute provides for a $750 allowance for child care or disability related expenses to be added to the tuition component of the Pell award rules.

The Senate bill provides that an incarcerated student's Pell grant shall be limited to tuition, fees, books and supplies. The House bill has a comparable provision for all programs in Part F.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, specifically provides that no current Pell grant recipients will have their award reduced because of the addition of tuition sensitivity to the Pell formula.

The Senate recedes.

Both the Senate and the House bill provide for a minimum award of $400. However, the Senate bill provides that students who are eligible for a Pell grant that is greater than or equal to $200, but less than $400 would receive an award of $400. The House bill provides that these students would receive no award unless they are attending on a less-than-half-time basis, in which case the minimum award would remain at $200.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill provides that less-than-half-time students can receive Pell grants only if their Expected Family Contribution is less than or equal to $200. The House bill extends Pell eligibility to all less-than-half-time students.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, provides that a student may receive two Pell grants in a calendar year if the student is enrolled full-time in a program (leading to a bachelors degree) that is at least 3 years in length and completes coursework toward a bachelors degree that exceeds the requirements for a full academic year as defined by the institution.

The conference substitute would permit the Secretary to allow an institution to award two Pell grants in an academic year if:

The conference substitute would permit the Secretary to allow an institution to award two Pell grants in an academic year if:

(1) the Secretary grants the institution such authority on a case-by-case basis and

(2) the provision only applies to two- and four-year degree-granting programs which are measured in credit hours.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, permits the Secretary to increase Pell grant awards (up to the maximum award) for students participating in study abroad programs, if the student has increased costs.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill provides that no Pell grant can be awarded to an incarcerated student with a death penalty or with a life sentence without parole. The Senate bill provides that Pell grants can only be awarded to incarcerated individuals in a state in which the grants have been used to supplement not supplant the fiscal year 1988 state level of postsecondary prisoner education. The House bill provides that incarcerated individuals cannot receive Pell grants.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill provides that a student cannot receive more than 6 years of Pell grants if the student is enrolled in a program that normally requires 4 years to complete, the student cannot receive more than 7 years of Pell grants if the student is enrolled in a program that normally requires 5 or more years to complete, the student cannot receive more than 4 years of Pell grants if the student is enrolled in a program that normally requires 2 years to complete, and student cannot receive Pell grants for more than twice the time necessary to complete a program of less than two years. The House bill provides that students can receive Pell grants as long as they are making satisfactory progress.

The Senate recedes.

Both the House and Senate bills clarify Pell eligibility for study abroad; however, the language is slightly different, with the Senate bill specifying that the institution referred to is the one at which the student is enrolled.

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, removes the requirement that a student personally present the SAR document in order to receive a Pell grant.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, provides that whenever insufficient funds are appropriated, the Secretary must promptly notify Congress of the insufficiency and the amount of the shortfall.

The conference substitute includes this requirement and would additionally require the Secretary to revise the method of estimating Pell shortfall to include measures of behavioral changes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, eliminates the adjustment for insufficient appropriations.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees note that, in the past, a variety of means have been used to address funding shortfalls in the Pell Grant program. These means have included borrowing from subsequent year appropriations, enacting supplemental appropriations or increased appropriations, and making award reductions. Since 1973–1974, award reductions have been made on 8 occasions. On two of these occasions, flat reductions of the same dollar amount were made in all awards. On four occasions, stepped reductions were implemented, whereby cutbacks were made in proportion to the size of the grant within specified grant ranges. On two occasions, linear reduction was used, whereby reductions are made in each grant amount (rather than a range) in an attempt to protect individuals at the lowest income levels. In adopting the House provision, the conferees require the Secretary to report to Congress the amount of any funding shortfalls but remain silent on the specific means for addressing shortfalls.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, makes a clarifying change providing that the student Pell grant recipient is not a grantee for the purposes of the drug-free workplaces requirements.

The Senate recedes.

Both the Senate and the House bills, using slightly different language, repeal sections 411A through 411F. Both bills use the methodology under Part F to determining Pell eligibility.

The conference substitute repeals sections 411A through 411F.

FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY GRANTS

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, changes the name of the SEOG program to Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill authorizes $700 million for FY 93 and such sums as may be necessary for the four succeeding fiscal years. The Senate bill authorizes $650 million for FY 93 and such sums as may be necessary for the six succeeding fiscal years.

The conference substitute authorizes $675 million for FY 93 and such sums as may be necessary for the four succeeding fiscal years.

The House and the Senate bills, using slightly different language, clarify that students may receive SEOG awards if they are in a program of study abroad that is approved for credit at their institution. The Senate bill requires that all reasonable costs associated with study abroad programs be considered when determining student eligibility. Grant amounts in such cases may exceed the maximum grant by as much as $400 if such reasonable costs exceed the cost of attendance at the home institution by more than 20 percent.

The conference substitute clarifies that students may receive SEOG awards if they are in a program of study abroad that is approved for credit at their institution, requires that all reasonable costs associated with study abroad programs be considered when determining student eligibility, and provides that grant amounts in such cases may exceed the maximum grant by as much as $400 if such reasonable costs exceed the cost of attendance at the home institution.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, amends SEOG student eligibility to allow students to receive awards in the first year of graduate study if the financial aid administrator determines that the student has exceptional need comparable to undergraduate students receiving SEOG awards.

The Senate recedes.

Both the Senate and the House bills, using slightly different language, increase the institutional matching requirement from 15 percent to 25 percent. The House bill permits the Federal share to be increased if the Secretary issues regulations establishing objective criteria for making such a determination. The Senate bill permits a larger Federal share for institutions with high low-income/minority student population, if paying the non-Federal share would cause financial hardship.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill eliminates the requirement that priority be given to Pell grant recipients in awarding SEOG and allows SEOG awarding on the basis of exceptional need as determined under Part F.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill maintains the current Pell grant awarding priority in the SEOG program and adds two additional criteria that (1) require SEOG to be awarded in an amount proportionate to the amount of the Pell grant received by the recipient, and (2) require awards for SEOG to be determined without regard to the determination of a minimum student contribution or self-help amount or eligibility for assistance under other parts of Title IV, except for the Pell grant program.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill requires that if the total financial need of less-than-full-time students attending an institution exceeds 5 percent of the institution's allotment, then at least 5 percent of the institution's allotment shall be made available to such students. The House bill expands on current law for less-than-full-time students by providing that an institution's SEOG allocation is based in part on the financial need demonstrated by students who are (1) attending the institution on a less-than-half-time basis; (2) age 24 or older; (3) single parents; or (4) independent students, a reasonable proportion of its allocation shall be to such students.

The conference substitute requires that if the total financial need of non-traditional students attending an institution exceeds 5 percent of the institution's allotment, then at least 5 percent of the institution's allotment shall be made available to such students and provides that non-traditional students are students who are (1) attending the institution on a less-than-half-time basis or (2) independent students.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, eliminates an institution's ability to transfer funds from the SEOG program to the CWS program, but continues to allow CWS funds to be transferred into the SEOG program.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, mandates that if an institution returns more than 10 percent of its SEOG allocation, the institution's allocation for the next fiscal year shall be reduced by the amount returned.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill allows the Secretary to allocate an amount equal to not more than 10 percent of the amount by which the amount appropriated in any fiscal year exceeds $700 million among institutions from which 50 percent or more of their Pell grant recipients graduate or transfer to a 4 year institution.

The House recedes with a technical amendment. It is the intent of the conferees that the Secretary, in allocating this additional funding, consider institutions who graduate or transfer to a 4 year institution within a reasonable time frame.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires the Secretary to further subdivide income categories by full and part-time students.

The Senate recedes.

STATE STUDENT INCENTIVE GRANTS

The House bill and Senate bill, using slightly different language, clarify that SSIG funds may be awarded to students participating in programs of study abroad that are approved for credit by the institution.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, expands the purpose of the SSIG program to support state early intervention programs.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill authorizes $125 million for FY 93 and such sums as may be necessary for the four succeeding fiscal years. The Senate bill authorizes $85 million for FY 93 and such sums as may be necessary for the six succeeding fiscal years.

The conference substitute authorizes $105 million for FY 93 and such sums as may be necessary for the four succeeding fiscal years.

The House bill increases the maximum SSIG award to $5,000. The Senate bill increases the maximum SSIG award to $4,000.

The Senate recedes.

STATE STUDENT INCENTIVE GRANTS

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, provides that for years in which more than $75 million is appropriated, states shall receive more than their formula driven allocation only if the total states appropriations for all need-based grants exceeds the prior 3 year's average.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, provides that for the selection of recipients of SSIG awards or SSIG work-study jobs be on the basis of substantial financial need determined annually, and that no student or parent shall be charged a fee that is payable to an entity other than such state for the purpose of collecting data to make such determination of financial need.

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, expands on current law for less-than-full-time students by providing that if an institution's allocation is based in part on the financial need demonstrated by students who are (1) attending the institution on a less-than-full-time basis; (2) age 24 or older; (3) single parents; or (4) independent students, a reasonable proportion of its allocation shall be made available to such students.

The conference substitute provides that if an institution's allocation is based in part on the financial need demonstrated by students who are (1) attending the institution on a less-than-full-time basis; or (2) independent students; a reasonable proportion of its allocation shall be made available to such students.

NATIONAL EARLY INTERVENTION SCHOLARSHIP AND PARTNERSHIP PROGRAM

The Senate bill amends the SSIG program to include a State grant program for early intervention. The House bill creates a similar program under the House early intervention subpart.

The Senate recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, calls this the National Liberty Scholarships and Partnerships Programs.

The conference substitute calls this the National Early Intervention Scholarships and Partnerships Programs.

The Senate bill establishes a State program and includes a statement of purpose to increase student awareness of postsecondary education, to provide academic support and personal mentoring for prospective postsecondary students, and to provide tuition assistance. The House bill establishes a two-part State grant program: one part would provide financial assistance for needy students and the other part would provide for partnerships between states, LEAs, IHEs and community organizations to provide information on student aid and outreach activities and support services for at-risk youths.

The conference substitute provides for a single program with two purposes of early intervention and financial assistance, combining the language of the Senate and House bills. It is the intent of the conferees that states make every effort to provide mentoring, tutoring and other services as early in a student's schooling as necessary in order to be effective. For example, some current successful programs begin with classrooms of students in the pre-school or elementary school level, and it is the intent of the conferees to encourage this type of effort, if practicable. Nonetheless, this program allows funds to be used for services through the twelfth grade because the conferees did not want to preclude states from providing services at any point in a student's education. It is further the intent of the conferees that the state, in establishing both the early intervention and tuition assistance components of this legislation, take into account existing services within the state and avoid creating duplicative administrative entities whenever possible.

The Senate bill allots funds to states based on the ratio of eligible students in a state to the total number of eligible students. The House bill allots funds to states based on the ratio of Chapter 1 funds received by a state to the total allocation of Chapter 1 funds.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, sets a minimum state allotment of $500,000.

The conference substitute provides that for years when appropriations are $50 million or less, this is a discretionary grant program. When the appropriations exceed $50 million, state allocations are based on a formula.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, requires the state to use at least 25 percent, but not more than 50 percent, of funds on the outreach and support services program.

The conference substitute requires the state to use at least 25 percent, but not more than 50 percent, of funds on the outreach and support services program; but would allow the Secretary to waive the 50 percent ceiling if the state demonstrates it has another means of meeting the eligible student's tuition assistance set forth in the state plan.

Both the Senate bill and the House bill, using different language, provide that if the Secretary determines a state does not require its allotment, the Secretary may reallocate those funds to other states, based on their proportionate share of the funding under this program, except that funding cannot exceed the state's need. The Senate bill further provides that reallocated funds are considered part of the state's allotment for that year.

The conference substitute provides for reallocation of funds and provides that reallocated funds are considered part of the state's allotment for that year.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, stipulates that the Secretary can only fund states which continue to meet the early intervention program requirements contained in the specific use of allotments.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, defines eligible institutions as those eligible to participate in Part B.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill includes students eligible to be counted for Chapter 1, students eligible to be served under the National School Lunch Act and students eligible for assistance under AFDC as eligible students. The House bill states a qualified student must be less than 22 years old at the time of the first award, receive a Pell grant or be eligible to receive a Pell grant (but for the student's less-than-half-time status), receive a high school diploma or G.E.D. on or after Jan. 1, 1993, and be enrolled in an institution of higher education within the state, unless the state offers grant portability.

The conference substitute provides a priority, as part of the state plan, for serving students eligible to be counted for Chapter 1, eligible for free- or reduced-price meals under the National School Lunch Act and eligible for assistance under AFDC in the early intervention component. The conference substitute further defines students eligible under the financial assistance component as students who are less than 22 years old at the time of the first award, who have received a high school diploma or G.E.D. on or after Jan. 1, 1993, who have participated in the early intervention component or a TRIO program for at least one year, and who will be enrolled in an institution of higher education within the state, unless the state offers grant portability. The State plan will provide that states give a priority to students who receive a Pell grant or are eligible to receive a Pell grant.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, provides for a definition of "tuition assistance" which includes tuition, room, board, books and required fees.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill provides that the state's early intervention program must provide eligible students in pre-school through grade 12 with a continuing system of mentoring and advising that is coordinated with Federal and state community service initiatives. The Senate bill further provides that early intervention activities may include support services such as after school and summer tutoring, assistance in obtaining summer employment, career mentoring and academic counseling. The House bill includes these activities, except career mentoring, and also includes identification of at-risk children, volunteer and parent involvement, use of former or current scholarship recipients as mentor or peer counselors, skills assessment, personal counseling, family counseling, home visits, staff development, and activities specially designed for L.E.P. students. The House bill permits payments for programs to be made to states that have increased aggregate support for early intervention activities. The House bill requires the Secretary to issue regulations on the allowable early intervention activities. The House bill further provides that pre-freshman summer programs are an allowable use of funds.

The conference substitute combines the language in the House and Senate bill, without the House requirement that a state must increase the aggregate amount spent from year to year.

The Senate bill provides that early intervention may be provided by community-based organizations, schools, IHEs, public and private agencies, and particularly institutions participating in TRIO. The House bill provides that a state may include businesses, religious organizations, community groups, IHEs, nonprofit and philanthropic organizations and other organizations, subject to the Secretary's regulation, as participants in the partnership program.

The conference substitute combines the eligible participants in the House and Senate bills, excluding the reference to religious organizations in the House bill.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires that students enter into an agreement with a state to achieve academic milestones (such as completing certain courses or maintaining satisfactory progress) in exchange for receiving the tuition assistance.

The conference substitute makes this a permissive activity and allows the students to enter into agreements with participants other than the state.

The Senate bill requires early intervention program to establish a plan for tuition assistance for students which may include contributions from Federal, state and private sources. The House bill provides for non-Federal matching requirements as part of the partnership requirements.

The conference substitute requires a plan for tuition assistance, but includes the matching requirements in another section.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires the early intervention program to contain an incentive system to encourage collaboration between elementary and secondary schools, IHEs, and programs assisted under Talent Search and Upward Bound through creation of new linkage structures and programs.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill requires the early intervention program to provide financial aid counseling and information. The House bill includes this as one of purposes.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires the early intervention program to contain an evaluation component to track student progress, consistent with standards developed by the Secretary.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, specifically allows the state to include additional requirements for early intervention programs.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill requires states to ensure that tuition assistance is available to eligible students for use at any eligible institution. The House bill contains similar language in the definition of qualified student.

The conference substitute would encourage states to ensure that tuition assistance is available to eligible students for use at any eligible institution.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, provides that students who have successfully participated in TRIO may be considered to have met the requirements regarding continuous mentoring and counseling and achievement of academic milestones.

The House recedes.

The Senate bill provides that the assistance provided under this part not be considered in awarding other student assistance and that the total amount of assistance under this Title should not exceed the cost of attendance. The House bill requires that the state establish the maximum grant for qualified students and that the minimum amount of the grant shall not be less than 75 percent of the average cost of attendance for an in-state student in a public 4-year institution. The House bill provides that the maximum grant be reduced by the total amount of other grant assistance for which the student is eligible.

The conference substitute provides that Pell grants be awarded first, other grant assistance second, the grant under this part third and then other financial assistance, and that the total amount of assistance under this Title should not exceed the cost of attendance. The conference substitute further provides that the minimum grant be at least the lesser of either the amount needed to provide students with 75 percent of the average cost of attendance for an in-state student in a public 4-year institution or the maximum funded Pell grant for that fiscal year. The conferees intend that the maximum grant may be as high as the state wishes to set it, except that it shall not, when combined with a student's Pell grant award and all other student assistance, exceed the cost of attendance. The conferees intend that each state have the flexibility to set grant amounts as it sees fit within these parameters. However, to the maximum extent practicable, states should attempt to set grant amounts that provide students with 75 percent of the average costs of attendance at an in-state four-year public institutions, once their Pell grant award and other student grant assistance are taken into account. Grant amounts of this size are most likely to eliminate cost as an obstacle to postsecondary education for disadvantaged students.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, provides that student aid grants will be awarded on the basis of substantial financial need determined on the basis of state criteria (approved by the Secretary).

The House recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires the Secretary to prescribe standards for evaluation that will provide for input from states and services providers and that will ensure uniformity.

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, requires the state to provide, from non-Federal funds, at least one-half of the cost of the financial aid program. Federal, state and private contributions are permissive under the Senate bill. The House bill provides further requirements including that the state give first preference for SSIG money to students served under this subpart.

The conference substitute provides for a single 50/50 matching requirement for this program, incorporating the House and the Senate provisions. The conference substitute does not require preferential treatment of SSIG recipients.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, stipulates matching, administrative and service requirements for the partnership program (early intervention component).

The conference substitute provides for a single 50/50 matching requirement for this program, incorporating the House and the Senate provisions.

The House bill, not the Senate bill, stipulates the methods for complying with the matching requirement of the student financial aid part.

The conference substitute provides for a single 50/50 matching requirement for this program, incorporating the House and the Senate provisions.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires the Secretary to approve state plans within 6 months of submission unless the plan fails to comply with this section.

The Senate recedes. However, the conferees intend for the Secretary to approve state plans as soon as possible, but definitely within six months of submission, to enable this program to serve eligible students as soon as possible.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, provides for payment of the Federal share of both the student aid and partnership components.

The conference substitute provides for a single payment for both components of this program.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, requires the states to conduct an annual evaluation and submit it to the Secretary who shall use it to submit an annual evaluation of the entire program to Congress.

The conference substitute requires the states to conduct a biannual evaluation and submit it to the Secretary who shall use it to submit a biannual evaluation of the entire program to Congress.

The Senate bill authorizes $100 million for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as necessary for the succeeding 6 fiscal years. The Senate bill further stipulates that no funds are authorized for this program unless the SSIG appropriation exceeds $63.5 million. The House bill authorizes $250 million for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as necessary for the succeeding 4 fiscal years.

The conference substitute authorizes $200 million for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as necessary for the succeeding 4 fiscal years and provides that no funds are authorized for this program unless the SSIG appropriation exceeds $60 million.

FEDERAL TRIO PROGRAMS

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, renames subpart 4 as Federal Early Outreach and Student Services Programs, includes all the early outreach programs in this subpart, and moves this subpart to the beginning of Part A.

The conference substitute renames subpart 4 as Federal Early Outreach and Student Services Programs, includes all the early outreach programs in this subpart, revises part A so that Section 400 is the purpose section, section 401 is Federal Pell grants (subpart 1), this subpart is subpart 2, Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants are subpart 3, and State Student Incentive Grants are subpart 4.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, includes a statement of findings for this subpart.

The House recedes.

The House bill, but not the Senate bill, renames the Special Programs for Students from Disadvantaged Backgrounds as the TRIO programs.

The Senate bill authorizes $500 billion for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as necessary for the 6 succeeding fiscal years. The House bill authorizes $750 million for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as necessary for the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

The conference substitute authorizes $650 million for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as necessary for the 4 succeeding fiscal years and to provide not more than one-half of one percent of the funds appropriated under this section to be used to obtain additional qualified readers and additional staff to review applications, to provide outreach activities, to increase the level of oversight monitoring, to support impact studies, program assessments, and reviews and to provide technical assistance to potential applicants and current grantees, with a report in two years on the spending of these funds.

This language allows monies from the TRIO appropriation to be utilized to fund an adequate proposal review process in TRIO competitions. The conferees firmly believe that funds for proposal review are more appropriately budgeted from the Department's salary and expense budget. However, it is noted that despite increases in that account, funds available for the proposal review of postsecondary education programs have been severely cut back. In the view of the conferees, such under-funding undermines public confidence both in government generally and in the TRIO programs themselves. For this reason, the conferees reluctantly include this provision.

The Senate bill requires the Secretary to conduct outreach activities to ensure that underserved geographic areas and eligible populations submit applications. The House bill authorizes the Secretary to make grants for the provision of outreach to eligible participants.

The House recedes.

The House bill requires the Secretary to also consult national, state, and regional organizations about candidates for notification.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill requires this notification to be specifically to applicants from underserved populations and geographic areas and requires the Secretary to provide these entities assistance in the development of applications.

The House recedes.

The House bill would require the Secretary to provide technical training through conferences, seminars and workshops at no less than 10 sites throughout the country to ensure that all areas with large concentrations of eligible populations are served.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate bill, but not the House bill, allows the Secretary to contract with eligible entities to conduct outreach activities.

The House recedes.
